The cam-frame which draws the letters under said type cylinder for postmarking of letters, packets, etc., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, will give the blow against the said postmarking and said postage canceling device, which is done at one operation and at the same time, and when thrown out of gear, then the way-bill printing part may be worked, and thus print the way-bills, as I have described in former papers on file in my said caveat. I would prefer the use of an indelible ink with my said device or instrument, or machine, if the same could be had by all the postmasters who use the said machine, etc. This part of said machine may easily and readily be converted into a hand-stamp when and where no other part of said machine would be used save and except the postmarking, containing the name of the town, when used, the month and day of the month, and year, etc., and the postage-stamp canceler or canceling device attached to and combined with the said cross-bar or cross-piece substantially as aforesaid, with a suitable handle at the centre of said cross-bar or piece, or at some suitable place between the two stamping devices aforesaid, which handle is used for the giving of the blow or impression of the two devices attached to said cross-bar as aforesid, and of course it would then be a simple device of postmarking stamp, of cross-bar, and cork, rubber, or wood (or other suitable material), and postage-stamp canceling device combined thus into one instrument, and operated by the handle with one blow, and to be used in or with any kind of ink desired. One blow of the instrument in the hand of the operator 1299 will do the printing of the name of the town, of the month, of the day of the month upon the letter or envelope, and the cancellation of the postage-stamp in a most complete and effectual manner, substantially as aforesaid, thereby saving great labor and the rehandling over of the letters in order to postmark them, and afterwards to cancel the postage stamps when it is desired to have an intelligible postmark preserved on the letter or envelope and to have the postage-stamp permanently canceled, so as to prevent frauds by the reuse of the same, as is often now the case. This instrument will therefore prevent such frauds, and very much simplify and economize in the time for the making up of the mails for transportation. This will be the effect and result if no other part of said machine be used save the said parts converted into a simple hand-stamp as aforesai[1], to wit, the postmarking part, the postage-stamp canceling part, all attached to the said cross-bar and combined therewith, as and in the manner aforesaid.

If the entire machine set forth in all the caveat papers be used, there will be great saving of labor and time in mailing of letters, and a large quantity of papers, twine, and sealing wax, etc., by the use set forth in all the papers of this caveat. There would be also great labor saved as aforesaid by the use of such hand-stamp, combined as aforesaid. I am having a full-size machine made according to my caveat papers, which when done I shall apply for a patent, or at least as soon hereafter as I may be able to get the Post Office Department to consider and adopt, for use in the various post-offices, my said improvements, or some parts thereof, preferring to submit the same to the judgment of that department before applying for my patent upon the invention herein contained. I desire you to file this with my other papers in my said caveat. I intend to renew my caveat, if such be at all necessary, in order to protect my rights while engaged in efforts with the Post Office Depart-
1300 ment for the general use of my invention, and especially that part which relates to the hand-stamp form of postmarking and postage-stamp canceling combined with and upon a cross-bar or piece containing a suitable handle, substantially as aforesaid, so as to give both impressions at one blow and operation of the instrument, as aforesaid, thereby saving great labor and preventing frauds, etc.

(Endorsed:) Complainant's Exhibit M. D. Leggett, Fraud No .3. August 31, 1878, I. B., Ex'r.

EXHIBIT B.

This paper, marked Exhibit B, after due notice to M. P. Norton, and trial had before a commission appointed by the Commissioner of Patents, was by the said commission adjudged to be fraudulent and to have been surreptitiously introduced into the caveat file of M. P. Norton for a machine for mailing and folding letters, filed Oct. 20th and 27th, 1853.

In the order of the Commissioner of Patents, dated Sept. 18th, 1871, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in the case of the trial of M. P. Norton for gross misconduct, see the finding of the commission as to charges 1 and 2.

This paper does not, therefore, form a valid portion of the above-named caveat.

M. D. LEGGETT,
Commissioner of Patents.

1301 I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the Complainant's Exhibit "M. D. Leggett, Fraud No. 3," filed with me on the 31st day of August, 1878, in the cause of Christopher C. Campbell against Thomas L. James, in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York.

1303 Letters of commendation to General Ulysses S. Grant, President-elect of the United States of America, recommending the appointment of the Hon. Marcus P. Norton to the governorship of the Territory of Wyoming.

1304 STATE OF NEW YORK, IN ASSEMBLY,
Albany, Feb. 24th, 1869.

Hon. REUBEN E. FENTON,
Senator of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR: The Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., is, I learn, a candidate before the incoming administration for the position of governor of Wyoming Territory. Mr. Norton bears with him to Washington the cordial recommendation of a long array of eminent citizens, not only of this State, but likewise of Vermont, his native commonwealth. I commend him to you most sincerely as a citizen of distinguished eminence, in both public and private life, and one who will fully and ably vindicate General Grant's confidence in the event of his appointment to the position he asks at the hands of the administration about to assume power.

Mr. Norton is a leading lawyer at the bar of this State, and is a gentleman enjoying the full confidence of our friends here, having, I am glad to say, been active and outspoken in favor of your elevation to the Senatorship of the United States in place of the present incumbent. I most sincerely hope that you may find it to be entirely compatible with the public interest to cast the weight of your influence with General Grant in relation to this appointment in favor of Mr. Norton.

Respectfully,

T. G. YOUNGLOVE,
Speaker of the House.

1305 STATE OF NEW YORK, IN ASSEMBLY.
Albany, Feb. 26th, 1869.

To the Hon. REUBEN E. FENTON,
Senator of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR: I have great pleasure in recommending to you, and in soliciting your earnest and active efforts in favor of, the Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Rensselaer County, State of New York, to be governor of Wyoming Territory.

This gentleman holds a high position at the bar of the State of New York, and is well known to the Commissioner of Patents of the United States as a practitioner of undoubted merit and ability.

Mr. Norton would hold high the dignity of the position to which he hopes to be elevated, and his many friends in the county and State would feel that the incoming administration had done partial justice to the claims of the great State of New York in placing one of its favorite sons in a position which he is so well qualified by his intellectual powers to honor.

Whatever favor is done to Mr. Norton will be considered as personal to myself.

Respectfully,

GEO. M. GLEASON,
Member of Assembly, and Chairman of Cities.

OFFICE OF THE TROY WEEKLY PRESS,
Troy, N. Y., Feb. 27th, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States:

Learning that Marcus P. Norton, esq., of this city, will apply
1306 to you for appointment to the position of governor of the Territory of Wyoming, I beg leave to say that his designation to the place would give me the highest satisfaction, and I believe would meet the approbation of this entire community, in which Mr. Norton is well known as a gentleman of the most unsullied character and of first-class executive abilities.

Very respectfully,

A. S. PEASE,
Editor Troy Press.

TROY, Jan. 25th, 1869.

To the President-elect, General U. S. GRANT:

SIR: Marcus P. Norton, esq., of this city, who has been engaged in the practice of the law for the last fifteen years, intends to apply for an appointment under your administration. Mr. Norton is intelligent, industrious, and persevering, and possesses much more than ordinary executive ability. His friends will be gratified if his application is successful.

C. R. INGALLS,
Justice Supreme Court, State of New York.

NATIONAL STATE BANK OF TROY,
Troy, N. Y., Feb. 3d, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President elect of the United States:

The undersigned, officers and directors of the National State Bank of Troy, N. Y., respectfully recommend the appointment of Hon.
1307 Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, for the position of governor of the new Territory of Wyoming. He is a lawyer of eminent abilities in the line of his profession, has executive abilities of a first-rate order, and possesses those qualities of character which would fit him to be a popular and creditable executive; and we believe his appointment would prove highly satisfactory to your friends in this State, and reflect credit on your administration; and as such we commend him to you.

Respectfully your obedient servants,

WILLARD GAY, Cashier.
ALFRED B. NASH, V.-P't.
JOHN HITCHINS,
GEORGE D. WOTKYNS,
Directors.

RUTLAND, Jan. 14th, 1869.

Friend NORTON:

I send you herewith the testimonials bearing upon the subject of your laudable ambition. I am happy to say to you that I can obtain any desired number of vouchers for you in this our native county.

Anticipating your honorable elevation under the sanction of our respected and confided-in President-elect,

I remain, as ever, your friend,

D. E. NICHOLSON.

1308 SCHAGHTICOKE, Feb. 20th, 1869.

To His Excellency U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States:

Having been informed that Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., proposes to solicit at your hands the nomination for Governor of Wyoming Territory, I take this way of expressing my earnest wish that his application may meet with official approval, and this because of his acknowledged ability as a lawyer; commanding executive talent as a man; generous, cheerful, and agreeable character as a friend; and of tried and undoubted loyalty as a citizen. Combining so many excellencies of character, I think that by and through his appointment the government would receive honor, and all his friends the consciousness of not having mistaken their man.

I am, very truly, yours,

R. M. HASBROUCK,
Delegate from the 15th Cong. Dist. to the Nat'l Convention at Chicago, in 1868.

STATE OF VERMONT, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Rutland, Jan. 14th, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT:

DEAR SIR: Hon. Marcus P. Norton, now of Troy, N. Y., but formerly of this county, is a gentleman who would honorably fill an important position under the government, and I commend him to your honorable consideration.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JOHN B. PAGE,
Governor of Vermont.

1309 TROY, N. Y., Feb. 18th, 1869.

YOUR EXCELLENCY:

I have the honor to recommend to your favorable consideration Marcus P. Norton, of this city, for the position of Governor of the Territory of Wyoming.

Mr. Norton has been, and is, one of our most influential and active members in the Republican ranks of this county; his appointment would be a great gratification, not only to the leaders, but to the rank and file.

His services to his country, his ability and integrity assure me that he would do honor to the office and to your selection.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. L. COLE,
Chairman Rep. Central Com.

To U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 30th, 1869.

To General U. S. GRANT,
President elect of the United States:

SIR: The Hon. Marcus P. Norton is a parishioner of mine, whom I hold in high estimation. If you were to make him Governor of Wyoming, I have no doubt he would do credit to himself, and render much and valuable service to his country. For my own sake, I hope you will not give him this appointment, as I can poorly afford to lose him.

T. W. COIT,
Rector of St. Paul's Church.

1310 OFFICE OF TROY & BOSTON RAILROAD CO.,
Troy, N. Y., Feb. 10th, 1869.

To the PRESIDENT elect:

I understand the Hon. Marcus P. Norton is about to apply to the government for an appointment as governor of Wyoming Territory.

I regard Mr. Norton as a gentleman of broad and comprehensive views, and a lawyer of more than ordinary ability, and believe him eminently qualified to administer the office for which he will ask.

Respectfully,

C. W. MOSELEY,
Sup't T. & B. R. R.

STATE OF VERMONT,
Rutland, Jan. 1st, 1869.

To the President elect U. S. GRANT:

As a native fellow-townsman of Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., allow me to endorse his application for our nation's great commission to the executive department of Wyoming Territory. While I cannot hope to be known beyond the limits of our own little vigorous Vermont, whose liberal and valued honors and services I have shared in town, county, district, and State commissions, I refer with pride and confidence to the worthy names with which my friend, the applicant, is endorsed to the executive confidence.

Submissively,

D. E. NICHOLSON,
State Senator, Vermont.

1311 WHIG PRINTING HOUSE,
Troy, N. Y., Feb. 26th, 1869.

To Hon. REUBEN E. FENTON:

DEAR SIR: Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of this city, is a candidate for the office of governor of the Territory of Wyoming. He is a man of energy and worth, and of excellent standing in this community. He is a lawyer of distinction, capable of filling such a position with ability and credit. He has always been a Democrat, but when the first gun was fired upon Sumpter he joined the Union party, and has ever since acted and voted with the Republicans. With myself and others in this city he supported you for United States Senator.

Very respectfully,

ALEX. KIRKPATRICK,
Editor and Prop'r Troy Whig.

RUTLAND, V'T, Dec. 30th, 1868.

To the President-elect General U. S. GRANT:

Permit me to commend to the President the name of Hon. Marcus P. Norton, now of Troy, N. Y., a native of my county, who has already, from his fitness for public service, acquired a character and standing that entitles him to the appointment to which he aspires.

J. PROUT,
Judge of the Supreme Court, State of Vermont.

I concur in the above.

WM. M. FIELD,
Sheriff of Rutland Co., Vermont.

1312 POST-OFFICE, Troy, Feb.. 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States :

DEAR SIR: I take pleasure in commending to your favorable consideration the application of the Hon. Marcus P. Norton for an appointment as governor of Wyoming Territory. Mr. Norton has been long and successfully engaged in the legal profession in connection with the United States circuit and Supreme Courts, and with the State courts, and in this, as also in all his social relations, has evinced a degree of discipline in mind and heart that, in my judgment, eminently qualify him for the important responsibility which he desires to assume. Any confidence or trust that may be reposed in him, I believe will be fulfilled with strict fidelity.

Very respectfully,

ALONZO ALDEN,
Late Col. 169th Reg't N. Y. V.,
and Brevet Brig. Gen., and Postmaster at Troy.

BOARD OF EDUCATION,
Troy, N. Y., Feb. 11th, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States :

DEAR SIR: Having learned that Marcus P. Norton, esq., of this city, is an applicant for appointment as governor of the Territory of Wyoming, I take great pleasure in adding my testimony as to his entire fitness and capacity for the position.

1313 His great executive ability, combined with legal talents of the highest order, render him eminently qualified for such a trust, and, without question, would make his administration a successful one.

With great respect, I remain very truly yours,

WILLIAM KEMP,
President Board of Education, Troy, N. Y.

RENSSELAER COUNTY, TREASURER'S OFFICE,
Troy, N. Y., Jan. 25th, 1869.

To the President-elect, General U. S. GRANT:

Be pleased to allow me to bear testimony and to offer recommendations to the President of the United States in the matter of the application of the Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of this city, who, with an honorable and commendable ambition, desires to be appointed to the high and important office of governor of Wyoming Territory.

I have been well acquainted with Mr. Norton for the past thirteen years. He is a lawyer by profession, of profound learning, and of high standing at the bar of this county.

I take pleasure in recommending him for the above position.

Your obedient servant,

S. O. GLEASON,
Treasurer of Rensselaer Co., N. Y.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16th, 1869.

To the PRESIDENT-ELECT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Mr. Marcus P. Norton informs me of his intention to apply for the governorship of Wyoming Territory. He is a gentleman in every 1314 way qualified for the position, a lawyer of education, and has been thoroughly devoted to the cause of loyalty and his country's interests during the war. He would, I have no doubt, serve with benefit to the country and with credit to himself.

Very truly, etc.,

JOHN A. GRISWOLD,
Member of Congress, Troy, N. Y.

I assent fully to the statement of Hon. John A. Griswold, with reference to the qualifications and deservings of Mr. Marcus P. Norton, and cheerfully commend his application to the favorable consideration of Gen. Grant, President of the United States.

J. M. FRANCIS,
Editor Troy Daily Times.

I cheerfully concur in the foregoing recommendations, having been well acquainted with Mr. Norton many years.

MARTIN I. TOWNSEND.

TROY, N. Y., March 1st, 1869.

WELLS, VT., 23d Jan., 1869.

To his Excellency U. S. GRANT,
President elect of the United States:

From association with those who are personally acquainted with Hon. Marcus P. Norton, from the unanimous expression of his own 1315 townsmen, of faith and trust in his ability and integrity, and from personal acquaintance, under circumstances calculated to exhibit the qualities of head and heart, I gladly bear this testimony to his uniform good character as a man, undoubted loyalty as a citizen, and that he possesses those qualities which eminently fit him for the performance of any trust which, under the appointment of the government, he may receive.

MARCUS D. GROVER,
Member of Vermont Legislature.

STATE OF NEW YORK, IN ASSEMBLY,
Albany, Feb., 1869.

Hon. R. E. FENTON,
Senator-elect of the United States:

DEAR SIR: Major W. H. Merriam solicits from me a letter endorsing the recommendation of Hon. Marcus P. Norton for the office of governor of Wyoming Territory. Mr. Norton is in every way qualified to discharge the duties of said office; he is a lawyer of distinction, and a gentleman of high reputation; is a staunch Republican, and was a friend of yours in the senatorial contest.

I join with Maj. Merriam in cordially asking you to use your influence with the President in securing for him the position he asks.

Very truly,

S. E. MARVIN,
State Adj't-Gen. on Staff of Gov. Fenton.

1316 TROY, N. Y., Feb, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States:

The Hon. Marcus P. Norton, who applies to you for the governorship of Wyoming Territory, has long been familiarly known to me, and I take pleasure in recommending him as every way qualified for the designated office. He was born and educated in Vermont, and at Union College, N. Y., and the integrity, fidelity, and loyalty of the "Green Mountain" State enter largely into the composition of his nature. He is a lawyer of experience, and has won eminent distinction in his profession. In administrative ability and in moral character I regard him worthy of your confidence, and equal to any person for the place desired.

Respectfully,

C. F. BURDICK,
Presiding Elder M. E. Church.

RUTLAND, VT., Jan. 12th, 1869.

To the President-elect, General U. S. GRANT:

As the senior member of the firm of G. A. Tuttle & Co., publishers and proprietors of the Rutland Herald, I venture to add my commendation to the name of Hon. Marcus P. Norton, now of Troy, N. Y., as a man worthy of the confidence of the government and of your administration.

Mr. Norton is a native of our county, who has, by personal effort, proven himself worthy of the marked confidence and trust which would be expressed and confirmed by your commission to the further service of the public.

Very respectfully,

GEO. A. TUTTLE,
Editor and Proprietor of Rutland Herald.

1317 ALBANY, Feb., 1869.

To his Excellency Gen. U. S. GRANT,
President-elect of the United States:

Learning that the Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., will be an applicant to you for the appointment as governor of the Territory of Wyoming, I desire to testify to his eminent fitness for that office, and to unite with others in soliciting in his behalf such appointment. My acquaintance with Mr. Norton extends back to our school-days, and I am not extravagant in asserting that his present eminence, as attorney and counselor in the highest courts of the government, is but the legitimate result of the ability and scholarship manifested in his earlier years. He is a gentleman of excellent moral and social standing in the community where he has long resided, and for many years has held a high rank among the most public-spirited and enterprising citizens of our State. I believe that his appointment would give great satisfaction to the Union Republican party of this section, and that the office of governor in his hands would be administered with great ability, thorough integrity, and to the entire acceptance of the people over whom he would preside. I hope you will find it for the best interests of the country to appoint Mr. Norton governor of the Territory of Wyoming.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

GEO. G. BATCHELLER,
Late Candidate for Elector 18th Cong. Dist. of N. Y.

I heartily endorse all that is above written.

I. V. BAKER,
Supt. Rensselaer and Saratoga Railroad.

1318 POULTNEY, VT., Jan. 18th, 1869.

General U. S. GRANT,
President-elect United States of America:

Learning that Hon. Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., seeks the appointment of Governor of Wyoming Territory, I write to say that I have known him intimately for several years, first as student and latterly as a lawyer eminent in his profession. Besides being a man of talents and acquirements, he possesses, in my judgment, elements of character uncommonly well adapted to such a position in the West, and I commend him to your favorable regard.

Respectfully, yours,

JOHN NEWMAN,
President of Ripley Female College, Poultney, Vt.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, COMPLAINANT,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, DEFENDANT.

Please take notice that on the 23d inst., at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, at the court house of said court, in the city of New York, upon the pleadings and evidence in this case, and upon the paper, a copy of which is hereto attached, I shall move said court for an order making Charles Eddy, named in the answer of defendant, and who has signed said paper, a party to the above-entitled suit.

GEO. H. WILLIAMS,
Counsel for Complainant.

JULY 13TH, 1878.

To STEWART L. WOODFORD, Esq.,
U. S. District Attorney, of Counsel for Defendant.

1320 Copy of the above, with alleged copy of paper attached, received this 15th of July, 1878.

STEWART L. WOODFORD,
U. S. District Attorney, and of Counsel for Defendant.

In the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, COMPLAINANT,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, DEFENDANT.

Whereas it is alleged in defendant's answer herein that Charles Eddy is interested in the subject-matter of this suit, in trust for himself,
1321 Albert C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor; and whereas said defendant in his said answer prays that said Charles Eddy may be made a party to this suit; and whereas said complainant is willing that said prayer should be granted so far as it may be necessary to bring said Eddy before this court for the proper adjudication thereby of all his claims or interests in the subject-matter of this suit, now it is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between said complainant, Christopher C. Campbell, and said Charles Eddy, that said Eddy, by an order of this court, shall be made a party to this suit, as prayed for in said answer; and the filing of this stipulation in said court in the above entitled case shall be held and treated by the court as his voluntary appearance for that purpose, and for all the purposes of this suit, as fully in all respects as though he was an original party thereto. It is understood that said Eddy claims that his rights and interests in the subject-matter of this suit are fixed and determined by an assignment from Marcus P. Norton to him in trust of a one-third interest in the patent dated April 14, 1863, and its reissues referred to in the pleadings in this case, which said assignment is dated October 23, 1869, and a certified copy of which is now in evidence, and by a contract of even date with said assignment now in evidence, and that said complainant denies this, and claims that said Eddy's rights and interests are fixed and determined by an instrument in writing dated October 7, 1871, and executed by Charles Eddy, Jacob Shavor, Albert C. Corse, and W. W. Secombe, a certified copy of which is now in evidence. And it is further stipulated and agreed that upon the pleadings and evidence as they now stand, and without any further evidence or pleadings in the case, unless the court shall otherwise direct, said court shall decide as to what the rights and interests of said Eddy in the subject-matter of this suit are, and shall make such decree in respect thereto as equity and good conscience may require.

And it is further agreed that if there is recovery in said suit
1322 against said defendant James, the court shall determine the rights respectively thereto of complainant and said Eddy, as equity and good conscience may require. And said complainant further agrees that the said assignment of October 23, 1869, from Marcus P. Norton to Charles Eddy, in trust as aforesaid, was a valid assignment, not affected by any prior or cotemporaneous assignment by said Norton to Helen M. Ingalls, or other written agreement to which said Eddy is a party, excepting the one hereinbefore referred to and dated October 7, 1871. And it is further understood that all costs awarded against said complainant and counsel fees are first to be paid out of any recovery in said case, and that no costs are to be adjudged against said Eddy.

Witness our hands and seals this day of June, 1878.

1324 Motion to make Charles Eddy a defendant.

In the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, COMPLAINANT,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, DEFENDANT.

GEORGE H. WILLIAMS, being duly sworn, says that he is of counsel for complainant in the above-entitled case. That he has been informed by Charles Eddy, named in defendant's answer, and by Marcus P. Norton, esq., complainant's solicitor, and believes it to be true, that before the commencement of this suit the said Eddy declared to the said Norton that he would not pay one cent or incur any expense or liability whatever in the prosecution of the claim which is the subject matter of this suit, or for the prosecution of any claim under the patent for an infringement of which this suit is brought, and said Eddy has informed this affiant, since the commencement of this suit, and when affiant was soliciting him to become a party thereto, that he would not consent to place himself in any position in it in which he might incur any liability 1325 for costs or expenses. Said Eddy expressly refused to become a co-complainant with Campbell in the suit if in any event it would expose him to liability for costs or expenses. Affiant, under these circumstances, knows of no way of making said Eddy a party to this suit as prayed for in defendant's answer, except to make him a party defendant.

Affiant further says that it has been impossible to determine what, if any, interests or rights said Eddy had in the subject-matter of this suit before the testimony was substantially closed. That affiant declined to go on with this motion at the last motion day of the court, for the reason that it was then intimated to him that evidence might still be introduced affecting the question of Eddy's interest in this suit. That there has been written and oral evidence introduced by both parties touching this point. That while it seems to affiant that said Eddy has some interest in this matter of the patent upon which this suit is brought, or in the proceeds of such patent, the extent and nature of such interest depend upon the construction of written and oral evidence of doubtful import, some of which has been introduced at a very late period in the taking of the testimony in this case. Affiant further says that he assisted in preparing the amendments to the bill in this case, but was not advised of the alleged interest of said Eddy in the subject matter of this suit until the answer of defendant was filed, and that complainant's solicitor, Marcus P. Norton, esq., who prepared the original bill, then informed this affiant that said Eddy was not made a party thereto, because he, the said solicitor, was of the opinion that said Eddy had no such interest in the matter in litigation as to make him a necessary party to the suit. Affiant further says that as counsel for complainant he was unable to determine as to the correctness of this opinion until the evidence in the case was developed, and that this application was made as soon as practicable with a proper knowledge of the facts 1326 of the case. Affiant says that the object of this application is to provide, so that the long pending controversy as to the patent in suit may be finally determined, and all further litigation upon the subject prevented.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, COMPLAINANT,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, DEFENDANT.

Order by the court.

Now comes the said complainant, by George H. Williams, his counsel, and the defendant, by S. B. Clarke, assistant U. S. district attorney, his counsel, and the motion heretofore continued from the 23d of last July by consent of parties, came on to be heard upon a stipulation between said complainant and said Eddy, filed herein, and an affidavit by said counsel for complainant filed therewith, as well as upon the pleadings and evidence in this case, and after hearing said counsel for complainant in support of said motion, and said counsel for defendant in opposition thereto, and it appearing that said defendant in his answer had prayed that said Eddy be made a party to this suit, and the said Eddy in said stipulation claiming to have an interest in the subject-1328 matter of this suit, agrees in said stipulation that the filing thereof in this cause shall be held and treated by the court as his voluntary appearance for all the purposes of this suit, as fully in all respects as though he was an original party thereto; it is considered upon the foregoing, and the pleadings and evidence in the case, that the said motion of complainant ought to be granted; and it further appearing that said Eddy cannot be made one of the complainants herein, it is ordered and adjudged that the said Eddy be, and he is hereby, made a defendant in this suit, for himself, as well as in trust for Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, for all the purposes thereof, as fully in all respects as though he were an original party thereto. And it is further ordered, as regards the complainant Campbell and defendant Eddy, that this cause, the said Eddy consenting thereto in said stipulation, be heard upon the pleadings and evidence as they now stand, unless the court shall hereafter otherwise direct.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant, before J. G. Pomerene, esq., the special examiner, appointed for the purpose, at his office, in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 18th day of February, 1878, and the following days.

Present, pursuant to notice, Marcus P. Norton, esq., solicitor, and of counsel for complainant, and Samuel B. Clark, esq., assistant U. S. attorney for the southern district of New York, for the defendant.

CHARLES E. WHEELER, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Charles E. Wheeler; age, 51; residence, Cleveland, Ohio; occupation, bookkeeper; not specially occupied at present.

Q. 2. Were you ever employed in the post-office in Cleveland?

A. Yes.

Q. 3. During what time were you so employed, and in what capacity or capacities?

1339 A. From on or about the 4th day of May, 1849, until on or about the 1st of October, '66, I was employed there with the exception of about three months; for about the first four years as box delivery and stamping clerk; afterwards as chief of distribution department, until appointed as special agent of the Post-Office Department in charge of railway postal service; afterwards, until about the 1st of October, '66, I occupied the position of special agent, as stated.

Q. 4. About how long were you chief of the distribution department?

A. I would say about ten years.

Q. 5. While you were in the post-office in these various capacities did you have an opportunity of knowing what sort of instruments were used for the postmarking of letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps at different times?

A. I had.

Q. 6. Without referring to dates at all, give a brief general history of the different instruments used in the Cleveland post-office for the purposes indicated, in the order in which they were used.

A. Well, it is rather difficult to answer that question just as you put it; we had a dating stamp, the date daily changed, separate and apart from the canceller or cancelling stamp; sometimes the dating stamp only was used for the two purposes; at other times both stamps; afterwards a combined dating and cancelling stamp was used.

Q. 7. Describe the construction of the separate dating stamp.

A. It was a circular stamp with the words "Cleveland, Ohio" in the circle, and printing type for the month and day of the month in a square mortise in the center, which were held in position by a set screw from the outside, and operated by a wooden handle on top of the stamp.

Q. 8. What material was the part exclusive of the handle?

A. Iron, case hardened, or steel.

Q. 9. What shape was the iron or steel part?

1340 A. Circular, and probably an inch and a half high.

Q. 10. Give the general dimensions.

A. Circumference, about three inches; height, about an inch and a half; length of handle, possibly about three inches.

Q. 11. How were the handle and iron part attached?

A. Sometimes by a screw, and sometimes by a prong, or whatever you choose to call it—an iron attached to the stamp running up through the handle.

Q. 12. What was the shape of the handle?

A. Oval.

Q. 13. Describe the construction and dimensions of the separate canceller.

A. About the same height as the iron part of the dating stamp, circular in form, with bars on the cancelling surface; handle in about same shape of dating stamp, but smaller, and secured in same way; the material was iron, and diameter about three-quarters of an inch or less, and the handle was wood.

Q. 14. What did you mean by saying that the separate dating stamp was sometimes used for the two purposes, and how was it so used?

A. The rules of the department required the use of the cancelling stamp for the cancellation of the postage-stamps, but the dating stamp was frequently used for both dating and cancelling.

Q. 15. You mean, do you not, that the postmark was put on the postage stamp?

A. I do.

Q. 16. You have stated substantially that the rules of the department required that the postmark should not be made on the postage-stamp, but on the envelope apart from the postage stamp; did the department make more than one rule or order on that subject at different times?

1341 (The complainant's counsel objects to the last part of the question, on the ground that the records and files at the Post-Office Department in Washington will show precisely what was done on the subject inquired about. It is therefore improper to inquire of this witness about what may have or may not have been done by the Postmaster-General, unless done at the Cleveland post-office, and within the personal knowledge of the witness.)

A. I could not say positively whether more than one order printed or written was received from the department, or whether succeeding orders were made through special agents, but the attention of the Cleveland office was certainly called to our oversight of the rule on more than one occasion.

Adjourned to Tuesday at 10 o'clock a. m.

FEBRUARY 19th, 1878.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

Direct examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

Q. 17. Give the names of the different gentlemen who were postmasters at this city while you were in the office, and approximate the dates of their term of office, by reference to years and by reference to the administration of different Presidents of the United States.

A. D. M. Haskell, under the Taylor & Filmore administrations, about four years; J. W. Gray, under the Pierce administration, over four years; B. Harrington, under the Buchanan administration, about four years; E. Cowles, under the first Lincoln administration, under whom I served part of his first term.

Q. 18. It was under Mr. Cowles, was it, that you were appointed special agent?

1342 A. It was.

Q. 19. What do you mean by saying that it was over four years that Gray was postmaster under the Pierce administration?

A. That Gray lapped over into the Buchanan administration.

Q. 20. Do you recollect who was postmaster when the order in reference to putting the postmark on the envelope, apart from the postage stamp, was made?

A. After the passage of the three-cent postage stamp law, either at the last part of the Haskell administration or the first part of the Gray administration.

Q. 21. Do you recollect that the attention of the Cleveland office was called to its occasional non-conformity to the rule by the department while Mr. Gray was postmaster?

(Counsel for complainant objects to the question on the ground of its being indefinite and uncertain as to what office defendant refers to when he says "Cleveland office.")

A. My impression is that it was under the Gray administration.

Q. 22. State in how many different places the post-office was located in this city while you were employed therein.

A. Four; first, in old Franklin buildings, on Superior street; second, in Herald building on Bank street; third, in Gray's building, on Water street; fourth, in Government building, on public square, where it now is.

Q. 23. Approximate the date of moving into the Herald building.

A. About the first of January, 1850, as near as I can recollect.

Q. 24. About when did you go from the Herald building to Gray's building, on Water street.

A. Between the first and fourth of July, 1853; the removal occupied two or three days.

1343 Q. 25. About when did you go into the government building, on the public square?

A. On the evening of the 24th of December, 1857 or 1858, on Christmas Eve.

Q. 26. Was an instrument ever used in the Cleveland office to your knowledge by which the letters were postmarked on the envelope apart from the postage stamp, and the postage stamp was cancelled at one blow of the instrument?

A. There was.

Q. 27. Describe how the first instrument of this kind was constructed.

A. One side of the original dating stamp was filed to a flat surface, and the iron part of the old style canceller filed in the same way, and the two put together side by side by binding with twine and wire; the two flat surfaces were brought together before binding.

Q. 28. Were the original dating stamp and the old style canceller which you refer to in your last answer the same as the dating stamp and canceller which you described yesterday?

A. They were.

Q. 29. What became of the handle of the canceller?

A. It was taken off, the iron part only being used.

Q. 30. Have you a model of the canceller and dating stamp as originally combined?

A. I have.

Q. 31. Please produce it.

(Witness produces model asked for and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 (Wheeler), J. G. P., Ex'r, Feb'y 19th, 1878.)

Q. 32. In this model the canceller and the dating stamp seemed first to have been bound together with waxed twine, and afterward with wire placed over the twine; was that the case in the original combined stamp?

A. Substantially so, but probably not as artistically done as this one, the object being to hold them as tightly together as possible.

1344 Q. 33. What do you mean by artistically—anything more than evenness of binding?

A. Nothing more.

Q. 34. Were the original combined dating stamp and canceller as securely attached as they are represented in this model?

A. That was the intention.

Q. 35. How about the fact?

A. Continuous use did make it out of true.

Q. 36. Please explain that answer a little more fully.

A. Not being permanently united, the jar would make the surfaces uneven if the blow was not perpendicular; by the term surfaces, I mean the acting faces of the postmarker and canceller.

Q. 37. Did the two acting faces ever become so out of true that both would not make some impression upon the envelope and postage stamp?

A. No, that would be impossible.

Q. 38. You mean, do you, that they never did?

A. No.

Q. 39. What do you mean?

A. I mean that it would be impossible for the two facing surfaces to come in contact with the face of the envelope without making an impression.

Q. 40. Did the two acting faces ever become so uneven with reference to each other that when the instrument was used either of them failed to come into contact with the paper?

A. No.

Q. 41. When the original dating stamp and the old style canceller were first combined in the manner you have described, were they in point of fact held together as firmly and securely as they are represented in this model, Defendant's Exhibit No. 137?

(Complainant's counsel object to the question on the following grounds:

First. The witness having already exhausted the subject mat-
1345 ter of the inquiry in a vague and unintelligible manner, it is now too late for defendant's counsel to pump into the witness the answer he desires the witness to give.

Second. Because the instrument itself will illustrate to the satisfaction of the court the subject matter of the inquiry.)

A. When first put together they undoubtedly were.

Q. 42. Was there a rim or bead at the top of the iron part of the dating stamp where it joined the handle as is represented in this model, Defendant's Exhibit No. 137?

A. My impression is that all the dating stamps furnished by the department had a shank or projection in the handle immediately above and over the iron part of the stamp, substantially as represented in the model; this projection may be called a bead or rim.

Q. 43. Please direct your attention to the original combined instrument and state whether there was such a projection, or rim, or shank, or bead, in that as is represented in this model?

A. My recollection is that there was such a shank.

Q. 44. Did the upper end of the canceller come flush up against this rim or shank, as is represented in Defendant's Exhibit No. 137?

A. Undoubtedly it did, for the purpose of holding it in position.

Q. 45. This model is incomplete in that it is made wholly of wood, and that the acting face of the dating stamp is not lettered, and in that there is nothing to represent the set screw from the outside by which the printing-type were held in place, and in that the dating stamp is one solid block of wood, and in that the mortise for the dating type is round instead of rectangular, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. 46. Do you now notice any other respects in which this 1346 model, Defendant's Exhibit No. 137, is not a perfect representation of the original combined stamp when first put together?

A. I do not; I think it is substantially the same.

(Defendant's counsel now offers the model, Defendant's Ex. No. 137, in evidence, the same being marked by the special examiner, as before indicated.

Complainant's counsel now objects to this model as being any part of the evidence in this case, for the following reasons:

First. An inspection of the model bears evidence of having been made within the last two or three days.

Second. As having been manufactured either by defendant's counsel or the witness now on the stand, or by somebody else under their instructions, for the purpose of illegitimate evidence in this cause.

Complainant's counsel now and here objects to any and all evidence that this witness has given or may give in this cause concerning said model, for the reasons last above assigned.)

Adjourned until half-past two p. m.

Present, same counsel as before.

Direct examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

Q. 47. Whose idea was it of combining the canceller and dating stamp in the manner that you have described?

A. My own.

Q. 48. Did you fix the dating stamp and canceller together with twine and wire? Did you do it yourself?

1347 A. I did.

Q. 49. What was the reason of your doing it?

A. To economize labor in stamping.

Q. 50. Well, give a full explanation of how this economy of labor was effected, and of any circumstances that existed which made it expedient to try to effect it.

A. Owing to the decrease in letter-postage from five and ten cents to three cents, there was a consequent increase in correspondence, which, if stamped by the two single stamps—dating and cancelling—then in use, would necessitate double labor; the use of the combined stamp made only one operation necessary, and it was only necessary to go over the letter once in order to accomplish both operations of postmarking and cancelling.

Q. 51. Was the combined instrument which you have described, represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 137, put in use in the Cleveland post-office?

A. It was.

Q. 52. Did you use it there yourself?

A. I did.

Q. 53. Was it used continuously after it was invented?

A. No.

Q. 54. Why?

A. Because, owing to the weight of the two stamps combined and the shape of the handle, it was considered rather clumsy.

Q. 55. What effect did the weight and the slope of the handle have upon the operator?

A. It blistered the hand.

Q. 56. About how often was the instrument used?

A. Whenever there was an unusual accumulation of letters, or just before closing mails.

Q. 57. About how often was there an unusual accumulation of letters on an average?

A. Usually at the close of business hours and during the evening; also on Mondays, the result of Sunday's correspondence.

1348 Q. 58. Do you mean that there was some part of every day, or almost every day, that the instrument like Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 was used in the Cleveland office?

A. No; I will not say that, but an occasional use.

Q. 59. I want to get at about how frequently those occasions came around, on an average; what should you say about that?

(Complainant's counsel objects on the following ground:

First. Because the witness having already several times made answer to the subject matter inquired about in the question, it is improper to waste time in this examination by repetition of leading and instructive questions.

Second. The witness having fully answered the subject matter of the inquiry by the several last preceding questions.)

A. Could not say how often; it was used by others as well as myself.

Q. 60. How often was it used by you while you had stamping to do?

A. My position at that time was box delivery clerk; when there was a necessity for stamping while I was occupied at the windows, others did the stamping; could not give a definite answer.

Q. 61. When you were not occupied at the windows did you do stamping?

A. Sometimes.

Q. 62. Were you accustomed to use the combined instrument when you did do stamping?

A. Only at times, for reasons already explained.

Q. 63. Did the instrument lie continuously by the stamping table, so that it was handy for use whenever there was any need of hurry?

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question for the reasons last above assigned; and he here most respectfully requests the attention of 1349 this court to the manner and character of the direct examination of this witness against which complainant's counsel protests.

Defendant's counsel requests complainant's counsel to specify the grounds of his objection.

(Complainant's counsel respectfully refers defendant's counsel to the record itself, and will reserve argument thereon until the case comes regularly before the court.)

A. It did stand on the stamping table and it was handy for use.

Q. 64. Was any change made in the method of combining the dating stamp and canceller after the instrument like the model described in Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 had been used as you have testified?

A. Yes; three changes in the Cleveland post-office.

Q. 65. Describe the changes in detail and in the order in which they were made.

A. The first change was in brazing together the dating and cancelling stamp, as they appeared in Defendant's Exhibit No. 137; the second change was in brazing a half part of the cancelling stamp to the dating stamp; the third change was the still further cutting down of the cancelling stamp, which was also brazed to the dating stamp; the object of the second and third change in the cancelling stamp was to reduce size and weight.

Q. 66. What is brazing?

A. My meaning of the word brazing was the joining together of the two stamps by a soldering process.

Q. 67. Were they held securely; did the canceller ever get knocked off?

A. I never knew of but one case where the canceller was broken off in our office.

Q. 68. Have you a model representing any of the changes in the combined instrument which you have spoken of?

1350 A. I have one which represents the second change.

Q. 69. Please produce it.

(Witness produces the model asked for, and it is marked Defendant's Ex No. 138, (Wheeler,) J. G. P. Ex'r, Feb. 19th, 1878.)

Q. 70. Point out any respects which you notice in which this model, Defendant's Exhibit No. 138, differs from the combined instrument which was actually made.

A. It is about the same shape and size, but has no lettering on the dating face, nor has it the dating types secured by a set screw, and the dating and cancelling stamp being of wood instead of iron.

Q. 71. In other respects is this model, Defendant's Exhibit No. 138, a perfect representation of an instrument for postmarking and cancelling which was combined and used in the Cleveland post-office?

A. It is.

(Defendant's counsel offers the model in evidence, the same being marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 138, as above indicated.

As to the introduction and reception of this model in evidence, complainant's counsel here interposes several objections. Those objections are the same as were interposed to the introduction and reception in evidence of Defendant's Exhibit No. 137, and those objections are here repeated, as against Defendant's Exhibit No. 138.)

Adjourned until half-past nine o'olock to-morrow morning.

Same counsel as before.

Direct examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

Q. 72. Did you ever apply for a patent on this combined stamp which you have described?

A. I did.

Q. 73. When?

A. According to recollection, in 1863.

Q. 74. What was the result?

A. Application was denied.

Q. 75. What was the reason?

(Complainant's counsel objects to this question on the ground that the matter inquired about by the question has nothing whatever to do with this case, the witness having already answered that he applied for a patent and that that application was denied by the Commissioner of Patents.)

A. I was informed by my attorney it was because of an existing patent.

Q. 76. Did you apply for an interference case with that existing patent?

A. I did.

Q. 77. With what result?

A. The grant was given, and the case set down for hearing on a certain date; the grant was afterward withdrawn before the hearing.

Q. 78. Was any reason assigned for disallowing the interference?

A. Because of the existing patent and the usual time for application having expired, I suppose to be the reason.

Q. 79. What do you mean by the usual time? The usual time for application for the patent, or the application for an interference?

A. The time allowed by law, two years, as I am informed, had 1352 expired to apply for a patent; but for what were considered sufficient reasons for an interference case to be granted, that application was made.

Q. 80. What I want to know is, why the application for an interference case, having been once granted, was then denied?

A. I never knew the reasons, not having seen the Commissioner's letter recalling the grant, my information being received from my attorney.

Q. 81. Have you ever withdrawn your application for the patent or for the interference case?

(Complainant's counsel object to the question on the ground that under the patent laws of this country both the application for the patent, as well as the application for an interference case, cannot now be revived, both being abandoned and as dead as Julius Cæsar, and second, as being incompetent and as consuming the time of the examination upon immaterial matter.)

A. No.

Q. 82. When was the combined instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit 137 having the dating-stamp and canceller attached by twine and wire first made?

A. Early in the year 1853.

Q. 83. Mention any circumstances by which you are able to fix that date.

A. It was in the Herald building.

Q. 84. Explain what you mean by "it" in your last answer and how the circumstance you have mentioned enables you to fix the date. Give a full explanation, as you would if you had given no previous testimony, and if you were trying to make a person having no information about the matter thoroughly understand it.

A. The three-cent postage-stamp having come into general use while the office was in that building, and correspondence having largely increased, owing to the reduction in postage, the duties of the 1353 stamping clerk were largely increased; owing to the orders of the department requiring all letters to be stamped with both the dating and cancelling stamp, separately, there seemed to be a necessity for economy in labor; from these circumstances I conceived the idea of combining the two stamps, and did so in the way formerly spoken of, and used the combined stamp myself there, and it was also used there by others.

The combined stamp, both in that office and afterwards, was always on or near the stamping-table, accessible for use.

Q. 85. Is your recollection distinct that the combined instrument was combined at about the time three-cent postage-stamps came into use.

A. Within a short time afterward; certainly not before.

Q. 86. Is your recollection distinct that the instrument was combined and used while the post-office was in the Herald building, on Bank st.?

(Complainant's counsel objects to question on the ground that he has sole right to cross-examine witness.)

A. Yes.

Q. 87. Who was postmaster when the combination was made?

A. D. M. Haskell.

Q. 88. Is your recollection distinct about that?

A. It is.

Q. 89. Who was postmaster when the post-office was removed from the Herald Building on Bank street to Gray's building on Water street?

A. J. W. Gray occupied the Bank street office during about the three first months of his administration, and then removed to Water street.

Q. 90. Have you a distinct recollection of that?

A. I have.

Q. 91. Who owned the building on Water street?

A. J. W. Gray, the then postmaster.

1354–5 Q. 92. Have you a distinct recollection that Gray succeeded Haskell?

A. I have.

Q. 93. What President appointed Gray, and at what part of the presidential term?

(Complainant's counsel objects to question, unless examining counsel also inquires of the witness as to the size, age, complexion and politics of that President.)

A. President Pierce, early in 1853.

Q. 94. When was President Pierce inaugurated?

A. Supposed to be on the fourth of March, 1853.

Q. 95. Have you a distinct recollection that Gray was appointed postmaster shortly after Pierce became President?

A. I have.

Q. 96. State the date, as precisely as you can, when the post-office was removed from the Herald building on Bank street to the Gray building on Water street.

A. Between the first and fifth of July, 1853.

Q. 97. You have testified that after the instrument like model Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 was made it was not used all the time. State what other intruments were used.

A. Sometimes the dating-stamp alone, for both dating and cancelling, and sometimes the two stamps separately for the two purposes.

Q. 98. I understand you to mean that, in spite of the rule, the postmark was sometimes put directly on the postage-stamps; is that correct?

A. That was the case.

Q. 99. At any time before the canceller was brazed or soldered to the side of the dating-stamp, was the instrument like the model Defendant's Exhibit 137, having the canceller attached by twine and wire, laid aside as useless or abandoned?

(Complainant's counsel objects to question, on the ground that 1356 the witness cannot give in evidence his conclusions. The subject matter of the inquiry is a question of law solely within the province of this court to determine when proper evidence shall have been presented to the court on that subject.)

A. It was not abandoned or laid aside permanently, but was used from time to time during the whole Gray administration.

Q. 100. I asked you yesterday about how often the occasions for the use of the instrument came around. I ask you that question again now. Was it as often as one day in a week, or one day in a month on an average?

A. There was occasion to use it every day, and it was certainly in use as often or oftener than one day in a week.

Q. 101. How long was it after the combination was first made before the canceller and dating-stamp were first brazed together, as nearly as you recollect?

A. I have no data on that point definite until the commencement of the succeeding administration; not having access to the books and receipts of the Gray administration.

Q. 102. Well, give us your best recollection.

A. I cannot recollect anything about the matter further than I have stated, because for the most of the Gray administration I was chief of distribution department, and the stamping was done by other parties.

Q. 103. You can tell, can't you, whether it was less than five, ten, or twenty years?

A. Probably within five years.

Q. 104. Well, certainly, within how many years?

A. For reasons above given as to data, could not give a definite answer until the year 1860, but could undoubtedly find receipts previous to that date upon search.

Q. 105. How long was instrument having the dating stamp and canceller brazed together used?

1357 A. Referring to last above answer, I can say certainly since and including a portion of the year 1860, to the time that the Post-Office Department furnished the new style postmarking and cancelling stamps with cross bar.

Q. 106. Why didn't you apply for a patent earlier than 1863?

A. On account of sickness of myself and of members of my family, I was unable to spare the money necessary, and those reasons were explicitly stated to the Commissioner of Patents, when the application for interference was made.

Q. 107. How early did you consult a lawyer about getting a patent, if you consulted one at all?

A. Consulted Brainard & Burridge within a short time after the invention, and they, or one of them, told me it was patentable, and urged me to apply for a patent.

Q. 108. About when were the postmarking and cancelling stamps, having cross bars, furnished by the Post-Office Department?

A. Cannot give date, but think during the first Lincoln administration.

Cross-examination of witness by complainant's counsel, MARCUS P. NORTON:

(Complainant's counsel here states that having taken several objections to the introduction and reception in evidence of defendant's Exhibits Nos. 137 and 138 (Wheeler), he will cross-examine this witness, de bene esse, with reference to said exhibits.

Defendant's counsel objects to any conditional cross-examination, and insists that if counsel cross-examines he must do so at the risk of suffering any legal effect which are the natural result.)

X Q. 109. You have stated on your examination-in-chief that 1358 you made an instrument like defendant's Exhibit No. 137; who made that instrument for you?

A. I made it myself, or put it together myself, having the material in the office.

X Q. 110. How many such instruments did you make, and when and where?

A. One in the Herald building and during the latter part of the Haskell administration, in the year 1853.

X Q. 111. Did I ask you to state anything about the Haskell administration?

A. The question was when, and the answer was under the Haskell administration, in the year 1853.

X Q. 112. Now, sir, please answer my question, which was this, and answer it like a man and without evasion, to wit: Have you on your cross-examination been asked to state anything about the Haskell administration or any other administration?

(Objected to, on the ground that witness has answered question.)

A. I suppose in answering questions as to dates, in order to make answers plain, it is necessary to locate circumstances in the different administrations as well as in different years, and that was the reason why the answer was given in that way, without any intention of prevarication, in the year 1853.

X Q. 113. You are here informed that I require of you, on this cross-examination, to state nothing of the kind stated by you in the last answer, but I do require you to give full and direct answers to questions put to you, and I now ask you to state the exact time when you first made an instrument represented by defendant's Exhibit No. 137, without any reference to anybody's administration.

(Defendant's counsel objects to this manner of addressing the witness, who is manifestly trying to be fair in his answers, and requests the witness to answer the questions according to his own understanding 1359 of them, as written down, and according to his own judgment of what they call for, without any reference to what Mr. Norton requires, except so far as such requirement is contained in each individual question as taken down by the examiner.)

A. Between the months of January and the 1st of July, 1853.

X Q. 114. If I understood you correctly, during your examination-in-chief, you stated that you never made but one instrument like or substantially like Defendant's Exhibit No. 137. Was that understanding correct?

A. It was not; I said that the original stamp was made at that time.

Adjourned until 2 o'clock for dinner.

Met pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

X Q. 115. Not understanding you correctly, as you have stated in your last answer, please state what you did say upon the matter inquired about in the last question, or meant to be understood about that matter.

A. In my answer to the original inquiry I understood the question to be: Was more than one stamp made at first; and I so answered—only one.

X Q. 116. When was that made?

A. During the year 1853.

X Q. 117. What has become of that stamp, and where is it now?

A. I have no means of knowing.

X Q. 118. Do you know where it is?

A. I do not.

X Q. 119. When and where did you last see it?

A. I have no remembrance as to date, but saw it in the post-office, on Bank street and Water street. Whether afterwards I could not say.

1360 X Q. 120. In what year did you last see it in the post-office in this city?

A. Probably in the years 1858 or 1859.

X Q. 121. Did you make any other instrument of the kind shown by Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 than that one?

A. I did not. But that stamp or combination was renewed upon one or more occasions, both in the binding and by wedge inserted between the stamps to tighten the binding when it became loose. Other dating stamps were used in this combination afterwards, from the fact of the handles becoming loose or splitting from the effects of heat or falling.

X Q. 122. How many instruments of the kind you have described in your last answer did you ever make or cause to be made?

A. Probably only the first myself. As to others that may have been made or repaired, they were done by or under the supervision of the then stamping clerks in the Cleveland post-office.

X Q. 123. What has become of the one you say you made?

A. I have no idea.

X Q. 124. You cannot tell where it is?

A. No.

X Q. 125. In what year and at what place did you last see the instrument referred to in the last several answers?

A. If the instrument referred to means the original stamp, it was in the Water street office between the 1st of July, 1853, and the balance of the time the office remained on Water street.

X Q. 126. You ought to know that the last question refers to the contrivance about which you were then being examined, to wit, the one which you say had a wedge in it to tighten the binding; please state the year you last saw that contrivance.

A. The wedge was undoubtedly used not only in the original stamp, but in all the renewals or changes in that contrivance during nearly or all the time the office was on Water street.

1361 (Complainant's counsel here moves the court to strike out the last answer, as not only not responsive to the question, but also on the ground of vagueness and intentional evasion by the witness.

Defendant's counsel objects to such remarks as have been put upon the record in form of objection being made in the presence of the witness, the purpose thereof being manifestly to irritate and brow-beat the witness, since the record shows that it is the counsel's questions that are vague and not the witness' answers.)

X Q. 127. Did you understand the last question at the time you attempted to answer it, which question the examiner will now read to you for your information?

A. I request the examiner to read my last answer before answering the last question.

(That answer being read and also the question, the witness says:)

I did not fully understand the question, for it seemed to refer to one particular stamp with a wedge, when the fact was that more than that one particular wedge had been used from time to time.

X Q. 128. How many stamps have you ever seen in your lifetime containing the wedge referred to in your last answer?

A. Probably none other than these spoken of, the object of that wedge being simply to tighten the binding which held the stamps together.

X Q. 129. State how many stamps of the kind you have described in your last answer have been seen by your naked eye during your lifetime.

A. Probably none other.

X Q. 130. How many in round numbers do you mean by the last answer?

A. Have no definite idea, but suppose the different combinations may have been three, four, five, or six.

1362 X Q. 131. Were those combinations all made upon the same contrivance, or were they, as you say, "six" separate and distinct contrivances?

A. As stated in former answer, when a handle was split or became detached from the stamp, it was replaced either by another handle or another handle and stamp; how often that change was made could not say definitely.

X Q. 132. Did you understand the last question at the time you gave your answer to it?

A. I suppose I did, and that it referred to the combination of the two stamps simply.

X Q. 133. State what has become of the stamps mentioned and described by you in your last several answers.

A. When the office was moved from the Gray building to the government building, where the office is now located, none of the old furniture was removed, and everything considered of no account was left in the old building.

X Q. 134. Did you understand the last question at the time you answered it

A. I did.

X Q. 135. Referring to your answer to question No. 133, where you speak of the useless furniture in the post-office not being removed to the new one, were the contrivances about which you have been asked since the recess for dinner to-day a part of that useless and unforgotten furniture left behind in the removal, and which you now cannot give any information concerning, as appears from your answer to question No. 133?

A. They were, for the reason that the old stamp had been cast aside, and others had been brazed or soldered together for stamping and cancelling purposes.

X Q. 136. The question is now again asked you for the fourth time, where those contrivances now are to which I referred in my last question, and which are embraced in the words of your last answer, to wit, "they were."

1363 (Defendant's counsel objects because on complainant's counsel's own showing the question has been put and answered three times.)

A. I have answered that they were left in the Water street building, and if now in existence I have no knowledge of their whereabouts.

X Q. 137. When did you last see the same?

A. I have answered before, while the office was in the Water street building, before they were thrown aside.

X Q. 138. Who was postmaster at that time—I mean from the time you say you first made these contrivances for post-marking letters and cancelling postage stamps like, or substantially like, defendant's Exhibit 137, and until "they were thrown aside," at the time of the removal of the post-office from the Water street building?

A. There were three postmasters during the time covered by the question, viz, D. M. Haskell, J. W. Gray, and B. Harrington.

X Q. 139. Where are the persons named in your last answer?

A. All dead.

X Q. 140. In what year was the removal from the Water street building?

A. My impression is, on the 24th of December, 1859.

X Q. 141. At what time was the use of the several contrivances you have described on your cross-examination discontinued in the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio?

A. In 1858 or 1859; without dates I cannot tell definitely.

X Q. 142. You are very positive, are you not, that those contrivances were used in the Cleveland post-office for the purposes of post-marking the letter and the cancellation of the postage-stamp at one blow—by one handle of the instrument—are you not?

A. Yes.

1364 X Q. 143. You are also positive that those contrivances were used in that post-office every day from the month of January, 1853, until the year 1858 or 1859, are you not, when the use thereof was discontinued, as stated in your answer to question No. 141?

A. I did not state that they were used every day during that period, and do not believe that they were so used, but I did say that they were used at least once a week during that time.

X Q. 144. Where are the stamping and cancelling clerks who were in the Cleveland post-office during the period referred to in the last question and answer?

A. Four or more still reside in the city; one somewhere in Illinois, and one or two are dead.

X Q. 145. From the year 1853, January 1st, to January 1st, 1878, would be a period of how many years?

A. Twenty-five.

X Q. 146. What was the population of this city in the month of January, 1853?

A. Don't know.

X Q. 147. Was it a large or small city at that time?

A. Much smaller than at present.

X Q. 148. What is the population of this city at the present time?

A. I believe it is estimated at between one hundred and sixty and one hundred and sixty-five thousand.

X Q. 149. In 1853 how many clerks were employed at the Clevelan post-office?

A. Twelve or fifteen.

X Q. 150. How many are employed there now?

A. Including carriers, between forty and fifty probably.

X Q. 151. How many clerks were employed in the year 1853 for post-marking letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon?

1365 A. The post-marking and cancellation of letters was not the only stamping which was then done in the office, but included transient newspapers, circulars, etc., and it required at different times the services of three clerks, one from the round table to do the cancellation of miscellaneous matter, and two delivery clerks to do the letter stamping and cancellation as they had opportunity.

X Q. 152. How many such clerks were required to do the post-marking and cancelling of letters during the year 1854 to the first day of January, 1862, and during each and every intervening year from 1854 to 1862?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. The office being a distribution office the city letters and papers dropped in the boxes were stamped at night as well as in the day time, and the gradual growth of the city, increase of correspondence, the additional help for such purposes during those years was double, at least, what it had been previously.

X Q. 153. During what years was that business double, or more than double, as you have stated in your last answer?

A. While in the Herald building it was the practice to close the outer doors at ten o'clock p. m.; after removal to Water street the outer doors were left open all night; for that reason the night watch was materially increased.

X Q. 154. Did you understand the last question when you gave an answer thereto?

A. I thought I did.

X Q. 155. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I have now.

X Q. 156. You understood that question about as correctly as you did questions put to you by defendant's counsel during your examination-in-chief, did you not?

A. I have always intended to answer to the point.

X Q. 157. Between the first of January, 1853, and the time when your several contrivances about which you have testified on your cross-
1366 examination disappeared from the gaze of mortal man amid the abandoned rubbish at the Water street building, did you communicate with the Postmaster-General or any officer in the Post-Office Department at Washington upon the subject of those contrivances?

A. Not to my recollection.

X Q. 158. From the time of the miraculous disappearance of those contrivances to the first day of January, 1861, did you have any such communication or any correspondence whatever with the Postmaster-General, or with any officer in the Post Office Department at Washington, concerning those contrivances, or either of them?

A. The invention had been shown to special agents of the Post Office Department, and also to Mr. A. N. Zevely, then Third Assistant Postmaster-General, who was passing through the city to and from a Lake Superior trip or trips.

X Q. 159. When was that, and by whom was it so shown to A. N. Zevely, as stated in your last answer?

Q. It was shown by myself, during the summer of 1859, 1860, or 1861.

X Q. 160. In what manner and by what means did you make the exhibition spoken of in your last two answers to A. N. Zevely, then Third Assistant Postmaster-General?

A. Upon his visit to the Cleveland post-office, his attention was called to it probably by myself, and he saw its operation while in the distribution department.

X Q. 161. When, by whom, and under whose directions was defendant's Exhibit No. 137 manufactured?

A. It was made on the 17th or 18th of February, 1878, by W. L. Cottrell, and at request of defendant's counsel.

Adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

1367 FEBRUARY 21, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

X Q. 162. When and by whom was the model Defendant's Exhibit No. 138, manufactured, and under whose direction?

A. The 17th or 18th of February, 1878, by W. L. Cottrell, and by request of counsel for defense.

X Q. 163. For what purpose was this model made?

A. I suppose for the purpose of calling attention of witness to the style of one of the original instruments.

X Q. 163½. What do you mean in your last answer by "one of the original instruments?"

A. The original instrument as represented in Exhibit 137 being considered objectionable on account of its weight, was afterwards cut down as to weight to about the style represented in Exhibit 138, and was afterward still further cut down for that object, to reduce weight.

X Q. 164. Did you understand the last question when you answered it?

A. I think I did.

X Q. 165. Can you give any better answer to it than you did give?

A. I think not.

X Q. 166. Have you any doubt about it whether you can or not?

A. No.

X Q. 166½. You say defendant's Exhibit 138 was made to illustrate an original instrument of that kind; when was that original instrument first made; by whom was it made, and who for?

A. Model No. 138 was made to illustrate an original instrument; have no means of knowing just when made, or who by positively.

1368 X Q. 167. Did you understand the last question when you made answer to it? The examiner will read you that question for your information at this time.

A. I overlooked the last query "who for?" It was made for the use of the Cleveland post-office.

X Q. 168. Now, you will please state when that "original" instrument was first made?

A. Probably in the year 1858 or 1859.

X Q. 169. Do you know when it was first made?

A. Not positively, having no date to go by.

X Q. 170. Who made it?

A. Probably Jacob Schwartzenberg, for I had in my possession a receipt for the same kind of work afterward.

X Q. 171. Do you know whether he made that first original instrument or not, Mr. Wheeler?

A. I cannot swear positively.

X Q. 172. Who is Jacob Schwartzenberg; what is his business; where does he reside; and how long have you personally known him?

A. He was a resident of Cleveland; was what might be called a metal tinker or repairer; resides, as I understand, somewhere in Illinois; I have known him personally since 1848 or 1849.

X Q. 173. Whenever he did work for you did you on payment for that work take a receipt from him?

A. Whenever the bills against the post-office were presented, they were presented to the cashier and referred by him as to correctness to the head of the department for which the work was done; if correct it was paid by cashier, and he always took vouchers.

X Q. 174. The examiner will read you the last question, and you will then state whether you understood that question at the time you made the answer you did make?

A. I understood the question; I was not the cashier, neither did I pay any bills on account of the Cleveland post-office.

1369 X Q. 175. Having twice dodged and evaded an answer to question No. 173, you are now inquired of concerning the state of your health at this time, whether it be good or bad?

A. General health good; appetite good, and sleep soundly nights.

X Q. 176. That being the case, question No. 173 is here repeated; the examiner will read it to you, and you are affectionately requested to properly answer it, having stated that you understand it and that your mind is unclouded because of healthy physical surroundings.

(Objected to, first, because the question referred to has been fairly answered; and, second, because this question has stated something which he has not stated.)

A. As stated in answer to question No. 173, I paid no bills for the Cleveland post-office.

X Q. 177. The intelligence manifested by you in your answers to questions this morning fairly illustrates the character of the answers you made to questions on your examination in chief, does it not?

A. The answers to all questions so far I have endeavored to answer plainly, fairly, and to the point, in every instance, both in direct and cross-examination.

X Q. 178. Did you understand the last question, when you made answer to it, and do you know what is meant by the word intelligence?

(Objected to as frivolous.)

A. I did; Webster defines the word intelligence in two forms, to wit, news or information, and common sense.

X Q. 179. I did not ask you what Webster knew or did not know about the word "intelligence," and I again ask you what you know about the meaning of the word intelligence—that is, if you understand the proper meaning of that word; and I make this inquiry be-1370 cause you evaded proper answers to the question, and I want this court to know whether your evasions and pettifogging answers to questions is due to intention on your part, or through right down ignorance on your part, thus far, during your cross-examination. I refer to question No. 177.

A. As applied to this matter, it is comprehensive of the meaning of the questions asked; there has been no intention of evasion, but all answers have been considered sufficient to cover the questions; if the counsel will indicate where the evasion has been made, and put the question in proper shape, I shall cheerfully answer it.

(Complainant's counsel will at the proper time and place personally call the attention of this court to all evasions and to all pettifogging answers by this witness to questions put to him on this cross-examination. And counsel here moves the court to strike out all that part of the answer last above after the words "of questions asked," as being irresponsive to the question, and as evasive and as pettifogging on the part of the witness in his answer.)

(Defendant's counsel objects to the introduction upon the record of the improper matter which complainant's counsel has just put there, on the ground of its patent impropriety, and because it is plainly only a miserable attempt to intimidate the witness by bluff and bluster.)

X Q. 180. What has become of that original instrument, represented by Defendant's Exhibit 138, which you have testified you cannot tell where it was made or by whom it was made?

A. I have no definite idea what became of it, but know of its having been made and used, and, if necessary, can produce corroborative evidence of that fact.

1371 X Q. 181. How do you know that?

A. From my own knowledge, and having used it myself.

X Q. 182. Did you at the time make any memorandum in writing as to its having been first made, or to its having ever been used by you or anybody else?

A. Not to my knowledge, if reference is made solely to Exhibit 138.

X Q. 183. When did you last see that original instrument, represented by Defendant's Exhibit 138?

A. In the Cleveland post-office, in government building, previous to leaving the office, as an employee; can't say just when.

X Q. 184. Where is it now?

A. Do not know.

X Q. 185. At what time was it first used in the Cleveland post-office, and by whom and for what purpose?

A. Probably at the commencement of the Harrington administration and probably by A. L. Basset, who was stamping clerk at that time, and for the purpose of dating and cancelling letters.

X Q. 186. Do you know of your own knowledge when that contrivance, represented by Defendant's Exhibit 138, was first used in the post-office in this city?

A. I do know that it was first used during the Harrington administration in that shape.

X Q. 187. I ask you to state "the time" when a contrivance like Defendant's Exhibit 138 was first used at the Cleveland post-office without any reference to anybody's administration or other form of "Miss Nancy-ing" style of evading a just and fair answer to this question; if you cannot state the time say so; if you can state the time then say that?

(Objected to on the ground of question not being in the English language.)

A. Cannot give exact date when it was first used in the Cleveland post-office, but it was used between the first of July, 1858, and the first of July, 1861.

1372 X Q. 188. You swear to that positively, do you not?

A. All the answers given in this examination by me will be sworn to.

X Q. 189. Have you not already been sworn in this case?

A. I have.

X Q. 189½. Do you expect to be sworn again in this case?

A. I do not; but expect to sign my deposition, which makes the law complete.

X Q. 190. In question 188 I asked you "you swear to that positively, do you not?" Do you know what I mean by that question?

A. I do; and I swear to it positively.

X Q. 191. And you have no sort of doubt about it, have you?

A. No.

X Q. 192. For what length of time was the instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 138 in use at the Cleveland post-office?

A. Could not give the exact length of time, as there was still another change in the height and weight of the cancelling combination afterward.

X Q. 193. Then Defendant's Exhibit No. 138 is not a correct or truthful representation of the last instrument used in the Cleveland post-office previous to July 1st, 1861, postmarking letters and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, is it?

A. Exhibit No. 138 was not the last change made in the shape or form of the dating and cancelling stamps made and used in the Cleveland post-office from about the first of July, 1858, and until the introduction and use of the combined stamps furnished by the Post-Office Department, but the device as represented by model No. 138 was used, as before mentioned, and also the last one indicated. Just at what time the last change took place I cannot state.

X Q. 194. How much was the contrivance like Defendant's Exhibit No. 138 used in the post-office at Cleveland?

1373 A. In every day use until the last change spoken of was made; how long, I have no means of knowing.

X Q. 195. At what time was its use discontinued at that office?

(Objected to as having been answered.)

A. Immediately after its further curtailment, as mentioned by me in the previous answer.

X Q. 196. At what time did that curtailment spoken of take place?

A. I have no means of recalling the date.

X Q. 197. You are sure that the change or curtailment spoken of by you was made, are you not?

A. Yes.

X Q. 198. Cannot you tell the time in which that was done?

A. I cannot definitely.

X Q. 199. Cannot you tell the year in which it was done?

A. No; probably 1859 or 1860.

X Q. 200. When was the contrivance you last speak of used in the post-office at Cleveland?

A. As before stated, immediately before the introduction of the new stamp furnished by the P. O. Department.

X Q. 201. When was the use of that contrivance discontinued in the Cleveland post-office?

(Objected to because it is not clear as to what contrivance reference is made.)

A. The contrivance referred to in the last answer was the last change from Defendant's Exhibit No. 138, and its use was discontinued upon the introduction of the new combined stamps furnished by the Post-Office Department.

X Q. 202. What do you mean by the word "from" in your last answer?

1374 A. The change or cutting down of the cancelling attachment, decreasing its length or height about one-half; no other changes were made in that instrument.

Recess for dinner until 2 o'clock p. m.

X Q. 203. In answer to question No. 13 of your direct-examination, you stated in substance that there was a dating stamp of circular form, and also a postage cancelling stamp of which you had knowledge; when and of whom did you first obtain that knowledge or information; I mean separate stamps, one for post-marking and one for post cancelling?

A. Probably upon my first introduction into the post-office as a clerk, for at that time I had part of the stamping to do.

X Q. 204. In what year was that?

A. In the year 1849.

X Q. 205. Where did those two separate instruments come from, if you know, when they first went into use in the Cleveland post-office?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Suppose they were furnished by the Post-Office Department at Washington.

X Q. 206. How long did the Post-Office Department at Washington continue to furnish the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio, such separate post-marking and postage cancelling instruments or devices, as referred to in my last question and your answer thereto?

A. When they commenced furnishing the separate stamps I cannot tell, but they were furnished until the combined dating and cancelling stamps were introduced by the government to take the place of the individual or single stamps.

X Q. 207. In what year did that take place, if you know, viz: the furnishing of the combined stamps by the Post-Office Department for the Cleveland post-office, referred to in your last answer?

A. Do not know the year, but think it was early in the sixties; I mean by that between 1860 and 1870.

1375 X Q. 208. I have observed during your examination as a witness, and in answer to questions, you have frequently used the word "probably." What do you mean the court to understand by your frequent use of that word?

A. Without a distinct knowledge of dates, in answer to such questions I have given the answers "probably" as meaning to the best of my recollection.

X Q. 209. In your answers to questions 14 and 16 of your direct examination, you state, in substance, that the Post-Office Department had certain rules requiring the separate use of the cancelling stamp, and also that the post-marking stamp be separately used for post-marking and postage cancelling; have you any personal knowledge about such rules?

(Objected to on the ground that the witness has not testified that the rules of the department require that the dating stamp should be used for both post-marking and cancelling, as the question implies, the testimony having been directly contrary to that.)

A. I had knowledge at the time, either by reading the order, or by instructions from the postmaster, that the rule required the use of the dating stamp for dating purposes only, and the use of the cancelling stamp for the purpose of cancelling the postage stamps only.

X Q. 209b. In what year did you have that knowledge or information?

A. Cannot now say in what year the order or orders inquired about were issued.

X Q. 209c. If you know, state who was Postmaster-General at that time; I mean at the time when the order in reference to putting the post-mark on the envelope apart from the postage stamp, and that the postage stamp should be separately cancelled—each being done by separate and distinct instruments—was made.

1376 A. I do not know who was Postmaster-General at the time such orders were made.

X Q. 210. Was not the Hon. Joseph Holt Postmaster-General at that time?

A. I don't recollect.

X Q. 211. Who was First Assistant Postmaster-General at that time, if you knew?

A. Do not recollect that.

X Q. 212. Was not the Hon. Horatio King First Assistant Postmaster-General at that time?

A. Know that Joseph Holt has been Postmaster-General, and also that Hon. Horatio King has been assistant Postmaster-General, but the exact time they held those positions I cannot tell without figures or data.

X Q. 213. What officer in the Post-Office Department at Washington signed the order referred to in the last previous questions and answers?

A. Cannot say.

X Q. 214. In your answer to question 40 of your direct examination, you state, in substance, that the acting faces represented by Defendant's Exhibit 137 never became uneven so as not to make an impression upon the letter and postage stamp; what kind of an impression did you mean by that?

A. I did not intend to convey the idea that with that stamp perfect impressions were always made, as with the stamp afterward soldered together, but that in all cases the inequality of those surfaces would make impression perfect or imperfect.

X Q. 215. Which of the two impressions, the perfect or the imperfect?

A. If the binding was tight, perfect; if loose, imperfect.

X Q. 216. In question 47 of your direct examination, you are asked, "Whose idea was it of combining the canceller and dating stamp in the manner that you have described;" your answer was, "My own." How do you know that?

A. Because I did it myself.

X Q. 217. Is that all you know about it, and the only reason you assign for giving that answer?

1377 A. That seems a sufficient reason; I considered myself the inventor of that combination.

X Q. 218. What did you mean to be understood by the use of the word "idea" in your answer to question 47?

A. By the word idea I meant the origination or conception of the combination.

X Q. 219. You meant, did you not, by the use of that term that you took two instruments furnished by the Post-Office Department, to wit, a post-marking device and a postage-cancelling device, and removed the handle from one of them and then tied the two together by means of twine or string, upon which you afterward put some kind of wire so as to hold the two together?

A. Yes.

X Q. 220. In your answer to question 65 of your examination-in-chief you state, in substance, that there were three separate and distinct changes made in defendant's Exhibit No. 137; you there describe these several changes. In what year was the first change made?

A. Could not tell definitely when the first change was made.

X Q. 221. In what year was the second change made?

(Objected to as having been answered.)

A. I do not recollect when that change was made.

X Q. 222. In what year was the third change made?

A. I think I have already answered that question in my cross-examination, that it was early in the sixties.

X Q. 223. In what year of the "sixties" did you make that "third change" or alteration?

A. Could not say positively.

X Q. 224. What kind of an instrument was the result of these several changes resulting from your experimenting with that contrivance?

1378 A. Neither combination was considered an experiment; each accomplished the work for which they were intended, but the last and the lightest one was more satisfactory as to weight.

X Q. 225. Did you understand the last question when you answered it, and do you mean to undertake to instruct this court as to what is or is not an experiment?

A. I understood the last question, but omitted to say that the last change was more satisfactory on account of its lightness than the previous instruments used; I did not intend to instruct the court, but simply said I did not consider either of those combinations experiments.

X Q. 226. Were the changes you have spoken of both on your direct and cross-examination made on the same day?

A. No; but covered a series of years.

X Q. 227. Do you consider Defendant's Exhibit 138 an improvement upon Defendant's Exhibit 137?

A. I do.

X Q. 228. About how many years after the making of the contrivance represented by Defendant's Exhibit 137 was it that a contrivance like Defendant's Exhibit 138 was made?

A. Could not say positively, probably four, five, or six years afterward.

X Q. 229. In what year would that be?

A. Probably in 1857, 1858, or 1859.

X Q. 230. Is that all you know about it?

A. Without dates I have no means of fixing the exact time.

X Q. 231. Do you know where the original instruments or any of them are upon which these various changes have been made?

(Objected to as having been answered substantially several times.)

A. I have not the slightest idea of their whereabouts.

1379 X Q. 232. In what year was it that you consulted Brainard & Burridge, as stated by you in your answer to question No. 107 of your direct examination?

A. In 1853.

X Q. 233. You are positive about that, are you not?

A. Yes.

X Q. 234. Now go on and state what you said to them or either of them, and what they or either of them said to you during that consultation?

A. The question to them was whether it was patentable; their answer was, in substance, that it was.

X Q. 235. Is that all that was said during that consultation?

A. Probably not, but that was the substance of the conversation and the object of my calling.

X Q. 236. How many years ago was that consultation?

A. Probably about twenty-five years.

X Q. 237. Have you any doubt about its being twenty-five years ago?

A. No.

X Q. 237b. Did you make a memorandum in writing at the time of your interview with those gentlemen?

A. Do not think I did.

X Q. 238. Did you at any time make any such memorandum?

A. Possibly may have done so, but do not now remember the circumstance.

X Q. 239. Did you follow the advice of those gentlemen, or either of them, which you say they gave you twenty-five years ago?

A. Not at that time.

X Q. 240. When did you follow their advice, if at all, on that subject?

A. In September, 1863.

X Q. 241. What is that paper which you took from your pocket after the last question was put to you and upon which you appeared to find your last answer?

1380 A. A receipt from Brainard & Burridge for money to pay for the application for a patent of the combined dating and cancelling-stamp.

X Q. 242. What is the date of that receipt?

A. September 15th, 1863.

X Q. 243. Do you know, from any source whatever, that in October, 1853, a caveat was filed in the United States Patent Office by Marcus P. Norton, the examining counsel, and that in 1854, and within the caveator year, that caveat was so amended as to cover each and every of the instruments or devices which you have testified about on this examination?

A. Knew nothing at the time of the filing of my application in 1863 of the existence of a caveat, or of any papers preceding the application of Marcus P. Norton for his patent of 1859, and until recently had no knowledge of any such caveat.

X Q. 244. How recently did you receive that information?

A. Since my knowledge of this suit I had occasion to look over the Patent Office reports and ascertained the existence of such a caveat.

X 2. 245. Who was postmaster at the Cleveland post-office from 1853 to 1857?

A. J. W. Gray.

X Q. 246. Who was postmaster at the Cleveland post-office from 1857 to 1861?

A. J. W. Gray from about April 1st, 1853, to some date in 1858, and B. Harrington balance of time.

X Q. 247. From 1861 to 1865 who was postmaster at the Cleveland post-office?

A. E. Cowles.

X Q. 248. Where is Mr. Cowles at this time?

A. Resides in Cleveland, and is the editor of the Leader.

X Q. 249. Were you clerk in the Cleveland post-office under Postmaster Cowles from the time he was appointed postmaster and until the first day of January, 1865?

1381 A. Was clerk in that office for the first part of his official term until I was appointed special agent of Post-Office Department.

X Q. 250. State how long a time you served as clerk in the Cleveland post-office under Postmaster Cowles.

A. Until June, 1864, when I was appointed special agent of the Post-Office Department.

X Q. 251. During that time, and until the present time, you have personally and intimately known Mr. Cowles, have you not?

A. Yes.

X Q. 252. Did you during that time have frequent conversations with Postmaster Cowles about these contrivances which you call your invention for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps thereon?

A. Undoubtedly have had conversations with him relating to that subject.

X Q. 253. Frequent conversations?

A. Cannot say as to how frequent.

X Q. 254. Mr. Cowles has been quite friendly to you on the subject of your alleged invention, represented by Defendant's Exhibits 137 and 138, has he not?

A. No; those combinations as represented in 137 and 138 were not in use while he was postmaster.

X Q. 255. Have you ever seen Mr. Cowles write with pen and ink?

A. I think I have.

X Q. 256. Should you see his handwriting and his signature would you know the same?

A. I don't know whether I should or not.

X Q. 257. Why not?

A. Because I never saw but little of his writing, and that was years ago.

X Q. 258. You were his personal friend, on intimate terms with him in the Cleveland post-office while he was postmaster, and one of the superintendents under him, and you do not know his handwriting?

1382 (Defendant's counsel objects because complainant's counsel misconstrues what witness says about knowing Mr. Cowles' handwriting, the testimony being substantially that witness cannot tell till he sees the handwriting of Mr. Cowles whether he shall or shall not recognize it.)

A. I was chief of distribution department, which was located at the south end of the government building; his office was at the north end; never had any written communications from him while I was in the office, and probably never received more than two or three letters after I left the office.

259. X Q. Do you know personally Mr. A. N. Zevely, Third Assistant Postmaster-General during Buchanan's presidential term of office?

A. I do.

X Q. 260. You know him intimately well; and, if so, during what length of time?

A. I knew him personally, not intimately well; I have seen him at times before my appointment as special agent, and afterward frequently in Washington.

X Q. 261. Did you ever have any conversation with him on the subject matter of your alleged invention; and, if so, about how frequently? And you may also state whether you ever wrote him any letter or letters on the same subject.

A. Probably more than one conversation on that subject, and may have written him letters upon that subject.

Adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

1383 FEB. 22, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed.

X Q. 262. How many times since the midsummer of 1861 have you called upon Mr. A. N. Zevely in Washington and while he was Third Assistant Postmaster-General?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. While special agent was in his office every day when I was Washington; the railway postal service, of which I had charge, being partially under his immediate direction; could not say how many times.

X Q. 263. Was it frequently?

(Same objection.)

A. On an average, two or three or more times a month.

X Q. 264. During what years was that?

A. Between 1864 and 1867.

X Q. 265. Did you call upon him previous to 1864 upon any business whatever?

A. Was never in Washington until a few weeks previous to the date of my first commission; was called there at that time to assist in the organization of that service; remained about five weeks, and was afterward appointed special agent.

X Q. 266. Did you understand the last question when you made answer thereto?

A. I did not call upon him previous to 1864; as before stated, was never in Washington previous to the time spoken of in my last answer, therefore could not have called upon him in Washington.

X Q. 267. Now, sir, after wriggling and twisting about in your answer, will you be so kind as to inform the court as to what time you refer to in your last answer?

(Same objection.)

1384 A. Was never in Washington previous to June, 1864; that is the time referred to.

X Q. 268. At your interviews with Mr. Zevely in Washington, did you have any conversation with him about the matter of your alleged invention in postmarking and postage cancelling stamps?

(Same objection.)

A. I undoubtedly had on several occasions.

X Q. 269. Previous to June, 1864, did you meet Mr. A. N. Zevely in the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio?

(Objected to as immaterial, and having already been answered.)

A. On two or more occasions.

X Q. 270. During what year or years were those interviews had?

A. Cannot tell exactly, but previous to 1864.

X Q. 271. Did any of them occur during the year 1863?

A. Have nothing in my possession to recall exact dates.

X Q. 272. Did any of them occur during the year 1862?

A. Same answer as last above.

X Q. 273. Did any of them occur during the year 1861?

A. Same answer as last above.

X Q. 274. Did any of them occur during the year 1860?

A. Same answer as last above.

X Q. 275. At any time when you met Mr. Zevely at the Cleveland post-office, did you have any conversation with him in regard to any alleged invention for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps, about which you have testified on this examination?

(Same objection.)

1385 A. As stated before, probably had one or more conversations with him about that matter.

X Q. 276. Since the close of your examination last evening and the commencement of your examination this morning, have you had any conversation with the defendant's counsel, now present, about this case or about your testimony already given up to that time?

A. Nothing in regard to my testimony and nothing involving the matters in issue in the case.

X Q. 277. Have you had any conversation with him within that time about any person or persons to be examined as a witness in this case?

A. No.

X Q. 278. Have you at any time during the progress of your examination in this case?

A. I did indicate one person that might be called as a witness.

X Q. 279. Only one person for that purpose?

A. Don't think I have more than one person.

X Q. 280. Name that one person, giving place of residence and business?

A. H. S. Bishop; residence, blank Public square; business at present, unknown.

X Q. 281. During the years 1862 and 1863, did you write any letter or letters to Mr. A. N. Zevely, at Washington, D. C., upon the subject matter of your alleged invention in postmarking letters and postage cancelling instrument or instruments, about which you have testified on this examination?

A. Most probably did, either to him or the then Postmaster-General.

X Q. 282. About how many such letters did you write to Zevely or the Postmaster-General during that time?

A. Have no recollection of the number or time or times, never having kept copies.

X Q. 283. Did Third Assistant Postmaster-General A. N. Zevely ever promise you that he would try to get your salary increased as a partial recognition of the eminent services you have rendered the coun-1386 try in discovering and bringing to the light of day those "original" "instruments" which appeared for a time and then vanished away, so far away that you don't know where they are nor the time when they disappeared, and represented by defendant's Exhibits 137 and 138, and about which you have testified on this examination?

A. Mr. A. N. Zevely was never asked to secure an increase of salary in consideration of such "eminent services," neither did he ever promise to do so.

X Q. 284. Did you ever, verbally or in writing, request Mr. A. N. Zevely to try to get the Postmaster-General to increase your salary upon the ground stated in the last question?

(Objected to as immaterial and as cumbering the record uselessly.)

A. I have no recollection of such a circumstance for such a purpose.

X Q. 285. Did you, during the year 1864, request Mr. Cowles, then postmaster at this city, to write to the then Postmaster-General about your alleged invention which you have testified concerning during this examination?

(Same objection.)

A. I may have done so, but have no definite recollection of the occasion; if so, it was for the purpose of having my then salary increased to full special agent's pay, which was not at first paid me, and which was afterward increased for the reason that I was on the road nearly all the time.

X Q. 286. Did you, at the post office at Cleveland, Ohio, November 28th, 1863, write a letter to the Hon. A. N. Zevely, among other things containing the following words and figures, to wit:

"DEAR SIR: You will probably recollect, when you were in Cleveland having a conversation with Mr. Cowles and myself about that combination dating and rating stamp of which I was the inventor. Mr.

1387 Cowles promised, when he went to Washington, to bring the matter before the Postmaster-General and endeavor to have my salary increased as an acknowledgment of its value and utility to the service. My object in addressing you is to secure, if possible, your co-operation in the matter, and, as you may have forgotten the circumstance, allow me to state that about the first of July, 1861, the department issued an order discontinuing the cancelling of stamps with the dating stamp, and requiring that thereafter the regular cancelling stamp should be used for that purpose. We followed instructions one day after receipt of the order with two separate stamps. It was about all one man could do before to stamp our letters, circulars, and newspapers, and by the change it would require twice the labor. The idea struck me that by a combination all might be done as required by one operation, and I immediately took the stamps to a locksmith and had them soldered together. The order and receipt you will find among your records. The smith's name is Jacob Schwartzenburg. Ours was the first office that used the combined stamp and very soon we were in receipt of inquiries as to how it was done. The uniformity of the impressions were noticed. We soon found it adopted in nearly every large office, and many smaller ones, and now it has become almost universal. The saving in large offices, where clerks are paid by government, is, you will perceive, quite a large sum annually. In our office it saves the services of one man, in larger offices more. Some one should be rewarded for the improvement. True, another person has the patent for it, but in a test case I can prove priority without doubt. And in this connection I will state that a short time after you were here, in a conversation with a friend on the subject, he advised me to apply for a patent and he would advance the funds necessary. My own circumstances prevented me doing so before. I accepted his generous offer and made my application, which of course was rejected. I have called for an interference
1388 case, which has not, as yet, been set down, but will be, I hope, in a few days.

"Yours, respectfully,

"C. E. WHEELER."

(Objected to on the ground that it is not proper to question the witness as to the contents of any supposed letter of his without producing the same or proving its loss. And

Second. Because the witness is entitled to inspect the supposed letter or those parts of it about which he is questioned before he can be required to make answer to questions concerning same.

Third. Because in asking the question counsel read from a paper the genuineness and authenticity of which is not proved.

Fourth. Because it is immaterial to the issues in this case and to the questions raised by the testimony of the witness hitherto whether he did or did not write the supposed letter.

Counsel for defendant requests examiner to make a note for the information of the court that counsel for complainant, in asking the last question, read all that portion of it from a written paper, and that he, the examiner, compared said written paper with what was written down on the record, by holding the same and following the writing thereon while the question was read from the record by his clerk.)

The application of defendant's counsel is granted and the facts are as stated in the application.

J. G. P., Ex'r.

Complainant's counsel, in view of the application made by defendant's counsel as last above stated and granted and signed by the special examiner, now and here offers in evidence and for the purpose of 1389 evidence the original paper referred to in the said application and requests the special examiner to make said paper as Complainant's Exhibit B B.

C. E. WHEELER.

(Defendant's counsel objects to the introduction of said paper in evidence, on the ground:

First. Because it purports to be a copy, and not an original.

Second. Because it purports to be a copy of a part, and not of the whole, of some original document.

Third. Because it is not proved that the original ever existed, nor that it has been lost, nor that it cannot be produced and exhibited to the witness.

Fourth. Because said paper is not proved to be a correct copy, and because the paper is offered without being submitted to the witness, and without any testimony whatever being given in regard to it on its own intrinsic merits.)

Inasmuch as defendant's counsel refuses to accept the paper when tendered him, after having requested the special examiner to make a certain memorandum which was made on the record, complainant's counsel for the present withholds the paper, and will put the original, or a duly authenticated copy of it, in evidence at the proper time and in the proper place, and now requests the witness to answer the pending question.)

A. Witness not having seen the original letter of which above purports to be a copy, and having no distinct recollection of the date of such a letter, cannot say that he wrote such a letter.

1390 X Q. 287. Do you know whether you wrote a letter of the character inquired about in question 286 of your cross-examination?

A. I may have done so, and possibly did.

X Q. 288. Will you swear, on your oath, that you did not write the letter inquired about in question 286 of your cross-examination?

(Objected to on the ground that the letter should be produced and shown to the witness before he can be called upon to swear positively whether he did or did not write it.)

A. No; I will not swear I did not.

(Recess for dinner until 3 p. m.)

X. Q. 289. Whatever you did write on or about November 28th, 1863, to the Hon. A. N. Zevely, who was then Third Assistant Postmaster-General, was true, was it not, and intended to be placed upon the files of the Post-Office Department?

(Objected to as immaterial, and because the letters and the statement should first be brought to the attention of the witness before he is asked whether they are true or not.)

A. If a letter was written on or about that date to A. N. Zevely, whatever was written was intended to be true; have no idea as to its disposal.

X Q. 290. Its contents were true, were they not?

(Same objection.)

A. I give the same answer as to last question, except last sentence.

X Q. 291. I have not, and do not ask you anything about your "intentions," but I do ask you as to the fact whether you wrote to Mr.

Zevely the truth and nothing but the truth in the letter referred to, or whether you, at the time inquired about, wrote him that which was a falsehood, and then known by you to be such.

(Same objection.)

1391 A. Without seeing the letter can give no answer to that question, as the implication of falsehood is unwarranted and uncalled for.

X Q. 292. You think it necessary, first, to see a letter written by you and put on file in a public place before you can tell whether it contains the truth, or whether it contains that which is untrue, do you?

(Objected to as immaterial, and because it assumes that some letter of witness has been put upon the public files.)

A. That is not the reason; if the original letter of which the above are claimed to be extracts had been presented to my notice, I could identify it as having been written by me, and give for answer a plain yes or no.

X Q. 293. In your last answer the following words occur: "If the original letter of which the above are claimed to be extracts had been presented to my notice." Who ever claimed that such paper as you were inquired about was an "extract" from any paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. My understanding was that the paper presented was a copy of a part or the whole of an original letter written by myself to A. M. Zevely; not knowing positively of having written the letter referred to I could not give a direct answer as to whether it was or was not a copy in full or in part of a letter so written to [by] me. I got the idea of the word extract from interrogatory No. 286.

X Q. 293. (293a). Please state that interrogatory and point out where in that interrogatory the word "extract" or the word "copy" may be found?

(Objected to as immaterial, and because it implies that the witness has stated that the words extract and copy appear in that interrogatory; whereas all that witness stated was that he got his idea from that.)

1392 A. In interrogatory 286 the words "among other things" made me infer that the copy of the letter referred to was an extract or a part of said letter. The words extract or copy do not appear in the interrogatory.

X Q. 294. Will you please examine the objections of defendant's counsel to that question, some of which I will read to you for your information: "Defendant's counsel objects to the introduction of the paper in evidence on the ground, first, because it purports to be a copy and not an original; second, because it purports to be a copy of a part and not of the whole of some original document," and then state whether you you did not first get the idea about the paper being a copy or an extract of an original paper from that objection.

(Objected to as immaterial, and because it assumes that defendant's counsel has made such objections as are quoted to some question.)

A. As the interrogatory appears I would naturally get the idea, first, from the words quoted in last answer, and afterwards from the objections.

X Q. 295. From which, viz, the question or the defendant's counsel's objection quoted in the last question, did you get the information or the idea that the paper in question was a "copy or an extract from some original paper"?

(Same objection.)

A. From both; but the words "copy" and "extract" occur only in the objection.

X Q. 296. I now show you a paper dated "Cleveland post-office, Cleveland, O., May 7th, 1864," addressed to the Hon. M. Blair, and signed E. Cowles, P. M., with the following indorsement upon the back thereof:

"Respectfully referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-1393 Roads of the House of Representatives; M. Blair, Postmaster-General, May 10th, 1864." Take it, examine it thoroughly, and state in whose handwriting it is, if you know.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I suppose it to be in the handwriting of E. Cowles, then postmaster [P. M.].

X Q. 297. Postmaster at Cleveland, O.?

A. Cleveland, Ohio.

X Q. 298. Have you any doubt about its being in Mr. Cowles' handwriting?

(Same objection.)

A. I am not sufficiently acquainted with his writing to swear to it positively, but think it is.

X Q. 299. Have you any doubt about this paper being in Mr. Cowles' handwriting?

(Same objection.)

A. No.

X Q. 300. Were you in the post-office at Cleveland, O., as a clerk in the month of May, 1864?

A. Yes.

X Q. 301. What was your position and duties at that time?

A. Head clerk of distribution department, having the charge of that department and the clerks therein employed.

(Complainant's counsel here produces the paper dated Cleveland post-office, Cleveland, O., May 7, 1864, and signed E. Cowles, P. M., and last above referred to, and requests the examiner to mark the same for identification only, as follows, to wit, "Complainant's Exhibits A–A, Feb. 22d, 1878," and to sign the same in his official capacity. The paper is so marked.

1394 Defendant's counsel objects further to all the testimony of the witness in regard to this paper, on the ground that complainant's counsel's disposition of the paper shows that all the questions asked were intended to draw out information irrelevant to anything contained in the direct examination, and that they were therefore improper to be asked on cross-examination, and moves that all such testimony be stricken from the record.

Complainant's counsel, in view of the objections last above made by defendant's counsel, with reference to the paper in question, now offers the same in evidence, and for the purposes of evidence, and requests the examiner to properly file and mark the same for that purpose.)

(Defendant's counsel object to the receipt of letter in evidence, on the ground—

First. That it is not sufficiently proved.

Second. That it is irrelevent and immaterial.

Third. Because it is an attempt to obtain the benefit of a statement of Mr. Cowles without calling him as a witness and having him sworn and made liable to cross-examination.

And a special objection is taken to the indorsement purporting to be made by M. Blair, on the ground that no proof whatever is made of that.

And lastly, to the whole paper it is objected that Mr. Cowles should first be called as a witness and examined as a witness as to the matters contained in the paper.)

Examiner upon the offering of the said paper in evidence by complainant's counsel marks the same as already marked for identi-1395 fication, to wit, Complainant's Exhibit A–A, (Wheeler,) Feb. 22d, 1878, J. G. Pomerene, special examiner.

Adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

FEBRUARY 23, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment of yesterday.

Present, same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. WHEELER resumed:

X Q. 302. I understood you, a day or two ago, during your cross-examination to say that Mr. Cowles, formerly postmaster in the city, is still living, and that he now resides here. Is that correct?

A. It is.

X Q. 303. What is his business now, if you know?

A. President of the Leader Newspaper Printing Company and managing editor of the Leader newspaper in this city.

X Q. 304. State, if you remember, the time when Mr. Cowles entered upon the discharge of his duties as postmaster at the post-office in this city.

A. Probably in 1862; I have no dates to fix the time.

X Q. 305. Were you clerk in that office at that time?

A. At the time of his appointment, I was.

X Q. 306. You were clerk under Mr. Cowles for about how many years?

A. From the time of his appointment until about June 4th, 1864.

X Q. 307. I now read you a paper dated Cleveland post-office, Cleveland, O., May 7th, 1864, addressed to the Hon. M. Blair, and signed E. Cowles, P. M., which is in the following words and figures, viz:

1396 "DEAR SIR: I understand that certain parties have presented a claim for $35,000 against the government, and that it is now pending before the House Committee on Claims, for the use of the combined dating and cancelling stamp by the Post-Office Department, the invention of which is claimed by said parties. I have every reason to believe that the original inventor of that stamp is a clerk in this office; he invented it immediately upon the receipt of the order issued by Postmaster-General Holt, several years ago, requiring a separate stamp to be used in cancelling the stamp of letters. Consequently the claim of the parties alluded to above cannot have legal foundation. Should you require testimony, the name of the clerk is Chas. E. Wheeler. I am, very respectfully, yours very truly."

Did you request Mr. Cowles to write that letter?

(Objected to as assuming that such a letter was actually written by Postmaster Cowles.)

A. If the letter was written by E. Cowles, then postmaster, and I have no reason to doubt it was, it was written at my suggestion or request.

X Q. 308. What evidence, if any, have you furnished the Post-Office Department at Washington with, showing or tending to show that you are the original and first inventor of the invention described by you during the examination?

(Objected to as immaterial and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. My own depositions and certificates of clerks who knew of its use in the Cleveland post-office, and who used it themselves previous to the date of the first Norton patent.

(Complainant's counsel objects to all that part of the answer after the words "certificate of clerks" as not responsive to the question, as improper, and as volunteered by the witness.)

1397 X Q. 309. Where are those depositions and certificates mentioned by you in your last answer?

A. I suppose them to be in Washington, either at the Post-Office Department or in possession of House Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads; I have never recalled them.

X Q. 310. When did you send these papers to the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. I have no memorandum of the date.

X Q. 311. In what year was it?

A. That I cannot recall definitely.

X Q. 312. Give your "probabilities" about it.

A. Having no dates, cannot tell the year.

X Q. 313. Now you will please give your best recollections about it.

A. Some time in the sixties, and that is as near as I can give now.

X Q. 314. For what purpose did you send those papers to the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. For the purpose of preventing any remuneration being made to other parties before a fair examination of my claim or title in the invention.

X Q. 315. Was such investigation had by the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. I never had official notice of such investigation.

X Q. 316. Did you ever have a notice of any kind about such matter?

A. Not that an investigation had been made, but that one was soon to be made; this information came from Mr. Terrell, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and I think the letter was dated some time in 1870.

X Q. 317. On receiving that information, what course, if any, did you pursue with reference to that matter?

A. I had my papers placed in the hands of the department.

1398 X Q. 318. What papers were those you now speak of? and please make no statement as to their contents. Simply state whether they were affidavits, depositions, your letters, or certificates from other persons about the matter then pending in the Post-Office Department.

A. I think each kind of papers spoken of in question additional to those already in hands of the department were sent there to be used upon that occasion.

X Q. 319. Do you remember whether the several committees of the Congress of the United States have investigated your alleged claim, of which you have spoken to-day, and made several reports in writing or in print thereon? I mean several committees on Post-Offices and Post-Roads of the Senate and of the House of Representatives.

A. I do not know of any such investigation or report having been made by such committee in either house of Congress, and never saw any report in relation thereto.

X Q. 320. Do you know that the Congress of the United States passed a bill or joint resolution which was approved by the President on or about the fourteenth day of July, 1870, authorizing the Postmaster-

General of the United States to continue in use in the postal service of the United States the invention patented to Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., on the 14th day of April, 1863, and at that time reissued on the third day of August, 1869, to the said Norton, and for improvements in postmarking letters and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon and now, and for the past fourteen years in general and in extensive use in such postal service, and also authorizing the Postmaster-General to investigate any and all claims by other parties to that invention?

A. I have no knowledge of the passage of such a bill or joint resolution; never saw or heard of it before.

X Q. 321. Have you now in your possession the notice or letter from Mr. Terrell, Third Assistant Postmaster-General at Washington, 1399 informing you that an investigation was to be had in or by that department upon the subject-matter about which you have testified upon this examination? I now refer to the notice you say you had in the year 1870.

A. I think I have it among my papers at home.

X Q. 322. Will you look for it, and in case you find it will you here produce it as a part of your evidence in this cause?

A. I will.

X Q. 323. Do you remember that in the year 1864 a suit was brought by Jacob Shaver and Albert C. Corse against Edmund Hoole, in the United States circuit court in and for the northern district of New York, for an alleged infringement of a reissue of the Norton patent of April 14th, 1863?

A. I do not.

X Q. 324. Do you remember of any suit of that kind about that time?

A. I recollect the names of the parties named as contestants in the stamp matter, but upon what particular issue or the time I do not know. I mean upon what particular issue the suit was brought.

X Q. 325. Do you know upon what patent that suit was brought—I mean the person claiming to be the patentee?

A. Do not know.

X Q. 326. Did the defendant in that suit request you to become a witness on his behalf?

A. I do not think that I have ever been a witness in any suit pertaining to this matter; that is my recollection now.

X Q. 327. Did the defendant in that suit, Mr. Edmund Hoole, subpœna you as a witness in his behalf?

A. I now recollect on returning here from one of my official trips of finding a subpœna upon some case relating to this matter, but the time for which I was subpœnaed having passed or having other business to attend to, I paid no attention to it.

X Q. 328. Did you inform Mr. Hoole, the defendant in that suit, by telegraph or otherwise, of the circumstances stated in your last answer?

1400 A. I have no recollection of having made any explanation to him.

X Q. 329. You mean, do you not, in your last answer, that you did not inform him of the reasons why you did not attend the trial of that suit as a witness on the part of the defendant?

A. I do not think I gave him any information whatever about it.

X Q. 330. Hav you in your possession at this time that subpœna?

A. I do not think I have.

X Q. 331. Will you look among your papers, and if you find it will you produce it as a part of your evidence in this cause?

A. I will.

X Q. 332. Did you preserve any copy or copies of the affidavits or depositions or letters or of certificates which you say you sent to the Post-Office Department to be used in the investigation to be had before Mr. Terrell, the then Third Assistant Postmaster-General?

A. I may have in my possession some copies of depositions and certificates sent to the Post-Office Department, but whether sent at this particular time or previous I am unable now to say.

X Q. 333. Do you know whether you have or not such copies?

A. I have some copies of such papers, but how many cannot tell until I search.

X Q. 334. Have you a copy of your letter dated Post-Office, Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 28th, 1863, and addressed to Hon. A. N. Zevely, at that time Third Assistant Postmaster-General of the United States?

A. I have not.

X Q. 335. During the year 1864 did Postmaster Cowles, at Cleveland, Ohio, use a letter-press book at the Post Office?

A. I think he did; it has generally been a practice to copy all official letters in a book of that kind.

X Q. 336. Look at complainant's Exhibit A-A (Wheeler), February 22, 1878, J. G. Pomerene, special examiner, which I now
1401 hand you, and state whether in your opinion that letter was copied in a letter-press book before it was transmitted to the Postmaster-General at Washington?

A. Owing to the age of the letter I should hardly know whether it was copied or not.

X Q. 337. Will you examine, if you can get consent, the letter-press book of Mr. Postmaster Cowles for the month of May, 1864, and see whether you find there a copy of this paper?

(Objected to as immaterial, and because it is improper to ask the witness to do such service for complainant's counsel, the proper course being to subpœna Mr. Cowles; and defendant's counsel not only objects to the question, but objects to the witness doing anything of the kind, the object of complainant's counsel being plainly by this fishing excursion to find out what Mr. Cowles knows, and has done, without running the risk of calling him as a witness.)

A. As defendant's counsel objects to such service, the witness most respectfully declines to perform it.

X Q. 338. Do I understand you to say that you decline and will not make the examination "kindly" requested of you in the last question?

(Same objection.)

A. As I do not know the whereabouts of such copy-book, and as I understand Mr. Cowles is absent from the city, and as it could not be done without his permission, I am compelled on those accounts to decline.

(Complainant's counsel here requests the special examiner to mark a paper already spread upon the record in a question, No. 286, dated Post-
Office, Cleveland, O., Nov. 28th, 1863, for the purpose of identifi-1402 cation. Complainant's Exhibit B-B. C. E. Wheeler, Feb. 23d, 1878. J. G. Pomerene, special examiner.

(Recess for dinner.)

X Q. 339. Have you any interest in this suit, or in any matter contained in it, or in the result, or any interest whatever connected with it?

A. No interest in this suit, except as a witness; may become interested in the matter after result is known.

X Q. 340. How do you expect to become interested in this matter after the result is known?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. The interest, if any, will be contingent upon the result.

Redirect examination of witness by Mr. CLARK, counsel for defendant:

Re-d. Q. 341. I understand you to have stated that three or four of the clerks, who postmarked letters and canceled postage stamps while J. W. Gray was postmaster, are now living in Cleveland. If that is correct, please give their names.

A. H. S. Bishop, who was what we called at that time a penny-postman; James McGaugh, E. S. Beardsley, and John Albinger, who now reside in Cleveland.

Re-d. Q. 342. Where are the members of the firm of Brainard & Burridge, with one of whom you say you consulted about your invention while the post-office was in Herald building on Bank street, and what are their full names?

A. Jehu Brainard, one of that firm, is now and has been for some years an examiner in the Patent Office at Washington, and Wm. H. Burridge resides at present in this city, and has a patent-solicitor's office on Superior street.

Re-d. Q. 343. Give the names and addresses of any other living 1403 persons who at the time had knowledge of the use of your invention in the Cleveland post-office while J. W. Gray was postmaster.

A. W. L. Cottrell, of this city; S. L. Everett, now residing somewhere in Illinois; D. L. Stevenson, residence unknown; Geo. B. Lester, now in Washington temporarily.

Re-d. Q. 344. State where counsel for complainant can, by inquiry, find out where the residences of Everett, Stevenson, and Lester are, if, in investigating the truth of your testimony, he chooses to make such inquiry.

A. Everett's address may probably be found at the Plain Dealer newspaper office in this city; Stevenson, when I last heard from him, was clerk in the Treasury Department at Washington; Lester is brother-in-law of Thomas Jones, at present city auditor of Cleveland, and when in the city may be found in that office.

Re-d. Q. 345. Where can Jacob Schwartzenberg's address be found?

A. I think on the tax duplicate of this county, he owning property located in this city, as I understand.

Re-d. Q. 346. Give the names and addresses, or places where the addresses can be found, of any other persons who had knowledge of the use of your invention in the Cleveland post-office at any time prior to January first, 1861.

A. James Kerr, when last heard from, was special agent of the Post-Office Department in some of the western Territories; Ithiel Stone, 215 Superior st., Cleveland; L. A. Kelsey, Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railway shop, Cleveland; C. L. Patrick, 127 Case avenue, Cleveland.

Re-d. Q. 347. Did all persons to whom reference has been made in your redirect examination have knowledge, or an opportunity of knowing, that your invention was used in the Cleveland post-office by you yourself personally at the times severally indicated, according to your recollection?

(Objected to as being immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.)

1404 A. They all undoubtedly knew of its having been used in the office, either by myself or others, and was used by some of the above-named persons.

Re-d. Q. 348. You don't answer my question exactly; I am after the names of those who, according to your recollection, knew or had means of knowing that you yourself personally used the instrument.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question on the ground that while he is a firm believer in the apostolic succession, and of the proper and church catechism of children, yet it is improper for defendant's counsel to catechise his witness while on the stand as a witness, and further, as being immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Most probably W. L. Cottrell, James McGough, E. S. Beardsley, John Albinger, and G. B. Lester, and H. S. Bishop.

349. Re-d. Q. Give the same information in regard to any other persons who knew of the use of your invention in the Cleveland post-office between 1861 and 1863.

A. E. Cowles, postmaster, E. S. Whiting, Chas. G. Aiken, Isaac Snook, all of Cleveland; Elias Avery and F. W. Ames, of Dunkirk, N. Y.; C. O. Ingersoll, of Elyria.

350. Re d. Q. Complainant's counsel, in question 219, asked you as to what you meant by something you had stated, and in his question said, "you meant * * * that you * * * removed the handle from one of them and then tied the two together by means of twine or string, upon which you afterwards put some kind of wire so as to hold the two together." Your answer was, yes. What did you understand by the word "afterwards" (which I have italicized in this question) to mean in that connection?

1405 A. I meant the use of both twine and wire at the same time; the twine being put on first, and then the wire over it, both together being for the purpose of holding the two stamps tightly together.

351 Re-d. Q. Did you ever acquiesce in, or admit or acknowledge that the patent granted to Marcus P. Norton on the fourteenth of April, 1863, and numbered 38175, or any of the reissues of that patent, the same being for an improvement in post-office stamps, which improvement purports to cover the broad idea of a combined postmarking and postage-stamp cancelling hand instrument, was valid?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the grounds—

First. That it is improper for the defendant's counsel, after having called and examined the witness, to undertake to turn that witness into a court to pass judgment upon his own evidence; and,

Second. The matter submitted by the question, if deemed worthy of inquiry under the circumstances found in the cross-examination of this witness, is a matter solely and only within the province of this court to pass upon and determine.

Third. The patent named in the question having been litigated in a suit in the northern district of New York in the United States circuit court, of which an exemplified record has already been produced and put in evidence on the part of the complainant, it is quite immaterial what the mere opinion of this witness may or may not be concerning the matter inquired about in the question.

Fourth. The matter inquired about is a matter for the court to determine upon the evidence submitted.)

A. I never did.

1406 Re-d. Q. 352. Did you ever have any talk with Mr. Norton with reference to the merits of his and your respective alleged inventions?

A. On two or three different occasions in Washington.

Re-d. Q. 353. When were these occasions?

A. Some time in May, 1870, I received a telegram from Mr. Norton to about this effect: "Come to Washington immediately; there is money here for you;" I telegraphed back for explanation as to what was meant, and received a second telegram, which decided me to go to Washington, which I did, and there met Mr. Norton, who, after explaining that there was a disposition on the part of certain parties to swindle or debar him of his rights, proposed to go with me to the Patent Office, open up an interference, waive contest, and allow a patent to issue to myself, provided I would consent to assign one-half of said patent to him; after consideration of the proposition, and supposing I knew the object for which the proposition was made, I did not accede to it; as to the other occasions, I do not recollect when or what was said.

Re-d. Q. 354. What has become of these telegrams?

A. I sent them to Hon. R. C. Parsons, my attorney, then in Washington, and, for what I know, he has them still.

Re-d. Q. 355. From the beginning of your interview with Mr. Norton at Washington, in 1870, to the end of your conversation with him in that year, what was said on the stamp matter? Give the exact words, if you recollect them, or if you do not recollect them, give the substance of what was said in as nearly the exact words used as you can.

A. The answer given to the last question covers the subject-matter of the stamp question then and there, and comprises the substance of what was said; as to the exact language used by either at the time or times I cannot recall it.

Re-d. Q. 356. Look at the model, Defendant's Exhibit 137, hav-
1407 ing the postmarker and canceller attached by twine and wire, and state whether it is in the condition in which it was when first put in evidence; and if it is not, state where it is not.

A. It is not. Either owing to the shrinkage of the wood of which it was made, or the stretching of the wire with which it is bound, or from the effect of falls, or from being handled by counsel, it has become loosened; otherwise it is in the same condition.

Re-d. Q. 357. Did you ever know of the original instruments having iron postmarker and canceller attached by twine and wire becoming loose as speedily as they have done in the case of this model?

A. I think not. We, however, used the wedge before spoken of when such was the case.

(Complainant's counsel here consents that the defendant's counsel may furnish to the court, at the hearing of this cause, another model of the kind represented by Defendant's Exhibit 137, having the canceller bound as thoroughly to the postmarker as twine and wire can secure them.)

J. G. P.,
Special Examiner.

FEBRUARY 23, 1878.

Recross-examination of the witness resumed by complainant's counsel:

Re-X Q. 358. Do you know where Mr. A. L. Bassett now is, a person heretofore named by you as one of the clerks in the Cleveland post-office?

A. Is a wholesale hat and cap dealer on Water street, in this city.

Re-X Q. 359. When was Mr. Bassett a clerk in the Cleveland post-office, and about how long?

A. I think both under a part of the Gray and the Harrington terms of postmastership; don't know how long.

1408 Re-X Q. 360. Referring to question 347 of your redirect examination, and your answer thereto, when you state in substance that certain persons knew "that your invention was used in the Cleveland post-office by you yourself personally," prior to January, 1861, to what contrivance do you refer to in that answer—I mean, which of defendant's exhibits now before you on the table of the special examiner?

A. To the first one, Exhibit 137, certainly, and to Exhibit 138, probably.

Re-X Q. 361. Which of the two, viz, the twine or the wire, do you think is the stronger?

A. I really could not tell, never having tested either separately; they were put on together originally.

Re-X Q. 362. Did it require both twine and wire for the purpose indicated by their use?

A. That idea probably never occurred to me; strength was what was looked for.

Re-X Q. 363. In your answer to question 352 of your redirect examination you stated in substance that you had conversations with Marcus P. Norton, in Washington, on two or three different occasions, about the merits of your alleged invention; state the month and the year in which that alleged conversation took place.

A. Between the latter part of May and the first part of June, 1870.

Re-X. Q. 364. Where was it?

A. In the Post-Office Department at Washington, and in front of the Post-Office Department.

Re-X Q. 365. Anybody present at that time?

A. I think one of those conversations took place in the stamp and blank room of that department, and probably one or more of the at-attachés were present.

Re-X Q. 366. Do you know whether they were or not?

A. Would not say positively, but suppose we were not alone.

1409 Re-X Q. 367. Will you swear upon your oath that any person or persons were present at the time and place stated in your last answer, or at any other time when you allege that you had interviews and conversations with Norton in the city of Washington, D. C.? I desire you to answer this question categorically, and, when you have so answered, please say no more until I further inquire of you.

A. I will swear upon my oath that Marcus P. Norton and Charles E. Wheeler were present at that or those conversations alluded to in question 352; as to other persons being present, I will not swear positively.

Re-X Q. 368. Did you at the time, or any other time, make a memorandum in writing of those alleged conversations, or of any part thereof?

A. Have no remembrance of making any memorandum of the conversation or conversations, but remember the substance distinctly, as above stated.

Re-X Q. 369. In what business were you engaged at that time?

A. I was then in or had just left the office of assessor of internal revenue of this district. Think I had just left.

Re-X Q. 370. In answer to questions 353 and 355 of your redirect examination you have stated an alleged conversation with Norton. Where was that?

A. As before stated, in Washington, at or in front of the Post-Office Department.

Re-X Q. 371. Which was it?

A. To my recollection there was one conversation at the south end of the hall in the second story of the building; another in the blank and stamp room in the first story of the building; and another on the sidewalk or in front of that building, opposite the Patent Office. The subject of this matter was probably talked on each of those occasions.

Re-X Q. 372. Now, sir, having dodged and evaded a proper answer to the last question by stating matters of which you were not inquired about, will you "kindly" make proper answer to that question, which the examiner will now read to you?

1410 A. Do not think the whole conversation referred to took place as a whole in either place, separately. No evasion or dodging is or was intended in giving the answer.

Re-X Q. 373. Who, if anybody, was present when your alleged conversation with Norton took place in answer to questions 353 and 355 of your redirect testimony?

A. If any one was present in the blank and stamp room, it was probably N. A. Gray and his deputy.

Re-X Q. 374. Give the name of his deputy.

A. Do not recollect his name, but he has been in charge of that room a great many years.

Re-X Q. 375. Do you personally know either of them?

A. Knew both well. N. A. Gray is since dead.

Re-X Q. 376. When did Gray die?

A. Within two years.

Re-X Q. 377. You have now stated the names of every person or persons present during those alleged interviews and conversations with Norton, have you not?

A. Would not say that positively.

Re-X Q. 378. Why not?

A. Because I do not recollect positively.

Re-X Q. 379. Give your best recollection about it.

A. I have done so in previous answers.

Re-X Q. 380. In your answer to question 354 of your redirect testimony, you state in substance that the Hon. R. C. Parsons was your attorney in the month of May, 1870. Was the Hon. R. C. Parsons at that time a member of Congress from this Congressional district?

A. He was not.

Re-X Q. 381. When, if ever, was he a member of Congress from this Congressional district?

A. Cannot give the exact dates.

Re-X Q. 382. Was he ever a member of Congress from this district?

1411 A. Supposed to have been, and was succeeded by the present member, Amos Townsend.

Re-X Q. 383. You are positive about that, are you?

A. Without reference to the Congressional Directory could not give answer.

Re-X Q. 384. Your recollections of that matter are about as sound and as much to be depended upon as your alleged conversation in Washington with Norton, are they not?

A. That is for the court to decide.

The examination of this witness is here closed upon both sides. It being now 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening, the reading of the deposition to the witness by the examiner is postponed until half-past nine o'clock Monday morning, Feb. 25, 1878, to which time these proceedings are adjourned.

The deposition having, this 25th day of February, 1878, been read to witness, both counsel being present, pursuant to adjournment, he states that he desires to make the following corrections, to wit:

A. In reference to the answer to question 3, I wish to state that from June, 1864, until October 1st, 1866, I was special agent of the Post-Office Department; was not connected with the Cleveland post-office during this time.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the last part of the answer after the words "Post-Office Department," on the following grounds, viz: That the same were suggested to the witness by the defendant's counsel in the form of an interrogatory, and the same is therefore not a legitimate correction of his evidence by the witness.

In answer to question 22 I should have said Johnson block, instead of Franklin building, was where the office was located.

Mr. NORTON asks the witness the following questions:

1412 Re-X Q. 385. During your cross-examination certain papers were inquired of you concerning, and you, in answer to those questions, said in substance that you thought you might have those papers among yours at your house, and that you would look for them, and, if you found them, you would produce them in evidence here. I now refer to the letter of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, W. H. H. Terrell, notifying you of a hearing to be had at the Post-Office Department, under a certain act or joint resolution of Congress, approved July 14th, 1870, about the Norton patent of April 14th, 1863, and its several reissues, for postmarking and postage cancelling. I also refer to the subpœna, subpœnaing you as a witness in the case of Shaver and Corse against Edmund Hoole, U. S. circuit court, northern district of N. Y., and at law. Have you examined your papers as requested to do during your cross-examination?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as not coming properly after cross-examination is closed.)

A. Upon examination of my papers I find one letter addressed to Hon. R. C. Parsons from Mr. Terrell, informing him of an investigation to be had in pursuance of a private resolution of Congress, approved July 14th, 1870, in which he says: "I hope to be able to have the report contemplated ready for submission in the course of a week or ten days;" the report or the act or acts were not inclosed to me in the above referred to letter; as to the subpœna, I have not been able to find that after having made a thorough search.

(Defendant's counsel objects to all the answer except that part which shows that he has examined his papers as desired, on the ground that it is irresponsive.)

Re-X Q. 386. On what day did you make the search and find the paper stated in your last answer?

1413 A. Yesterday.

Re X Q. 387. What day of what month and what year was yesterday?

A. Sunday, February 24th, 1878.

Re X Q. 388. The time that you took for that examination was to suit your own convenience, was it not?

A. Most probably; Sunday being a day in which I have more leisure than on other days.

Re X Q. 389. Have you in your possession the letter of Mr. Terrell to Hon. R. C. Parsons, spoken of by you on this occasion?

A. I have.

Re X Q. 390. Will you let me examine it?

A. I have no objections.

Re X Q. 391. Will you allow that letter dated Washington, D. C., February 13th, 1871, addressed to the Hon. R. C. Parsons, House of Representatives, and signed W. H. H. Terrell, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, which is in the following words and figures: "Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., addressed to the Postmaster-General in relation to the claim of C. E. Wheeler, of Cleveland, Ohio, for an invention to cancel postage stamps, and asking that he be permitted to submit his claim to the department in relation thereto. An investigation is now being made of the claims of certain parties to the invention now in use by the department for cancelling postage stamps, in pursuance of a private resolution of Congress approved July 14th, 1870, and I hope to be able to have the report therein contemplated ready for submission in in the course of a week or ten days. Should Mr. Wheeler desire to file his statement, model, and proofs, so that they may be considered in connection with others, he should do so at once, and they will be embodied in the report. You will see, by reference to the private resolution referred to, that the whole matter is left to the final determination of Congress. Very 1414 respectfully, your obedient servant, ," to be filed in this case as Complainant's Exhibit C-C (Wheeler), February 25th, 1878?

A. No; first, because it was obtained for another purpose, to wit, simple examination; second, as it is addressed to another party, do not consider myself at liberty so to do without his consent; and third, unless compelled to do so by order of the court. I have no other objections.

Re X Q. 392. Will you see Mr. R. C. Parsons and get his consent for the purposes indicated in the last question, and your answer thereto?

(Defendant's counsel requests witness to answer "no" to the question as a means of stopping the illegal and improper proceedings which are being pursued by Marcus P. Norton, solicitor for complainant.)

A. No; the gentleman referred to, being at present in the city, is accessible to complainant's counsel, to whom he can appeal for permission.

Re X Q. 393. Was the Hon. R. C. Parsons, of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 13th day of February, 1871, a member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, your agent or attorney at that time?

A. Without data could not say that he was a member of Congress at that time, but for the purpose of depositing my papers at the Post Office Department he was my agent.

Re X Q. 394. Who represented the Cleveland district in the Congress of the United States House of Resresentatives for the Congress commencing the fourth day of March, 1869, and ending on the fourth day of March, 1871?

A. Without data do not remember.

Re X Q. 395. You voted in this district for a member of Congress for that term, did you not?

A. I did, but have not carried and do not now carry a Greeley Almanac or other reference book to obtain data at sight.

1415 Re X Q. 396. Did you in 1853, and down to July, 1861, carry a Greeley Almanac or other reference book concerning the several contrivances about which you have testified on this examination, so as to enable you to give testimony at "sight," as you seem to have done in the several answers to questions on your direct examination?

A. To the best of my knowledge, no; as to the correctness of these answers I respectfully refer you to the testimony of the witnesses who may follow me in this examination.

Re X Q. 397. To what witnesses do you refer in your last answer? Give their names.

A. As no witness has been subpœnaed as yet except H. S. Bishop, I am unable to give their names.

Re X Q. 398. Have you had conference with any person or persons in this city about being a witness or witnesses in this case? and, if you have, please give their names, and also state the names of any person or persons whom you have suggested to the assistant United States attorney for the southern district of New York, now present, as likely to be or probably would be, witnesses in this cause, and before this special examiner, in an attempt to support your testimony already given.

A. I have had no conference whatever with any witnesses who are to give testimony in this case, or in any case now pending, and have indicated as persons competent to testify only those who have been named above.

(Defendant's counsel moves to strike from the record all questions and answers which have been put and made since and including the first question to-day, in reference to the Terrell letter and to the subpœna in the case of Shaver & Corse vs. Hoole, on the ground of manifest impropriety, immateriality, and irrelevancy.

Complainant's counsel objects to the motion on the ground that 1416 the questions and answers referred to will fully explain themselves to the court, and this objection to the motion is made without finding fault with defendant's counsel for the great desire he expresses in his motion to escape from the testimony of this witness and its consequences.)

CHARLES E. WHEELER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 25th day of February, A. D. 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

Complain't's Exhibit A A—(Wheeler)—Feb. 22d, 1878.—J. G. Pomerene, special examiner.

(For identification.)

CLEVELAND POST OFFICE,
Cleveland, O., May 7, 1864.

Hon. M. BLAIR:

DEAR SIR: I understand that certain parties have presented a claim for $35,000 against the government, and that it is now pending before the House Committee on Claims, for the use of the combined dating and cancelling stamp by the Post Office Department, the invention of which is claimed by said parties.

I have every reason to believe that the original inventor of that stamp is a clerk in this office. He invented it immediately upon the receipt of the order issued by Postmaster-General Holt several years ago, requiring a separate stamp to be used in cancelling the stamps on letters. Consequently, the claim of the parties alluded to above cannot have legal foundation.

Should you require testimony, the name of the clerk is Charles E. Wheeler.

I am, very respectfully, yours, very truly,

E. COWLES, P. M.

1417 FEBRUARY 25TH, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

HENRY S. BISHOP, a witness called for and on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Henry S. Bishop; 56 years; reside at Cleveland, Ohio; occupation, accountant.

Q. 2. Were you ever employed in the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio?

A. Yes.

Q. 3. When and how long?

A. During the years 1853 and a part of 1854.

Q. 4. State, if you have a distinct recollection of the facts, who was postmaster at this city, and who was President of the United States at the time you were so employed.

A. J. W. Gray was postmaster, and Franklin Pierce was President.

Q. 5. Where was the post-office then situated?

(By complainant's counsel objected to as being unimportant and incompetent.)

A. On Water street, near the corner of St. Clair street.

Q. 6. What was your occupation in the post-office?

A. I was clerk and had charge of the penny post.

Q. 7. Did you have an opportunity of knowing, and did you know what instrument or instruments was or were used at that time for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps.

A. I did.

Q. 8. State what they were and how they were used.

A. They were cancelling stamps, and were used by hand; hand stamp of course.

1418 Q. 9. Give a description of one of them.

A. The post-office stamp for the Cleveland office was metal'ic, with the words Cleveland, O., and in the center of the stamp the dates were filled in by means of type; the cancelling stamp was a wooden stamp if I remember, with a design upon it for cancelling.

Q. 10. Were they separate?

A. They were.

Q. 11. Was any other sort of instrument afterward used for the two purposes?

A. Yes.

Q. 12. Describe it.

A. There was an attachment made to the post-office stamp, by which the stamp was checked by the one operation.

Q. 13. What stamp do you last refer to when you say that the stamp was checked by the one operation?

A. Postage stamp.

Q. 14. What is checking?

A. Checking or cancelling is my intention.

Q. 15. What substance was used to make the cancellation ink?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as being leading.)

A. Ink.

Q. 16. In describing this instrument you say that an attachment was made to the post office stamp?

A. Yes.

Q. 17. What stamp was that?

A. A stamp indicating where the letter was from.

Q. 18. When this instrument having the attachment you have spoken of was used, did any part of the impression made by the post-office stamp or postmarker, appear on the postage-stamp?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as leading.)

A. No.

1419 Q. 19. I understand you to mean by what you have testified that there was a hand instrument in use by which the postmark was put on the envelope, wholly apart from the postage stamp, and the postage-stamp was canceled at one and the same blow or operation; is that correct?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, first, as leading; second, as suggesting to the witness the answer desired; and third, as being so-called testimony by defendant's counsel, and not by witness.

Complainant's counsel here suggests to defendant's counsel that if this style and form of examination is to continue the witness might be excused and the defendant's counsel do the testifying.)

A. Yes.

Q. 20. Do you know Charles E. Wheeler?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, on the ground that defendant's counsel refuses to state what Wheeler he has reference to in the question, after being requested by complainant's counsel so to state.)

A. I do.

Q. 21. Was he a clerk in the post-office at Cleveland at the same time you were?

A. He was.

Q. 22. Do you know of his ever having used, at the time you were in the office, the combined postmarker and canceller you have described?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as leading; and further, counsel for the defendant made the description inquired about, and not the witness.)

A. Yes.

Q. 23. Whose contrivance or invention was this combined instrument, if you know?

1420 A. Charles E. Wheeler's.

Q. 24. I think you stated that a separate canceller and a separate postmarker were first used, and "afterwards" the combined instrument was used; are you sure that the combined instrument was not used at least part of the time when you first went into the office?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, and each and every objection heretofore taken to any question put to this witness are now and here repeated as objections to this question.)

A. I am not sure.

Cross-examination of witness by complainant's counsel:

X Q. 25. In answer to question one, you state your occupation to be that of an accountant, how long have you been in that business?

A. That is my profession.

X Q. 26. How long have you been engaged in it?

A. Since I was twelve years of age, more or less.

X Q. 27. Well, which is it, more or less?

A. I hardly know how to answer you.

X Q. 28. Have you an office in this city for that business, or as you call it, profession?

A. No.

X Q. 29. Did you ever have one here for that purpose?

A. As superintendent for the Western telegraph lines, as confidential clerk for J. W. Gray, postmaster, and recently as clerk for the receiver of the Forest City Woodware Co., I have.

X Q. 30. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I think I did.

X Q. 31. Will you now please answer question No. 29, as read to you?

A. I have.

X Q. 32. When and where was it located, and how long was it continued there?

1421 A. On Bank street, Superior street, corner of Superior and Seneca streets, and at the present time at number nine Public Square; on Bank street about three years, on Superior street about two years, corner of Superior and Seneca streets two years, at No. 9 Public Square four years.

X Q. 33. Well, are you at the present time actively engaged in the occupation of an accountant?

A. No.

X Q. 34. In answer to question 2 of your direct examination you state that you were employed in the Cleveland post-office, and that it was during the years 1853 and 1854. How long were you employed in that office during the year 1853?

A. Cannot say positively; think about six months in 1853.

X Q. 35. What were your duties there?

A. Superintending the penny post, attending the delivery window, and doing the postmaster's private writing.

X Q. 36. For what length of time were you there in 1854?

A. About nine months.

X Q. 37. Your employment there altogether was about a year, was it not?

A. About a year and three months.

X Q. 38. How came you to leave that service at that time?

A. The penny post and my salary would not compensate me for my services.

X Q. 39. In your answer to question 7 you state in substance that you had opportunity of knowing, and did know, what kind of instruments were used at that office for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps during the time you were in that office. What was your opportunity for that purpose?

A. I was in and out of the mailing-room numerous times every day.

X Q. 40. How many years ago was that in round numbers?

1422 A. About twenty-four years.

X Q. 41. Did you at the time you were "in and out" of that mailing-room make written memorandum of what you then and there saw?

A. I did not.

X Q. 42. About how many times since that time, and during each of the intervening twenty-four years to the present time, have you thought of and reflected upon that which you say you saw at that time in that mailing-room?

A. I cannot say.

X Q. 43. To whom, if to anybody, during those twenty-four by-gone years, have you communicated that which you say you saw in that mailing-room more than twenty-four years ago?

A. I might have remarked it to Mr. Chas. E. Wheeler.

X Q. 44. To anybody else previous to the commencement of this examination here in Cleveland?

A. I think not.

X Q. 45. When did you last communicate to Mr. Chas. E. Wheeler that which you say you saw in that mailing-room at least twenty-four years ago?

A. Within ten days last past; I did also talk with Mr. Wheeler in the year 1861 on the cars coming from New York State to Cleveland.

X Q. 46. How came you to communicate with Mr. Wheeler on those two occasions named by you about the matter now being inquired into?

A. First, on the cars; supposing that he had obtained a patent, we discussed the merit of the invention; the last time that we talked I met Mr. Wheeler accidentally at the foot of the stairs leading to the commissioner's, Mr. Pomerene's, office; Wheeler then said he might need me as a witness, as I understood, in the United States court.

Adjourned until half-past nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

1423 FEBRUARY 26, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment of yesterday.

Same counsel present as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. H. S. BISHOP resumed by MARCUS P. NORTON:

X Q. 47. You have now stated each and every time or occasion when you have had conversation with Mr. Charles E. Wheeler, a witness in this case, whose examination closed on yesterday, and who signed that deposition in your presence, have you not, in answer to cross-question No. 46, which the examiner will read you for your information at this time?

A. I cannot say that the times now named are the only ones.

X Q. 48. You said that on yesterday on your examination, why can you not say it now?

A. I am unwilling to be dragged into a position compelling me to say what I do not believe is true.

X Q. 49. Having such a high regard for the truth as you seem to indicate in your last answer, you will now please state each and every interview you ever had with Mr. C. E. Wheeler on the subject matter of this examination, giving the time, the places, and the circumstances attending the same.

A. That I cannot do.

X Q. 50. Why can you not do that?

A. For the reason it would be impossible to remember.

X Q. 51. You are a personal friend of Mr. C. E. Wheeler, are you not?

A. I am.

X Q. 52. Have been for how many years?

A. Twenty-eight to thirty years.

X Q. 53. Met him very frequently during all that time?

A. Not very frequently.

X Q. 54. About how frequently during each year?

1424 A. During the last twelve years do not think it will average over two times a month.

X Q. 55. When and by whom were you first applied to to become a witness in this cause?

A. About a week or ten days ago Mr. Charles E. Wheeler intimated to me that I might be needed or required as a witness in this cause.

X Q. 56. What did he say to you about it at that time?

A. He stated that there was a suit in the United States court concerning the postal stamp and postage-stamp canceller; he asked me where I could be found; that I would be needed as a witness.

X Q. 57. Did you inquire of him anything as to what he desired to prove by you?

A. I did not.

X Q. 58. Did he state to you by word, by sign, or otherwise indicate to you, anything that he desired to prove by you on this occasion?

A. He did not.

X Q. 59. After you had this interview with Mr. Wheeler did you have an interview with defendant's counsel upon this subject?

A. I did.

X Q. 60. How many such interviews have you had with him up to this time?

A. One.

X Q. 61. When and where was that?

A. I think last Wednesday morning, in the hall leading to my room, No. 9 Public Square.

X Q. 62. Who, if any one, was present on that occasion?

A. Defendant's counsel and myself.

X Q. 63. Anybody else?

A. No one.

X Q. 64. About how long was that after the interview with Wheeler of which you have last spoken?

A. A day or two.

X Q. 65. On that occasion, did the defendant's counsel tell you what he desired to prove by you on this occasion?

1425 A. He did not.

X Q. 66. Did he tell you who had sent him to you?

A. I think not.

X Q. 67. Since the adjournment last evening, and the commencement of your cross-examination this morning, have you had any conversation with defendant's counsel, now present, about this case, or any matter or circumstance connected with it?

A. I have.

X Q. 68. State what you said to him about it.

A. I said that plaintiff 's attorney was slow get around this morning, and that Mr. Cottrell was a pattern-maker. The defendant's counsel then asked me if a person could look through the window of the post-office when on Water street and see the stamping-table; to which I replied, no; that the mailing-room was partitioned off, and the postmaster's room intervened. I think that was all.

X Q. 69. Have you now stated fully all the conversation you had with defendant's counsel this morning about the subject-matter of this examination?

A. I think I have, in substance.

X Q. 70. Did you not state to him, in words or substance, this morning, that you had no recollection how that alleged Wheeler stamp which you have said you saw in the post-office here more than twenty-four years ago was made; that is to say, all you knew about it, it was double, and you could not tell whether it was bound together by twine and wire, but you thought the cancelling stamp was attached to the postmarker by means of a screw?

A. I did not say anything of the kind.

X Q. 71. What did you say to him upon the subject-matter of the last inquiry; I mean the manner in which the alleged cancelling device was at that time secured to the postmarking stamp?

A. Not one word.

X Q. 72. Did he ask you if you knew anything upon that subject?

A. He did not.

1426 X Q. 73. Have you not stated to defendant's counsel this morning, and in this room, that you thought that that cancelling stamp was secured to the postmarking stamp by means of a pin, screw, or spring, or stated in substance the same?

A. No.

X Q. 74. You have had not one word of conversation with him this morning on that subject or in anything connected with it?

A. On the subject of the construction of the stamp and canceller, I have never described it to defendant's counsel.

X Q. 75. Have you this morning mentioned to him the words postmark stamp, cancelling stamp, spring, screw, pin, twine, wire, handle, or any of those words?

A. I have not.

X Q. 76. Has he to you?

A. No.

X Q. 77. You will now proceed to describe the exact construction of the postmarking and postage cancelling stamp, which you say you saw more than twenty-four years ago in the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio.

A. I cannot give an exact description of the stamp and canceller. However, they were so arranged as to stamp the postmark and cancel the postage-stamp with or by one and the same blow.

X Q. 78. Why can you not give the description inquired about in the last question?

A. For the reason that I paid more attention to the results of the tool than I did to the tool itself.

X Q. 79. You have now stated your only reason for not being able to describe the construction of that instrument?

A. I think I have.

X Q. 80. How many times did you see that instrument which you say you cannot describe the construction of?

A. Cannot say how many times; numerous times every day, so far as that is concerned, while I was in the office.

1427 X Q. 81. And you never examined the instrument sufficiently to inform yourself as to the manner or the details of its construction?

A. I did not.

X Q. 81½. How do you know it had a cancelling device attached?

A. I saw it.

X Q. 82. Proceed to describe in detail the construction of that cancelling stamp.

(Objected to on the ground that the question has been put and answered fully.)

A. That I cannot do, as I have before stated.

X Q. 83. Why not?

A. For the reason I never examined it, simply examining the work that it done.

X Q. 84. You will now proceed to describe in detail the construction of the postmark device which you say you saw more than twenty-five years ago in the Cleveland post-office, having a cancelling stamp attached to it, which cancelling stamp you swear you cannot describe.

(Same objection.)

A. I cannot give a detailed description of the mechanical arrangement of the post-stamp and canceller.

X Q. 85. Why can you not?

(Objected to because the witness has stated several times that he does not remember the detailed construction of this stamp.)

A. For the reasons, as before stated, that I never examined the construction of the postmark and canceller, giving more attention to the results of its work.

X Q. 86. Were you inquired of in the last question as to giving your attention to results of any kind, which you say took place more than twenty-four years ago?

1428 A. Perhaps not, the answer being explanatory.

X Q. 87. Explanatory of what; anything that you were inquired about?

A. Of my inability to give a detailed description of the mechanacal arrangement of the postmark stamp and canceller.

X Q. 88. You have, in answer to several questions during your cross-examination, mentioned about result of an instrument, which you swear you cannot describe a single part of it, and your answer about result being forced into your evidence without your being asked about it by cross-examining counsel; you will now please state the manner and the means by which this alleged contrivance of postmarking and cancelling instruments were secured together.

A. I cannot describe it.

X Q. 89. Why not?

A. For the reason I don't know.

X Q. 90. Question 23 of your examination-in-chief reads as follows, to wit: "Whose contrivance or invention was this combined instrument, if you know?" Your answer was, "Charles E. Wheeler's." What Wheeler is that?

A. The witness appearing before the commission in this case.

X Q. 91. Do you mean the witness whose examination closed here on yesterday, and who signed his deposition in your presence last evening?

A. Yes.

X Q. 92. How do you know that that contrivance came to the post-office more than twenty-four years ago?

A. I saw it there.

X Q. 93. Do you know who brought it there?

A. I do not.

X Q. 94. What has become of that contrivance you say you saw in that office more than twenty-four years ago, no part of which you swear you can describe?

A. I do not know.

1429 X Q. 95. When and where did you last see that contrivance?

A. In the Cleveland post-office, on Water street, during the years 1853 and 1854.

X Q. 96. In what part of the years of 1853 and 1854?

A. During the latter part of 1853 and a part of 1854.

X Q. 97. In what part of the year 1854 did you see that contrivance, and where?

A. From the commencement of 1854 up to the fall of 1854, in the mailing and stamping room of the Cleveland post-office.

X Q. 98. It took you from the commencement of the year 1854 to the fall of that year to take one last farewell gaze upon that instrument, did it not?

A. I gazed upon it with admiration.

X Q. 99. An instrument which you say you saw twenty-four years ago or more, and which you now swear you cannot describe either of its parts or its construction, was a most suitable device to excite and to challenge your admiration, was it not, at the time when you say that from the commencement of 1854 to the fall of that year you gazed upon it with admiration?

A. Yes.

X Q. 100. Since then, and during the intervening twenty-four years, have you seen any combined post-marker and postage-cancelling stamp?

A. Not since I left the post-office until this morning.

X Q. 101. Where did you see one this morning?

A. In this room.

X Q. 102 Who showed it to you, if anybody?

A. No one showed it to me.

X Q. 103. Where did you see it, and in whose possession was it?

A. First in the hands of the commissioner, next in the hands of defendant's attorney.

X Q. 104. You have, several times during your examination, in-1430 terpolated into your answers the word "result," and that word you applied to what you saw in the Cleveland post-office more than twenty-four years ago, done by an instrument no part of which now the construction of which you swear you can describe, and which result you say for a long while, to wit, from the first of the year 1854 to the fall of that year, excited your "admiration." Please state whether you ever mentioned to any person anything about that result, or whether you ever stated to any one anything concerning that overwhelming admiration with which you swear at that time you were largely endowed?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I have.

X Q. 105. When, and to whom?

(Same objection.)

A. Charles E. Wheeler, in 1854 and 1861.

X Q. 106. At any other time?

A. I think not.

X Q. 107. What was the occasion in 1861 of your speaking to him upon that subject, and in what part of year was it?

(Same objection.)

A. Mr. Wheeler and myself were coming from New York State to Cleveland, by cars, when the subject came up; this was upon the occasion of which I have before spoken—in the early part of 1862 and latter part of 1861; I remember that there was snow on the ground, and that it was the early part of the winter.

X Q. 108. Who first began that conversation on the cars from New York State to Cleveland, O., during that winter?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

1431 A. I cannot say.

X Q. 109. Give your best recollection of it.

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection who it was.

X Q. 110. State the conversation upon that occasion between yourself and Mr. Wheeler.

(Same objection.)

A. The conversation was general in relation to postal service, the weather, the health of his and my families, the post-mark stamp and canceller, salaries, and general prospects.

X Q. 111½. State all you said to Wheeler upon the several subjects stated by you in your last answer, and all that he said to you on the same subjects, on that occasion.

(Same objection.)

A. That I cannot do.

X Q. 112. Why not?

A. For the reason that I cannot remember.

X Q. 113. Commencing at cross-question No. 67 and ending with cross-question No. 76, you were inquired to state certain things as to what had taken place at an interview between yourself and defendant's counsel concerning the several matters contained in these questions. You denied each matter inquired about. I now wish to ask you if, on yesterday or on any other day, you had an interview with defendant's counsel in which the matter there inquired about took place?

(Same objection.)

A. I now say, again, no.

X Q. 114. Did you understand the last question at the time you answered it, and do you mean to be understood that the matter there inquired about never at any time occurred between you and de-1432 fendant's counsel, and that you never stated to him the matters and things there inquired into, or anything in substance the same?

A. I did understand the question. My conversation with defendant's counsel has been in this room, and during the sitting of court, and in the presence of the examiner and his clerk, counsel for plaintiff, counsel for defendant, and in no other place, and at no other time, except, as before stated, when I saw defendant's counsel in the hall.

(No cross-question 115.—J. G. P., ex'r.)

Recess for dinner, and until two o'clock p. m.

Redirect examination of witness by Mr. CLARKE:

Re D. Q. 116. When the office was in Water street state where the stamping-table, upon which letters were post-marked and postage-stamps were cancelled, was, with reference to the windows where letters were delivered to the public.

(Objected to as being new matter introduced now for the first time. It is therefore improper and incompetent to make this inquiry of the witness at this time.)

A. The stamping-table could not be seen from the delivery windows, being in a separate room.

Re D. Q. 117. About how far distant?

A. Nearly full length of building; probably 120 feet.

HENRY S. BISHOP.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of February, 1878

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

1433 FEBRUARY 26, 1878.

Present pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel as before.

WELCOME L. COTTRELL, a witness called for and on behalf of defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE, counsel for defendant:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. Welcome L. Cottrell; age is 47; residence, No. 218 Birch street, Cleveland, Ohio; occupation, a pattern and model maker.

Q. 2. Did you ever witness the operation of postmarking letters and cancelling the postage-stamps thereon in the Cleveland post-office?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. How was it done?

A. Done with a hand-stamp, by first striking it upon the ink-pad and then on the letter.

Q. 4. How many blows did it take to make the postmark and the cancellation mark upon each letter?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel in that the last question involves substantially the same matter as this, and the witness having answered that, it is incompetent and improper to lead this witness by a series of questions in themselves leading and repeating the same subject matter of inquiry after the witness has once answered.)

A. One blow upon each letter and one blow upon the ink pad.

Q. 5. Was there a distinct postmark and a distinct cancellation mark?

1434 (Objected to by complainant's counsel for each and every of the reasons assigned to other questions, during the examination of this witness, as objections to those questions.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Regarding the surface of the envelope of each letter with the postage-stamp thereon as a whole, state where on that surface the distinct postmark and the distinct cancellation mark that you have referred to appeared.

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the grounds stated as objections to all questions put to this witness. Each and every objection heretofore taken during the examination of this witness are now and here assigned as grounds of objection to this question.)

A. The postmark appeared to be upon the left of the postage-stamp, and the cancellation mark appeared upon the postage-stamp.

Q. 7. Now give a full history of the circumstances under which you witnessed the operation of postmarking letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon at the Cleveland post-office. Specify time, place, and the person by whom the work was done, and how you came to witness it.

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, and, in view of the kind and character of the examination of this witness thus far by defendant's counsel, the objections made to the last question are here interposed as objections to this question.)

A. The circumstances are, that I was in a habit of calling at the Cleveland post-office in the Herald building, on Bank street, perhaps once a week, perhaps oftener, during the years of 1852 and 1853. My father had a box number in this post-office; Mr. Wheeler usually served me with my letters; during the time I was waiting or calling for 1435 my letters Mr. Wheeler was frequently engaged in stamping letters; my attention was called to Mr. Wheeler's work on account of the rapidity with which he done it; I used to stand and look in at the delivery window and see him working.

Q. 8. Whereabouts in the office was the stamping done?

A. Very nearly opposite the back delivery window.

Q. 9. About how far from the window?

A. Well, I should think about ten feet.

Q. 10. Could you see over the surface of the table and what was on the table?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. What was the operator's position with reference to the window?

A. The window was just to the left hand of the operator and a little in front of him.

Q. 12. About how often did you see this done?

A. I can't tell definitely.

Q. 13. Make as good an estimate as you can.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question on the ground that the witness has already stated that "I can't tell definitely" in answer to question 12, and that it is therefore improper to undertake to induce the witness to give a different answer upon the subject matter of the inquiry already made, and distinctly and positively answered.)

A. I should think five or six times; I cannot be definite about it.

Q. 14. Do you have a distinct recollection that you witnessed the operation while the post-office was in the Herald building on Bank st.?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, on the ground that the question is an improper one to put to this witness on his direct examination.

1436 Complainant's counsel claims the exclusive right and privilege to cross-examine the witness.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 15. Mention any circumstances which fix that in your recollection.

A. I went to the post-office in the Herald building more frequently than at any other place before or since; have had occasion to think about that since; once in 1864 or '5 I was making a model for a cancelling machine for Mr. Wilbor; the inventor said he thought that cancelling and postmarking by one operation would be a patentable feature in his machine. I told him I thought not; that that was an old device which I had seen in use ten or twelve years before.

Q. 16. Did you ever at any time since have an opportunity of witnessing the operation of postmarkin' and cancelling in any post-office?

A. No, sir.

Q. 17. What was the nature of the letters which took you with such unusual frequency to the post-office at the time you have mentioned?

A. It was love.

Q. 18. From what you saw of the instrument used by the operator, state about how large it was, how it was used, and, if you can, how it was constructed.

A. I did not take notice of how it was constructed, only observed that it was a hand-stamp and that it marked the cancellation as well as the postmark.

Q. 19. Who was the Mr. Wheeler you have referred to?

A. I don't know how to identify him.

Q. 20. Have you seen him in this office to-day?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross examination of witness by MARCUS P. NORTON, complainant's counsel:

X Q. 21. State the year, month, and the day of month in which you were born.

1437 A. 1830, October 17th.

X Q. 22. You are now forty-seven years old, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

X Q. 23. You say that in the year 1852 your father had a box number in the Cleveland post-office; how old were you in that year?

A. After the 17th of October, I was twenty-two years old.

X Q. 24. How many years ago was that?

A. It was twenty-six years last October.

X Q. 25. State the size of the window where you made the wonderful discoveries stated on your direct examination about postmarking letters and canceling postage stamps thereon in the post-office in this city twenty-six years ago.

A. I should think that window was about fourteen inches wide and eighteen high.

X Q. 26. I do not ask you what you think about the size of that window, I want to know what you know about it.

A. I know it was a small window and, as near as I can remember, of the size that I have given you.

X Q. 27. How high from the floor was the bottom of that window at that time?

A. About three feet.

X Q. 28. You were about three feet tall at that time, were you not?

A. I was more than three feet.

X Q. 29. How much more?

A. About three feet and two inches more.

X Q. 30. In all six feet and two inches, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

X Q. 31. You say in answer to question 7 of your direct examination "I used to stand and look in at the delivery window and see him working," was that the same window you have described in this cross-examination?

A. Yes, sir.

X Q. 32. For how long a time did you "used to stand and look in at the delivery window" in the Cleveland post-office in 1852?

1438 A. Not more than four or five minutes perhaps; not very long.

X Q. 32. Whenever you did thus stand and gaze through that window at the wonderful operation being there performed by Wheeler twenty-six years ago, did you meet anybody else there on those occasions?

A. I might have met other persons there. I presume I did.

X Q. 34. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. I have no distinct remembrance of meeting any particular person except the post-office clerks.

X Q. 35. Name those clerks.

A. I don't know any of their names except Mr. Wheeler's.

X Q. 36. State his Christian name or names.

A. I can't.

X Q. 37. Did you know him personally at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

X Q. 38. Intimately well?

A. No, sir.

1442 received your love-letter twenty-six years ago, but also saw the industrious and patriotic services of Wheeler at that long, square table in the postmarking of letters and the cancellation of postage stamps thereon by a contrivance no part of which, you swear, you can describe?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

X Q. 67. To whom and when was it that you did that which you swear in your last answer you did do?

A. To Mr. J. W. Wilbor, some time in 1865, I think.

X Q. 68. Anybody else?

A. Not that I remember. I told it only to this gentleman here.

X Q. 69. You never said one word about it to Charles E. Wheeler, of Cleveland, Ohio, a person already examined as a witness in this case, did you?

A. I never did.

X Q. 70. Since that event which took place twenty-six years ago—I mean the time when you not only received your love-letters through that delivery window but saw Wheeler performing inside—and the present time you have been very careful not to say anything to Wheeler about what you then and there saw him do?

A. I never had occasion to speak to Mr. Wheeler about it.

X Q. 71. Is that the best answer you can give to that question?

A. Yes, sir.

X Q. 72. Is it true that during all of these twenty-six years that have passed your thoughts by day and your dreams by night have been freighted with the recollections of receiving these love-letters through that window, and at the same time seeing Wheeler at that table performing as stated by you?

A. I have not thought of that only as some occasion has brought the association to my mind.

X Q. 73. Name each and every association that has brought to 1443 your recollection the matter stated by you in your last answer during the time inquired about.

A. The first was the one I have spoken of before, when I told it to Mr. Wilbor in 1865; the second was when Mr. Clarke, counsel for defendant, came to my shop to have a model made of stamp and canceller, last week.

X Q. 74. Never to any other persons, or at any other time, have you mentioned it?

A. Not that I remember.

X Q. 75. Give your best recollections about it.

A. I don't recollect ever mentioning it to any other persons except Mr. Clarke and Mr. Wilbor.

X Q. 76. At the time and places already stated by you, and only at those times and places?

A. I think I have spoken to Mr. Clarke twice about it, but at the same place—in my shop.

X Q. 77. Who was present, if anybody, when you spoke to Mr. Clarke about it, the assistant U. S. attorney, now present?

A. No other person was within hearing.

X Q. 78. Did Mr. Charles E. Wheeler go to your shop with Mr. Clarke to see about the models which you say you made?

A. Yes, sir; he came with him the first time.

X Q. 79. Who informed you on that occasion as to the kind or character of the models which you were to make?

A. I can't tell. It is like this: Mr. Wheeler came in and gave me an introduction to Mr. Clarke. He told me he was the assistant U. S. attorney, and that Mr. Clarke wished to have me make him a model, and then both told me how to make it. I told them when it would be done, and they went away.

X Q. 80. Did Mr. Wheeler on that occasion inform you as to the kind and character of the model that Mr. Clarke desired you to make?

A. Mr. Wheeler told me just how to make it; and the next morning Mr. Clarke came alone, and desired me to alter it and make another, which I did as requested.

1444 X Q. 81. I now show you Defendant's Exhibits No. 137 and No. 138, Wheeler, and I ask you to state whether those are the models referred to in your last answer, and which you say you made and afterwards altered, and made a new one, as stated by you on this examination?

A. I made 138 just as you see it here. 137 I made in two detached pieces. I did not put the wire or string in it.

X Q. 82. What alterations, if any, did you make in Exhibit 138, which I now hand to you?

A. I cut off about one-half of the cancelling stamp from the upper end, at Mr. Clarke's request.

X Q. 83. Previous to the making of these instruments—defendant's exhibits—had you ever before seen any devices of the kind or character represented by them?

A. I don't know that I ever did.

X Q. 84. You are sure about that, are you not?

A. Yes, I am sure. I don't remember that I ever did.

X Q. 85. Who first applied to you or requested you to become a witness in this case?

A. Mr. Clarke.

X Q. 86. Did Mr. Wheeler, at any time or place, or on any occasion, say anything to you about becoming a witness in this case?

A. He never spoke to me about the case in any manner; I never knew there wss any case depending on these models till Mr. Clarke told me, on the occasion of his second call.

X Q. 87. What did Mr. Clarke tell you about the case depending on these models—exhibits 137 and 138, Wheeler—for defendant?

A. I can't repeat the conversation which we got into about them.

X Q. 88. Why can't you repeat that conversation which happened some time last week?

A. I think I can give the substance of it.

X Q. 89. Do so.

1445 A. Mr. Clarke told me these were going to be taken as evidence in some disputed patent claim, and explained to me how they were to be used; he told me that some party had patented them, I think, or patented a device for cancelling and stamping with one operation—something like that—and that these models were to be used to show that it was an old device invented and used by Mr. Wheeler before the patent was issued. I then told him I had seen Mr. Wheeler use such a device, and he said I was just the man he wanted to find. That is the substance of it.

X Q. 90. Returning to the affairs that happened as stated by you 26 years ago, I desire to inquire of you whether you saw any round table in the post-office at Cleveland during the eventful period described by you? I mean when you were looking through that window 14 by 18 inches.

A. I don't remember of seeing a round table.

X Q. 91. At that post-office at that time?

A. Yes; that is what I mean.

X Q. 92. Was there such a room in that post-office as a room known as a mailing-room, during that period when you were receiving your love letters through that window 14 by 18 inches, 3 feet high from the floor, and at the same time viewing the wonderful displays of Wheeler at that long, square table, 10 feet from where you stood, as stated by you on this examination?

A. I had no knowledge of the interior arrangement of that post-office further than what I could get by looking in at that window, 14 inches by 18, 3 feet high from the floor.

X Q. 93. Had there been a round table in that room you would have seen it, would you not?

A. I don't think I should have noticed the table particularly unless my attention had been called directly to it.

X Q. 94. State the size of that room, as near as you can, in which Wheeler was performing with his lightning instrument on the 1446 long, square table, and which so much attracted your attention, because of the great rapidity of his performance, some 26 years ago.

A. As near as I can remember, the room was, perhaps, 30 by 40 feet.

X Q. 95. Did you, during the period described by you as a period happening 26 years ago, make any memorandum in writing of what you saw through that little window of the post-office at Cleveland, Ohio?

A. No, sir, I didn't make any written memorandum.

X Q. 96. Have you ever made any such written memorandum since that time until you have made one here to-day?

A. I have not made any written memorandum at all.

X Q. 97. In any of your love letters to the girl of your choice in those days, did you tell her of the wonderful things that you had seen Wheeler do through that window fourteen by eighteen inches, three feet high from the floor, on a long square table, ten feet from where you were standing, and performed by a contrivance which you swear was never shown you by anybody, and no part of which, you also swear, you can describe?

A. I didn't write anything of the kind to the girl I then loved, or to any other girl, or to any other person, then or at any other time.

Redirect examination of witness by Mr. CLARKE:

Re D. Q. 98. Do you have a distinct and independent recollection of about how old you were at the time you were receiving the love letters to which reference has so frequently been made?

A. Yes, I have.

Re D. Q. 99. How old were you?

A. I was from 22 to 23 years of age.

Re D. Q. 100. When you looked into the window of the post-
1447 office, about how high were your eyes above the level of the table upon which the stamping was done?

A. Not more than eighteen inches.

Recross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

Re X Q. 101. From where you stood during the time you looked through that window, could you plainly and distinctly see the table upon which the post-marking of letters, newspapers, and other mail matter was done?

A. I could.

Re Q. 102. Was the table upon which letters and other mail matter in that post-office were post-marked during that time, between you and Wheeler, when he was doing those things of which you have testified here to day, and which you seem to have so vividly recollected, not only during the war of the rebellion, but for twenty-six consecutive years?

A. It was partly between me and Wheeler; a line drawn from me to Wheeler would run across the corner of that table.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

Re D. Q. 103. Do you have a distinct recollection that from where you stood at the window you could see the marks made upon the letter by the post-office stamp?

A. I do have a distinct recollection; I could see the marks.

Re D. Q. 104. Can you state whether the floor on the inside of the office was on the same level of the floor in the hall?

A. No, I can't.

Re D. Q. 105. When people went for their letters did they have to stoop in order to look in the window?

A. Tall persons did.

Re D. Q. 106. About how high did the heads of the clerks come up in the window?

1448 A. I should think they came up to the top of the window; I can't tell definitely.

Re D. Q. 107. Did they appear to stoop?

A. I could not tell; I never took any notice.

W. L. COTTRELL.

[Subscribed and] sworn to before me this 26th day of February, A. D. 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

FEBRUARY 27th, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

JOHN COON, a witness called for and on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. John Coon; age is 55 years; residence Cleveland; by occupation a lawyer.

Q. 2. State the different places in this city in which the post-office has been since 1850; specifying streets and buildings, if you can.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question on the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent and inadmissible for any of the purposes of this suit, the suit being for an infringement of a patent, not concerning the various localities of the post-office at Cleveland, O.)

1449 A. I think it was in the year of 1850 that the post-office was removed from what was known as the Johnson Building on Superior street, to what was known as the Herald Building on Bank street; I know that the post-office was located in the Herald Building on Bank street as early as February, 1853, and continued there until July of that year, when it was removed from the Herald Building to Water street; I was from February, 1853, to February, 1854, interested as one of the propri.

etors of the Herald, and had my office in that building, and remember that the post-office was removed from the building at the time stated; the building on Water street was a building fitted up by Mr. Gray, the postmaster appointed early in the Pierce Administration, to succeed Mr. Haskell, the former postmaster; the building was the same one now occupied by the Cleveland Rolling Mill Co., I think, on the west side of Water street, near St. Clair street; from that place it was removed to its present location where it has remained ever since; the present location is the building on the Public Square, which was erected by the government for that purpose.

(Complainant's counsel takes the same objection to the answer as to the question.)

X Q. 3. Fix the date of the removal of the Cleveland post-office from the Herald building on Bank street to the building fitted up by Postmaster Gray an Water street as accurately as you can. Please specify precisely the means by which you are able to fix this date, if you are able?

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question on the same grounds and for the same reasons as those stated against the question last above.)

A. The removal was made from the Herald building to the Water street building on Sunday, the third day of July, and Monday, the fourth of the year stated, I mean 1853, Mr. Gray, the postmaster,
1450 availing himself of those two days coming together, during which the office could be removed with least inconvenience to the public. I remember this fact because of a controversy which arose at the time among our citizens to some extent, and between the Plain Dealer and Herald newspapers, in respect to the proposed new location of the post-office. So far as the controversy was carried on by the newspapers referred to I remember that I myself participated in it. And I remember that our objections to the removal were overruled, and that Mr Gray, who was also the editor of the Plain Dealer, objected to the post-office remaining under the administration in the Herald building, which he characterized as a "coon pen."

(Complainant's counsel objects to the answer on the same ground as assigned as objections to the last answer.)

Witness cross-examined de bene esse by complainant's counsel.

(Any conditional cross-examination objected to by defendant's counsel.)

X Q. 4 During the year 1852, where was the post-office at Cleveland located?

A. It was in the Herald building on Bank street.

X Q. 5. During the year 1853 where was the same post office located?

A. Up to the time when it was removed, as I have stated, it remained in the Herald building, and for the balance of the year it was in Mr. Gray's building, on Water street.

X Q. 6. At what time was it removed from the Herald building?

A. I don't know that I can state more precisely than I have that the removal took place on the third and fourth of July of that year. I mean the year 1853.

X Q. 7. Where was that post-office located in this city during 1854?

1451 A. In Mr. Gray's said building on Water street.

X Q. 8. You have now stated the locality of the post-office at Cleveland, O., during the years 1852, 1853, 1854, and also that it was removed in July, 1853. What enables you to make these statements of transactions that took place twenty-five and twenty-six years ago?

A. I think it probable that my recollection in regard to the location in the Herald building, at the time stated, was fixed by the fact of my being at the time a joint owner of the Herald property from February, 1853, to February, 1854, and by the fact of my being personally occupied daily in that building. There was another circumstance that tended to fix the dates of those transactions in my mind, and that was the fact that Mr. Gray and myself were on personally unfriendly terms, growing out of a personal collision that took place not long before that, and I had the impression that one of his reasons for removing the post-office was his personal feeling in respect to myself. Being advised a few days since by defendant's counsel that he desired my personal recollection about these dates, I have examined the files of the Cleveland Herald and of the Plain Dealer, published at the time, and find my recollection refreshed and supported by the publications of those papers of the dates referred to. So far as the files of the Herald are concerned I recall some paragraphs and observations regarding the removal of the post-office to Water street as having been written by myself. I don't know that I can mention any other circumstances that have tended to fix those dates in my mind.

X Q. 9. From what do you render your evidence on this occasion; is it from your personal recollections alone or from the recent examinations you have recently made of the files of the newspapers referred to in your last answer?

A. From my personal recollections, with only this exception, that I had forgotten the fact until it was recalled to my recollection by 1452 the examination referred to, that the post-office was removed on the 3d and 4th of July. My memory being refreshed on that point by that examination I recall the fact as a matter of personal recollection that the removal took place on those days. In respect to the other matters of which I have testified I believe I was able to recall them with satisfactory distinctness, but, as I have stated, the files referred to simply corresponded with my recollection.

X Q. 10. When the defendant's counsel came to you to obtain your evidence on these matters, who, if anybody, was with him at that time?

A. Mr. Charles E. Wheeler called with Mr. Clarke and introduced him to me.

X Q. 11. During 1852, and the year 1853, and the year 1854, were you familiar with the internal construction of the post-office in this city and located at the various places you have stated?

A. I was not at all familiar with the internal construction of the post-office in Mr. Gray's building, but I was occasionally in the post-office while it was in the Herald building, and during the term of Mr. Haskell. I don't know that I was familiar with the internal structure of either office. I can't now recall anything more than the main room of the post-office while it was in the Herald building, and one small room back of the main room.

X Q. 12. Whenever you were in that room during that time did you observe the process of making up mails or postmarking of letters?

A. No, I did not.

X Q. 13. For what purpose, if you know, was that small room you mentioned used for during that time?

A. I think the postmaster, Mr. Haskell, had his desk in that room, and it may have been used for other purposes. I don't know about that.

X Q. 14. How many delivery windows, if you remember, did that post-office have, and about where were they located?

1453 A. I think there were two or more delivery windows for the boxes, and one general delivery, but how located I don't remember.

X Q. 15. During that time, and whenever you were inside of that post-office, do you remember to have seen a long, square table used for mailing purposes, such as postmarking letters, and located ten feet or more from any one of these delivery windows?

A. I don't think I remember what the furniture was or how it was located or used.

X Q. 16. Do you know the size of any of those delivery windows?

A. I do not know the size of any of them; would only say of convenient size.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

Adjournment until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

FEBRUARY 28TH, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present as before.

Counsel for complainant states that he desires further to cross-examine the witness Wheeler, before these proceedings adjourn sine die; and that such further cross-examination relates entirely to matters testified to by Wheeler during his examination and before the signing of his deposition; and complainant's counsel requests the defendant's counsel to produce before this special examiner such witness for the pur-1454 poses indicated in this statement, and to produce him now for such purpose.

Defendant's counsel states that the deposition of the witness Wheeler was closed by consent of both counsel, signed by the witness, authenticated by the signature of the special examiner several days ago, as the record shows; that said Wheeler is not now present in the examiner's room, and that he, defendant's counsel, does not know where said Wheeler is, and could not find him without considerable search, and that he declines with the utmost kindness and courtesy to play the part of errand boy for complainant's counsel in hunting up said Wheeler; but that he is perfectly willing that complainant's counsel may call said Wheeler as his own witness, or may examine him in any legal way, having first secured his presence by any legal means which he is able to adopt.

Complainant's counsel, in reply, states that he did not know that he desired further to cross-examine the witness Wheeler until yesterday at the close of the examination of the fourth witness produced by defendant's counsel, whereupon he requested the witness Wheeler to be produced before closing the examination before this special examiner, as he desires further to cross examine him.

Complainant's counsel claims the right to further cross-examine the witness Wheeler at any time during the continuance of these proceedings here, at such time as defendant's counsel and this special examiner can attend to the same.

Complainant's counsel states that this request is made three 1455 days after the witness Wheeler had signed his deposition before the special examiner in the usual manner of doing such things, and without the giving of any special consent, and that he has only a few questions that he desires to ask the witness.

And complainant's counsel further replies that he has no intention or desire to impose upon defendant's counsel the onerous duties of an "errand boy," and as to that part where the defendant's counsel suggests the propriety of making this man Wheeler a witness for the complainants, he has long since been taught to look out for traps slyly set, and further, that "When sinners entice thee consent thou not."

Defendant's counsel suggests that complainant's counsel can have all the time he desires to secure the attendance of the witness Wheeler, by process of the court, or by personal request, or in any other manner, to which the complainant's counsel replies that the witness being a witness hostile to the complainant, and produced by the defendant's counsel, is not under the control of the complainant's counsel, and that he knows of no legal power to be exercised on the part of the complainant to compel the attendance of the witness Wheeler under the circumstances stated in the request made to defendant's counsel, as complainant has no control over these proceedings, they being solely under the control of defendant's counsel, by special order of this court, and complainant's counsel will pay all necessary expenses in hunting up this witness by defendant, and the usual per diem for his attendance.

Adjourned sine die.

1456 I, J. G. Pomerene, special examiner, do hereby certify that Charles E. Wheeler, Henry S. Bishop, Welcome L. Cottrell, and John Coon were by me first severally sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that the foregoing depositions, by them respectively subscribed, and severally authenticated by my signature, as above set forth, were reduced to writing, in part by myself, and in part by E. B. Gregg, who is not interested in the suit, in the presence of the witnesses respectively, and in the presence of counsel for complainant and defendant, as is within indicated, and were respectively subscribed by the said witnesses in my presence, and were taken at my office, in the city of Cleveland, and State of Ohio, on the 18th day of February, 1878, and on the following days, as is within indicated; that I am not counsel, attorney, or relative of either party, or otherwise interested in the event of this suit.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand this first day of March, A. D. 1878, at the city of Cleveland, Ohio.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

SIR: Please to take notice that on the annexed affidavit an application will be made to the court by the defendant herein for an order that Irving Browne, esq., of Troy, New York, be appointed special examiner herein, under the 67th equity rule, as amended, to take the testimony of Jacob Shavor, Albert C. Corse, Charles Eddy, Jeremiah D. Greene, and F. G. Ransford, and of such other persons as may be brought before him, witnesses on the part of the defendant; and this application will be made to his honor Judge Wheeler, at the United States circuit court room, on Thursday, the 10th day of January instant, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard.

New York, January 9th, 1878.

Yours, &c.,

STEWART L. WOODFORD,
United States Attorney and Defendant's Solicitor.

To MARCUS P. NORTON, Esq.,
Complainant's Solicitor.

1459 United States circuit court, southern district of New York. In equity.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, ss:

SAMUEL B. CLARKE, being duly sworn, says that he is an assistant to Stewart L. Woodford, who is United States attorney for this district and solicitor for the defendant in the above entitled suit, and that said suit is an equity suit, based on an alleged infringement of a patent by the defendant in his official acts as United States postmaster at New York City; that said suit is at issue; that the complainant has rested, having, as he supposed, made out a prima facie case; that it is now incumbent on defendant to take testimony in his own behalf; that in deponent's opinion it is important and relevant to the defense that the testimony of Jacob Shavor, Albert C. Corse, Charles Eddy, Jeremiah D. Greene, F. G. Ransford, and of others who, as deponent is informed and believes, reside out of this district, at or near the city of Troy, New York, and of other persons who will be present at said Troy when an examination of witnesses before a special examiner is made, should be taken; that deponent desires that this testimony should be taken orally under the 67th equity rule, as amended; that it is necessary that a special examiner should be appointed for the purpose; that deponent is informed and believes that Irving Browne, esq., of Troy, New 1460 York, is a competent and proper person to be appointed such examiner, and that deponent desires that he may be appointed.

SAMUEL B. CLARKE.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN trust, against
THOMAS L. JAMES, U. S. POSTMASTER, NEW York.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Northern District of New York, ss:

Be it remembered that on the 28th, 29th, 30th, and 31st days of January, and the 1st, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th days of February, 1878, personally appeared Albert C. Corse, Charles Eddy, Christopher C. Campbell, Helen M. Ingalls, Rev. George C. Baldwin, Jere-
1461 miah D. Greene, John T. Lamport, James Bolton, jr., and R. H. Ward (the said parties appearing at the times named in their several depositions hereto annexed), witnesses on the part of the defendant, before me, a special examiner appointed by the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, to testify, and the truth to say, in a certain matter depending and undetermined in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, on the equity side, wherein Christopher C. Campbell, assignee in trust, is complainant, and Thomas L. James, U. S. postmaster, New York, is defendant.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

In the circuit court of the United States, southern district of New York.
In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN TRUST, against
THOMAS L. JAMES, U. S. POSTMASTER, NEW YORK.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant, at the city of Troy, on the 28th day of January, and following days, 1878, before Irving Browne, duly appointed special examiner for that purpose.

Present, pursuant to notice, George H. Williams, esq., of coun-1462 sel for complainant, and Marcus P. Norton, esq., complainant's solicitor, and Samuel B. Clarke, esq., Assistant United States District Attorney, for the defendant.

ALBERT C. CORSE, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Alfred C. Corse; age fifty-four years; reside in Troy, and am a manufacturer of stoves.

(Mr. Williams asks that the witnesses be examined without being in the hearing of each other; to which Mr. Clarke objects, on the ground that no reason is given for such a course, and it is not customary.

The special examiner denies the request for the present.)

2. Q. Have you ever held, either individually or with any other person, any patent of the United States for improvement in post-office stamps?

A. I have.

3. Q. State what patent you have held, and how you obtained it, and if you held it with any other person, give that person's name.

A. I held a patent granted to Marcus P. Norton, in 1863, I think; it was conveyed by Norton to Jacob Shaver and myself.

4. Q. Do you remember the date in 1863?

A. No, sir; I do not.

5. Q. Describe briefly the thing that was patented so that we may identify it.

A. There was a handle and a cross-bar; attached to the cross-bar was a cylinder in which were the name of the office, the date of the month, and also the initials of the month, and on the other end was a blotter that canceled the stamp—a postage-stamp—a post-office stamp I refer to.

1463 6. Q. Was any other patent granted to Marcus P. Norton, in 1863, to your knowledge?

A. None that I recollect of.

7. Q. Was this patent conveyed to you and Mr. Shaver by an instrument in writing?

A. It was.

8. Q. Was the assignment recorded in the Patent Office?

A. I think it was.

9. Q. Do you know the complainant's solicitor in this case—Mr. Norton?

A. Yes, sir.

10. Q. Is he the person to whom the patent of 1863 was granted, and who assigned it to you? (Referring to Mr. Norton.)

A. He is.

11. Q. Where is Mr. Shaver?

A. He is dead.

12. Q. When did you first become acquainted with Mr. Norton?

A. In a business way in 1859.

13. Q. When did you first have business connections with him in regard to patents?

A. Some time in 1860 or 1861.

14. Q. Did your business at that time relate to post-office stamps?

A. It did.

15. Q. What was the nature of the business?

A. It was in relation to a patent for a post office stamp issued to Mr. Norton in 1859.

16. Q. Did you have any business with him in regard to any other post office stamp at about that time?

A. Not that I now recollect.

17. Q. When did you first have any business with him in regard to the thing that was patented in 1863?

A. I couldn't say.

18. Q. State as nearly as you can recollect.

A. It was the subject-matter about every time we met—about 1464 reissuing this patent, but I can't be positive as to dates; during 1862 we talked a good deal about getting out the patent that was issued in 1863.

19. Q. Under what terms, if any, was the assignment to Shaver and you made?

A. In consideration of moneys advanced and to be advanced, we were to have one-half of the patent, or the proceeds, or whatever was got out of it after the expenses were paid.

20. Q. Were these terms and conditions part of any general agreement you had with Mr. Norton?

(Mr. Williams objects on the ground that it is not competent to go into other business matters between the parties.)

A. It was.

21 Q. Was this general agreement in writing?

A. Not that I know of.

22. Q. State what the agreement was.

(Mr. Williams objects on same ground as above stated, and also because it is not competent to give evidence of any agreement not in writing.)

A. The agreement, as understood between us, was that we were to advance what moneys were necessary for procuring this patent, and pay necessary expenses in procuring compensation from the government; in consideration therefor we were to receive one-half.

23. Q. Under the agreement in whom was the legal title to the patent to be?

(Mr. Williams objects, on the ground that it is not competent for the witness to give his opinion as to the legal title.)

A. In Shaver & Corse.

24. Q. Was this agreement made before the patent was issued?

A. It was.

1465 25. Q. Did the agreement apply specially to this patent, or was it a general one applicable to other inventions of Mr. Norton's?

(Objected to as above stated to question 22.)

A. It applied to a patent of 1859, of 1862, and of 1863.

26. Q. Was there any provision in the agreement, which you say was made before the patent of 1863 was granted, relative to a reassignment by Shaver & Corse (yourself) to Mr. Norton?

(Objected to as above.)

A. There was not.

27. Q. Was the patent of 1863 assigned to you and Mr. Shaver, in pursuance of the agreement of which you have spoken?

(Objected to as above.)

A. It was.

28. Q. Did you, in 1864, reassign the patent of 1863 to Mr. Norton, or did you join with Mr. Shaver in so reassigning?

(Complainant's counsel objects to this question on the ground that it is not competent to give parol evidence on that subject, and because no such question is raised by the pleadings in this case.)

A. Not to my knowledge.

29. Q. Did Mr. Shaver, in that year, reassign the patent of 1863 to Mr. Norton to your knowledge?

(Same objection made.)

A. He did not.

30. Q. Did you or Mr. Shaver ever reassign the patent of 1863 to Mr. Norton?

(Same objection made.)

1466 A. I have no recollection of any such transaction.

(Defendant's counsel requests complainant's counsel to produce the original of the reassignment by Shaver & Corse to Marcus P. Norton, which, in the bill of complaint, is alleged to have been made on or about February 23, 1864, and to have been recorded in the Patent Office on July 24, 1869, notice to produce which was served on complainant's solicitor January 23d inst., service being admitted by him.

Complainant's counsel did not produce the paper.

Defendant's counsel produces a paper purporting to be a certified copy of all assignments of record under letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated April 14, 1863, No. 38175, for improvement in post-office stamps, and shows to the witness the paper, which is entitled "Affidavit and Assignments, Transfer of Patents," and which purports to be signed by Jacob Shaver and Albert C. Corse, and to be subscribed and sworn to before John T. Lamport, U. S. Commissioner; said paper is marked on the first and last pages thereof as "Defendant's Exhibit No. 15 (Corse), I. B., Examiner, January 28th, 1878," and asks witness to read the same.)

31. Q. Have you read the paper marked "Deft's Exhibit No. 15"?

A. I have.

32. Q. On page 3 of the exhibit it is stated as follows: "We agree with him, the said Marcus P. Norton, to furnish him with such sums of money as he might require, in order to get his said inventions into general use," etc.; did you and Mr. Shaver ever make an agreement of that sort with Mr. Norton?

(Objected to as leading, and for same reasons stated in objection to question 28.)

1467 A. We made an agreement with him to furnish him what sums were necessary to procure these patents and press the thing through, in our opinion.

33. Q. Did you agree to furnish him such sums as he might require?

A. Not to my knowledge.

(Same objection made to this question.)

34. Q. Did you, on the 23d day of February, 1864, or at any other time, make an affidavit in which you stated that you had so agreed?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection of making any such affidavit.

35. Q. How positive are you on the subject?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection of ever making anything of the kind.

36. Q. Have you any reason to suppose that you did not, and if so, what?

(Same objection.)

A. I have; he was owing us considerable amount of money, and I shouldn't have parted with any security that I had until I got something in return for it.

Adjourned to January 29th, at 9.30 a. m.

JANUARY 29*th*—9.30 p. m.

Pursuant to adjournment, counsel present yesterday, appeared.

37. Q. On page 5 of Defendant's Exhibit No. 15, it is stated as follows: "It was also agreed that whenever the said Norton should be able in his own judgment to manage the affairs concerning and 1468 connected with his said inventions, improvements, and letters patent, and to us assigned and transferred in the manner as aforesaid, and upon being requested so to do, we were to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer" the patent of 1863, and every reissue thereof; and on page 6 it is stated to have been agreed, "that whenever he, the said Norton, should for any cause desire, request, or demand of us the reassignment, retransfer, or reconveyance of any or of all his said patents by him assigned to us, under our said agreement with him, and for the purposes aforesaid, then the same should be so done without any trouble to him, or unnecessary delay," and it is also stated on pages 6 and 7 that in consideration of such reassignment the said Norton "was only to pay to us all sums of money, and lawful interest thereon, paid out by us at the request of said Norton, when we should present to him proper vouchers for the same;" did you ever make an agreement with Mr. Norton of the kind indicated in my quotations from Exhibit 15?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection of ever having made any such contract.

38. Q. How sure are you on the subject?

(Same objection.)

A. I am sure that we never should have parted with any security we had until we got something in its place; never having got anything leads me to suppose it was not done.

39. Q. I didn't ask you whether it was done, but whether it was agreed to be done at the time stated in Defendant's Exhibit 15.

(Same objection.)

A. It never was, to my knowledge.

40. Q. If such an agreement had been made, do you think you would now be likely to remember or know of it?

(Same objection.)

1469 A. I think I should.

41. Q. Do you feel positive that you would remember it, if such an agreement had been made?

(Same objection.)

A. To my own mind I think I would.

42. Q. Did you, on the 23d day of February, 1864, or at any other time, make an affidavit in which you stated that it had been so agreed between you, Mr. Shaver, and Mr. Norton?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection of ever having made any such affidavit.

43. Q. If you had made such a one would you or would you not remember it?

(Same objection.)

A. I think I should remember it.

44. Q. Have you any knowledge that Mr. Shaver ever made such an agreement or such an affidavit?

(Same objection)

A. I have not.

45. Q. Would you have known it if he had?

(Same objection.)

A. I think he wou'd have said something to me about it if he had made any such paper at the time.

46. Q. Did he ever say anything to you on the subject?

(Same objection.)

A. He did.

47. Q. When?

(Same objection.)

A. My impression is, it was some time in 1869; it might have been in 1868. I am not positive about it.

1470 48. Q. When did you first hear that there was a paper in existence purporting to be such affidavit and reassignment?

(Same objection.)

A. I think it was in 1869.

49. Q. Was it the time when Mr. Shaver spoke to you about it, as you have stated?

(Same objection.)

A. It was.

50. Q. What did Mr. Shaver say?

(Same objection as above, and also, because it is not competent to give Mr. Shaver's declarations in evidence.)

A. As near as I can recollect, he said he had received a letter from Washington, from some party, stating that Mr. Norton had said that he had papers to that effect. I told him I had just received one pertaining to the same matter, and wanting to know if such was the fact.

51. Q. Did Mr. Shaver say anything more about it?

(Same objection.)

A. We talked about it at various times.

52. Q. State all that Mr. Shaver said at about the time that you first obtained knowledge of the existence of a paper purporting to be such affidavit and reassignment.

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know that I could state all. He said he never had given any such papers.

53. Q. Did you ever see the original paper of which Defendant's Exhibit 15 purports to be a copy?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection of ever having seen it.

1471 54. Q. If you had ever seen it and at the time had known its contents, would you now remember that you had seen it?

(Same objection.)

A. I think I should.

55. Q. Have you any doubt that you would?

(Same objection.)

A. I have not.

56. Q. If, in 1864, you had reassigned the patent of 1863 to Mr. Norton, would you now remember that you had done so?

(Same objection.)

A. I think I should.

57. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

(Same objection.)

A. I haven't.

58. Q. What relations, if any, subsisted between Mr. Shaver and you on the one hand, and Mr. Norton on the other, in 1864 and 1865, in reference to this patent?

(Same objection.)

A. I suppose we were all equally interested. Mr. Norton had one-half, while we had one-half—or were to have.

59. Q. Do you mean one-half of the patent or one-half of the proceeds?

(Same objection.)

A. One-half ot the proceeds—whatever was got from it.

60. Q. What did Mr. Norton do, if anything, in reference to the patent in 1864 or 1865?

A. He drew the papers for a reissue in 1864, or had them drawn up, and I think in 1865 or 1866, I am not sure as to which, he com-
1472 menced a suit before the Court of Claims. I think he procured some signatures of postmasters through the country in relation to the value of the stamp.

61. Q. Was there any suit touching this patent prior to that in the Court of Claims?

A. I think there was one commenced against a party by the name of Hould.

62. Q. Whereabouts?

A. I think the case was tried in Albany, or brought in Albany.

63. Q. Who were plaintiffs?

A. Shaver & Corse.

64. Q. Who had charge of the suit of Shaver & Corse against Hould?

A. Mr. Norton.

65. Q. Who paid the expenses of the suit?

A. I presume Shaver & Corse.

66. Q. Who paid the expenses of the proceedings in the Court of Claims, and of obtaining certificates of postmasters as to the value of the stamps, and in obtaining the reissue of 1864?

A. So far as obtaining those of the postmasters of Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, Binghampton, Syracuse, Rochester, and I think, Buffalo, I paid individually; the others, I presume, were paid by Shaver & Corse, or by Charles Eddy & Co.; I couldn't tell you which.

67. Q. Who composed the firm of Charles Eddy & Co.?

A. At that time Charles Eddy, Jacob Shaver and myself.

68. Q. Who procured the certificates of postmasters at the places you have just named?

A. I did.

69. Q. By going to the several places?

A. Yes, sir.

70. Q. What other steps, if any, were taken towards obtaining compensation for the patent besides the suit against Hould and the suit against the United States in the Court of Claims?

A. Some efforts were made to get an appropriation from Con-
1473 gress; efforts were made to have Congress refer the matter to the Postmaster General for settlement; also efforts were made to get a bill through referring the matter to the Court of Claims.

71. Q. Did you have an agent in Washington to attend to these several matters.

A. We had a gentleman, a lawyer, by name of Merrimon, that had them in charge at one time, and I think at another time we had a Mr. Clark, of the firm of Weed & Clark, I think; I couldn't say that Mr. Clark was our agent, but I believe he assisted Mr. Norton in drawing some papers there.

72. Q. Who paid the expenses of these gentlemen?

A. I presume Shaver & Corse, or Charles Eddy & Co.

73. Q. Have you any doubt that you and Mr. Shaver paid the expenses, or a part of them?

A. I have not.

74. Q. Did you have any agent from this place in Washington for the purpose you have indicated?

A. None at that time aside from Mr. Norton; I was there more or less, but Mr. Norton attended to the papers.

75. Q. If you had reassigned the patent to Mr. Norton, was there any reason why you and Mr. Shaver should have incurred these expenses?

A. None that I am aware of.

76. Q. Who paid Mr. Norton's expenses while he was in Washington about the purposes you have indicated?

A. Shaver & Corse, Charles Eddy & Co., a portion of them; I couldn't say that they paid them all, you know.

77. Q. With reference to the reissue of 1864, do you recollect what the nature of the expenses were that you paid?

A. I do not.

73. Q. In reference to all the transactions that you have referred to, specify some of the different sorts of expenses that were paid by Shaver & Corse, or by Charles Eddy & Co.

A. There were some printing bills, traveling expenses, and some counsel fees.

1474 79. Q. Do traveling expenses include Mr. Norton's hotel bills?

A. I presume so.

80. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I have not.

81. Q. Who were plaintiffs in the suit against the United States?

A. In the Court of Claims, Shavor & Corse.

82. Q. What was the claim in that suit?

A. The claim was for damages for use of the stamp.

83. Q. Do you recollect whether you made oath in that suit that you and Mr. Shavor own the patent of 1863, and its reissue of 1864?

A. I think I did.

84. Q. Have you any doubt whatever that your oath was true?

A. I have not.

85. Q. Did you, between 1864 and 1869, receive any letters from Mr. Norton in reference to the stamp matter?

A. I did.

86. Q. Did Mr. Shavor, to your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

87. Q. About how frequently, when Mr. Norton was out of town, did you and Mr. Shavor receive letters from him on the subject?

A. I couldn't say, but quite often.

88. Q. Look at the paper that I now produce, and which purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to A. C. Corse, esq., dated National Hotel, Washington, D. C., January 24th, 1865, and state, if you know, in whose handwriting it is?

A. (Witness looking at paper.) Marcus P. Norton's.

89. Q. What is that paper?

A. It is a letter from Mr. Norton to myself.

(Letter offered in evidence, and it is marked Def't's Exhibit No. 16 (Corse). I. B., examiner. January 29th, 1878.)

1475 90. Q. Who is Mr. King, referred to in that letter?

A. He was the gentleman who had something to do with the Post-Office Department there; my impression is that he was Postmaster-General or assistant at one time, but not at this time; I think he was; I am not positive.

91. Q. What was his first name?

A. I am not positive, but I think it was Horatio.

92. Q. What did he have to do with the case at this time?

A. He was assisting to prepare some bills.

93. Q. Was he paid for his services, or was there an agreement to pay him?

A. I think we paid him some.

94. Q. Who is we?

A. Shavor & Corse, or Chas. Eddy & Co.

95. Q. What did the bills relate to?

A. To the stamp.

96. Q. The letter states, "the Postmaster-General sent the papers to Congress on the day he promised." What papers?

A. I suppose they were papers in relation to the stamp matter.

97. Q. Who is the Mr. Norton referred to in the body of the letter?

A. (Witness looking at letter.) I couldn't say just now.

98. Q. Was it the same person who subscribed the letter?

A. That I couldn't say.

98. Q. Look at the paper that I now produce, and that purports to be a letter from M. P. Norton to A. C. Corse, esq., dated National Hotel, January 25th, 1865, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness looking at paper.) M. P. Norton's.

99. Q. What is that paper?

A. It is a letter from Washington to A. C. Corse, written by M. P. Norton.

100. Q. The same person who wrote the other letter, and is complainant's solicitor here?

A. Yes, sir.

1476 (Letter offered in evidence; it is marked Def't's Exhibit No. 17 (Corse). I. B., examiner. January 29th, 1878.)

101. Q. What suit is referred to in this letter? They say that the suit is conclusive.

A. I suppose it refers to the Hould suit.

119. Q. State all you recollect in regard to the circumstances in connection with the stamp matter to which this letter pertains.

A. My impressions are that I went right on to Washington within a day or so, and that we succeeded in getting the bill before the Senate, I think, but am not positive about that.

120. Q. Who is J. D. Green, referred to here?

A. A gentleman who resides in Troy.

121. Q. What connection had he with this case or with the stamp matter?

A. I have no recollection that he had any at that time.

122. Q. What relation to the case has he had at any time?

A. He had a power of attorney from Shavor and myself to act in the stamp matter; can't tell the date, but think it was later than that.

123. Q. Who are Low and Hatch, referred to here?

A. I suppose it is Peter Low, now of Chicago, formerly of Troy; Hatch was a partner, I think, of Fairbanks & Co., of New York.

124. Q. What connection had they with the stamp matter, if any?

1480 A. Low claimed to have an interest in the 1859 patent; I think Hatch claimed the same; I am not positive as to that; he claimed to have an interest by assignment from somebody.

125. Q. What was the 1859 patent for?

A. It was for postmarking and canceling stamps.

A. (Witness examining paper.) Handwriting of Marcus P. Norton.

(Letter offered in evidence and marked Def't's Exhibit No. 112 (Corse), I. B., ex'r, Jan. 31, 1878.)

(Complainant's counsel objects to the introduction of above letter for the reason that there has been an apparent alteration made in its date.)

228. Q. Look at the paper now produced that purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to A. C. Corse, dated May 13, 1869, and the paper that purports to be an envelope addressed to A. C. Corse, postmarked Washington D. C., May 15, and state in whose handwriting the letter and the address on the envelope are.

A. (Witness examining papers.) Both in the handwriting of Marcus P. Norton.

(Letter and envelope offered in evidence and marked Def't's Ex. No. 121 A & B (Corse), and Def't's Ex. No. 121½ (Corse), I. B., ex'r, Jan. 31, 1878.)

229. Q. In whose handwriting is the figure "9" in the date in above Exhibit No. 120?

A. (Witness examining paper.) I should think it was in Marcus P. Norton's.

230. (By Mr. WILLIAMS.) Is not the figure "9" in "1869" in said letter of a much darker and different color from the other figures with which it is connected?

A. (Witness examining figures.) I think it is; it looks to me as if he caught something on the end of his pen when he went to make that.

The witness being ill is excused until Friday morning, Feb. 1st, 1878, at 9.30 a. m.

Direct examination of ALBERT C. CORSE continued:

231. Q. Look at the paper now produced and that purports to be a letter from Shavor & Corse to Hon. Alex. W. Randall, Postmaster-General, dated June 10, 1868, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) The handwriting in the body of the letter is Marcus P. Norton's, and the signature is in my handwriting.

(Letter offered in evidence and marked Def't's Ex. No. 122 (Corse), I. B., ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.)

232. Q. Look at the paper now produced and that purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to A. C. Corse dated October 23, 1869, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) Handwriting of Marcus P. Norton.

(Letter offered in evidence and marked Def't's Ex. No. 123 (Corse), I. B., ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878, A & B.)

233. Q. Do you recollect what the arrangement referred to in the last letter was?

A. I think it refers to a contract made between Mr. Eddy and Mr. Norton in the fall of 1869.

234. Q. Was that after you had discovered the existence of the pretended reassignment?

A. Yes, sir.

235. Q. Was the arrangement made by Mr. Eddy put in writing?

A. I think it was.

236. Q. What was the general character of the arrangement; what was it to do?

1508 A. As I understood it, they were to put all the patents in together and press them for settlement with the government.

237. Q. Was this 1863 patent or the reissue one of those?

A. I think it was.

238. Q. What interest in the '63 patent were you to have or were you given by this arrangement, if any?

A. I don't now recollect.

239. Q. Was Mr. Eddy authorized to make such arrangement as he saw fit?

A. He was.

240. Q. Orally or in writing?

A. I think orally.

241. Q. Was the arrangement that was made, made according to Eddy's judgment without previous consultation with you?

A. We had some conversation in relation to it before he went to Washington.

242. Q. Did the conversation relate to the terms that should be agreed on and accepted?

A. I don't now recollect, but I think it was left entirely with him to do as he saw fit when he should get there.

243. Q. Do you know whether or not the patent of '63 was reissued in '69?

A. I do not.

244. Q. Did you ever assent to a reissue of the patent in '69?

A. Not to my knowledge?

245. Q. Either before or since '69?

A. It was reissued in 1864.

246. Q. Have you either before or since '69 assented to a reissue in 1869?

A. Not to my knowledge.

247. Q. Did Mr. Shavor?

A. Not to my knowledge.

248. Q. Did you or Mr. Shavor, either before or since, assent to a reissue of the patent in 1870?

A. Not that I know of.

1509 249. Q. What is your best recollection?

A. I have no knowledge of any transaction of that kind.

250. Q. Do you know whether or not the patent was reissued in 1870?

A. I have no knowledge of it.

251. Q. I think your testimony as to the agreement you had with Mr. Norton, prior to the issuing of the '63 patent, is not wholly distinct on the record; please state fully what the agreement was, specifying who, under the agreement, was to have the entire legal title, who was to pay the expenses, and what was to be the disposition of the proceeds or profits of the patent, if any.

A. Shavor and Corse were to have the title; they were to pay all necessary expenses, and were to have one-half of the net proceeds; the balance was to go to Mr. Norton or his heirs.

252. Q. "Net proceeds;" what do you mean by that exactly?

A. After the expenses we had been to were taken out, the balance was to be divided.

253. Q. Did you have any other security for the money advanced, except the holding of the title?

A. On this '63 patent you mean?

254. Q. Yes?

A. We had an assignment of a '62 patent.

255. Q. What I want to know is, whether you had any other security for the money advanced upon the thing that was patented in '63, except the holding of the title to the patent of '63?

A. None that I know of.

256. Q. Which was regarded as the really valuable patent?

A. I always regarded the patent of 1863 and 1864.

257. Q. At any time between 1864 and 1869, did Mr. Norton in any way whatsoever pretend or claim, to you' knowledge, that he was the owner of the '63 patent?

A. He did not.

1510 258. Q. Did he, during that time, treat you and Mr. Shavor as the owners of said patents?

A. He did.

259. Q. On what patent was the suit in the Court of Claims based?

A. I think it was on the '63 and '64.

260. Q. Was it the same as the one on which applications for compensation were made to Congress and the Postmaster-General between 1864 and 1869?

A. I think it was.

261. Q. Look at the paper which I now produce, and which is marked Def't's Ex. No. 126 (Campbell), and which has been produced by the plaintiff as the original of the alleged reassignment, and state whether, on inspection of said alleged original, you' memory is in any respect refreshed as to the matters you have testified to in regard to said reassignment, and whether you wish to make any correction in the testimony you have given so far.

(Mr. Williams objects. Defendant's counsel having procured and filed said paper, as a part of his evidence in this case, complainant's counsel objects to any evidence on his part now tending to discredit or impeach the validity of said exhibit.)

A. I do not.

262. Q. Look at the signature, "Albert C. Corse," to that document, and state whether it is your signature.

A. (Witness examining signature.) It looks like it.

263. Q. In whose handwriting is the body of the instrument?

A. (Witness examining instrument.) In Marcus P. Norton's.

264. Q. In whose handwriting is the jurat on page 11—the part beginning with the words "subscribed and sworn to"—on the same lines with the signatures?

A. I couldn't say.

1511 265. Q. You are familiar with Mr. Norton's handwriting; is it his, in your judgment?

A. (Witness examining paper.) I shouldn't be willing to swear it was.

266. Q. Supposing the signatures on the 11th page to be genuine, did you ever deliver that document to Mr. Norton, with intent to pass title to the patent of 1863?

(Objected to, as tending to contradict the instrument, and otherwise incompetent.)

A. I did not.

267. Q. You are sure of it, are you?

A. I am.

268. Q. Did Mr. Shavor, to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

269. Q. Was, or was not, Mr. Norton your attorney in February, 1864?

A. I think he was.

270. Q. State fully as many reasons as you can for believing that that document was never made by you.

(Same objection made as to question 261.)

A. In the first place, if we parted from the title, we would not have reissued the patent of 1864, thereby putting ourselves in a false position before the government; we shouldn't have sued Hould claiming to be the owners of the patent; we shouldn't have went to the Court of Claims, claiming to be the owners of that patent, if we hadn't supposed we owned it; we shouldn't have applied to Congress for relief if we hadn't supposed that we had the title, nor we wouldn't have spent the amount of money that we spent in the matter if we didn't suppose that we had the title; nor Mr. Norton never intimated to me, either verbally nor in any other manner, but what the title was in us; and I never heard to the contrary until some time about the 1st of August, 1869.

1512 271. Q. Was Mr. Norton cognizant, during all the time between 1864 and 1869, of what was being done in the stamp matter, and of the representations which you and Mr. Shavor made to the courts, to the departments and to Congress, as to the ownership of said patent?

A. He was.

Q. Did he ever in any manner protest against your claim of ownership?

A. Not to me.

273. Q. Did Mr. Norton personally do a large part of the work that was done in this matter before the courts, the departments and Congress?

A. He did.

274. Q. Have you ever conveyed to anybody the 1863 patent?

A. Mr. Shavor and I assigned a portion of it, I think in the spring of 1869—it might have been spring or winter of 1869—I mean February or March.

275. Q. To whom?

A. To Charles Eddy.

276. Q. Was that before you had heard of the alleged reassignment?

A. It was.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

277. Q. When did Mr. Norton commence to do professional business for or in connection with Shavor and Corse, or Charles Eddy & Co.?

A. I think in 1859.

278. Q. When did he render the last professional services for those persons, or either of them?

A. I should think somewhere in 1873—'73 or '74, I think.

279. Q. Has there ever been any final settlement of accounts between Mr. Norton and Shavor & Corse, or Charles Eddy & Co.?

1513 A. I think that in 1869, when Mr. Eddy made this arrangement in Washington, he took a paper passing receipts up to that time.

280. Q. Have you paid him for his professional services since that date?

(Objected to by Mr. Clarke as utterly immaterial.)

A. I couldn't say. I think he has had money since that time.

281. Q. Can you state about the amount?

(Same objection.)

A. I could not. I don't think that I have ever looked at his account from that date to the present.

282. Q. Who wrote to you from Washington, in 1869, that Mr. Norton claimed to have a reassignment of this patent?

A. John J. Weed.

283. Q. Do you remember the date of that letter?

A. No; I do not. I think I can produce it, however.

284. Q. Was Mr. Weed your attorney, or acting for you in any way?

A. He was not, at that time, for me.

285. Q. What reason did he give for writing to you?

(Objected to, that the writing should be produced.)

A. Well I couldn't say now without examining the letter. My impressions are now that he had some accommodation in money matters, and I presume it was through that, although I wouldn't be positive.

286. Q. Was Mr. Horatio King your attorney in Washington?

A. Never was employed by me.

287. Q. Did you ever pay him anything for services rendered to you as an attorney in this business?

1514 A. I have no recollection of ever having paid him anything.

288. Q Were you aware of the fact that he was acting for you in Washington?

A. I know that he was assisting Mr. Norton there, but who he was employed by, unless by Mr. Norton, I couldn't say.

289. Q. How many affidavits have you made in reference to the patent business with Norton before John T. Lamport?

A. I couldn't say.

290. Q. Have you not made several affidavits of that kind before him?

A. I think we have.

291. Q. Can you remember now the contents of those different affidavits which you made?

A. I cannot.

292. Q. Were not those affidavits made to meet objections that were made in Congress, and to facilitate an appropriation to pay for the use of this patent by the government?

A. I presume so, but I couldn't say. I know there were several made, but what the contents were I couldn't tell you now.

293. Q. Do you remember that on the 12th day of January, 1865, you and Mr. Shavor made an affidavit before John T. Lamport, of this city, in which you stated that you assumed title and control of the patent of 1863 to save it from the unworthy creditors of Norton, or anything to that effect?

A. I do not.

294. Q. Are you willing to swear that you did not make any such statement and affidavit?

A. I have no recollection of any such document.

295. Q. According to your last statement of the original contract between you and Norton about the patent of 1863, you were to get one-half of it, or of the proceeds, as I understand you, for nothing; is that so?

A. We were to get one-half for advancing the money and taking the chances of getting it through—paying expenses.

1515 296. Q. Were you a witness in the Court of Claims in the case of Corse and Shavor against the United States?

A. I don't recollect that I was.

297. Q. You have stated that in that suit you made oath that you and Shavor owned the patent of 1863 and its reissue of 1864. When and how did you make that oath?

(Objected to because the question misrecites the evidence, witness having only stated that he thought he took the oath.)

A. I couldn't say. I suppose in order to commence the suit we should have to make an affidavit that we were the owners of the patent. It is simply from recollection. I haven't seen the record, that I know of, within the last six or seven years.

298. Q. You do not know, then, as I understand you, whether you made oath to the complaint or not?

A. I am not positive, but I suppose that we did.

299. Q. Can you tell the date of the first conversation you had with Norton about this patent, or the invention patented in 1863?

(Objected to as immaterial and not called for by anything testified to on the direct.)

A. I could not. My impressions are that it was some time in 1862, referring to the '63 patent.

300. Q. You have stated in your direct examination that the agreement with Mr. Norton did not apply specially to the patent of 1863, but that it was a general one, and applied to the patents of 1859, 1862, and 1863. When was that agreement made—before or after the patent of 1859?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It was after the '59 patent and after the '62 patent that this '63 matter came up.

301. Q. Did the agreement with Norton embrace all three of those patents?

1516 A. So far as his interests were concerned, as I understood it; as my memory serves me now, the '59 patent or a portion of it had been transferred to Ransford & Low; that Norton held an interest in it —I am giving it to you now as I remember it—and that interest they were to assign to Charles Eddy & Co. in consideration of moneys paid and to be paid; we were paying bills along from time to time as they occurred for Mr. Norton, about his office, cleaning his office, curtains, coal bills, clerk hire, &c.

302. Q. Did you have an assignment of that patent?

A. Of the '59 patent I think there was an assignment made by Ransford & Low; I don't know whether by both or by one as attorney.

303. Q. Did you have an assignment of the patent of '62?

A. Yes, sir.

Adjourned to 2 o'clock p. m.

2 p. m., met pursuant to adjournment; same counsel present.

304. Q. What was the consideration for that assignment?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Moneys advanced, and being advanced from day to day.

305. Q. With how many patents of every nature and description have you and Shavor, or Chas. Eddy & Co., been connected together with Mr. Norton?

A. I couldn't say.

306. Q. Are there not as many as six or eight altogether?

A. All the assignments that I can now recollect were, there was a portion of the '59 patent, the '62 patent, and the '63 patent; then 1517 we were to have an interest in a mail bag, or paper bag, I couldn't say which, or both; there was a railroad chair; then there was, personally, an interest in some kind of a "shut-off," I think, for a fire-engine, patented by a man named Nims, I think.

307. Q. Do you remember being connected with him in a whisky meter, in car-wheel patents, and also in a patent issued to one Hagan, also in a patent to one Grooms?

A. The car wheel I have no recollection about; the whisky meter, I do; I was on to Washington before the committee there; Hagan's and Grooms' matters were between Mr. Shavor and Norton, or rather my impressions now are that Mr. Louis Potter, and Mr. Shavor and Mr. Hagan were some way connected with a dissulphurizer for taking impurities from gold; they were the parties principally interested; Norton and myself were to have an equal interest with Shavor in the Grooms matter, also in the Hagan matter.

308. Q. Was not Mr. Norton, in prosecuting claims under the patent of '63, acting as well for himself as for you and Shavor?

A. I supposed he was.

309. Q. In whose handwriting is the signature of Jacob Shavor, on page 11 of Def'ts Ex., No. 126?

A. (Witness examining signature.) It resembles Mr. Shavor's.

310. Q. Don't you think it is Mr. Shavor's?

A. There are some things about it that lead me to think that it is not.

311. Q. What are the things?

A. It appears to be written with a tremulous hand; the "a" in Jacob is not written as he usually wrote an a, and the "cob" in Jacob is crowded; the "o" is crowded, right in between the "c" and the "b"; he usually wrote a very round and plain hand; what I mean by that is a steady hand; I don't now recollect of ever having seen him make a "J" in that shape.

312. Q. Will you swear that that is not the handwriting of Jacob Shavor to that instrument?

1518 A. I will not.

313. Q. Will you swear that the signature of Albert C. Corse is not in your handwriting?

A. No, sir.

314. Q. Do you know the handwriting of John T. Lamport?

A. I do not to designate it.

315. Q. When did you first hear of the interest of Miss Ingalls in this patent?

A. My impression is, it was somewhere in the fall of 1869.

316. Q. What did you hear about it then?

A. I don't know that I could tell now just what it was; whether Norton had assigned to her or she had reissued the patent, I couldn't say.

317. Q. You had heard that the patent was reissued to her?

A. I had, but whether it was in 1869, 1870, or 1871 I couldn't say; for, after the contract made between Norton and Mr. Eddy, I think in the fall of 1869, I have given the matter but very little thought or attention.

318. Q. Did you have anything to do with the application that was made to the Postmaster-General for compensation under an act of Congress approved July 14, 1870?

A. I may have had, but I don't now recollect.

319. Q. Who was the attorney of record in the case of Shavor and Corse against Hould, for the plaintiffs?

A. I couldn't say, unless it was Mr. Norton; I don't know as I ever gave it any attention, except to sign such papers as were requested by Mr. Norton.

320. Q. Did you pay anybody for professional services for the plaintiffs in that case?

A. I have no recollection of paying any; I presume Mr. Shavor did, he usually paid the bills himself.

321. Q. Was Mr. Gale—John B. Gale, of this city—an attorney for you in that case?

1519 A. I couldn't say.

322. Q. Who was your attorney in the case in the Court of Claims?

A. Well, there were two or three, or more, that had something to do with that; there was Merrimon, a man named Peck, a lawyer there; there was another man whose name I don't remember—Merrick, I think his name was.

323. Q. Did you pay Mr. Merrimon for his professional services in that case?

A. I have no recollection of paying any one but Mr. Peck, and I think his bill was made out in the name of the firm in which he was a partner.

324. Q. Do you know how the attorney for the defendant obtained Mr. Norton's letters to Mr. Shavor?

A. I do not.

325. Q. Do you know how he obtained the letters of Mr. Norton to Mr. Corse?

A. I do; I gave them to him.

326. Q. You have stated that Mr. Norton was your attorney; are you aware that the relations between client and attorney are generally regarded as confidential?

(Objected to as assuming a fact that does not exist in the form stated.)

A. I am not.

327. Q. If you were to write to your attorney confidential letters about your business in his hands, and you should afterwards get into a lawsuit with another party, and he should turn those confidential letters over to your antagonist to be used against you in that suit, wouldn't you regard him as a scoundrel?

(Objected to, because how the witness would regard it is immaterial, and because the matter inquired about is irrelevant to the circumstances of this case, since there is no rule protecting an attorney from a 1520 disclosure of his statements to his client, though there may be protecting a client from a discovery of his disclosures to his attorney.)

A. If he advanced sums of money and we had refused to pay it, I should consider him perfectly justified.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARK:

328. Q. In your cross-examination reference was made to a final settlement of accounts having been made in 1869; did such settlement contain an assignment by you to Norton of any interest in the '63 patent, or any admission that he was the owner thereof?

(Objected to, because the transaction is in writing, which is in evidence.)

A. I did not so understand it.

329. Q. When you stated that Mr. Norton was acting for himself as well for Shavor and you under the '63 patent, did you intend to convey any other impression by that than that you supposed such to be the fact, because, under the agreement, Norton was to have half of the proceeds?

(Objected as leading.)

A. I did not.

330. Q. Are you sure that it was in the fall of 1869, and not later, that you first heard of Miss Ingalls' alleged interest?

A. I am not.

(The testimony was read over to the witness, and he was asked if he desired to make any correction in it; witness states that in regard to his testimony about their connection with Mr. King, he would add that according to his recollection Mr. King came on to Troy and stated to him that Mr. Norton had promised him an interest in the patent,
1521 but whether or not they paid Mr. King anything at that time for his services he does not now remember.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of the alleged reassignment by Shavor and Corse to Norton, dated February 23, 1867, and which, in the direct examination of the witness Corse, was referred to as Defendant's Exhibit No. 15, the same being marked as Def't's Exhibit No. 15 (Corse), I. B., Examiner, January 28th, 1878.

(Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an assignment by Marcus P. Norton to Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, purporting to be dated 20th April, 1863, recorded March 8th, 1864; received and Marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—A (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an alleged assignment from Marcus P. Norton to Charles Eddy, as trustee for Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, purporting to be dated October 23, 1869, and to be recorded Oct. 25, 1869; received and marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—B (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

1522 Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an assignment from Marcus P. Norton to Helen M. Ingalls, purporting to be dated Oct. 23, 1869, and recorded Aug. 1, 1870; received and marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—C (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an article of agreement between Marcus P. Norton and W. W. Secombe, purporting to be dated Aug. 15, 1870, and to be recorded Nov. 1st, 1870, and to be subscribed by Marcus P. Norton; received and marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—D (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an article of agreement between Helen M. Ingalls and W. W. Secombe, purporting to be dated Oct. 4, 1870, and to be recorded Nov. 1st, 1870, and to be subscribed by Helen M. Ingalls; received and marked Def't's Ex. No 15—E (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an assignment from Helen M. Ingalls to William W. Secombe, purporting to be dated March 4th, 1871, and to be recorded March 11th, 1871, received and marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—F (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of an assignment from the Secombe Manufacturing Company, and W. W. Secombe, president, to Helen M. Ingalls, purporting to be dated July 10, 1873, and to be recorded September 20, 1873, received and marked Def't's Ex. No. 15—G (Corse), I. B., Ex'r, Feb. 4, 1878.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the foregoing, and also 1523 the memorandum of agreement purporting to be executed by William A. Wheeler, F. G. Ransford, Albert C. Corse, Charles Eddy, Jacob Shavor, Peter Low, William B. Hatch, April 22d, 1870, and to be recorded May 11th, 1870, under the certificate of the Patent Office, that they are a true copy from the records of that office of all assignments of record under letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton April 14, 1863, number 38175.

Complainant's counsel objects to said memorandum of agreement because it is irrelevant, and also to said certificate of the Patent Office, because the same is not true, and the law confers no power on the Commissioner to certify that said copies are "all" of the copies of assignments of record in relation to said patent.

Same counsel present.

CHARLES EDDY, being called as a witness and duly sworn, testified as follows:

By Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?
1524 A. Charles Eddy; age, 62 years; residence, 192 North 2d street, Troy, N. Y.; and am a stove manufacturer.

2. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton, the complainant's solicitor here?

A. I do.

3. Q. How long have you known him?

A. I think about 18 years.

4. Q. Have you ever had any business connections with him in regard to any patent relating to post office stamps?

A. I don't know what you mean by "business" there.

5. Q. Have you ever made any contract or agreement, or been connected with him in any similar transactions in regard to such a patent?

A. I have.

6. Q. What patent was it?

A. A patent known as Norton's Postmarking and Cancelling Stamp, patented in 1863.

7. Q. When did you first have such transactions with him?

A. I think it was in October, 1869.

8. Q. What was the nature of the transaction?

A. It was an assignment, by Norton to me, in trust, for Charles Eddy & Co., of which I was a member, of a one-third interest and a consideration of $20,000, to be paid to me from the first moneys that might be realized from the government or any other source, for the past or future use, of said patent of 1863.

9. Q. Who, then, composed the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co.?

A. Myself, Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse.

10. Q. Was the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co. then in existence?

A. As a firm, no; not at that date; but it was in existence in the interest of this patent and the settlement of that matter.

11. Q. Was this agreement you have spoken of in writing?

A. Yes, sir.

1525 12. Q. Was it in the form of an assignment?

A. Yes, sir; it was in the form of an assignment and an agreement.

13. Q. Was the assignment recorded in the Patent Office?

A. Yes, sir.

14. Q. Was the agreement you have spoken of a part of the assignment—a part of the same document, I mean?

A. I think the assignment was on a separate paper from the agreement, but for correctness I would rather see the papers.

15. Q. What became of the papers?

A. I believe we have them, or rather I have them.

16. Q. Do you remember whether or not the agreement that you think was separate from the assignment was an oral or a written agreement?

A. It was written.

17. Q. Is that written agreement in your possession?

A. It is.

18. Q. About what time was the assignment recorded, if you recollect?

A. I think it was October 23, 1869.

19. Q. Whereabouts are the assignment and agreement; are they here?

A. I have the agreement here, but the assignment is at my office.

20. Q. Please let me see it.

(Witness produces the agreement.)

21. Q. I see that this purports to be signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of John I. Weed and W. Penn Clark; where are those gentlemen now, if you know?

A. I believe they are in Washington, D. C.

22. Q. Where were they the last you knew of them?

A. They were in Washington, D. C.

23. Q. What was their business there?

A. They were a law firm, under the name of Weed & Clark, or Clark & Weed, I am not sure which.

1526 24. Q. Did you ever know of their ever having any residence in the State of New York?

A. I do not know.

25. Q. Do you know Mr. Weed's handwriting?

A. I do.

26. Q. Did you ever see him write?

A. I have.

27. Q. Is that his signature?

A. (Witness examining signature.) It is.

28. Q. Do you know Mr. Clark's handwriting?

A. I know it by seeing him write his name to this document.

29. Q. That is his signature?

A. It is.

30. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton's handwriting?
A. I do.
31. Q. Did you ever see him write?
A. I did.
32. Q. Is that his signature?
A. (Witness examining signature.) It is.
33. Q. Is your signature subscribed to that?
A. It is.
34. Q. In whose handwriting is the signature of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse?
A. (Witness examining signature.) It is mine.
35. Q. Were you authorized to sign their names?
A. I believe I was.
36. Q. How was the authority given, orally or in writing?
A. Orally.
(Agreement offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex., No. 125. (Eddy). I. B., Ex'r, Jan. 31, 1878.)
37. Q. What were the differences and disagreements referred to in the beginning of this exhibit?
(Mr. Williams objects to this question, and to all questions proposing to explain or change the written instrument produced, as it is entirely plain in its language upon its face.)
1527 A. (Witness examining paper.) I don't think I can express it in any better language than contained in the instrument itself as to the main fact.
38. Q. With reference to the ownership of the invention referred to, what were the claims of the respective parties to this instrument?
(Same objection.)
A. Mr. Norton claimed that he was the owner by virtue of a reassignment from Mr. Shavor & Corse of the patent of 1863, known as the Norton stamp patent; Mr. Shavor and Mr. Corse claimed that they had made no such assignment, and that all differences were to be considered amicably settled by this instrument, and the assignment, which was a part of this transaction by Mr. Norton to Chas. Eddy & Co., or Chas. Eddy, Jacob Shavor, and Albert C. Corse, composing the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co., and the several releases named in said agreement.
39. Q. Do you mean in your answer to convey the impression that it was the claim of Shavor & Corse only that all differences were to be considered amicably settled by this instrument, &c., or that such was the claim of both—Shavor & Corse on one hand and Mr. Norton on the other?
A. I mean to include myself—Shavor and Corse on the one hand, and Mr. Norton on the other.
(Defendant's counsel objects to all the last part of the answer to question 38, beginning with "and that all differences were to be considered amicably settled," &c., on the gound that that portion of the answer is irresponsive to the question, and because it tends to vary the contents of a written document.)
40. Q. How did Shavor and Corse claim that they owned the original patent?
(Same objection.)
A. By assignment from Mr. Norton.
1528 41. Q. When?
A. I think in 1863.
42. Q. When did Mr. Norton claim that Shavor and Corse had reassigned?

(Same objection.)

A. I think it was in 1864; my recollection now.

43. Q. Was it this reassignment of 1864 that Shavor & Corse denied having made at the time of this settlement you have spoken of?

A. It was.

44. Q. Did Mr. Norton make any statement in regard to Shavor & Corse having executed the reassignment?

(Same objection as above, and also because it is not competent to give Norton's declarations in evidence.)

A. He did.

45. Q. What did he say?

(Same objection as above.)

A. He said that Shavor and Corse executed that assignment for the purpose of use before the committee of Congress, and that said assignment never was intended for record, nor for the conveyance of any equity interest of Shavor and Corse, and that said assignment was so used, as aforesaid, before said committee, and was left in the archives of the committee room until about July, I think, of 1869, and that it was an afterthought of Mr. Norton's that such an instrument was in existence, and that he hired a clerk, I think a clerk in that department, to go and search for that instrument, for which he paid him $5; he obtained it and put it on record, as he then said, for his own protection.

46. Q. Did he claim that he had a right to put it on record?

(Same objection.)

1529 A. Well, he said he had no right to put it on in equity.

47. Q. Were mutual releases executed, as was agreed should be done in this Exhibit No. 125?

A. They were.

48. Q. Where is the release made by Mr. Norton?

A. I believe I have it at the office.

(Defendant's counsel requests witness to produce release at his earliest convenience.)

49. Q. Where is the release that you gave to Mr. Norton?

A. I don't know.

50. Q. Where did you last see it?

A. In Washington, where it was executed.

51. Q. Who took possession of it?

A. Mr. Norton.

52. Q. Did Mr. Norton pay you, as trustee, &c., any money, besides executing the release, assignment, and agreement that you have spoken of?

A. He did not.

53. Q. Did he then owe you, or Messrs. Shavor and Corse, any money?

A. He did.

54. Q. Have you stated that the assignment was made out and executed in pursuance of this agreement, Exhibit No. 125, was it?

A. It was.

55. Q. Do you know Helen M. Ingalls?

A. I know her by sight; never had any personal acquaintance.

56. Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Norton ever conveyed, or pretended to convey, by an instrument in writing, the patent of 1863, or any reissue thereof, to Miss Ingalls?

A. I know only by the records of the Patent Office that he has.

57. Q. Did you know, at the time of the making of the agreement

(Exhibit No. 125) that Mr. Norton had conveyed, or pretended to convey, the patent of 1863, or any reissue to Miss Ingalls?

1530 A. I did not.

58. Q. Did Mr. Norton owe you anything personally at that time?

A. I think he did.

59. Q. Did he owe anything to the firm of which you were a member?

A. He did.

60. Q. To the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co., that you have referred to?

A. Yes, sir.

61. Q. When did you first hear of the pretended assignment to Miss Ingalls?

A. I think not till 1871 or 1872; I am not positive as to the date.

62. Q. Was the patent of 1863, or a reissue thereof, reissued in 1870, to your knowledge?

A. It was not, to my personal knowledge, except as I have seen it reported in some of the papers pertaining to this matter.

63. Q. When did you first hear of the reissue of 1870?

A. I don't know.

64. Q. Did you, prior to such reissue, consent that the reissue then in force should be surrendered, and that new letters patent should be issued?

A. I never did—to my knowledge and belief now.

65. Q. Since the reissue of 1870, have you ever assented to or ratified the surrender of the patent, as it was prior to 1870, and to the issue of the new letters patent in 1870?

A. I have not, to my knowledge now, and I don't believe I ever did.

66. Q. Did you have anything to do with this stamp matter, between 1864 and 1869, personally?

A. I did not.

67. Q. Has Mr. Norton ever been discharged from the obligation to pay the debts which you say he owed you at the time of the making of the agreement and assignment in October, 1869?

A. Never; only as provided in that agreement, releases and assignment.

1531 68. Q. Did they discharge him?

A. Well, I think that is a legal question to be determined by the papers.

69. Q. Did the papers that you have referred to purport to discharge Mr. Norton from those debts?

A. I think not—only that compensation was obtained, and the money paid to us in that way which would discharge him from those debts undoubtedly.

70. Q. How did you come to be connected with the matter, so as to act in 1869 in the way you have described for Shavor & Corse, and for yourself?

A. When the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co. was dissolved, in January, 1869, I found the moneys which had been advanced to Mr. Norton were still the moneys of Chas. Eddy & Co., and in making a settlement upon this matter I assumed one-third of the liability of Mr. Norton to the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co., for which I received from Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse an assignment of an undivided one-third interest in this patent of 1863, which, if they did not own, was a fraud on me.

71. Q. Was this assignment in writing?

A. I believe it was.

(Complainant's counsel objects to any parol evidence of said assignment, as it is in writing and not produced.)

72. Q. Where is that assignment, Mr. Eddy?

A. I suppose it is among my papers, but I don't know; I haven't seen it in a long time.

73. Q. Was the assignment recorded?

A. I don't know.

(Witness is requested to make a search for the assignment and produce it.)

74. Q. At the time of the assignment you speak of, did you know anything about the pretended reassignment of 1864?

A. I did not; if I had, I would not have made any such agreement.

1532 Witness excused until Friday morning, February 1st, 1878, at 9.30 a. m.

Adjourned to February 1st, 1878, at 9.30 a. m.

FEBRUARY 1st, 1878—9.30 a. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present.

75. Q. At the time of the assignment of the one-third interest to you as trustee in 1869 by Mr. Norton, did you know that any interest in the patent had then been assigned to Helen M. Ingalls?

A. I did not.

78. Q. State as nearly as you can what the amount of the indebtedness of Mr. Norton was to the members of the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co. at the time of the assignment of the one-third interest, and of the mutual releases of which you have spoken?

A. Eighteen thousand dollars and over; I don't know exactly how much.

79. Q. Do you desire to correct any part of your testimony?

A. I would like to have the clerk read that part of my answer referring to the absolute release of Mr. Norton's indebtedness to us.

(Question 69 and answer were read to witness.)

WITNESS states: I want to correct that answer, by stating that the papers do purport to give him an absolute release.

80. Q. Was that release under seal?

A. My recollection is that it was.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

82. Q. Mr. Norton was not to pay you anything, as I under-
1533 stand, and you were not to receive anything by virtue of this arrangement in 1869, until money had been obtained from the government for the use of the stamp?

(Objected to because it tends to vary a written instrument.)

A. I can't vary the answer from the contract.

83. Q. What was your understanding on the subject?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't remember to have had any understanding different from the contract.

84. Q. Do you consider yourself capable of understanding this contract?

A. I think I do.

85. Q. Can you not then tell me what your understanding of it is on that subject?

A. I can, if you give me the paper. (Paper handed witness.) "That in consideration of certain large sums of money heretofore paid out for and advanced to Marcus P. Norton, by the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co., and by Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, in procuring patents for said inventions, in litigation in regard to said patents, and for its introduction into general use by the Post-Office Department, there shall be paid to and received by the said Chas. Eddy, in trust for himself and Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, the sum of $20,000 out of the first moneys paid by and received from the United States, from any source or in any way, for the past or future use of said invention."

86. Q. (By the witness to Mr. Williams.) Is there any other way that I can answer your question without reading the whole paper, that you can suggest?

1534 87. Q. (By Mr. WILLIAMS) Are you not aware that nothing has yet been received by anybody from the government or any other source, for the use of that stamp?

A. I believe there has not.

88. Q. Was there any understanding at the time this agreement was made in 1869 as to who should advance money or provide means for the prosecution of this claim against the government

(Objected to on the ground that the understanding must be found in the paper, if anywhere.)

A. There was none to my recollection, for the reason that we believed we should be able to effect a settlement with the Postmaster General, immediately after the execution of these papers, without any expense or cost to any one, and further that Mr. John I. Weed and W. Penn Clark, myself, Mr. Norton, went immediately after the execution of this paper to Postmaster-General Cresswell, for that purpose—for the purpose of settlement—and informed him (Creswell) that all differences between the owners of said patent were amicably settled, and that Mr. Norton and myself, as trustee, were the only owners of interests in this patent, and had full power to settle the same with the government; Mr. Cresswell solicited from us a proposition for settlement, which was made, considered by him, and rejected—that appeared to be the end of the controversy on the subject with the Postmaster-General.

(Defendant's counsel objects to all the answer after the word "recollection" in the first line, on the ground that it is irresponsive to the question.)

89. Q. Was the provision in the contract for the payment of the $20,000 intended to embrace and cover the moneys which Mr. Shavor and Corse or Eddy & Co. had advanced to Mr. Norton, in the business of procuring and prosecuting claims for patents?

1535 (Objected to on the ground that the intention must be found in the instrument.)

A. It was intended to cover the claim of Charles Eddy & Co.

90. Q. I understood you to say that Shavor and Corse, instead of advancing their own money to Norton, had advanced the moneys of Charles Eddy & Co., which you found out upon the dissolution of the firm; am I correct?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. That was correct.

91. Q. These moneys were charged to Mr. Norton, were they, on the books of Charles Eddy & Co.?

(Objected to, on the ground that the contents of a written document cannot be brought out in this way, and on the ground that it is immaterial.)

A. They were.

92. Q. You stated, if I understood you, that Shavor and Corse, when this discovery was made by you, assigned to you one-third of the patent of 1863; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

93. Q. When Mr. Shavor and Mr. Corse made this assignment to you, they retained, as you understood it—did they—one-sixth of the patent for themselves?

A. I didn't understand any such thing.

94. Q. How much of the patent did you understand them to retain for themselves at that time?

A. Two thirds.

95. Q. Can you state whether or not you were in Washington in October, 1870?

A. I don't remember.

96. Q. Can you remember whether you were there at any time in 1870?

A. I don't now remember.

1536 97. Q. When was the firm of Charles Eddy & Co. dissolved?

A. I think the papers of dissolution were finally executed in March, but it was dissolved, as to all intents and purposes, in January, 1869.

(Witness states he wants to correct the answer, so as to have it appear that the assignment from Norton to him was recorded October 25th, 1869, instead of October 23, 1869.)

CHARLES EDDY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 1st day of February, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

FRIDAY MORNING, February 1*st*, 1878.

Same counsel present.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, called as a witness on the part of the defendant, and, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is Christopher C. Campbell; age, 43 years; residence, East Chatham, N. Y., and am station agent on Boston and Albany railroad.

2. Q. Are you the complainant in this case?

A. I am.

3. Q. When did you first become interested in the so-called Norton post-office stamp?

A. I think the assignment from Miss Ingalls to me was executed January 2d, 1877; I had no legal interest that I know of previous to that.

4. Q. Had you any interest previous to that?

1537 A. I had an interest previous to that, so far as I had arranged with her for an interest in the stamp, patented to Mr. Norton, and afterwards assigned to me, as stated in my last previous answer.

5. Q. When was this arrangement you speak of made?

A. Some time in the fall previous.

6. Q. Did you swear to the bill of complaint herein?

A. I did.

7. Q. Was this arrangement with Miss Ingalls that you have spoken of, in the fall of 1876, oral or in writing?

A. Oral.

8. Q. State what the arrangement was.

(Objected to as immaterial, and the arrangement was afterwards reduced to writing.)

A. The arrangement will appear in the original assignment from Miss Ingalls to me; I cannot give the exact language in regard to it.

9. Q. Was there anything in the arrangement which does not appear in the assignment of January 2nd?

A. I think not.

10. Q. Did you pay Miss Ingalls any money for assigning her interest to you?

A. I did; through her agent, Mr. Norton.

11. Q. When?

A. After the assignment was executed.

12. Q. Did you pay her anything, except after the execution of the assignment, and except through Mr. Norton?

A. I have not—only as called for by the assignment and through Mr. Norton, as her agent.

13. Q. Did you pay her anything at all before the assignment was made, or at the time of the making of it?

A. I think I have answered that question.

14. Q. Please answer it again, if you have.

A. I did not pay her anything previous to that.

15. Q. Have you paid her anything personally since?

1538 A. I have not.

16. Q. When did you pay anything to Mr. Norton for her?

A. I have paid him at different times—different dates—from that time to the present—the dates of which I do not remember without reference to memoranda.

17. Q. Mr. Norton is your solicitor in this case?

A. He is.

18. Q. Did Miss Ingalls ever authorize you to pay moneys to Mr. Norton for her.

A. She did.

19. Q. When?

A. At the time the assignment was made.

20. Q. Was the authority oral or in writing?

A. Oral.

21. Q. State what Miss Ingalls said at that time.

A. I am not able to state the exact language from memory.

22. Q. State as nearly as you can.

A. As near as I can, Mr. Norton was to be her agent, and whatever money was paid according to the assignment I was to pay to him; I don't remember anything else.

23. Q. Was the money referred to, money for expenses in prosecuting your attempts to get compensation for the stamp, or was it money to be obtained from the government or otherwise as compensation, or both?

A. The money I was to pay was to be for expenses, and not money to be received as compensation; I would add, that such moneys as were received for compensation, were to be receipted for by Miss Ingalls and myself, as stated in the original assignment from Miss Ingalls to me.

24. Q. Have you paid any other money except for expenses?

A. Only as stated in the assignment, which reads in consideration of so much money paid, the amount of which I do not remember.

25. Q. Have you paid any money except for expenses?

1539 A. I have.

26. Q. When and to whom?

A. At different times—I can't state the dates from memory—to Mr. Norton, her agent.

27. Q. What did you pay money except for expenses for?

A. For an interest in the patent.

28. Q. How much did you pay her?

A. Can't state the amount now, not having any memoranda of it with me.

29. Q. Were the sums that have been paid agreed to be paid by the assignment?

A. They were not specified in the assignment.

30. Q. Were you under any obligation to pay them?

A. No written obligation.

31. Q. Under an oral?

A. No.

32. Q. Why did you pay them?

A. I paid them at the request of Mr. Norton, her agent.

33. Q. Are you accustomed to pay money to any one who asks you for it?

A. Under certain circumstances.

34. Q. What were the circumstances in this case that induced you to pay those sums?

A. I don't remember the circumstances at this time.

35. Q. What is your best recollection?

A. My recollections are that Mr. Norton requested it for her; in the course of conversation with him I became satisfied to pay the money as requested by him.

36. Q. What satisfied you?

A. The conversations with Mr. Norton.

37. Q. Do you, or did you, recognize any right or claim on the part of Miss Ingalls or Mr. Norton to obtain sums of money other than for expenses in this matter?

1540 A. I did not consider myself bound to pay them—bound by any writing, any further than we arranged at the time it was paid; that is to say, had I not been willing to pay it at the time, they could not have collected it.

38. Q. Did you ever promise to pay these sums?

A. I did not.

Adjourned to February 1st, at 2 p. m.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present.

39. Q. Were you under any agreement with any person aside from Miss Ingalls and Norton to pay these sums?

A. No.

40. Q. Have you at any time been a party to any agreement in relation to this stamp matter, other than the assignment which you rely on in the bill of complaint, and other than the arrangement which you say you had with Miss Ingalls in the fall of 1876?

A. I have.

41. Q. With whom?

A. With E. W. Ely, R. C. Clark.

42. With any other person?

A. Yes; with Austin Bartlett and F. J. Childs.

43. Q. Any other person?

A. Those are all.
44. Q. Where do those gentlemen reside?
A. In Chester, Mass., but Bartlett lives in Becket, Mass.
45. Q. Was there more than one agreement with these people?
A. There was.
46. Q. How many?
A. Three; one with Ely and Clark, and one each with Bartlett and Childs.
1541 47. Q. Are these agreements all that you have been a party to in this stamp matter?
A. There is an agreement from Clark to C. W. Merrifield, and I think my name is to it—am not positive, but think it is.
48. Q. Where does Mr. Merrifield reside?
A. He lives in Becket, Berkshire Co., Mass.
49. Q. Are those all the agreements?
A. Those are all I remember of.
50. Q. Which was the first in the order of time?
A. As I have stated them.
51. Q. That with Ely and Clark?
A. Yes.
52. Q. When was that made?
A. I think in the last of December, 1876—some time in December.
53. Q. Was that after the arrangement you had with Miss Ingalls?
A. It was.
54. Q. Did you have any arrangement or understanding with Ely and Clark before you entered into that with Miss Ingalls or at the time thereof?
A. I did not.
55. Q. Was the agreement with Ely and Clark oral or in writing?
A. In writing.
56. Q. Who drew up the agreement?
A. Mr. Norton, I think.
57. Q. Where is the agreement?
A. I do not know.
58. Q. Where was it the last you knew of it?
A. I placed it in the mail the last I knew of it, directed to E. W. Ely.
59. Q. When?
A. I can't state the time; don't remember.
60. Q. About when?
A. It might have been the first of January, 1877; it might not have been till the last.
61. Q. Are you sure it was as long ago as January, 1877?
A. I wouldn't swear positive.
1542 62. Q. Are you sure it was six months ago?
A. To the best of my recollection it was longer ago than that.
63. Q. Have you seen it since you mailed it to Mr. Ely at that time?
A. I have no recollection of seeing it since.
64. Q. To what place was it addressed when put in the mail?
A. Chester, Massachusetts.
65. Q. Where is Mr. Ely now?
A. I couldn't tell you where he is now.
66. Q. Where was he the last you knew of him?
A. I saw him at Chester the last I knew of him—the last time I saw him.

67. Q. Were there three originals of this agreement made—one for each of the parties.

A. Not to my knowledge—no more than one.

68. Q. Is this agreement under your control; could you get it if you sent for it?

A. I don't think I could; I don't see why I should; it is not under my control.

69. Q. You were a party to it, were you not?

A. I was.

70. Q. Why do you think you could not obtain it if you were to send for it?

A. It occurred to me in my last answer that they wouldn't like to part with it or let it go out of their possession.

71. Q. Not into your possession simply?

A. That was what I wished to be understood in my last answer.

72. Q. What reason have you for thinking that they would not give you possession of it, when you are a party as much as they are?

(Complainant's counsel objects to any further continuance of this examination, on the ground that it is encumbering the record with frivolous and immaterial matters.)

A. For the reason that Mr. Ely is very peculiar in those things—
1543 he keeps his papers close; and from business transactions I have previously had with him.

73. Q. Have you sent for this agreement since you were subpœnaed in this case?

A. I have not.

74. Q. State what that agreement was.

A. In consideration of certain moneys paid to me by said Ely and Clark, they were to have a certain proportion of the recovery.

75. Q. What proportion?

A. One-twelfth.

76. Q. Each?

A. Each.

77. Q. What was to be done with the rest?

A. The balance was to remain in my hands.

78. Q. What to be done with it by you?

A. By my assignment from Miss Ingalls I am to have one-third of the recovery; the balance is to be received by Miss Ingalls by receipting for the same in my presence.

79. Q. This was before the assignment, was it?

A. This was the assignment from Miss Ingalls.

80. Q. Was the arrangement with Ely and Clark before the assignment from Miss Ingalls?

A. It was.

81. Q. By the arrangement you were under with Miss Ingalls at the time of the agreement with Ely and Clark, were you to have one-third of the recovery?

A. Previous to my making the arrangements with Ely and Clark I was to have one-third of the recovery, by agreement with Miss Ingalls.

82. Q. Was there any provision as to what was to be done by you with the moneys advanced by Ely and Clark?

A. There was; they were to be used in paying expenses.

83. Q. According to your own discretion?

A. Yes, by counseling with them.

84. Q. Is that all you remember as to the provisions of that agreement?

1544 A. That's all I remember.

85. Q. When was the next agreement made?

A. I think it was made in June, 1877.

86. Q. Who were the parties to it?

A. Bartlett and myself.

87. Q. What was that agreement?

A. It was similar to the one with Ely and Clark.

88. Q. In all respects?

A. Yes, with the exception of the first consideration.

89. Q. How did that differ—in amount only?

A. In amount only.

90. Q. Was Bartlett to have one-twelfth?

A. He was.

91. Q. Is that all you remember about that agreement?

A. That's all.

92. Q. Who drew it up?

A. I think I did.

93. Q. Who were the parties to the next agreement, and when was it made?

A. F. J. Childs and myself; it was made, I think, in the fore part of July, 1877.

94. Q. What was that agreement?

A. The same as Bartlett's.

94a. Q. In all respects?

A. I think it was.

95. Q. Conveying to Childs one twelfth of the recovery?

A. Yes.

96. Q. Is that all you remember about that agreement?

A. That's all.

97. Q. What interest have you yourself now in the recovery?

A. I have a one-twelfth interest.

98. Q. How do you make that out, you having already conveyed four twelfths?

A. I had an arrangement with Miss Ingalls whereby I was to receive one-twelfth more than my one-third previously assigned.

1545 99. Q. When was that made?

A. It was made a short time previous to the agreement with Childs—I think in June, 1877.

100. Q. Where is that agreement?

A. I do not know where it is now, but I suppose it to be in the hands of my solicitor, Mr. Norton.

101. Q. Was it there the last you knew of it?

A. Yes.

101a. Q. Have you asked him to produce it since you were subpœnaed?

A. I had a conversation with him in regard to it.

102. Q. I ask you to produce it.

A. I cannot produce it without the consent of my counsel.

103. Q. Where are the other agreements—those with Bartlett and Childs?

A. I don't know—I suppose them to be in possession of the parties named.

104. Q. Did Mr. Norton tell you to object to producing the agreement with Miss Ingalls?

A. Mr. Norton said he would produce it at the proper time.

105. Q. Did he tell you to decline to produce it when I asked for it?

A. He did.

106. Q. When was the agreement with Merrifield made?

A. About November 1st, 1877.

107. Q. Who are parties to that?

A. Merrifield and Clark—and I think myself, as I have stated before.

108. Q. What was that agreement?

A. An agreement whereby Merrifield was to have one-half of Clark's one-twelfth.

109. Q. Is that all?

A. Merrifield was under the same obligation to Clark that Clark was to me.

110. Q. Have you ever conveyed any part of your title to the patent to anybody since you received it?

A. I have not.

1546 111. Q. Has anybody conveyed any other interest in the patent to you since you first had anything to do with it?

A. Not by assignment.

112. Q. In any way?

A. I have an agreement with Miss Ingalls for the one-twelfth I now hold.

113. Q. Any other with any person?

A. No other.

114. Q. Who first began negotiations with you in regard to this stamp matter?

A. Mr. Norton.

115. Q. When?

A. In the fall of 1876.

116. Q. Did you have an examination of the title made?

A. I got the records of the Patent Office in regard to the title.

117. Q. Did you discover the assignment to Charles Eddy, as trustee for himself, Shavor and Corse, in 1869?

A. I think there was one assignment that mentioned Charles Eddy, but what it related to I couldn't say at this time—whether it was 1869 or not I couldn't say.

118. Q. Did you discover any re-assignment from Eddy, or any assignment from him to Miss Ingalls?

A. I don't remember that I did.

119. Q. Why did you go into this thing when the title was apparently defective?

A. I wrote to the Commissioner of Patents to know if there were any assignments of the Norton patent; he answered that there were five—I think four or five, I am not positive; I then wrote to him for copies of those assignments, which he sent me; I took those copies to Mr. Norton for his explanation, he being my counsel and solicitor in another case; he explained it to me, that is, the title, to my entire satisfaction, consequently I made the arrangement as heretofore stated.

120. Q. Is Mr. Norton paid anything for his professional services in this case?

1547 A. Not by me, nor by any one I know of.

121. Q. Have you any arrangement with him to pay him anything at any time?

A. I have not.

122. Q. Is there any arrangement or agreement in existence, to your knowledge, by which he is to receive any part of any sum that may be recovered in this matter?

A. None that I know of.

123. Q. Where is the original assignment by Miss Ingalls to you?

A. I do not know where it is now—I suppose it to be in Mr. Norton's possession; it was sent to New York by me to his address some two months ago.

124. Q. Can you produce it?

A. With the advice and consent of my counsel.

(Witness is asked to produce assignment.)

(Counsel for complainant produces the assignment for inspection and use of the counsel for the defendant, but not to be made an exhibit in this deposition; but if required it will be produced, on the hearing of this case, for the use of the court.

Defendant's counsel states that if he takes the document it must be without any conditions, so that if he thinks proper he shall consider himself at liberty to offer the instrument in evidence, and have it attached to the deposition of the witness as an exhibit, and wishes to be informed whether it is understood thoroughly that he will do with it as he thinks best.

Counsel for complainant consents that the witness may be examined with reference to the paper, but reserves the right to consent as to whether it shall be an exhibit or not, after the evidence is given.)

1548 125. Q Please produce the assignment, understanding that I shall offer it in evidence if I think fit.

A. Witness says the answer is now here.

126. Q. Will you do as I request?

A. I cannot do so any further than I have.

127. Q. Why?

A. I am advised not to by my counsel.

128. Q. How far have you produced it?

A. By requesting counsel to bring it into court.

129. Q. Where is the original of the assignment which, in your bill of complaint, is alleged to have been made on or about the 20th of October, 1869, from Marcus P. Norton to Helen M. Ingalls?

A. I do not know.

130. Q. Did you ever see it?

A. I think I have.

131. Q. When and where did you last see it?

A. At the Hubbel House in Canaan, New York, about two months ago.

132. Q. Since you were subpœnaed have you endeavored to obtain it?

A. I have not.

133. Q. Why?

A. It was in the possession of Mr. Norton, and out of my control.

134. Q. Mr. Norton is your solicitor, is he not?

A. Yes.

135. Q. Does he give any reason for not producing papers that relate to the case?

A. He has not objected to producing papers, but said he would at the proper time.

136. Q. Does he give any reason for not putting you in possession of the papers, so that you can produce them when I call for them?

A. No more than that he would do it when he thought proper.

137. Q. Will you now use your best endeavors to obtain possession of this paper, so that you can produce it?

A. If there is no objection on the part of my counsel I will do so.

1549 138. Q. Please do so?

139. Q. Have you done so?

A. (Witness to Mr. Norton.) Mr. Norton, do you make any objections to doing so?

140. Q. Have you used your best endeavors to obtain possession of the paper?

A. I think I have.

141. Q. What have your endeavors been?

A. Asking Mr. Norton if he were willing that I should produce it; Mr. Norton says it is not in his possession at present, but that he has sent for it, and expects it in a few days, with other original papers, and then will produce it.

142. Q. Where is the original of the assignment which in your bill of complaint is stated to have been make on the 23d day of February, 1864, by Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse to Marcus P. Norton.

A. I suppose it is in the hands of Mr. Norton.

(Counsel for complainant states that he has that assignment in his possession, but that it will not be produced until he has had an opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Corse as to what he has said about it—then it will be produced.

Defendant's counsel gives notice that he desires to examine Mr. Corse in regard to that original on direct examination, and generally, that it may be put in evidence, so that other witnesses may be called in order to testify as to its genuineness.)

143. Q. Is it under your control?

A. It is not.

144. Q. It is in the possession and under the control of your counsel, is it?

A. It is.

145. Do they decline to give it to you, so that you can produce it when I ask for it?

A. They have done so.

1550 146. Q. Do you decline to produce it?

A. I do not.

By Mr. CLARKE: Please produce it.

(Instrument produced by witness.)

147. Q. When did you first see this document?

A. I think it was in the fall of 1876.

148. Q. Do you produce this as the original assignment from Shavor, and Corse to Norton?

A. I do.

(Instrument offered in evidence, and marked Deft's Ex., No. 126 (Campbell). I. B., Ex'r. Feb, 1st, 1878.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

149. Q. I understand that these agreements with other persons to which you referred were personal obligations of yours to pay the money when you received it, and it was in no way to affect your title to the patent; is that so?

A. That is so.

150. Q. State about how much money you have advanced, or paid out, under the assignment from Miss Ingalls, up to this time.

A. About $5,000.

151. Did you take the title to the patent, mentioned in the assignment from Miss Ingall's to you, upon the faith of the record title that was sent to you from the Patent Office?

A. I did.

152. Q. Referring to what you said about your agreement with Miss Ingalls, as to an additional one-twelfth interest in the patent, do you wish to make an additional statement as to the whereabouts of that agreement at this time, or in any way about it?

A. I wish to correct my statement in regard to that answer in 1551 this respect by stating that the agreement for the additional one-twelfth was made by Miss Ingalls to Merrifield and Clark.

153. Q. That would leave you the right to one-twelfth of the proceeds, under the original assignment, would it?

A. It would.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL.

Subscribed to and sworn before me this first day of February, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned to Feb. 1st, at 7 o'c. p. m.

7 o'c. p. m., Feb. 1.—Met pursuant to adjournment; same counsel present.

Adjourned to Feb. 4th, 1878, at 9.30 o'c. a. m.

FEBRUARY 5TH, 1878—10.30 a. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment; same counsel present.

Miss HELEN M. INGALLS, called as a witness for the defendant, and being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Helen M. Ingalls; reside at Canaan, N. Y.; age 36 years; have no occupation.

2. Q. What relation, if any, are you to Mr. Norton, the complainant's solicitor here?

1552 A. His sister-in-law.

3. Q. Are you the person who assigned to the complainant in this action, Christopher C. Campbell, on or about the 2d day of January, 1877, the patent granted to Marcus P. Norton, in 1863, for an improvement in post-office stamps, and certain reissues of said patent?

A. I am.

4. Q. What interest, if any, if you know, has Allen C. Smith, of East Chatham, in the stamp matter?

A. I know nothing of it.

5. Q. Has any agreement been made with any person providing that under any conditions whatever they shall receive any portion of any sums of money that may be recovered in the stamp matter?

A. The agreement, I presume, is set forth in the assignment.

6. Q. Have there been any other agreements made except what appear in the assignment?

A. I know of no other.

7. Q. Do you know anything about an agreement made by Mr. Campbell with a person named Ely, whereby Mr. Ely is to receive $\frac{1}{12}$th of what sums may be recovered?

A. I do not.

8. Q. Do you know anything about such an agreement made by Mr. Campbell with a person named Clark?

A. I do not.

9. Q. With a person named Bartlett?

A. I do not.

10. Q. With a person named Child or Childs?

A. I do not.

11. Q. With a person named Merrifield?

A. I think not.

12. Q. Do you recollect what interest Mr. Campbell was to have by the assignment?

A. I can't think just now.

13. Q. Just look at the bill of complaint, and see if your recollection is refreshed.

A. (Witness looking at complaint.) I presume that is right; one third.

1553 14. Q. Have you at any time, since the assignment, made any additional agreement with Mr. Campbell, by which he is to receive an additional one-twelfth, or something of that sort, of whatever may be recovered?

A. There is an agreement, something of that kind.

15. Q. Is it oral or in writing?

A. I think it is in writing.

16. Q. Where is it?

A. I don't know just where it is.

17. Q. Where was it the last you knew?

A. I think it must have been put with other papers after it was made.

18. Q. Where?

A. I think with my own papers.

19. Q. In what place?

A. I don't know just where they are.

20. Q. Where would you look for them, if you wanted to find them?

A. I should look where I thought they might possibly be—among other papers.

21. Q. Please tell me where that agreement is, to the best of your knowledge.

A. I can't tell exactly where it is; I am sure I don't know.

22. Q. Please tell where it was the last you knew of it.

A. I haven't very good recollection about it.

23. Q. You know there was such an agreement, do you not?

A. I think there was.

24. Q. Now, where was it the last you knew of it?

A. I don't recollect whether the arrangement was made in New York or Canaan; wherever it was made it was there I last saw it.

25. Q. Who took possession of it then?

A. I think I must have done so.

26. Q. What did you do with it?

A. I probably put it with other papers.

27. Q. Have you made any search for it since you were subpoenaed?

1554 A. I looked for all papers connected with this case.

28. Q. Do you mean that you looked for this agreement?

A. Not for this one in particular, but for all papers.

29. Q. Did you endeavor to find this one?

A. I looked for all that had anything to do with the case; every one.

30. Q. What search did you make for this agreement?

A. I looked where I kept all papers.

31. Q. Had you any reason to suppose that you would find this one in the place you looked?

A. I didn't think of that one paper specially.

32. Q. Did you find this one?
A. I think not.
33. Q. Is there any other place than where you looked that this paper would be likely to be?
A. It is possible Mr. Campbell may have had it.
34. Q. Why didn't you ask Mr. Campbell for it?
A. It didn't occur to me to do so.
35. Q. Do you think he has?
A. I haven't thought about it since; I don't know who has it.
36. Q. Did Mr. Norton ever have it, to your knowledge?
A. I don't remember.
37. Q. Do you know Allen C. Smith, of East Chatham?
A. I don't think I have ever met him.
38. Q. Do you knew whether or not there is such a person?
A. I have reason to suppose there is.
39. Q. Did you ever directly or indirectly have any transaction with him in regard to the stamp matter?
A. I don't remember of any arrangement with him.
40. Q. Did you ever sign any paper in regard to the stamp matter to which he was or was intended to be a party in any way?
1555 A. I don't remember anything of the kind.
41. Q. What is your best recollection, that you did or did not?
A. I don't think I did.
42. Q. Did you with any person by the name of Smith?
A. I think not.
43. Q. Did Mr. Norton, to your knowledge, ever have any transactions with Smith in regard to the stamp matter?
A. I don't know of any.
44. Q. When did you first become personally interested in the stamp matter?
A. I don't remember just when—I have always been interested in it; I don't understand the question exactly.
45. Q. In what way have you always been interested in it?
A. In the same way that we would be interested in any business.
46. Q. That your brother-in-law was in, is that the idea?
A. Certainly.
47. Q. In any other way than that?
A. Not before it was my own—before the assignment.
48. Q. What assignment do you refer to?
A. The assignment of 1869.
Q. Was there any assignment before that time?
A. No; not to me.
49. Q. Was there an assignment to you in 1869?
A. There was.
50. Q. Do you remember the date?
A. I think it was the 20th of October; I could refer to the assignment for the date.
51. Q. Have you any other way of remembering except by the assignment?
A. I can't think of any other way—trust my memory with anything.
52. Q. Have you the original assignment?
A. I don't think I have it.
1556 53. Q. Where is it, or was it the last you knew?
A. I sent it to New York with other papers; don't remember the date; it was some time in the winter; at least, I gave it to Mr. Campbell.

54. Q. Have you tried to get it since you were subpœnaed?

A. I spoke of all the papers; I supposed Mr. Campbell would bring them all up.

55. Q. Did you speak to Mr. Campbell since you were subpœnaed about the papers?

A. Not to him personally.

56. Q. To whom?

A. I sent him a message saying that the papers would be needed.

57. Q. How long since you saw the original of the '69 assignment?

A. I think it must have been when he took them all last winter.

58. Q. Was it a month ago or two months?

A. It may have been two months ago or more.

59. Q. When you said "last winter" did you mean '77 and '78 or 1876–7?

A. '77 and '78.

60. Q. Do you remember examining this assignment about the time of sending or giving the papers to Mr. Campbell?

A. I hadn't time to examine them—my time was quite limited.

61. Q. What is your best recollection as to whether or not you examined this assignment?

A. I am quite sure I didn't examine any of them—at least read them.

62. Q. How long should you say it was since you examined this '69 assignment?

(Mr. Williams objects to this course of examination, for the reason it is encumbering the record with frivolous and immaterial matter.)

A. I don't recollect just how long.

63. Q. Make a rough estimate of how long—one year or two?

1557 A. It may be three or four years, but I would not trust myself to say how long.

64. Q. Is your memory very distinct in general?

A. Not unless there is some very decided association.

65. Q. Are you sure that the assignment didn't take place on the 23d of October, 1869, and not on the 20th?

A. I don't remember any change.

66. Q. Do you remember that it was dated on the 20th?

A. I have always so understood it from reading it.

67. Q. What did you mean by "change," in your last answer but one?

A. I meant that I couldn't change the testimony as given; I said it was about the 20th.

68. Q. "About the 20th," you mean that it was the 20th?

A. I think it is so stated in the assignment.

69. Q. How is it you remember it is so stated when you don't recollect of having read the assignment in three or four years?

A. In looking over the case the past few weeks, my eyes have fallen on the date so often that I would naturally remember it.

70. Q. What do you mean by "case"—the bill of complaint?

A. The bill of complaint.

71. Q. Is that the only source from which your memory has been refreshed?

A. I have heard the date mentioned.

72. Q. By whom?

A. I have heard it read—can't say more than two or three times read.

73. Q. Who read it?

A. I have read it.

74. Q. Who read it aloud to you?

A. I think I heard Mr. Norton read over the article in the daily papers.

75. Q. Is that the only source from which your memory has been refreshed, aside from the bill?

1558 A. I think it is.

76. Q. Has Mr. Norton made any statement to you in regard to the date of the '69 assignment?

A. I don't think of any.

77. Q. Did he read over the bill to you, or that part of it relating to the '69 assignment?

A. I read that myself.

78. Q. As I understand you, the only way you have refreshed your memory is by reading the bill of complaint and hearing Mr. Norton read the article in the paper?

A. Do you mean just now? I have always understood it to be so.

79. Q. Have you refreshed your memory on the subject in any other way than by the two indicated?

A. Whenever I have occasion to remember a date I refer to the papers; unless it is within two or three days I don't trust to my memory; I don't know of any other way.

80. Q. Won't you please find the part of the amended bill you refer to as refreshing your memory on this point?

(Witness handed printed copy of bill.)

A. (Witness points out the 12th page and 45th folio of amended bill.)

81. Q. Do you recollect whether the bill of complaint states positively that the assignment was made on the 20th of October—either the original or amended bill?

A. I suppose it does.

82. Q. Please look at it and see if it does not state on or about the 20th of October.

A. (Witness looking at the bill.) It does.

83. Q. Will you swear positively that you recollect that the assignment was made on the 20th of October, 1869?

A. Only as I refer to papers; I never trusted my memory with the date.

84. Q. Will you swear positively that it was not made later than the 23d day of October, 1869?

1559 A. I cannot.

85. Q. How did you pay Mr. Norton for assigning to you in 1869?

A. In no particular way.

86. Q. Did you pay him anything?

A. No, sir.

87. Q. Whom did you first assign to after the patent came to your ownership?

A. I think the first assignment was to Secombe.

88. Q. About what time?

A. I think it was about 1870.

89. Q. Is this Secombe W. W. Secombe, of New York City?

A. W. W. Secombe, of New York.

90. Q. How did he pay you for it?

A. By paying expenses, and in other ways.

91. Q. What other ways, please?

A. I think the assignment specifies.

92. Q. In any other ways than those specified in the assignment
A. I think not.
93. Q. When did he reassign to you, if ever—about when?
A. It may be in 1871, if I recollect.
94. Q. Is the reassignment set up in the bill of complaint, do you know?
A. I am not sure.
95. Q. Where is the reassignment?
A. I don't know where it is.
96. Q. What was done with it, the last you knew of it?
A. I don't remember just what.
97. Q. What did you pay Mr. Secombe for reassigning?
A. Nothing.
98. Q. When did you next assign the patent or any interest in it?
A. I think the next was to C. C. Campbell.
99. Q. In January, 1877?
A. It was about time—I refer to the assignment.
1560 100. Q. Between the time of the original assignment to you by Mr. Norton, and your assignment to Mr. Campbell, in January, 1877, did you make any assignment to anybody else but W. W. Secombe?
A. I think not.
101. Q. Have you any doubt about it?
A. I don't remember of any.
102. Q. Would you remember if any had been made?
A. I think I would.
103. Q. The certified copy of the assignment by Mr. Norton to you recites the consideration of one hundred dollars; did you pay Mr. Norton $100 at the time of that assignment?
A. I don't remember that I did.
104. Q. What is your best recollection on the subject?
A. I don't think that I did at that time; I have no recollection of it.
105. Q. Did you give him any other consideration?
A. I don't think of any other.
106. Q. Have you ever assigned any interest to Mr. Norton since the original assignment to you?
A. I think not.
107. Q. Did you ever make any agreement with him as to what should be done with any sums that might be recovered?
A. I think not.
108. Q. Did you ever make him any promise on that subject?
A. No, sir, I never have.
109. Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. Norton executed an instrument on or about the 23d of October, 1869, which purported to assign one-third of the patent to Charles Eddy as trustee, for himself, Jacob Shavor, and Albert C. Corse?
A. I do not know.
110. Q. Did you ever know?
A. I don't know of any, at least I can't think of any.
111. Q. Was it at Mr. Norton's request that you assigned to Mr. Secombe?
1561 A. Not at his request, I think.
112. Q. How came you to assign to Mr. Secombe?
A. I think in order to obtain his help in managing the business.
113. Q. Did he come and offer to take the patent?

A. I can't exactly state—I don't remember about the details of it.

114. Q. What did Mr. Norton have to do with that assignment, if anything?

A. He showed how the assignment should be drawn up.

115. Q. Did he advise the assignment?

A. I shouldn't have done anything of the kind without asking his advice.

116. Q. Do you follow his advice on this matter?

A. Not entirely.

117. Q. How about the assignment to Mr. Campbell; was that at Mr. Norton's request?

A. It was by his advice.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

118. Q. Is Mr. Campbell prosecuting this suit with your knowledge and consent?

A. He is.

119. Q. Referring to folio 62, page 16, of the amended bill of complaint, please state what it says as to the date of Mr. Norton's assignment to you?

(Objected to by Mr. Clarke, that it is not proper to refresh the witness' memory by such a document, the correctness of which she isn't shown to know anything about.)

A. It states that the assignment was made on the 20th day of October, 1869.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

120. Q. Do you recollect ever reading that passage in folio 62 that Mr. Williams has referred to?

1562 A. I think I have read it before.

121. Q. Do you recollect doing so?

A. I never read it separately—I have read it, as I have read the whole all through.

122. Q. Did you ever compare that part of the bill with the original assignment by Mr. Norton to you, to see if the statement in the bill was correct?

A. I don't remember—I don't think I have.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

123. Q. Do you remember when you executed your assignment to Secombe, that he gave you an instrument of writing?

A. I presume he did; I don't know.

124. Q. Can you remember whose name or names were inserted in that agreement you made about one-twelfth of the proceeds, after the assignment to Mr. Campbell?

A. I don't remember the names.

Rev. Dr. GEORGE C. BALDWIN, called as a witness for the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

1563 A. George C. Baldwin; I am past 60 years of age; reside Troy, N. Y., and am a preacher of the Gospel.

2. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton, Jacob Shavor, and Albert Corse, and did you know them between 1864 and 1869?

A. I did know them between those times, and I know the survivo now.

3. Q. Do you know whether or not they were in business relation with one another in regard to a patent that was issued to Mr. Norton i 1863 for improvement in Post-Office stamps?

A. I only know what they told me, and what I understood from wha they told me.

4. Q. Did Mr. Norton during that time make any representations to you as to the ownership of the patent?

A. He did.

5. Q. Please state what they were, using Mr. Norton's language if you recollect it, or the substance thereof, if you do not recollect it, and stating as accurately as you can the time and place.

(Objected to as not competent to give Norton's declarations in evidence in this case.)

A. I cannot remember the words; I am distinct in my memory, however, that between 1865 and 1869 I had many conversations with Mr. Norton, both in this city and in Washington, in regard to this matter, and that from all his representations to me I understood distinctly that he was the inventor of this Post-Office stamp, but that he had assigned it to Corse and Shavor, who were my particular friends, and because of that he requested my influence at Washington in order to procure proper remuneration for it.

6. Q. Did he ever say anything to you or claim to you during those times to the effect that Shavor and Corse had reassigned to him?

A. Oh, no!

7. Q. Do you recollect, when he was present, either of them claimed ownership?

1564 A. Not specifically; it was an understood thing, as far as I was concerned, of which I never had a suspicion or doubt.

8. Q. Mention as many circumstances as you can which fix this matter in your recollection.

A. Well, sir, because of that understanding which I had from all three of these parties, such as I have stated, viz, that Mr. Norton was the inventor, but for reasons satisfactory to himself he had assigned it to my particular friends, in whose fortunes I had an interest such as I couldn't have in Mr. Norton's; he, Mr. Norton himself, asked me, on that ground —because they were my particular friends—who, if they obtained this large sum of money, could aid me so efficiently in my work as their pastor, and as a minister of the Gospel, to aid him at Washington in procuring it; in compliance with his request and advice, I went to Washington twice—I am not sure but it was three times, I know it was twice —and there made these identical representations to Schuyler Colfax, who was my cousin, and to John A. Griswold, in the House—in Congress; I did so to apologize to those gentlemen for my interference in a thing of this kind, which was out of my line.

9. Q. You are a doctor of divinity, are you not?

A. I am.

10. Q. If you think of anything further in the matter, state it.

A. I remember this distinctly: that I got the impression from all, that while Mr. Norton had assigned this legally to these gentlemen, still he was to have a share of the proceeds, with reference to which I distinctly remember that he, Mr. Norton, said to me it would make them all three rich.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

11. Q. State, if you know, for what reasons Mr. Norton assigned this patent to Shavor and Corse.

(Objected to as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

1565 A. I have no knowledge at all; never had, to my recollection.

JEREMIAH D. GREEN, called as a witness on the part of the defendant, and being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

2. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is Jeremiah D. Green; my age is 66 years; residence Troy; at present my occupation is solicitor of patents, expert in patent cases and solicitor of claims.

2. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton and Albert C. Corse, and did you know Jacob Shavor before he died?

A. Yes.

3. Q. When did you first become ocquainted with Mr. Norton?

A. I think it was in the year 1857; it might have been somewhat earlier.

1566 4. Q. What was his business then and since?

A. I think he was practicing law, and that he started the publication of some mechanical work about the first time I became acquainted with him, and since that time I have known him as a practicing lawyer and solicitor of patents—I think the largest portion of the time here in Troy.

5. Q. Have you had an opportunity of seeing and inspecting legal documents drawn up by Mr. Norton since you knew him?

A. I have seen a good many of his documents from 1861 or 1862 up to the present time.

6. Q. Can you make any estimate of how many?

A. I could not.

7. Q. Is it a large number?

A. I couldn't say whether it is fifty or a hundred; it might possibly be less, but I should say that I had at least seen fifty.

8. Q. Look at the document which I now produce, and which is marked Deft's Ex., No. 126 (Campbell), and which purports to be an affidavit and reassignment by Shavor and Corse to Marcus P. Norton of a patent for an improvement in post-office stamps, granted to Mr. Norton April 14th, 1863, and assigned by him to Shavor and Corse about the 20th of April, 1863, and state whether you have ever seen any of Mr. Norton's legal documents in which the leaves are fastened together as they are in that exhibit?

A. I have seen some of his documents fastened with metallic fastening; I think I never saw one of his legal documents the leaves of which were all pasted together and fastened with metallic fastening before this.

9. Q. State whether you have ever seen any in which the leaves were pasted together?

A. I think not, with the exception of a document I saw in the Patent Office; a letter was attached by glutine matter to the document which purported to be a caveat.

10. Q. What caveat was that?

1567 A. That was a caveat of Norton's in relation to a printing machine and post office rating and canceling stamp, as near as I now remember.

11. Q. Filed about what time?

A. My impression is it was filed, or purported to be filed, in 1855 or thereabouts; this document was shown to me by the Commissioner of Patents.

12. Q. Do you recollect whether that was one of the documents in regard to which Mr. Norton, when tried in the Patent Office, was found guilty of surreptitiously inserting paper into the files, which did not properly belong there?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as assuming facts of which there is no evidence.)

A. I was so informed, and afterwards saw the endorsement upon the document referred to by the Commissioner; I was not present at the examination by the commission when the examination was had, but was furnished with a printed copy of the report of the commission; such report was furnished me by the Commissioner of Patents; I was requested by the Commissioner to go before this commission and testify, but declined to do so.

(Answer objected to by Mr. Williams, because the evidence is not competent, and because it is irresponsive to the question.)

13. Q. What connection, if any, have you had with Norton, Shavor and Corse in reference to the patent of April 14, 1863, for an improvement in post-office stamps?

A. In the early part of the year 1869, by the request of Shavor and Corse, I examined several patents for improvement in postmarking and canceling hand stamps, and at the request of Mr. Norton I called at his office and obtained, I think, copies of two patents; afterwards, in the spring of that year, I went to Washington to make further examination in relation to such patents, and called on Mr. Norton at his 1568 hotel, and conversed with him in relation to the patent of April 13, 1863, and the reissue thereon granted to Shavor and Corse in August, 1864, after which I returned home, reported to Shavor and Corse substantially the result of my examination, and of the interview with Mr. Norton at the hotel in Washington; after that, during the summer, or early part of the fall of the same year, I returned to Washington for the purpose of seeing the Postmaster-General and others, in relation to the postmarking and canceling stamps used by the government.

14. Q. Did you ever have, prior to 1869, any conversation with Mr. Norton as to the ownership of that patent?

A. Only indirectly; I had a conversation with Mr. Norton in relation to the bill before Congress for compensation for the use of the post-office stamp by the government.

15. Q. About what time was that?

A. I think it was in 1867 or 1868; I won't now be positive.

16. Q. In Washington?

A. In Washington.

17. Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Norton say as to the ownership of the patent?

(Objected to by Mr. Williams, that it is not competent to give Norton's declarations in evidence in this case.)

A. I can't give the exact words, but in substance the bill before Congress was for the relief of Shavor and Corse, and that they, Shavor and Corse, owned the patent; at that time, I think, I had not seen the patent of Norton's or either of them, to examine their contents.

18. Q. Did Mr. Norton ever make to you any other declarations as to ownership?

(Same objection.)

A. I think he did, at the hotel in Washington in the spring of 1569 1869; I think he stated that Shavor and Corse owned the patent by assignment; I now refer to the patent of 1863, and the reissue of August, 1864.

19. Q. Did he ever make any claim to the ownership of the patent himself?

(Same objection.)

A. Not to my knowledge, until I met him in the latter part of the summer or early part of September; I think it was in the latter part of the summer of 1869; he then claimed to own it by a reassignment from Shavor and Corse to him.

20. Q. State how you came to have conenction with the stamp matter, in general terms, and what your connection was.

A. I think in the winter of 1869 I met Mr. Norton in the street and asked him in relation to the bill that had been before Congress, for compensation for the use of the post-marking and canceling-stamp; he informed me that it was not settled, and in the course of the conversation I suggested that I would aid him or them in the bill before Congress for a fair compensation, to come out of any sum or sums that might be obtained; he said I should have a handsome thing if I would aid in the matter before Congress, and invited me to come to his office and examine the patent-, stating that the title was in Shavor and Corse to the patent of 1863; I then called on Mr. Shavor and Mr. Corse to ascertain their relation with Norton in these patents; I visited Mr. Norton's office; he handed me copies of the patent of 1859, 1862, I think, 1863, whether there were three or four patents, I don't now remember; I took these patents and went to Mr. Ransford and Mr. Corse; we had an appointment so that the three met at Mr. Shavor's house, I think; we had a consultation about the matter there; they told me that they would give me a percentage which would well pay me for my trouble, if I would aid or obtain compensation for the use of the post-marking and canceling-stamp, either from Congress or from the 1570 Government or through the Court of Claims; about that time Mr. Norton left for Washington; it looked to me—the case looked to me like a favorable one. I stated to Shavor and Corse that I would take hold of the matter and see what I could do; soon after that I went to Washington, as before stated.

(Answer objected to by Mr. Williams so far as it relates to the declarations of persons named therein.)

21. Q. Did Mr. Shavor ever put you in possession of any letters from Mr. Norton to himself on this matter?

A. Yes, sir; both letters from Norton to Shavor, & to Corse.

22. Q. Have you any of them with you?

A. I have a few of them.

23. Q. Please let me see what you have.

A. I wish to state that these letters I can't part with only temporarily. I will exhibit them, but want them returned as soon as possible.

(Witness hands papers to counsel.)

24. Q. Look at the first of them, which purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Jacob Shavor, dated May 17, 1864, and state in whose handwriting it is, if you know.

A. (Witness examining paper.) I should say that this was Mr. Norton's handwriting; the signature is his, without doubt.

25. Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Norton write?

A. Yes, sir.

26. Q. Is this one of the letters given you by Mr. Shavor?

A. Yes, sir.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex., No. 127 (Green). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

1571 27. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and that purports to be a letter from M. P. Norton to Jacob Shavor, dated June 11, 1866, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) I think it is Mr. Norton's handwriting, Marcus P.'s; the signature is his.

28. Q. Is that one of the letters received from Mr. Shavor?

A. It is one of the letters I received from Mr. Shavor, and it is marked by him; all the letters I received from Mr. Shavor were numbered by him, either in ink or pencil.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 128 (Green), A. & B. I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

29. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and that purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Rev. Dr. Baldwin, dated June 22, 1866, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) This is Norton's handwriting, and signed by him.

30. Q. Where did you get that letter?

A. I got this from Mr. Shavor.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 129 (Green). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

31. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and that purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Dear Shavor, dated January 2, 1867, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) In Mr. Norton's handwriting, and signed by him, Marcus P. Norton.)

32. Q. Is that one received from Mr. Shavor?

A. Yes, sir.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 130 (Green), A & B. I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

1572 33. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and which purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Jacob Shavor, dated April 21, 1867, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness examining paper.) In Mr. Norton's handwriting, and signed by him.

34. Q. It was received from Mr. Shavor?

A. It was.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 131, A B & C (Green). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

Direct examination of witness resumed:

35. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and which purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Jacob Savor, dated June 27, 1868, and state in whose handwriting it is, and how you came by it.

A. (Witness examining paper.) In Mr. Norton's handwriting, and signed by him. I received it from Mr. Shavor.

(Letter offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 132, A B & C (Green). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

36. Q. Look at the paper now produced, and that purports to be a letter from Marcus P. Norton to A. C. Corse, dated March 15, 1869, and state in whose handwriting it is.

A. (Witness exam'ing paper.) It is written by Marcus P. Norton and signed by him. I received it from Mr. Shavor.

(Letter offered in evidence and marked Def't's Ex. No. 133 (Green). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 7, 1878.)

1573 Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

37. Q. When did Mr. Shavor give you these letters you have produced?

A. I can't say whether it was in 1871 or 1872.

38. Q. Have you had them in your possession ever since?

A. Yes, sir; since he gave them to me they have not been out of my possession until now, except a few letters and telegrams that I left for a few days with the Attorney General in the Post-Office Department.

39. Q. Are these letters that you have now produced all that you have received from Mr. Shavor?

A. No, sir.

40. Q. Do you know how the attorney for the defendant obtained the other letters for Mr. Shavor that he has introduced in evidence?

A. I do not know.

41. Q. Are you employed for the defendant in this case?

A. I am not.

42. Q. Are you employed by anybody, or have you an arrangement with anybody to assist in the defense of this case?

A. I think not, sir.

43. Q. Have you not been assisting the United States district attorney in preparing the defense of this case?

A. No, sir; I gave him some points about the matter, voluntarily on my part.

44. Q. Haven't you been in New York City advising with him about the matter?

A. I have been in New York on other business, and a few times called to see him.

45. Q. What was your object in giving information or advice to the district attorney in this suit?

A. Because I thought the parties who brought the suit had not a legitimate title to the patent on which the suit was brought.

1574 46. Q. Who do you think has the legitimate title?

A. I think the legitimate title is in Shavor and Corse.

47. Q. Have you had any consultations with Shavor and Corse since this suit was commenced?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

48. Q. You spoke of a consultation with Shavor, Corse, and Ransford, in the winter of 1869; do you mean the winter of 1868–9, or 1869–70?

A. It was in the year 1869, and after January, or it might have been in the latter part of January; my impression now is it was in February or March, but it was in one of those three months.

49. Q. Look at that paper which purports to be an assignment from Helen Ingalls to Christopher C. Campbell, in the handwriting of Marcus P. Norton, and state if the papers in that instrument are not pasted together, and fastened with metallic fastenings?

A. (Witness examining paper.) This paper, written by Mr. Norton—I should judge his handwriting—is fastened together with metallic fastenings; the certificate of W. H. Doolittle, acting commissioner, is fastened to a piece of paper adjoining the first sheet by glutinous matter; the leaves or sheets composing the instrument appear to be held together only by the metallic fastenings, as I am enabled to pass a knife between each sheet, and between the metallic fastenings.

50. Q. Will you swear that the sheets or half sheets composing this assignment are not pasted together, or that there is no paste between them at the top?

A. The outside part of a sheet seems to be turned over the top, and the metallic fastenings passed through that and the balance of the sheets or parts of sheets; to this back sheet, the edge of which is turned over, is fastened the certificate by some glutinous matter; I am able to run my knife blade without cutting paper, or apparently any glu-1575 tinous matter, between each of the sheets and the metallic fastenings, and by prying it by the knife blade between the sheets forming the instrument I do not discover the existence of glutinous matter adhering the sheets together; if there is any glutinous matter it must be in close proximity to the metallic fastenings, except where I have before stated.

51. Q. You say you have seen at least fifty documents made by Mr. Norton; did you always notice when you saw a document of his how it was fastened together?

A. Probably not always, sir; the usual practice has been metallic fastening or tape.

52. Q. If you have not always observed the fastening of the papers, how can you swear that you have never seen one, with a single exception, that was pasted together?

A. Because I think it a very unusual thing to paste sheets of paper together in an instrument, and I would be very likely to notice an instrument done up or put together in that way.

53. Q. Could you tell whether the assignment to Campbell was pasted or not if you had not tried it with your knife?

A. I think I could; from the fact that if it was pasted together, it would be much stiffer than this, as, where the sheets come together at the top.

54. Q. You have not been accustomed, have you, to try the papers of Mr. Norton in that way to see if they were pasted together or not?

A. I think I never did until now, but I will say that I think I have quite a number of documents in the Shavor papers, assignments and other documents, and my impression is that none of them are fastened together by glutine; there may be some with the outside wrapper attached by glutine, but I am not positive as to that even.

55. Q. Have you not noticed in the papers made by Mr. Norton that it is his general custom, where there are several sheets, to turn the top of the outside sheet or covering over the tops of the other 1576 sheets, and fasten it on the inside, as you say the assignment to Campbell is fastened?

A. I don't remember now of seeing any other document that was fastened or put together precisely in the manner that is, to wit, pasting a certificate over the fastening at the head of an instrument; I will say that I think there are some of his instruments having cover or cover-sheet turned over at the top and fastened by metallic fastenings or tape; I think I have three or four—perhaps five—of that character among the Shavor papers, but I cannot say what number.

56. Q. Isn't that the way the Campbell assignment is made?

A. (Witness looking at paper.) It is, with the exception of the certificate pasted on the top; and also that this is white, and those I have are covered with buff or something of that color paper.

57. Q. How did you ascertain that the sheets of Def't's Ex. No. 126 were basted together?

A. By the stiffness of the top and the ridge or crease, that a hard substance would make when turned over; I will add, that if it is possible I am mistaken, if you will show me the exhibit I will correct myself.

58. Q. Is not the instrument made with a buff cover, the top of which is turned over the ends of the sheets, where they are fastened together and fastened on the inside?

A. I think it is.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

59. Q. Just look at Def't's Ex. No. 126, and state whether you are quite accurate in stating that the buff cover is itself folded over, or if you are sure on that point?

A. (Witness looking at paper.) I find the outside a separate piece of paper attached to the back of the cover, and turned over in front, each side fastened with glutine and the metallic fastenings; the cover 1577 or buff paper does not appear to extend up and turn over; if it does, it is covered by the separate piece which laps over the whole.

JOHN T. LAMPORT, called as a witness on the part of the defendant, and, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is John T. Lamport; I am 68 years of age; I reside in the city of Troy, N. Y., and am a lawyer by occupation and practice.

2. Q: Are you a commissioner for the circuit court of the United States for this district?

A. I am, for the northern district of New York.

3. Q. And have been so how long?

A. About 15 years.

4. Q. Have you during your professional life, and as commissioner, had an opportunity of inspecting a large number of legal documents?

A. I have, quite a large number; I was admitted to practice in the courts of this * in 1831.

1578 5. Q. Can you state what the custom is when legal documents consist of several sheets, as to spreading matter out, so that signatures shall not be separated by a break in the sheets?

A. If I understand the question correctly, so far as my knowledge extends, the practice is to have some portion of the instrument to be signed, or executed, on the same sheet as that on which the signatures are to be affixed.

6. Q. Look at the document which I now produce, and which is def't's Ex. No. 126 (Campbell), and which purports to be a reassignment of a patent by Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse to Marcus P. Norton, and describe how the sheets are fastened together.

A. (Witness examining document.) The sheets which were originally separate are now fastened together by means of metallic devices, in an unusually permanent and secure manner.

7. Q. Are they not fastened also by paste, or something of that sort?

A. I am unable to state from my examination whether there is paste used or not; there is, though, on fastening the wrapper; I would add, though, that upon a further and closer examination there is paste or mucilage used in fastening the sheets together.

8. Q. Is there not also an extra strip of paper pasted over the top of the instrument in addition to the cover?

A. (Witness examining paper) There is an additional strip of paper or cap pasted over the tops of the sheets forming the instrument.

9. Q. How many metallic devices for fastening are there?

A. (Witness examining them.) There are five in sight, calling the central one.

10. Q. Did you ever see a legal instrument before this fastened in the manner that that one is?

A. I don't remember that I ever have so thoroughly fastened.

11. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton, the complainant's solicitor here?

1579 A. I do.

12. Q. Have you had an opportunity of observing how documents drawn by him have been fastened? and, if so, state what opportunities you have had.

A. I have had to a considerable extent opportunities of knowing how papers prepared by him have been fastened; I have occupied an office in the same building with him for several years, and was engaged in many legal proceedings in which he was interested, either personally or as counsel, and have seen many instruments prepared by him or under his supervision.

13. Q. State whether the method of fastening Ex. No. 126 coincides with Mr. Norton's customary method of fastening legal documents.

A. I have no very definite idea of any peculiar method he had of fastening his papers; I remember well that documents from his office were nicely got up and well secured as a general thing.

* Word "State" erased in red in original.

14. Q. You do not, however, as I understand, remember any of his documents that were fastened in the manner that this is?

A. I think I do remember of other documents that were prepared by him, that were fastened by the same kind of devices that this is; but I do not remember of any that were so securely fastened as this appears to be.

15. Q. Do you remember of any in which the sheets were fastened both by paste and metallic devices?

A. I do not now remember of any such instrument, and yet I may have seen some; I cannot now call to mind any instrument that was so fastened, and yet I may have seen such.

16. Q. Look at the signature "John T. Lamport" on the 11th page of that exhibit, and state whether that is your signature?

A. (Witness examining it.) I have no doubt of it at all, sir; it is.

17. Q. Have you any recollection that the matter which pre-
1580 cedes the 11th page in that exhibit was the matter that was subscribed and sworn to before you on the 23d of February, 1864?

(Objected to by Mr. Williams, that it is not competent for the witness to give any evidence tending to contradict his certificate, or impeach his act as commissioner, in taking the acknowledgment to the instrument.)

A. I have no recollection upon the subject now.

18. Q. Do you recollect witnessing the execution of that instrument, considered as a deed, and not as a' affidavit; that is, do you recollect of either seeing Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse sign, seal and deliver the instrument, or acknowledge their signatures and their seals, and of seeing them deliver the instrument as a deed?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no other recollection on that subject than that derived from my signature on the instrument as the officer I then was and am still.

19. Q. Does that signature indicate anything to your mind as to the execution of the instrument considered as a deed?

A. It does not.

20. Q. Does it indicate anything more to you than that some affidavit was taken on the day named?

A. It does not indicate anything other than that at present. (Witness examining paper.) I observe that seals are appended to the signatures to the instrument, which if they were then upon the instrument must have indicated to my mind that the instrument was more than simply an affidavit, for the reason that it was exceedingly unusual, if I ever saw seals attached to signatures to an affidavit merely.

21. Q. You do not remember whether the seals were then attached?

A. I do not; don't know whether they were or not.

1581 22. Q. If that instrument had been acknowledged by the assignors before you as a deed, state what the form of your certificate would have been.

A. It would have embodied the statement that the parties executing the paper were severally known to me, or identified to my satisfaction to be the persons described in and who executed the instrument, and that they also acknowledged before me the execution of the same; that would be substantially the form, if the persons appeared before me; if the execution was proven by a subscribing witness the form would vary.

23. Q. That being so, state whether you have any reason to suppose that that instrument was ever acknowledged by Shavor and Corse as a deed before you?

A. It may have been so executed before me as a deed, and I may have signed the instrument, as I did, at the instance of Mr. Norton, if he was present, knowing him to be a lawyer and more familiar with the execution of papers relating to patents than I then was or now am—what I mean by that is, that I should have deferred to him as a man knowing more about his own business than I did.

24. Q. Barring possibilities, have you any reason to suppose that that instrument as a deed was so acknowledged?

A. I have no recollection on the subject.

25. Q. In all your experience, do you recollect of having seen a legal document which was at once an affidavit and a deed of assignment?

A. I do not recollect that I ever did.

26. Q. Is not such a thing so unusual that if you had seen it, knowing it to be such, you would probably remember it?

A. I might not, if it was presented to me by a lawyer; as to probabilities I can hardly state.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

27. Q. On pages 11 and 12 of the instrument referred to there
1582 appears to be a certificate purporting to be signed by you; will you please state whether it is your genuine signature that is appended to it?

A. (Witness examining paper.) It is.

28. Q. On page 13 there appears to be an affidavit, to which your signature is attached; is that also your genuine signature?

A. (Witness examing paper.) It is.

29. Q. Do you remember the circumstances under which this certificate and affidavit were made?

A. I do not now, sir.

30. Q. You cannot recall what was said to you at the time, or who was present when this certificate and affidavit were made, which appear to be dated some years after the instrument was executed, can you?

A. I cannot; I have received no prompting from any one, and it doesn't occur to me now what the circumstances were.

31. Q. Looking at the signatures appended to the instrument in question, their relations to each other, and to the seals which appear at the end of said signatures, would it not be your judgment that the names were written so that the seals could be placed where they are, and that the instrument was signed and sealed at the same time?

(Objected to by Mr. Clarke, that it is incompetent to ask the witness's judgment or opinion on that point.)

A. The signatures of the persons whose names are appended to the instrument are so written and placed on the paper that they were made after the seals were attached, or so uniformly made as to leave space enough to attach the seals; the signatures I am quite sure must have been made to the paper before it was sworn to or certified by me; the seals may then have been attached to it or may not; I cannot say.

32. Q. Suppose a deed to have been made fourteen years ago,
1583 consisting of several sheets of paper, and several years subsequent to its execution a question should be made as to its genuineness, or as to whether or not the sheets then composing the deed were originally parts of it, and the holder should put a cap over the tops of the sheets, or put in any additional fastenings, so as to make the deed perfectly secure, not in any other way interfering with the instrument, would there be anything unusual or extraordinary in that, and have you not known old instruments of writing to be treated in such or a similar way in your practice?

A. I think that the fact of attaching additional securities to the top of the sheets or additional fastenings to the instrument itself, under the circumstances described in the question, would not be regarded as extraordinary or suspicious. I have had occasion several times during my practice to patch up and endeavor to preserve old documents, and in so doing have pasted papers on or otherwise secured them.

33. Q. Referring to the years 1864, 1865, and along there, did Mr. Norton have a large and lucrative practice as a lawyer in this city?

A. Previous to the period spoken of and during those years I think Mr. Norton had a large practice in the United States courts; it was supposed to be a lucrative one. I think he was doing more business in those courts than all the other lawyers in Troy.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

34. Q. When you say that the signatures and the seals to this document are so uniformly made as to leave space enough to attach the seals, do you mean merely that, as matter of fact, they were so made, or that they were so made with design to leave space for the seals?

A. I mean merely to say that they were in fact so made. I know nothing of the design. I don't mean to be understood now as 1584 saying that I know that the seals were not there, but I do mean to say that I have no doubt but that the signatures were there when sworn to before me.

35. Q. Look at the certificate on the 11th and 12th page subscribed by you and state whether you understand that to be anything more than an interpretation in words of what your signature to the jurat of the affidavit legally imports, supposing that what precedes the jurat was attached thereto at the time the oath was taken.

(Same objection as to question 17.)

A. I suppose it does not import anything more; it merely expresses in words what the signature was legally designed to represent.

36. Q. And what the signature legally imports you have explained in your direct examination?

A. I think so; yes.

37. Q. Look at the word "acknowledged," interlined on the 8th line from the bottom on the 11th page, and state whether the interlineation was made by you, and just what idea you attach to the word "acknowledged" in that connection.

(Same objection by Mr. Williams.)

A. (Witness examining paper). The interlineation of the words "or acknowledged" in the place spoken of in the question were interlined by me—are in my handwriting; they either subscribed the affidavits in my presence or they acknowledged that they had subscribed it; that's the idea, I think, conveyed by them by the words "or acknowledged."

38. Q. Look at the word "executed," preceding the interlineation, and state whether it means in that connection anything more than an affidavit had been subscribed and sworn to.

(Same objection as to question 17.)

1585 A. I do not know now what idea I had at the time I signed and swore to the affidavit in which the word "executed" is written; I suppose I must have then thought that it was the acknowledgment of the signatures to an affidavit simply.

39. Q. Do you recollect positively that the circumstances connected with the taking of the affidavit, your certificate of taking which is on page 11, were fresher in your memory in 1870 than they are now?

A. I do not recollect that they were.

40. Q. Is it your custom to, or do you, frequently swear people whom you know to papers which you yourself do not read over?

A. That custom is almost universal with me. I never read them over unless at request of parties.

JOHN T. LAMPORT.

FEBRUARY 9th, 1878—10 o'c. a m.

Met pursuant to adjournment. Same counsel present.

JAMES BOLTON, Jr., called as a witness on the part of the defendant, and, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

By Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is James Bolton, jr.; age, 22 years; reside in Troy, and am a law student.

1586 2. Q. State whether you have examined Def't's Ex., No. 126, (Campbell), with reference to the number of words on each line, and on each page?

A. I have.

3. Q. Have you tabulated the results?

A. I have. I have made a table showing the number of lines on each page, the number of words on each line, and also the average number of words on each page.

4. Q. What is the row of figures running across the top, from 1, 2, 3, up to 13?

A. The number of the pages.

5. Q. What is the column running down the page, on the left-hand side, from 1, 2, 3, up to 29?

A. The number of lines on a page.

6. Q. What are the figures in each of the other perpendicular columns; what do they denote?

A. They denote the number of words on the line of each page, corresponding with the numbers on the top and on the left-hand side of the page. I have, uniformly, when a word was divided, counted each part as one word on the line on which it was written; and also, when the letters U and S occurred, I counted each one a word; also the middle letter of a name.

7. Q. Are the results given in this paper correct?

A. I believe they are.

8. Q. State how many words you found on each page?

A. (Witness examining table.) On the first page, 235; on the second, 239; on the third, 239; on the fourth, 241; on the fifth, 235; on the sixth, 236; on the seventh, 260; on the eighth, 237; on the ninth, 254; on the 10th, 265; on the 11th, 198; on the 12th, 182; and on the thirteenth, 195.

Paper offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Ex. No. 134 (Bolton). I. B., ex'r. Feb. 9, 1878.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

9. Q. Page 10 of this exhibit is the one preceding the signatures, is it not?

1587 A. (Witness looking at Def't's Ex. No. 126.) It is.

10. Q. There are five more words on that page than there is on the seventh page, according to your computation?

A. (Witness examining table.) Yes, sir.

11. Q. The 11th, 12th, & 13th pages contain the certificate and affidavit of Mr. Lamport, do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

FEBRUARY 9TH, 1878.

Same counsel present.

Dr. R. H. WARD, called as a witness on the part of the defendant, and being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

By Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. R. H. Ward; age, 41 years; reside in Troy; and am a physician.

2. Q. State what qualifications you have, if any, as an expert in handwriting and the use of the microscope?

A. I have made a specialty of study with the microscope for over twenty years, and frequently in the examination of handwriting.

3. Q. State whether you have examined Def't's Ex. No. 126 (Campbell), which purports to be a reassignment of a patent by Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse to Marcus P. Norton?

1588 A. I have.

4. Q. How many different sorts of paper did you find in that exhibit, excluding the cover?

A. Two.

5. Q. Point out the differences between the two sorts of paper, and indicate what parts of the instrument are of one sort of the paper and what of the other.

A. The first four leaves, being pages one to eight inclusive, and the last leaf, containing page thirteen, seem to be of similar paper; the two leaves containing pages nine, ten, eleven, and twelve, seem to be different; the paper being of a different texture and different shade.

6. Q. What shades are the two sorts of paper?

A. (Witness examining paper.) The leaves first mentioned are of a decidedly lighter shade than the others.

7. Q. Is there any difference in respect to the ruling?

A. (Witness examining paper.) They are ruled to match; the lines ruled to write on are less conspicuous on the sheets last mentioned—pages nine to twelve inclusive—and the border lines of red and blue on those pages are of a decidedly different tint.

8. Q. Are they fainter than they are on the other pages?

A. Yes.

9. Q. Can you state whether the first brown leaf—pages nine and ten—had been folded before it was written on?

A. (Witness examining paper.) It had.

10. Q. Point out how you arrive at that conclusion?

A. By the running of the ink along the creases made by the folding.

11. Q. What causes the ink to run there?

A. The greater absorbing power of the paper, where its hardness of finish has been destroyed by bending.

1589 12. Q. Do you find that any other leaves have been written on after they were folded, and, if so, which?

A. I do not notice it on any preceding page. It shows on the following pages—eleven, twelve, and thirteen.

13. Q. Have you any doubt as to the certainty of your conclusion that the paper had been written on before it was folded?

A. Not the slightest.

14. Q. Look at the jurat on page eleven, and describe any peculiarities you may see in that.

A. (Witness examining paper.) The most striking peculiarity is that a considerable part of it has been very clumsily and conspicuously retouched.

15. Q. In how many places is the jurat retouched, as you say?

A. Nearly all the capitals and long high letters, and a smaller proportion of the small letters.

16. Q. Can you state whether the retouching was done by the same person who wrote the body of the instrument preceding the jurat?

A. I should judge it was.

17. Q. That is your opinion as an expert?

A. It is.

18. Q. What differences can you point out in the handwriting of the jurat as it was before retouching as compared with the handwriting of the body of the instrument?

A. It was written a little smoother and neater, and the ink seems to have flowed more evenly; there is a quieter style about it, less heavy lines and bold curves.

19. Q. Is it your opinion that it was written at the same time, by the same person, with the same ink and pen, as the body of the instrument?

A. I should judge that some of these conditions were different.

20. Q. You mean that it was written either by a different person, or at a different time, or by a different ink or pen?

A. Yes.

1590 21. Q. Did you notice the retouching of letters in the body of the instrument?

A. I have.

22. Q. Where does it appear most frequently?

A. I have noticed it most on the last few pages.

23. Q. What is the proportion, as compared with other pages, should you say?

A. I am not able to give the proportion, but only that it struck me as most conspicuous on the last page or two.

24. Q. How was the retouching done—should you say that it was done merely to perfect letters that, at the first writing, were, for some reason, indistinct or incomplete?

A. I don't see any case where it seems designed to change the sense or the words.

25. Q. Do you see any evidence of an intention to make the page looked botched, as compared with the jurat.

(Objected to by Mr. Williams as leading, as asking the judgment of the witness.)

A. (Witness examining paper.) I should say that there was no effort at concealment about the changes, and that they didn't seem to indicate their motive specifically at all.

26. Q. Are they made in such a way as to be consistent with the supposition that they were made so as to perfect imperfect letters?

A. They are often made to top up short letters, or to add open loops to those which were originally written with a flat loop which ran together; I have given one example in detail; it would be a question whether they were imperfect; some would call such letters imperfect, and some would not.

27. Q. Look at the signature, Jacob Shavor, and point out any peculiarities you see in that.

A. (Witness examining signature.) Its general likeness to the signature of Albert C. Corse is a little notable. There are two points that strike me as singular in its own writing. It was evidently writ-
1591 ten after the signature of Albert C. Corse, and the "o" of Jacob was cramped and crowded carefully into an unduly small space, to avoid crossing the "b" of Albert; also the "v" of Shavor has been scratched, as if it had been originally written too close at the top, or written an "o" by mistake, and afterwards changed.

28. Q. Look at the "a" in Jacob, and state if that is written naturally.

A. (Witness examining it.) It is written awkwardly, not smoothly; still I think it is, as it was originally written. I am not acquainted with the signature of the writer to compare it.

29. Q. Look at the handwriting on the fifty cents stamp on page 10 and state whether it is the same or different from the handwriting of the body of the instrument.

A. (Witness examining.) I think it is the same.

30. Q. The whole of it?

A. Yes.

31. Q. How about the handwriting on the five cents stamps that precede the fifty cents stamp?

A. (Witness examining.) I should judge that they were the same.

32. Q. Can you take the leaves of that instrument apart at the top?

A. I suppose it could be done.

33. Q. How?

A. By removing the metal clasps, after which it would be necessary to use steam, or hot water, or other means to soften any material by which they may be fastened.

34. Q. Will you please to unfasten them?

(Objected to by Mr. Williams to any mutilation or change of this exhibit after its introduction in evidence.)

On this objection of complainant deft's counsel waives the opening of the paper.

1592 Cross examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

35. Q. I understand you to say that there is more or less of what you call retouching on all the pages of this instrument?

A. So far as I know.

36. Q. Have you observed in the words "United States Commissioner for the northern district of New York, Troy, N. Y.," appended to the signature of John T. Lanport, on page 11, the same evidence of retouching as in some other parts of the instrument?

A. (Witness examining paper.) The writing is like that of the jurat, and it is somewhat similarly retouched, though not so much.

37. Q. Do you observe any evidences of retouching in the certificate and affidavit following the words to which I have referred?

A. (Witness examining.) Yes.

38. Q. Are you acquainted with the handwriting of Jacob Shavor?

A. I am not.

39. Q. Are you acquainted with the handwriting of Marcus P. Norton?

A. Yes.

40. Q. Will you indicate, in your answer, by reading from the paper a few of the words where the whitish paper and the darker paper connect, so that we may know in the printed document where they are to be found?

A. (Witness taking paper.) The white paper closes with the words, "matters appertaining to said Norton's profession, to wit, that of a practicing lawyer," and recommences, at the beginning of the affidavit of Lamport, signed on April 18th, 1870, and beginning with the words, "City of Troy, county of Rensselaer."

41. Q. All that is intermediate, as I understand you, in your judgment, is on the same kind of paper?

1593 A. That is my opinion.

42. Q. The difference between the two kinds of paper consists, in so far as color is concerned, in the fact that the sheets I have above spoken of as intermediate have somewhat of a yellower tint than the others; is it not?

A. It is less white than the others; possibly yellower, would be as good a description as could be given in one word; but it is sometimes difficult to name slight differences in color precisely.

43. Q. What makes you think, doctor, that Mr. Shavor's name was written after that of Mr. Corse was written?

A. Because in the instance stated the letters avoid those of the lower name, instead of being avoided by them or crossed by them.

44. Q. Do you see any evidences there that those signatures are in the same handwriting as the body of the instrument?

A. I do not.

45. Q. State the nature of the seals which are appended to those signatures.

A. It would require some mutilation to get at the exact character of them. They are round red discs, stuck to the paper, and checked by a stamp, showing the impression on the other side of the paper.

46. Q. State the color of the covering on that document.

A. (Witness examining paper.) I should call it a kind of buff or cream color.

47. Q. Does the lapse of time have any effect upon the appearance of writing paper?

A. Yes.

48. Q. What effect do you think it has?

A. It varies greatly with the character of the paper; old paper generally looks duller and dingier than new.

49. Q. Does the lapse of time have any effect upon the writing on paper?

1594 A. It also varies with the ink used. Most inks become grayer and less sharply marked in color by time.

50. Q. Look at the signatures and the seals upon that instrument, and their relative positions to each other, and state whether or not, in your opinion, the names were so written as to leave a space to affix the seals on the paper after the signatures?

A. (Witness examining them.) I should say that the space is divided between the signature and the seals, as if the seals were either on or intended to be put on at the time of writing the names.

51. Q. You have already stated, I believe, but I will repeat the question in another form: Is not the reassignment—to wit, is not that part of the instrument which constitutes the reassignment of the patent—on the same kind of paper that the signatures of the makers, the seals, and the jurat of the officer are?

A. So far as I see, it is.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES. } In equity.

On reading and filing the subjoined consent, and on motion of Stewart L. Woodford, U. S. attorney, and of counsel for the defendant, it is ordered that Nelson K. Hopkins, esq., of Buffalo, New York, be, and he is hereby, appointed a special examiner of this court, to take the testimony at Buffalo, New York, under the 67th equity rule, as amended, of John Powers, and of such other competent witnesses as may be brought before him on the part of the defendant; and it is further ordered that A. J. Falls, esq., of Washington, D. C., be, and he is hereby, appointed a special examiner of this court, to take the testimony at Washing-1596 ton, D. C., under the 67th equity rule, as amended, of such competent witnesses as may be brought before him on the part of the defendant herein, or on the part of the complainant herein.

(Signed) HOYT H. WHEELER.

Consent is hereby given that an order may be made in the terms of the above draft.

Troy, New York, February 1, 1878.

GEO. H. WILLIAMS,
Of Counsel for Complainant.
STEWART L. WOODFORD,
U. S. Att'y, and Def't's Sol.

A copy.

JOHN I. DAVENPORT, Clerk.

United States circuit court, southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL
ag'st
THOMAS L. JAMES.

In pursuance of an order of which the annexed is a certified copy, whereby I was appointed special examiner to take the testimony at Buffalo, New York, under the 67th equity rule, as amended, of John Powers, and of such other competent witnesses as might be brought before me on the part of the defendant in the above-entitled cause, do hereby certify that I attended at my office in Buffalo, New York, at the times named in the annexed depositions, and was attended by Mr. Marcus P. Norton, of counsel for the complainant, and Mr. Samuel B.
1597 Clark, assistant U. S. attorney, of counsel for the defendant.

That the witnesses, John Powers and Samuel N. Anthony, on the part of the defendant, were duly sworn by me to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; that the testimony of said witnesses was reduced to writing by Fred. Greiner, a disinterested person, in my presence, and in the presence of said witnesses, respectively, and that the questions and answers were read over to said witnesses respectively, and that they subscribed their names to their respective depositions, and that annexed hereto are said depositions, which contain all the testimony taken by me under said order.

And I further certify that the signatures to the jurats at the end of each deposition was written by me.

And I further certify that Fred. Greiner and myself are not of counsel nor attorney to either of the parties in this suit, nor interested in the event of this cause, and that Defendant's Exhibits Nos. 135 and 136 were duly filed and put in evidence during the taking of said depositions, and are enclosed by me with said depositions.

This form of certificate has been read over by me to the respective counsel, and is in form and substance satisfactory to each of them.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 16th day of February, 1878.

NELSON K. HOPKINS,
Special Examiner.

1598 United States circuit court, southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL
ag'st
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant herein, at the city of Buffalo, New York, before N. K. Hopkins, esq., special examiner appointed for the purpose, on the 14th day of February, 1878, 10 a. m.

Present, pursuant to notice, Marcus P. Norton, Esq., solicitor and counsel for complainant, and Samuel B. Clark, assistant U. S. attorney, for the defendant.

JOHN POWERS, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows.

Direct examination by Mr. CLARK:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Name is John Powers; age, fifty-three years; reside in Buffalo, New York; am employed in post-office at Buffalo as head clerk of mailing department.

Q. 2. How long have you been so employed?

A. I have had that position over twenty-five years; have been in the office longer than that.

Q. 3. What sort of an instrument was used for the postmarking of letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps when you first became head clerk of the mailing department?

1599 I don't think there was any postage-stamps in use then; that was over twenty-five years ago; letters had to be paid in money.

Q. 4. As soon as postage-stamps were introduced, what sort of an instrument was used for the purposes indicated in my last question?

A. The first I recollect was an iron instrument with a wooden handle, about three inches and a half long; I guess it was about five-eighths of an inch in diameter at the base, where it struck the stamp; the length of the whole instrument was three and a half inches. That was an instrument for the cancellation of postage-stamps. For postmarking they had a stamp with Buffalo, N. Y., and the day and the month on the acting face of it.

Q. 5. Were the two stamps of the same shape?

A. They were not of the same size. The stamp for cancelling postage-stamps was smaller than the stamp for postmarking, but they were of the same general shape; they were both hand instruments, composed of wood and iron or steel; the iron parts cylindrical shape.

Q. 6. What was the configuration of the face of the cancellation stamp?

A. It was cut so there appeared bars across it, and the bars made parallel ink lines on the postage-stamp.

Q. 7. These being separate instruments, they of course required two operations to cancel and postmark, and it was necessary to go over the letters twice—the letters that had postage stamps on, I mean?

A. Yes.

Q. 8. Was an instrument ever adopted so constructed that by going over the letters once and by one operation the postage-stamps could be canceled and the letters postmarked?

A. There was.

Q. 8½. How was this instrument made?

A. It was by uniting the canceler with the postmarking stamp.

Q. 9. How were they united?

1600 A. I took these instruments over to the shop of a worker in iron, and told him I wanted them fastened together, and it was done at the shop; I do not know whether they were soldered or how they were fastened together.

Q. 10. Did the handles of both stamps continue to be attached to them?

A. No; the handle of the cancelling stamp was taken off.

Q. 11. At whose shop was this work done?

A. The man's name was Bangasser.

Q. 12. Where is this first combined stamp?

A. I have it here.

Q. 13. Please produce it.

(Witness produces instrument called for by question.)

Q. 14. This smaller cylinder attached to the side of the larger one is the cancellation device, I understand?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. 15. Was this instrument put in use in the Buffalo post-office?

A. It was.

Q. 16. How long did it continue to be used—how many months or years?

A. I can't say exactly, but I should think two or three years.

Q. 17. Did the cancellation device ever break off or in any way become separated from the postmarking device?

A. No.

Q. 18. What change, if any, has taken place in this instrument since first combined?

A. None except the wear.

Q. 19. Did this instrument accomplish the desired end of cancelling and postmarking at one blow?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, first, as leading; second, suggesting to the witness the answer desired by examining counsel.)

1601 A. It did.

Q. 20. Supposing that the cancellation device were separate, would the post-marking device then be like the instrument you have described as being in use for post-marking before the combination was made?

A. It would be the same.

(Instrument offered in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit, one hundred and thirty-five (Powers), N. K. H., examiner, Feb. 14th, 1878.)

Q. 21. Whose idea was it of making this combination?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel. First, it is not in the province of the witness to determine the question; second, that is a question solely within the province of the court upon the evidence produced.)

A. It was mine.

Q. 22. Who was postmaster at the time this combination was made?

A. Israel T. Hatch.

Q. 23. When did his term of office begin and end?

A. It began in November, 1859, and ended in April, 1861.

Q. 23½. Did you speak with Mr. Hatch in regard to making this combination?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the ground of its being improper to enquire of this witness concerning any conversation of the character indicated by the question, unless it first appear that Mr. Hatch is now living.)

A. I did.

Q. 24. Is that fact distinct in your recollection?

A. It is.

(Same objection to last question and answer as last above stated.)

1602 Q. 25. At what part of Mr. Hatch's term of office was the combination made?

A. In 1860, in the summer.

Q. 26. You recollect, do you, that it was warm weather or summer when the combination was made?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. 27. Did you ever know of such a combination being made before you had it done at Mr. Bangasser's shop?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as being immaterial whether the witness did or did not know of the matter inquired about in the question.)

A. I did not.

Q. 28. Do you believe yourself to be the first inventor of this combination?

A I do.

Q. 29. Why did you not get the combination patented?

A. I never thought of it; I did not think I could get a patent on so simple a thing.

Cross examination by MARCUS P. NORTON, complainant's counsel:

Q. 30. You have been in the Buffalo post-office in the capacity of clerk for twenty-five years and upwards, have you?

A. I have.

Q. 31. In what year did postage-stamps for the payment of postage on letters go into use in the postal service of the United States?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel on the ground that it is not within the scope of anything asked on the direct examination.)

A. I don't recollect.

Q. 32. Do you recollect that they ever went into use for that purpose?

A. I know they went into use for that purpose.

1603 Q. 33. When did they go into use for that purpose?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel on the same ground as before, and also that witness has already answered the question.)

A. I don't recollect.

Q. 34. Give your earliest and best recollection of the matter inquired about in the last question.

(Objected to by defendant's counsel on same ground as last above.)

A. I should think it was about 1849 or 1850.

Q. 35. In your answer to question 4 of your direct examination, you have described two separate and distinct instruments, namely, one for post-marking the letter envelope with the name of the post-office, month, and day of the month, and the other for the purpose of cancelling postage-stamps on the letter envelope; where and of whom were those instruments obtained?

A. They were furnished by and obtained from the Post-Office Department at Washington.

Q. 36. Did you ever use those instruments in the condition they came from the Post-Office Department, in the Buffalo post-office?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel, on the ground that it is not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I have no doubt I have, but I don't recollect any particular instance.

Q. 37. Since you have been in the Buffalo post-office, have you ever been connected with the department for post-marking letters and for the cancellation of postage stamps?

A. Yes.

Q. 38. When, how, and for what length of time?

A. As long as I have been head clerk of the mailing department, it came partly under my charge.

1604 Q. 39. In that post-office, have you yourself labored at the business of post-marking letters?

A. No.

Q. Have you at the business of cancelling postage-stamps on mail matter?

A. No.

Q. 40. Referring to the instruments described in your answer to question No. 4 of your examination-in-chief, how many operations were required to post-mark a letter, and to cancel the postage-stamp thereon?

A. Two, if they used both instruments.

Q. 41. When a postage-stamp was upon a letter or other mail matter, were those two instruments used?

A. Not always.

Q. 42. To post mark a letter, how many operations were required at that time?

A. It never required but one to post-mark.

Q. 43. How many operations were required at that time to cancel a postage-stamp by the instrument you described in your answer-in-chief to question No. 4?

A. One.

Q. 44. To post-mark a letter and to cancel the postage stamp thereon by the instrument referred to in your answer to question No. 4 of your direct examination, two separate and distinct operations and two separate and distinct blows were required, were they not?

A. They were.

Q. 45. How long were those instruments used in the Buffalo post-office as separate and distinct instruments?

A. I cannot say.

Q. 46. State your best recollection on that subject.

A. I have no recollection of the time either of those instruments was received from the Post-Office Department at Washington.

1605 Q. 47. Look at defendant's Exhibit No. 135 (Powers) I now hand you, and state who made the post-marking device, and also who made the postage-cancelling device, if you know.

A. I don't know.

Q. 48. Do you know where they came from to the Buffalo post-office?

A. They came from Washington—the Post-Office Department, I presume, for they always came from there; you may leave off "for they always came from there."

Q. 49. Question No. 21 enquires of you as follows: "Whose idea was it of making this combination?" Your answer was, "It was mine." What do you mean to be understood by the term "idea," as used in that question and answer?

A. I mean that it was my thought.

Q. 50. What do you mean to have the court understand by the use of the word "thought," as used in your last answer?

A. I mean that it was my idea to have them united.

Q. 51. Is that all?

A. I mean the idea occurred to me to have them united.

Q. 52. You have now given your best answers to the last previous questions upon the subject matters therein enquired about, have you?

A. I guess so.

Q. 53. Do you know whether you have or not?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as frivolous.)

A. Yes.

Q. 54. Which is it?

A. I have.

Q. 55. In answer to question No. 22 of your examination in chief, you mentioned the name of Israel T. Hatch. Do you know where Mr. Hatch now is?

A. He is dead; he has been dead for about a year and a half.

Adjourned until 2½ p. m.

1606 FEBRUARY 14*th*, 1878, at 2½ p. m.

Counsel appear pursuant to adjournment, and the further cross-examination of the witness Powers postponed for the present, in order that Samuel N. Anthony may be examined.

SAMUEL N. ANTHONY having been examined, the further examination of Mr. Powers was adjourned until February 15th, 1878, at 10 a. m.

FEBRUARY 15*th*, 1878, at 10 a. m.

Same counsel present, and the examination of Mr. POWERS continued.

Q. 56. In your answer to question No. 23 of your examination in chief, you say that Postmaster Israel T. Hatch's term of office expired in April, 1861; who was postmaster next succeeding Mr. Hatch, at Buffalo?

A. A. M. Clapp.

Q. 57. How long did he continue in office?

A. About six years.

Q. 58. Who was assistant postmaster under Mr. Clapp?

A. Thomas Blossom.

Q. 59. Who was assistant postmaster under Mr. Hatch?

A. James H. See.

Q. 60. Name the clerks employed in post-marking mail matter and in cancelling the postage stamps upon the same during the term of office of Mr. Hatch?

A. Henry Smith, Michael Wolf, and I think there was another by the name of Martin Schenkelburger.

Q. 61. Where are those persons now, do you know?

A. Henry Smith is in the post-office, Michael Wolf is in the city, and I understand Schenkelburger is here.

1607 Q. 62. Name the post-marking and post-cancelling clerks employed during the term of office of Mr. Clapp.

A. Henry Smith, Michael Wolf about four months, John Weimer and Louis Eckel during the latter part of the time.

Q. 63. You have named all of the persons employed in that office for the purposes indicated in the last several questions?

A. I think I have; all I can recollect, except Louis Filner, whom I now recall.

Q. 64. Mr. Blossom was assistant postmaster at Buffalo during the years 1864, 1865, 1866, and 1867, was he not?

A. He was all of those years except 1867, and he was part of the year 1867; I will except 1867, on reflection, and part of 1866.

Q. 65. Were you upon personal and intimate acquaintance and relation with Mr. Blossom during his term of office?

A. I was.

Q. 66. Did you or do you now know that Mr. Thomas Blossom, while assistant postmaster at Buffalo, signed a paper or a certificate in the following words and figures, that is to say: "This is to certify that we, the undersigned postmasters, at and for the respective places designated under our said respective signatures, have in use in our said post-offices, whereof we are deputy postmasters, the double post-marking and postage-cancelling stamp known as Norton's Patent or Improvement, and furnished to us by the Post-Office Department at Washington, by means of which the post-mark is given on the envelope and the postage-stamp canceled at the same time and blow of the instrument.

"We have carefully read the printed copy affidavit of C. Smith, pages

6 and 7 of House of Representatives Document No. 27, 38th Congress, 2d session; also printed copy letter of Abram Wakeman, dated January 3, 1863, pages 4 and 5, same document; also printed letter from
1608 the post-office at Washington City, D. C., dated on the 18th day of March, 1864, page 6 of same document; also printed copy of affidavit of General John A. Dix, pages 1 and 2 of House of Representatives Ex. Document No. 27, part 2d; also printed copy affidavit of E. Hoole, pages 3 and 4, same document.

"And as to the matter of economy in time and labor, and as to the matter of the more perfect cancellation of the postage-stamps and the post-marking upon the envelope of the letter, each named and set forth in the aforesaid printed papers, in Ex. Documents Nos. 27 and 27, part 2d, we fully concur, as experience in our respective offices has fully proven.

"We believe the said instrument to be and to answer all the purposes claimed for it.

"We are satisfied that it is a labor-saving instrument, and that by its use the post-mark is made upon the letter envelope in a more intelligible manner, while at the same time the postage-stamp is more perfectly and permanently canceled than by any other known device."

A. I don't recollect of ever hearing of it before now.

Q. 67. In answer to question number twenty-nine of your examination in-chief, you state in substance that you never thought to obtain a patent upon Exhibit number one hundred and thirty-five, offered in evidence by defendant's counsel February 14th, 1878, and that you did not think you could get a patent on so simple a thing; at what time did you come to the conclusions stated by you in that answer?

A. I think it was several years after, when I heard some one had got a patent for it; then I was surprised at a patent being granted for it.

Q. 68. In what year were you so much surprised as indicated by your last answer?

A. I don't know in what year it was.

Q. 69. Give your best recollections of the time, of the place,
1609 and of the circumstances under which you seem to have been overwhelmed by surprise at the granting of a patent upon the device in question.

A. I should think it was about three or four years after Defendant's Exhibit 135 was made. It was here in Buffalo. I don't recollect any particular circumstances.

Q. 70. You have stated that you had heard that a patent had been granted upon the instrument in question. When did you hear of that and of whom?

A. I have answered part of that question before—as to when I heard it. I don't remember of whom.

Q. 71. State the year in which you heard about the patent referred to in the last question.

A. I don't remember the year.

Q. 72. Was it while Mr. Thomas Blossom was assistant postmaster in this city?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as immaterial and on the ground that is not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I cannot say, but I think it is quite likely.

Q. 73. Give your best recollections about the matter.

(Same objection.)

A. I have given my best recollection.

Q. 74. State what those recollections were which you state in your last answer you have given before.

(Same objection, and on the further ground that the witness has answered.)

A. My best recollection now is, that it was while Mr. Blossom was assistant postmaster at Buffalo.

Q. 75. Did you ever have conference or consultation with Mr. Jay Hyatt, a patent attorney in this city, with reference to device shown by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I had a little conversation with him about it once.

Q. 76. When was that?

1610 A. I should think it was about five or six years ago.

Q. 77. State that conversation as near as you can recollect it.

(Same objection.)

A. There was something in the newspapers about this patent obtained by parties in Troy. Mr. Hyatt boarded where I did. I don't recollect exactly what I said to him, but I told him I got up such a stamp here a long time before, and I asked him if there was any chance for me to make anything out of it then. He said no, there was not; that I was too late; that I should have had it patented before. This is the substance of our conversation.

Q. 78. In your answer to question number twenty-eight of your direct examination you state that you "believe yourself to be the first inventor of this combination," the quotation being taken from that question. Upon what fact do you state a belief of that character?

A. Because I never heard of anything of the kind before.

Q. 79. In answer to question number twenty-five of your examination-in-chief you state in substance that it was in the summer of the year 1860 that the combination shown in Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 was made. How is it and by what means is it that you were enabled to state that as the time?

A. I said summer, because it was warm weather, but it might have been spring or early in the fall of 1860, and 1860 was the only summer that Mr. Hatch was postmaster at Buffalo.

Q. 80. Do you remember anything about an order from the Postmaster-General, dated on or about the 25th day of July, 1860, requiring postmasters to put postmark on the letter, and to cancel the postage stamp by a separate instrument?

A. I remember there was such an order. I don't remember the exact time, but it was about that time.

1611 Q. 81. Previous to that order was Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 constructed?

A. I think not.

Q. 82. How long after the promulgation of that order did the postmaster continue to use in this post-office the single postmarking stamp, and also the single stamp for canceling the postage stamps—I mean the clerks employed by the postmaster for that purpose?

A. I can't say exactly, but I think it was only a short time.

Q. 83. Did you at any time inform the Postmaster-General at Washington that you had made the instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. 84. Did you at any time inform Mr. A. M. Clapp, while he was postmaster at this city, that you had made the device represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I have no recollection of ever having done so.

6 and 7 of House of Representatives Document No. 27, 38th Congress, 2d session; also printed copy letter of Abram Wakeman, dated January 3, 1863, pages 4 and 5, same document; also printed letter from
1608 the post-office at Washington City, D. C., dated on the 18th day of March, 1861, page 6 of same document; also printed copy of affidavit of General John A. Dix, pages 1 and 2 of House of Representatives Ex. Document No. 27, part 2d; also printed copy affidavit of E. Hoole, pages 3 and 4, same document.

"And as to the matter of economy in time and labor, and as to the matter of the more perfect cancellation of the postage-stamps and the post-marking upon the envelope of the letter, each named and set forth in the aforesaid printed papers, in Ex. Documents Nos. 27 and 27, part 2d, we fully concur, as experience in our respective offices has fully proven.

"We believe the said instrument to be and to answer all the purposes claimed for it.

"We are satisfied that it is a labor-saving instrument, and that by its use the post-mark is made upon the letter envelope in a more intelligible manner, while at the same time the postage-stamp is more perfectly and permanently canceled than by any other known device."

A. I don't recollect of ever hearing of it before now.

Q. 67. In answer to question number twenty-nine of your examination-in-chief, you state in substance that you never thought to obtain a patent upon Exhibit number one hundred and thirty-five, offered in evidence by defendant's counsel February 14th, 1878, and that you did not think you could get a patent on so simple a thing; at what time did you come to the conclusions stated by you in that answer?

A. I think it was several years after, when I heard some one had got a patent for it; then I was surprised at a patent being granted for it.

Q. 68. In what year were you so much surprised as indicated by your last answer?

A. I don't know in what year it was.

Q. 69. Give your best recollections of the time, of the place,
1609 and of the circumstances under which you seem to have been overwhelmed by surprise at the granting of a patent upon the device in question.

A. I should think it was about three or four years after Defendant's Exhibit 135 was made. It was here in Buffalo. I don't recollect any particular circumstances.

Q. 70. You have stated that you had heard that a patent had been granted upon the instrument in question. When did you hear of that and of whom?

A. I have answered part of that question before—as to when I heard it. I don't remember of whom.

Q. 71. State the year in which you heard about the patent referred to in the last question.

A. I don't remember the year.

Q. 72. Was it while Mr. Thomas Blossom was assistant postmaster in this city?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as immaterial and on the ground that is not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I cannot say, but I think it is quite likely.

Q. 73. Give your best recollections about the matter.

(Same objection.)

A. I have given my best recollection.

Q. 74. State what those recollections were which you state in your last answer you have given before.

(Same objection, and on the further ground that the witness has answered.)

A. My best recollection now is, that it was while Mr. Blossom was assistant postmaster at Buffalo.

Q. 75. Did you ever have conference or consultation with Mr. Jay Hyatt, a patent attorney in this city, with reference to device shown by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I had a little conversation with him about it once.

Q. 76. When was that?

1610 A. I should think it was about five or six years ago.

Q. 77. State that conversation as near as you can recollect it.

(Same objection.)

A. There was something in the newspapers about this patent obtained by parties in Troy. Mr. Hyatt boarded where I did. I don't recollect exactly what I said to him, but I told him I got up such a stamp here a long time before, and I asked him if there was any chance for me to make anything out of it then. He said no, there was not; that I was too late; that I should have had it patented before. This is the substance of our conversation.

Q. 78. In your answer to question number twenty-eight of your direct examination you state that you "believe yourself to be the first inventor of this combination," the quotation being taken from that question. Upon what fact do you state a belief of that character?

A. Because I never heard of anything of the kind before.

Q. 79. In answer to question number twenty-five of your examination-in-chief you state in substance that it was in the summer of the year 1860 that the combination shown in Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 was made. How is it and by what means is it that you were enabled to state that as the time?

A. I said summer, because it was warm weather, but it might have been spring or early in the fall of 1860, and 1860 was the only summer that Mr. Hatch was postmaster at Buffalo.

Q. 80. Do you remember anything about an order from the Postmaster-General, dated on or about the 25th day of July, 1860, requiring postmasters to put postmark on the letter, and to cancel the postage stamp by a separate instrument?

A. I remember there was such an order. I don't remember the exact time, but it was about that time.

1611 Q. 81. Previous to that order was Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 constructed?

A. I think not.

Q. 82. How long after the promulgation of that order did the postmaster continue to use in this post-office the single postmarking stamp, and also the single stamp for canceling the postage stamps—I mean the clerks employed by the postmaster for that purpose?

A. I can't say exactly, but I think it was only a short time.

Q. 83. Did you at any time inform the Postmaster-General at Washington that you had made the instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. 84. Did you at any time inform Mr. A. M. Clapp, while he was postmaster at this city, that you had made the device represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I have no recollection of ever having done so.

Q. 85. Did you at any time, while Mr. Thomas Blossom was assistant postmaster at this city, inform him that you had made the instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I have no recollection of ever having done so.

Q. 86. How many instruments like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 did you ever make, or cause to be made?

A. Only that one.

Q. 87. I understand you say, on your direct examination, that Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 has been used in the post-office at this city. Is that so?

A. It is.

Q. 88. At what time was the use of Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 discontinued at the Buffalo post-office?

A. I don't remember the exact time, but it was when we received some of the same kind from Washington.

1612 Q. 89. From the Post Office Department at Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. 90. What time was that?

A. I cannot say. I don't recollect; but I should think it was in 1863 or 1864. I don't remember exactly.

Q. 91. Please describe the construction (if you can) of the instrument received from the Post Office Department for postmarking the letter on the envelope and canceling the postage-stamp simultaneously and by one blow of the instrument?

A. The postmarking stamp had a piece of brass on the side of it, with a hole in the brass for putting a cork or rubber in for the canceling of the postage-stamp.

Q. 92. How long was that used in the Buffalo post-office?

A. They discontinued the use of it in 1865.

Q. 93. How many such devices were used in that office at one time?

A. I think only one, but I won't be certain.

Q. 94. Have you ever seen in use in that office an instrument consisting of an upright handle with a bar at right angles with its lower end, and having on the lower side of that bar a postmarking and a postage canceling device?

A. Yes. I think that is the kind they use now.

Q. 95. The handle is fastened to the upper surface of the cross-bar, is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. 96. The acting surface of the postmarking device and the acting surface of the canceling device are each below the cross-bar, while the cross-bar intervenes between the handle and the postmarking and postage cancelling device; are they not, and does it not?

A. The acting surface of the postmarking and cancelling device are each below the cross-bar, and I think the cross-bar intervenes between the handle and the postmarking and postage-cancelling device.

1613 Q. 97. Referring to the instrument described in your last answer, you may state, if you please, the time when it first went into use in the post-office at Buffalo.

A. I can't recollect that.

Q. 98. Is substantially the same instrument now in use in that post-office?

A. I think that is the kind they are using now in that office.

Q. 99. Since the use of Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 was discontinued in the post-office at Buffalo, where has that instrument been between that and the present time?

A. In the post-office all the while.

Q. 100. When was it last taken from that office?

A. Yesterday, when it was brought here.

Q. 101. After the discontinuing of the use of that instrument at the post-office in this city, when was your attention first directed to it for any purpose?

A. At the time I had that conversation with Mr. Hyatt.

Q. 102. When was your attention next directed to it, for any purpose?

A. Last summer. I think in July.

Q. 103. On what occasion was that?

A. Upon seeing a statement in the newspaper that parties had sued the postmaster at New York for a large sum, for the use of a similar instrument.

Q. 104. What was there peculiar about the statement you saw in the newspaper which directed your attention to Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, which had long previous to that time been discarded and rejected by the Buffalo post-office?

A. It stated that they had sued him for $30,000, or $30,000 a year.

Q. 105. Is that all?

A. I thought it was wrong to make the postmaster pay any such sum, and I would help him out if I could.

Q. 106. Was that all you "thought" at that time on that subject?

1614 A. That was all the reason I wrote the postmaster at New York about it.

Q. 107. Now, Mr. Powers, when you saw that statement of $30,000 a year, or so, being asked by the complainant in his suit against the postmaster at New York City, did your soul have any hungering or thirsting after that $30,000 a year, or any part of it, or did you have any desire for any part or portion of it? This question is put with due respect to the witness.

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as immaterial.)

A. I had no desire for any part of the New York postmaster's money.

Q. 108. Had you any desire, as indicated by the last question, for any money from the United States, or anybody else, growing out of the instrument in question?

(Same objection.)

A. I had no desire for anybody's money that was not fairly due me.

Q. 109. You may say what your thoughts and feelings were at the time you first saw this $30,000 newspaper advertisement, when taken in connection with Defendant's Exhibit No. 135.

(Same objection.)

A. I thought I ought to inform the postmaster at New York about this stamp, as it might be of some benefit to him. I had no expectation of making any money out of it.

Q. 110. You were anxious to serve the postmaster at New York in this matter, were you not?

A. Yes; I thought it was my duty to do so.

Q. 111. Had you had a patent at that time on Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, what would you have considered to be your duty to the postmaster in New York?

(Same objection.)

1615 A. I dont know exactly.

Q. 112. Not having a patent at that time on Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, and feeling your duty pressing heavily upon you, you voluntarily wrote a letter to Postmaster James about this matter, did you not?

A. I did.

Q. 113. Had you had a patent at the time you wrote that letter, would you have written a letter of the character you did write?

A. Probably not; if I had had a patent no one else would have had one for the same thing, and, therefore, there would have been no such suit; that is my opinion.

Q. 114. You mean by that, do you not, that the suit would have been in your name instead of Mr. Campbell, the present complainant?

A. No; I don't mean anything of the sort.

Q. 115. What do you mean?

A. I mean I don't know what I should have done.

Q. 116. About how long was it after Jay Hyatt, a patent attorney in this city, advised you that you could not obtain a patent on Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, that you seemed to have had so much regard for your conscience, and also as to your duty, that you gave unasked-for information to the postmaster at New York?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as assuming something not in evidence in regard to Mr. Hyatt, and as immaterial.)

A. I think from the time I had the conversation with Mr. Hyatt till I wrote the postmaster at New York was about five years.

Q. 117. Is your answer to question No. 77 of your cross-examination a correct answer, and such as you intended at the time you gave it?

A. I believe it to be correct, and I do not wish to change it.

1616 Q. 118. In what year was it that you had the conversation and consultation with Mr. Jay Hyatt, referred to in your last answer, and as stated in your answer to question No. 77?

A. The conversation I had with him was five or six years ago; I cannot remember the year.

Q. 119. Where was that conversation?

(Same objection.)

A. At our boarding-house on Swan street.

Q. 120. Did you ask Mr. Hyatt at that time, or at any other time, anything about obtaining a patent for you on that instrument which has now become Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't think I did; I don't think I ever asked him to get a patent.

Q. 121. Did you ask him if a patent could be obtained for you on that instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't think I did. I don't recollect. I might have asked him.

Q. 122. You say that Mr. Hyatt advised you that it was too late for you to make any money out of it. What do you think he had reference to when he gave you that advice?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as assuming something the witness has not said, and that it is immaterial.)

A. I thought by it that he meant it was too late to get a patent.

Q. 123. What was your object or purpose in having that consultation with Mr. Hyatt?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as assuming that the witness had a consultation in a legal sense, and as immaterial.)

A. The conversation occurred incidentally at the boarding-house.

1617 Q. 124. Who first brought on that conversation?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I cannot say.

Q. 125. Give your best recollection about it?

A. According to my recollection Mr. Hyatt was talking to some one else about the Troy patent, and that was what led me to speak of it to him; I think that was it.

Q. 126. Have you not already testified that what led you to speak to Mr. Hyatt about this matter "was something in the newspapers about this patent obtained by parties in Troy"?

(Same objection.)

A. That is the article they were talking about.

Q. 127. Did you understand the last question?

(Same objection.)

A. I think so.

Q. 128. Then why did you not answer that question squarely, fairly, and without evasion?

(Same objection, and because for the manifest purpose of irritating the witness, it assumes that the witness answered crookedly, unfairly, and evasively.)

A. I thought the answer I gave covered both.

Q. 129. Both of what?

(Same objection.)

A. Of both questions—the one he asked, and the one he referred to.

Q. 130. In my question in which I charge you with evasion in answering, I referred to no previous question whatever, but simply inquired of you whether you had or had not testified to a certain matter which I distinctly stated in the question, and I now give you the opportunity to correct that answer, or to further answer it, if you desire, and the 1618 examiner will now read that question and your answer to it, which is No. 126.

(Same objection, and because it assumes that there is something that needs correction.)

A. I will correct that answer and further answer, that I have so testified. That article in the newspaper was what Hyatt and the other man were talking about that led to my speaking to Mr. Hyatt about it.

Q. 131. Did I ask you to state anything about any article in any newspaper in question No. 126?

A. It seems not.

Q. 132. Then why did you force into your last answer but one anything about a newspaper article being discussed between third parties, in which you at the time first took no part, as you testified? You will please answer this question without any reference to any suggestions of defendant's counsel made by way of objections.

(Objected to as immaterial and because the last answer but one was in reply to a question asking the witness for any explanation he might choose to give, and also because it assumes that the witness forced something into his answer.)

A. It was in explanation of my answer to the question where the examining counsel accused me of evading.

Q. 133. That explanation as stated in your last answer you gave simply and only as the reasons why you did not give in the first instance the proper answer which you afterwards did give to question No. 126. Do I understand you correctly?

(Objected to as immaterial and because it assumes that the witness in the first instance gave an improper answer.)

A. I think you do.

1619 Q. 134. At the time you had this conversation with Mr. Hyatt, did he advise you to obtain a patent on the instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. He did not.

Q. 135. Did he on that occasion advise you in words, or in substance, that you could not obtain a patent upon it?

(Same objection.)

A. I think he did in substance, for he said I was too late, or words to that effect.

Q. 136. Did he on that occasion assign any reasons why in his opinion you could not obtain a patent on that instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't think he did; I don't recollect of his giving any.

Q. 137. Did he on that occasion assign to you any reason or reasons why, in his opinion, you were "too late" to obtain a patent on that instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't recollect that he did.

Q. 138. Did you on that occasion inquire of Mr. Hyatt why, in his opinion, you could not obtain a patent upon that instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't recollect that I did.

Q. 139. Did you on that occasion ask him why it was he thought you were "too late" to obtain a patent on that instument?

(Same objection.)

1620 A. I don't recollect that I did.

Q. 140. Is Mr. Hyatt living or is he dead?

(Same objection.)

A. He is dead.

Q. 141. What was his reputation as a patent lawyer and patent agent in this city while in practice here?

(Same objection.)

A. Good, as far as I know.

Q. 142. If you know, how many years was he engaged in the practice of his profession in this city?

A. I don't know.

Q. 143. Should you think it was ten years before his d ath.

A. I think six or eight years and perhaps more.

Q. 144. Did you ever exhibit to him the instrument now represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

(Same objection.)

A. No, I never showed it to him so far as I remember.

Q. 145. At the time you voluntarily wrote to the postmaster at New York, in the summer of 1877, a letter upon the subject matter of Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, did you state to him that the use of that instrument had long before that time been discontinued in the Buffalo post-office?

(Same objection.)

A. I did not.

Q. 146. Did you in that letter state to him in words, or in substance, that that instrument had been abandoned by you years before 1621 then, and that you had not only not obtained a patent on it but had not even made an effort, or attempted an effort, to obtain a patent on that instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. I did not write anything of the sort to him.

Q. 147. The conditions named in the last two questions are substantially correct, are they not?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes.

Q. 148. You are now employed by the United States in the postal service, are you not?

(Same objection.)

A. I am employed by the postmaster at Buffalo in the United States post-office.

Q. 149. What is your official capacity, if any, in the Buffalo post-office?

(Same objection.)

A. I am what they call head clerk in the mailing department, and have been such over twenty-five years.

Q. 150. Are you not in the service of the United States by virtue of your employment by the postmaster of the United States for the post-office at Buffalo?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, I suppose I am.

Q. 151. What salary is paid you by the government for services rendered at the Buffalo post-office?

(Same objection.)

A. Seventeen hundred dollars a year.

Q. 152. Have you had any conversation since the commence-
1622 ment of this suit against Mr. James, the postmaster at New York, with the postmaster at this city about this suit?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, I have had a little conversation with him about it.

Q. 153. Who commenced that conversation, you or the postmaster at Buffalo?

(Same objection.)

A. I think I did the first time.

Q. 154. Who did the second or any other time?

(Same objection.)

A. I think the postmaster commenced it the second time. I only remember those two conversations.

Q. 155. Since the commencement of this suit in which you are being examined as a witness, have you had any correspondence with the Postmaster-General, or with any officer or person connected with the Post-Office Department at Washington?

(Same objection.)

A. Not individually; I have written for the postmaster several letters, but nothing concerning this suit or any matter connected with it.

Q. 156. In your direct examination you state about somebody in Troy having a patent upon what you call substantially the same instrument in kind or character as Defendant's Exhibit No. 135; have you ever seen or corresponded with that person, to whom you refer as somebody in Troy, upon the subject matter of your direct and cross examination in this case?

(Same objection.)

A. Never saw him that I know of, and never corresponded with him.

Adjourned until February 16th, 1878, at 10 a. m.

1623 FEBRUARY 16TH, 1878—at 10 a. m.

Same counsel present, and the further cross-examination of Mr. Powers continued:

Q. 157. If I understand you correctly, Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 was made under your instructions in the latter part of the year 1860, or after the order of the Postmaster-General in July of that year; is that so?

A. It was after an order of that kind; I don't know the date of the order, but the order and instrument was made in 1860.

Q. 158. How much and what part of Defendant's Exhibit No. 135 was made by you or under your instructions at the time you mention in your last answer?

A. Merely uniting the postmarking and the canceling stamp.

Q. 159. By means of what?

A. I don't know what kind of work it is exactly, but I would say it was soldered or brazed or welded together; the instrument itself will show.

Q. 160. At the time you had the post-office postage-stamp cancelling device attached to the side of the post-office postmarking stamp did you consider that you had made an invention of any kind?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No; I did not think of it as an invention as I recollect.

Q. 161. When, if ever, did you discover any invention in Defendant's Exhibit No. 135?

A. I never considered it much of an invention.

Q. 162. Last question repeated and the same is read to the witness.

A. I think at the time I had a talk with Mr. Hyatt was when I discovered that it was an invention.

Q. 163. This Exhibit No. 135 of the defendant has been under 1624 your control, and in the post-office in this city until the commencement of you examination in this cause, has it not?

A. It has been in the post office all that time, but I don't know as it has been specially under my control.

Q. 164. Since the use of this exhibit was discontinued in the Buffalo post-office, and since its abandonment by you, who has had charge or control of it to the present time?

A. I don't know that any one had particular charge of it up to the time of my conversation with Mr. Hyatt; then I hunted it up, and have kept it ever since.

Q. 165. Where have you kept it?

A. In a drawer in the post-office.

Q. 166. And in that drawer it has been ever since until you produced it here?

A. Not in the same drawer; in that drawer or some other drawer.

Q. 167. During your examination yesterday I understood you to say that since the commencement of this suit against Postmaster James you had had two separate interviews and conversations with the present United States postmaster at this city about the subject matter pending in that suit; am I correct in that?

A. That is correct.

Q. 168. Will you state the name of the present postmaster at Buffalo?

A. Isaac M. Shermerhorn.

Q. 169. If I understood you correctly yesterday, the first conversation with him was first brought about by yourself; am I correct in that?

A. That is correct.

Q. 170. You may state that conversation as near as you now remember it.

(Objected to as hearsay and as immaterial.)

A. It was just after this notice in the newspaper about the $30,000 suit last July; I think I mentioned to him of the article I had 1625 seen in the paper, and showed him Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, and told him that I got that exhibit up in 1860; he said, in reply to that, I think, you did, did you; I don't remember what else was said; some one came along and wanted to see him, and they went into his private room.

Q. 171. State the second conversation you had with him, when it was, where, and by whom was it first brought about?

A. It was in the post-office; I think last week; I got a paper out of his room which had a notice of this suit in it, saying that the postmaster in New York was sued for $150,000 for using a combined postmarking and cancelling stamp, and when I took the paper back he said that was a big suit, or an important suit, and I said, yes; that I believe was all the conversation at that time, but there was another conversation which I remember now that I did not remember yesterday, when asked about the conversation I had had with the present postmaster here; at that time the postmaster asked me if I had written to the postmaster at New York about Defendant's Exhibit No. 135, and I told him I had; and then again the day before yesterday, after I had been over here in the morning, he commenced a conversation about the matter, and he said, laughingly, that the post-offices would not be worth having if the postmaster at New York got beat.

Q. 172. To what did the postmaster refer in this conversation when he said that post-offices would not be worth having if Postmaster James got beat?

A. He referred to this suit.

Q. 173. Did he express any apprehensions that he might be called upon in a similar manner as Mr. James has been called upon, to render strict obedience to the Constitution of the United States, in which it declares that private property should not be taken for public use without a just and adequate compensation therefor?

A. He did not; he did not say anything further on the subject.

1626 Q. 174. What do you think he had reference to when he told you that post offices would not be worth having if this suit were to prevail against Mr. James, postmaster at New York?

A. He said it in such a laughing way that I thought he did not have any apprehension at all.

Q. 175. What do you think was the cause of his anxiety when he asked you if you had written the postmaster at New York about this matter?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as assuming that Mr. Schermerhorn had some anxiety.)

A. I don't know.

Q. 176. When did you last write the postmaster at New York on this subject?

A. I never wrote him but once on this subject, and that was last July.

Q. 177. What did you write him?

(Objected to as immaterial, and that it calls for the contents of an instrument in writing.)

A. I cut a notice out of the newspaper of this suit and pasted it on a sheet of letter-paper, and then I made three impressions with Exhibit

No. 135 under the notice; then I stated that the stamp that made those impressions was invented and in use in the post-office in this city in 1860.

Q. 178. What was your object in thus volunteering supposed information, and tendering your services to the postmaster at New York in this matter?

A. I supposed it was wrong to make him pay for the use of the patent that he was sued on, and I thought that it might be of some use to him to know that Exhibit No. 135 was in use in this post-office in 1860.

Q. 179. What led you to think that the use of Exhibit No. 135 in the post-office at Buffalo, when that use long years before had been discontinued, and you had abandoned your stamp enterprise, Exhibit No. 135, could be of the least possible use to Mr. James?

1627 A. I was led to think so, because it is the same combination, as I believed, as that for which a patent was obtained afterwards, and on which this suit is brought.

Q. 180. What is the date of that patent upon which this suit is brought?

A. I don't know the date of it—never knew it; I have been informed recently that it was in January, 1863.

Q. 181. And to whom granted?

A. I don't know.

Q. 182. Suppose you had had this patent, and Mr. James had gored your ox by infringing it, would you then regard it to be wrong to ask him to settle with you for that wrongful act?

A. I don't know whether I should or not in such a case.

Q. 183. When were you first informed that your services would be necessary as a witness in this case?

A. I think it was last Tuesday.

Q. 184. Were you subpœnaed in writing, and your fees tendered you?

A. Neither.

NELSON K. HOPKINS,
Special Examiner.

February 14th, 1878, at 2½ p. m., same counsel present.

SAMUEL N. ANTHONY, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARK:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

1628 A. My name is Samuel N. Anthony; I was sixty years old last May; I reside at Geneva, Ontario County, N. Y.; I am police justice.

Q. 2. Were you ever employed in the post-office at Geneva, New York; if so, when and in what capacity?

A. I went into the post-office in the spring of 1861; I was head clerk; I was eight years head clerk, and four years postmaster.

Q. 3. Was an instrument by which letters were postmarked on the envelope, apart from the postage stamp, and the postage stamp cancelled at one blow, used while you were in the office?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, as leading in its character. Second, as framing the answer desired by the counsel from the witness.)

A. I used the postmarker and canceller on one handle, which completed the entire work at one blow.

(In view of the answer given to question, the objection is withdrawn.)

Q. 4. Did any of the postmark appear on the postage stamp?

A. No, not when properly used.

Q. 5. Where is the first instrument of that kind that was used at Geneva?

A. It is in my possession.

Q. 6. Please produce it.

(Witness produces instrument called for by question.)

Q. 7. Please describe how that instrument is made; what was its original elements?

A. The canceller that is brazed on the side of the postmarking device was originally on a handle by itself; the handle was taken off, and the iron brazed on the side of the postmarker.

1629 Q. 8. Did the canceller ever break off?

A. No, sir.

Q. 9. The instrument as it now appears is as originally made, is it?

A. It is, except wear and tear.

Q. 10. Was that instrument put in use in the Geneva post-office; if so, how long was it used?

A. It was used there until we received a union stamp from the government.

Q. 11. About how long was it used, should you say?

A. I should think about three years; I can't tell the time we received one from the government, but think it was in 1864.

Q. 12. Who did the work of combining the post-marker with the canceller?

A. Dr. Wm. F. Eddington brazed the canceller to the post-marker.

Q. 13. Under whose directions?

A. Under mine.

Q. 14. Where did you get the idea?

A. I don't know whether it came from above or below; to explain: I had not sufficient help in the office; I had to do all the mailing; there was more than I could get through with comfortably in time for the mails; on this day, having a larger mail than usual, and feeling it impossible to get through in time for the mail, the post-marking stamp was standing on the table by me, I reached for the canceller, set it up by the side of the post-marker, and the thought struck me the canceller should be brazed on the side and save half my work; I took the handle off the canceller and ran across the street to Dr. Eddington's office and told him to braze it on the side of the post-marker, which he did.

Q 15. What day was this?

A. It was in 1861, soon after I went into the office; I cannot tell the day of the month.

Q. 16. What part of the year did you first go into the office?

1630 A. In May or June, 1861; I cannot tell which; in the first year of Lincoln's administration.

Q. 17. Did you ever see or know of a combined instrument before the one which was made under your direction?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the ground that it is wholly immaterial whether he had or had not known or seen an instrument of the kind contemplated by the question previous to the one the witness made for himself about midsummer, 1861.)

A. Not of that kind for the purposes of post-marking and cancelling at one blow.

Q. 18. Do you believe yourself to be an independent inventor of that combination?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the ground that it is wholly immaterial as to what he believes or does not believe on the subject inquired about.)

A. I believe that I was the first inventor; I had never seen or heard of one.

(The instrument offered in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit one hundred and thirty-six (Anthony), N. K. H., ex'r., Feb. 14th, 1878.)

Cross examination by Mr. NORTON:

Q. 19. About how large is Geneva in population?

A. About seven thousand.

Q. 20. The devices you have described, when so combined as to be used by one handle, for the purpose of putting the post-mark on the letter and the cancellation of the postage-stamp thereon by one blow, saves full one-half the labor in post-marking and cancelling, does it not?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel on the ground that it is not within the scope of the direct examination.)

1631 A. It does.

Q. 21. Do you know what kind of a device is now in use in the Geneva post office for the purposes of post-marking letters and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon?

(Same objection.)

A. I do.

Q. 22. State the same as near as you can.

(Same objection.)

A. There is an iron bar that is horizontal with the face of the stamp; the post-marker and canceller are fastened to that bar, the post-marker being at one end and the canceller at the other; the canceller is a tube filled with rubber, with which the postage-stamp is cancelled; the handle is in the center of the cross-bar; the handle is on the upper part of the cross-bar, and the post-marker and canceller are fastened on the under side of the bar.

Q 23. You say that Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 has been in use in the Geneva post-office?

A. I do.

Q. 24. When was that use discontinued?

A. I think it was in 1864 that the use of that was discontinued; it was at the time we received a union stamp from the government.

Q. 25. How many devices like Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 did you use in the Geneva post-office while you were there?

A. Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 was the only one until we received the new one from the Post-Office Department.

Q. 26. Where did you obtain the post-marker and the postage-cancelling device found in Defendant's Exhibit No. 136, in 1861, at the time when you said you had them brazed together?

A. They were in the office on separate handles when I went there.

1632 Q. 27. Your alleged invention consisted in the brazing of the two devices together so as to perform the functions you have described?

A. Yes.

Q. 28. Did you ever apply for a patent on the device shown by Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 (Anthony)?

A. I did not.

Q. 29. Did you ever communicate to the Postmaster-General, or any officer of the Post-Office Department, the fact of your alleged invention represented by Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 (Anthony)?

A. I never did.

Q. 30. Is Defendant's Exhibit No. 136, which I now hand you, the only device of that kind you ever made or caused to be made?

A. That is the only one.

S. N. ANTHONY.

1634 United States circuit court, southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES. } No.

Examination of witnesses on behalf of respondent, under the 67th rule in equity, as amended, before Charles P. Taft, special examiner, on Monday, March 11th, 1878.

Present, Marcus P. Norton, esq., on behalf of complainant, and Samuel B. Clarke, esq., on behalf of respondent.

JOHN RUPP, a witness produced on behalf of respondent, being first duly sworn, deposes and says, in answer to interrogatories to him propounded by Mr. Clarke for defendant, as follows:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. John Rupp; age, fifty years; residence, No. 8 Miami street, Cincinnati, Ohio; occupation, canceling clerk in Cincinnati post-office.

(Counsel for complainant desiring to take a preliminary objection to the examination of this witness in this cause, puts to the witness the following question:)

Q. 2. Are you in the employ of the United States, and are you paid by the United States for services rendered by you in the Cincinnati post office?

A. I have been in employ of the United States since the 1st of 1635 January, 1864, and have been paid by them for services rendered in the Cincinnati post-office since that time.

(In view of the answer given by the witness to a preliminary question put to him by complainant's counsel, counsel objects to the examination of this witness in this cause by the defendant's counsel, on the ground that the witness is an interested witness, in that the United States, by its Attorney-General, defend this defendant in the employment of counsel and in the payment from the Treasury of the United States of all the expenses attending that defense.)

Q. 3. (By Mr. CLARKE.) You say that you have been employed in the Cincinnati post-office since the 1st of January, 1864. Do you know how letters were postmarked and postage stamps were canceled in that office and at that time?

A. I was employed since the 1st of January, 1864; when I came there I found the stamp made of steel, with a piece of wood attached to the handle of the stamp, with which I could cancel the stamp and put the post-mark on at one stroke; * we had two of them kind of stamps. Mr. Peter Hunt was using one, and I was using one of these stamps. He was the maker of this wood attachment to the stamp. My stamp had been used four years, and the wood was wearing off a little, and I went to work and made a new one on the same principle, like the old one was, which was made by Mr. Peter Hunt; and I used this till the fall of 1865, when the government furnished us with some new stamps. I made a little sketch on a piece of paper, which I will furnish, to show how the whole attachment was constructed.

(Complainant's counsel objects to all that part of the answer commencing with the words "We had two" (see *), as not responsive to the question, and as voluntary evidence on the part of the witness.)

1636 Q. 4. How was this steel stamp, having a wood attachment, used? In what way, and by what material, was the impression made?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. This is a kind of a queer question. The steel stamp was used by putting a piece of wood to the lower part of the handle, and fastened with strings to the handle, leaving a little space between the stamp and the canceller. By preventing from slipping up this attachment, a little piece of wood was cut out of the handle to keep it in its place. This attachment was made out of boxwood.

Q. 5. What countryman are you?

A. German.

Q. 6 and 7. In your answer before the last, where you said, "By preventing from slipping up this attachment," I suppose you meant, "In order to prevent this attachment from slipping up." Is that right?

(This question objected to by counsel for complainant, on the grounds—first, it's improper and incompetent for defendant's counsel to ask the witness, by a leading question, to explain a former answer already on the record, which, being in writing, will explain itself, and also give the court some light as to the intelligence of the witness; second, as being leading. That the quotation last made by the defendant's counsel is an improper quotation, as no such language is used by the witness in answer to the question 4.)

A. It was my intention to say, in order to prevent the attachment from slipping up.

Q. 8. What substance was used with this stamp to make the impression?

A. We used cancelling ink made out of Prussian blue, sweet oil and turpentine.

Q. 9. About how large was the steel stamp with the wood attachment?

1637 A. It was about, with the handle, six inches in length; the steel stamp was about one inch in width, and the attachment about three-quarters of an inch.

Q. 10. You say there was a little space between the cancel and the steel stamp. What's that for?

A. There was a space about one-third of an inch, so that the stamp could be canceled by itself, and the postmark kept separate.

Q. 11. How was this piece of boxwood attached? Describe fully.

A. This piece of boxwood was attached to the lower part of the handle. One piece was cut out of the side, and the other made a joint with a handle and then was fastened by fine cordage.

Q. 12. You mean, do you not, that there was a cleft cut in the handle, into which the end of the boxwood attachment fitted, and the attachment was thereby prevented from slipping up when the instrument was used?

(This question objected to by complainant's counsel on the following grounds:

1st. As a reflection on this court that it has not sufficient intelligence to understand the last answer of the witness.

2d. Not only as leading, but as instructing the witness as to the precise answer counsel desires the witness to give.

3d. As an effort on the part of the counsel to cram the witness.

4th. If the witness shall answer the question, it will not be his testimony, but the testimony of examining counsel.)

A. That was my intention to say—the very manner in which the attachment was fixed.

Q. 13. Did the cordage hold the canceler and steel stamp securely together?

(This question objected to as leading by counsel of complainant.)

1638 A. The canceller was fastened to the handle of the steel stamp.

Q. 14. What I want to know is, whether or not the cordage which you have spoken of held the canceler and the steel stamp together firmly and securely?

(This question objected to by complainant's counsel:

1st. As having been put to the witness and answered in question 13 and the answer thereto.

2d. As being immaterial as to what the defendant's counsel wants or does not want to know, after the witness has already answered the same question.)

A. The cordage held the steel stamp and the canceler securely, by wrapping the cordage very tight around the lower part of the handle and the attachment.

Q. 15. How long did you say that this instrument made by you continued to be used?

A. It was used from fifteen to sixteen months.

Q. 16. Can you make a drawing of the instrument you have described, having a boxwood canceler attached to the lower part of the handle of a postmarking stamp by means of fine cordage, the canceler and postmarking stamp being about a third of an inch apart, and the end of the canceler fitting into a cleft in the wood of the handle so as to prevent slipping?

(This question objected to by counsel for complainant:

1st. Improper and immaterial.

2d. The so-called instrument must itself be produced before any evidence can be given concerning it, instead of the imaginations and hieroglyphics of the witness.)

A. Yes; I think I can make a little sketch.

matter when you say that Peter Hunt was the maker of this wooden attachment to the stamp?

A. All the knowledge I have was what he told me when I entered the service. *He told me he used it very nearly four years.

(Counsel for complainant objects to all that part of the answer 1643 after the star (*), as improper, and not responsive to the question, and 2nd, as having been volunteered on the part of the witness questioned.)

Q. 35. Did you understand the last question at the time you made the answer you did do it?

A. I understood it so far as to what Peter Hunt told me and other men in office told me.

Q. 36. You are not inquired of as to what Peter Hunt or anybody else told you, for that would be illegitimate and improper for you to state as a witness on the stand. I again ask you if you have any personal knowledge. I mean by that, any knowledge you may have aside from what anybody may have told you about the matter now under inquiry?

A. I have no knowledge outside, except from Peter Hunt and some men employed in the office told me.

Q. 37. In your same answer to question three you state these words: "My stamp had been used four years." Of your own knowledge, independent of anything that anybody may have said to you, do you know that that stamp, which you swear you used in 1864, had been used in that post-office for a period of four (4) years previous to that time?

A. In reference to this I have to state that I had to believe what the men I was working with told me, that the stamp was four years in use.

Q. 38. All you know about it then, is what some persons in the post-office told you in 1864?

A. Yes, sir; that is all.

Q. 39. Where is Mr. F. Mayer, who was postmaster in this city in the year 1865?

A. He lives in Cincinnati, on Dayton street; I can't state the number of the house.

Q. 40. Did you, in the year 1865, in the post-office in this city, know a person by the name of Chas. Ballance?

A. Yes, sir; I do; he was my partner in the cancelling department, when Mr. Hunt was turned out by a change of the postmaster.

1644 Q. 41. What year was Mr. Hunt "turned out," and what part of the year?

A. It was in 1864, I can't state exactly the part; I think in April or May; I can't tell.

Q. 42. What were Mr. Ballance's duties in that office in November, 1865?

A. He was canceling clerk.

Q. 43. Was he not the head stamping clerk in that office at that time?

A. We both were alike; we both had the same duty till in the fall I made the canceling ink and took the lead; but we were both paid the same salary.

Q. 44. Where is Mr. Ballance now?

A. He is dead.

Q. 45. And how long has he been dead?

A. Some over five years.

Q. 46. Was he a clerk in the post-office at the time of his death?

A. Yes, sir; he only was sick three days.

Q. 47. Did he occupy the same position at the time of his death as he did in 1865?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. 48. What are your present duties in that post-office?

A. Canceling letters.

Q. 49. Are you the head stamping clerk there, and have been for how long?

A. Since fall of 1865.

Q. 50. Have you had any associate head stampers since the death of Mr. Ballance?

A. Not that I know of.

Recess in taking depositions is now taken by agreement of counsel, 2 p. m., March 11, 1878, to be resumed at 3 p. m. of same day.

Taking of depositions resumed, according to the agreement of counsel, at 3 p. m. Q. 51. In your same answer to question three, in direct examination, you state as follows: "I went to 1647 A. 57. A represents the handle, B the cross-piece of iron, C the postmarking stamp, D the canceler, made out of a piece of brass tube with a cork in it.

Q. 58. Is the stamp, I mean the postmarking and the postage-stamp cancelling instrument, described by you in the last answer, now in use in the post-office in this city?

A. No, sir; them stamps had only day and month, and now we put in the hour of the day, and we took off the cork and brass tube, and put on a steel canceler, in place of the brass tube and cork.

Q. 59. When did you do that?

A. About four or five years ago.

Q. 60. What was the purpose in doing that?

A. Because steel lasts so much longer, and cork wore out about every two days.

Q. 61. That was the only reason for the change, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 62. The instruments with the change still continued to postmark the letter on the envelope, and at the same time cancel the postage-stamp by one blow or operation of the instrument, did it not?

A. Yes, sir; it did.

Q. 63. Which made the most distinct and perfect cancellation of the postage-stamp, the cork or the steel canceler, so far as you know?

A. Cork will cancel it better, but steel is the nicer work.

Q. 64. Which, in your opinion, would last the longer for a postage-stamp canceler, cork or wood?

A. Wood would last longer, by my own experience. I did put some wood in this brass tube, in place of the cork, and it lasted longer and worked well.

Q. 65. Which, in your judgment, would last longer, wood or steel, for a postage-stamp canceler?

A. I don't think there would be much difference; good hard wood would last just as long as steel.

1648 Q. 66. Which, in your opinion, from your experience, would perform the work best, and make a more successful cancellation of the postage-stamp, steel or wood?

A. I think steel.

Q. 67. Since 1865, an instrument having a cross bar with the handle attached to the upper surface, and a postmarker attached to one end of the lower surface of the cross-bar and a postage canceling device at the other end of the cross bar and on its under surface, and until now during each intervening year have been used in the post-office in this city, have they not?

A. Yes, sir; they have been used.

Q. 68. Is an instrument of that description now in use in that post-office for postmarking letters on the envelope and at the same time canceling the postage-stamp in ink by one blow or operation of the instrument?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 69. Being head stamping clerk in the Cincinnati post office at this time, and having been such for several years past, suppose you were furnished with a canceling instrument with a series of knife blades upon its acting surface, with sharp edges to cut the postage stamp and at the same time go through the envelope and through its contents, what is your opinion of the value of such a contrivance as that?

A. I think it would be a very good thing. I saw it once done by men who brought it to Cincinnati to try.

Q. 70. How long ago was that?

A. I can't give the correct time.

Q. 71. What was the result of that trial?

A. It worked pretty well, by taking off the postage stamp that was full of little holes, and could not be used again.

Q. 72. How long was that use continued in the office?

A. It was only a few letters were tried with it.

Q. 73. Why not more?

1649 A. That is what I can't tell; the postmaster had the control over it.

Q. 74. Have you seen that device since that time?

A. No. I could not tell you where it is.

Q. 75. Do you really and sincerely believe that an instrument with sharp edged knives, that will cut through the postage stamp, through the envelope, through the letter and the contents enclosed therein, such as checks, drafts, notes, photographs, kid gloves, pocket handkerchiefs, and such like is "a good thing?" I ask you to make answer to this question from your experience in the post-office in this city for the last twelve years.

A. I don't think it would be a good thing; it may be good for stamping circulars and plain papers and for nothing else, especially not for hard subjects.

Q. 76. Then, I understand you to say that it would be of no use in a post-office, but injurious and damaging when used in the postal service upon letters and other mailable matter having postage-stamps thereon?

A. I don't think it would be good by any means.

Q. 77. You think it would be damaging and injurious to the service?

Q. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. 78. Have you any doubt about it?

A. Not the least.

Q. 79. Do you know what has become of the instrument which you say Peter Hunt used in the Cincinnati post office in the year when you first went into the post-office in 1864?

A. We laid it aside in the storeroom with old stamps. When we hunted for it the whole box was lost and I have not seen it since.

Q. 80. Is that the same condition concerning the one which you said you made and used in the latter part of the year 1864?

A. It was one of the same stamps with the new attachment to which I made.

Q. 81. Do you know what's become of it?

A. I cannot tell; it got lost with the other ones.

1650 Q. 82. Did you ever see an instrument of that kind previous to your going into the post office as a stamping clerk in 1864?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. 83. Did you know that on the 17th day of November, 1865, F. J. Mayer, postmaster, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Chas. Ballance, stamping clerk in the Cincinnati post-office awhile, signed a certificate in the following words and figures, to wit: "This is to certify that we, the undersigned, postmasters at and for the respective places designated under our said respective signatures, have in use in our said post-offices, whereof we are deputy postmasters, the double marking and postage canceling stamp known as Norton's patent or improvement, and furnished to us by the Post-Office Department at Washington, by means of which the postmark is given on the envelope and the postage stamp canceled at the same time and blow of the instrument. We have carefully read the printed copy, affidavit of C. Smith, pages 6 and 7 of House of Representatives Document of No. 27, 38th Congress, 2d session; also printed copy, letter of Abram Wakeman, dated January 3d, 1863, pages 4 and 5 of same document; also printed letter from the post-office of Washington City, D. C., dated on the 18th day of March, 1864, page 6 of same document; also printed copy of affidavit of Gen. John A. Dix, pages 1 and 2, of House of Representatives Executive Document, No. 27, part 2d; also printed copy affidavit of E. Hoole, pages 3 and 4, same document. And as to the matter of economy in time and labor, and as to the matter of the more perfect cancellation of the postage-stamp and the postmarking on the envelope of the letter, each named and set forth in the aforesaid named and printed papers in said executive documents, Nos. 27 and 27, part 2d, we fully concur, as experience in our respective offices has fully proven. We believe the said instrument to be and to answer all the purposes claimed for it. We are satisfied that 1651 it is a labor-saving instrument, that by its use the postmark is made upon the letter envelope in a more intelligible manner, while, at the same time, the postage-stamp is more perfectly and permanently canceled than by any other known device"?

(Objected to by counsel for defendant as assuming that such certificate was made; and 2d, as immaterial. 3d, as not within the scope of the direct examination. 4th, because the original paper should be produced or its absence accounted for before any questions based on it are in order.)

A. I was not there at the time, but I heard the next day that they signed a paper on account of the stamps. That is all I know about it.

Q. 84. You've heard the description stated in the above question concerning the utility, value, and importance in and to the postal service, of the instrument now in use in the post-office in this city. Do you believe that to be a fair statement as to those matters?

(Objected to as assuming the existence of the certificate referred to; 2d, as immaterial. 3d, as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I believe it is fair, so much of it as I heard read.

Q. 85. You heard question "83" read to you by the examiner, did you not?

A. Yes, I heard you read it.

Q. 86. Just before answering the last question you said something about hearing something said concerning the certificate about the time it was made by parties in the post-office. Please state those words again and as near as you did state them, just before you last answered them?

(Objected to by counsel for defendant, 1st, as immaterial; 2d, as asking for hearsay. 3d, as assuming the fact, and as misstating the words of the witness.)

1652 A. I misunderstood the whole thing in reference to the last question. My partner told me that he was signing those papers for the man that had the patent.

Q. 87. Now please explain what you mean when you say "I misunderstood the whole thing about the last question."

A. I thought this was in reference to the question before, whether I knew anything about those stamps.

Q. 88. During your direct examination, you frequently used the word "cleft." Do you know the meaning of that word?

A. My meaning is that it is a kind of curve.

Q. 89. You have frequently used the word "partner." What do you mean by that word?

A. We use this word, generally, when two men work together.

Q. 90. Mr. Ballance was your partner in the post-office in 1865, was he not?

A. Yes, sir; he was.

Q. 91. How many times have you and the defendant's counsel had interviews together concerning the subject matter of your evidence in this cause, previous to your coming to the stand as a witness?

A. Only once.

JOHN RUPP.

Subscribed in my presence, and sworn to before me, this 11th day of March, 1878.

CHAS. P. TAFT,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned to 9.30, March 12, 1878, Tuesday, by agreement of counsel.

Met pursuant to adjournment, and taking of depositions resumed at 9.30 a. m., March 12, 1878.

Present, same counsel as before.

WM. GEILFUS, a witness produced on behalf of defendant, 1653 being first duly sworn, deposes and says, in answer to interrogatories to him propounded by S. B. CLARKE for defendant, as follows:

Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation, and what countryman are you?

A. Name, Wm. Geilfus; age, fifty-six years old; residence, Walnut street, 586, Cincinnati, Ohio; occupation, post-office clerk; countryman, a German.

Q. 2. How long have you been employed in the post-office?

A. Since about 1852; since about the middle of Filmore's administration.

Q. 3. Are you still employed in the post-office?

A. Yes, sir.

(Complainant's counsel objects to further examination of this witness, as a witness in this cause, upon the same ground and for the same reasons stated, as objections to the examination of the witness John Rupp, a person produced as a witness on the part of defendant, and examined yesterday.)

Q. 4. Give a full description of the manner in which letters were post-marked, and postage stamps were canceled in the Cincinnati post-office prior to 1863, if you know?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, as incompetent and improper at this stage of the examination, no foundation for the inquiry having been first made.)

A. The stamps that were fixed on the letters were canceled with the post-marking stamp that had the inscription of Cincinnati, the month and day of the month; this manner of canceling was before 1860. In the beginning of the summer of 1860 we received an order from Washington to put this Cincinnati stamp, I mean the post-marking stamp, not on the postage stamp, but on the envelope, and cancel the postage stamp with what we call the dummy; this dummy is a separate 1654 cancelling stamp, without inscription or any letters on it; the dummy had parallel bars on its acting face. We received the order on a Friday, but what Friday I cannot tell; the stampers, that is, the men who hold the stamps, had to handle the letters twice, first with the Cincinnati and next with the dummy. The Monday following this Friday which I mentioned, I cannot recollect the dates, but can the days, when I came to the office, Mr. Peter Hunt, the canceling clerk, told me that he had fixed an arrangement by which to save half of this labor. He had cut out a wooden attachment in the place of the dummy, and fastened it to the handle with strings tied around it; I believe that wood was hickory wood; that was in 1860; in the fall of the same year a gentleman from Troy, New York, was brought in by Dr. Vattier, postmaster, with the remark that this gentleman, I don't know his name, would stop Mr. Hunt from using his arrangement. Mr. Hunt's remark to me about this was, all Hell couldn't stop him from using that contrivance. This was the last I saw or heard of that man; he never molested Mr. Hunt after that; but Mr. Hunt continued to use that contrivance a long time afterwards. We used that contrivance until the Department furnished us with a new double stamp. I can't tell the year it was. It may have been the year 1862, 1863, or 1865, I can't tell what year. It was about that time.

What I mean by the wooden attachment, in place of the dummy being attached to the handle, is, that it was attached to the handle of the post-marking stamp by means of cord.

Q. 5. Did you see Peter Hunt's device, consisting of a wooden attachment, connected to the post-marking stamp by twine, on that Monday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Describe in detail the post-marking stamp to which this piece of hickory wood was attached, giving dimensions and materials as well as you can.

1655 A. The handle of the stamp was wood, about six or seven inches high, I mean the whole stamp was six or seven inches high, including handle and all; the handle was large enough for a man's hand to grasp it conveniently so as to work it with ease; at the lower end of the handle there was a brass band to keep it from splitting; the balance was iron or steel, I can't tell which; on the acting face of this steel or iron was engraved a circle which would print a circle on the envelope, and within that circle was engraved Cincinnati, O., and in the centre of the circle was a square mortice in which we inserted printing type for the month and day of the month, and those type were held in from the outside of the post-marking stamp by means of a set screw. These letters I refer to were raised letters and were printing type.

Q. 7. Describe now in detail how the canceler, made of hickory wood, was attached to this post-marking stamp which you have described, and what the shape and size of this canceler was, and what configuration was on its acting face.

A. The piece of hickory was, say, from three-quarters to an inch in diameter; about three inches long; the bottom was round, and the attachment slanted to the handle. The handle is round, and in order to fasten the attachment to it he had to cut off some of the handle so as to make a flat surface on a part of it at the place where the attachment was tied to it. This was attached in that manner by strings wound around the two, holding them firmly together. There were parallel bars on its face; I'm not perfectly certain, but I think there were parallel bars on its acting surface.

Q. 8. With what material was this instrument used to make the impression of cancellation and of post-marking?

A. It was some kind of printing ink.

Q. 9. Who was postmaster at the time Peter Hunt made this contrivance which you have described?

A. Doctor J. L. Vattier.

Q. 10. How do you fix the year 1860 as the year in which Peter Hunt made that contrivance?

1656 A. It was the year before Doctor Vattier went out of office; Doctor Vattier went out in the spring of 1861, and this was in 1860.

Q. 11. Did you see this contrivance actually used from time to time in the Cincinnati post-office, from the time when Peter Hunt first made it, down to the time when the Post-Office Department began to furnish double stamps?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination of the witness by MARCUS P. NORTON, counsel for complainant:

Q. 12. Do you know, of your own personal knowledge, where Peter Hunt obtained the instrument described by you on your direct examination? and in answering please do not state anything that you heard any one say about of it, but simply your personal knowledge of it.

A. I don't know anything about it except it was furnished by the postmaster. The old dummy was also furnished by the postmaster; but I didn't see Peter Hunt make the combined instrument which I have described.

Q. 13. After the first combined instrument which you saw in the Cincinnati post-office in the year 1860, and described by you on your direct examination, were there any changes or alterations made in that by Peter Hunt or anybody else after 1860?

A. As far as I know there were improvements made, but I don't know in what they consisted or who made them.

Q. 14. In what part of the year 1860 did you first see the combined instrument described by you on your direct examination?

A. It was three or four days after we received the order from Washington.

Q. 15. What time was the order received, and what was that order, referred to in your answer?

A. As I stated before, either in the spring or summer; in the 1657 warm season some time, I can't say exactly when. I have described that order on my direct examination.

Q. 16. Should it hereafter appear in evidence that the order referred to in the last answer was dated the 23d day of July, 1860, and that that order was signed by Hon. Joseph Holt, Postmaster-General, or by Hon. Horatio King, First Assistant Postmaster-General, then what would you have to say as to the time you first saw in the Cincinnati post-office the combined instrument described by you on your direct examination?

(Objected to by counsel for defendant as improper to put such a supposition to a witness.)

A. 'Twas after the date of the order in Washington, whatever that may have been, and after the postmaster here had received that order and announced it to the clerks; precisely when the order was received, I can't tell any more definitely than I have already stated.

Q. 17. Do you know what has become of that first combined instrument described by you on your direct examination, which, you say, you saw Peter Hunt have in the Cincinnati post-office during the year 1860, and precisely when in that year you do not remember?

A. No, sir; I don't know where it is; it's used up, thrown away; I don't know anything about it.

Q. 18. I understood you to say that John Rupp, a witness examined yesterday, made some changes or improvements upon the combined instrument which you say you saw Hunt have in the Cincinnati post-office; is that correct?

A. I think he did, but what they were I can't say.

Q. 19. What has become of the instrument which you say John Rupp had in the post-office at Cincinnati?

A. I couldn't tell.

1658 Q. 20. In what year was it that you saw Rupp have the combined instrument in the Cincinnati post-office?

A. I cannot tell, but it was in the beginning of his first year's service after he came into the post-office.

Q. 21. When did you last see that combined instrument?

A. I cannot tell, I cannot fix the date.

Q. 22. When was the use of that instrument discontinued in the Cincinnati post-office?

A. It was discontinued at the time we received the new double stamps from Washington. After an interval that I can't state, Mr. Hunt used it again for a short time, and then it was permanently laid aside, so far as I know.

Q. 23. You say, on this examination, if I understand you correctly, that Peter Hunt made several changes and alterations in the combined stamp described by you on your direct examination, and that such changes were made after you first saw it. Do you know in what those changes consisted?

A. I did not say Peter Hunt made the changes; but Peter Hunt or John Rupp, I can't tell which, made those changes. There were improvements made, or changes, but I don't know whether it was John Rupp or Peter Hunt that made them.

Q. 24. Do you know where that combined instrument which you say was changed and improved upon after you first saw it, either by John Rupp or Peter Hunt, which you do not remember, now is?

A. Don't know anything about it.

Q. 25. When did you last see this combined or changed device of which you speak on your cross-examination?

A. I don't remember the date.

Q. 26. Can you state the year in which the Post-Office Department furnished the Cincinnati post-office with the combined post-marking and postage-stamp canceling instrument?

A. No, sir; I couldn't state it only by a circumstantial method

1659 Q. 27. You have spoken on your direct examination about a Troy man coming to the Cincinnati post-office, and who saw the then postmaster and Peter Hunt; you have said Peter Hunt said something about hell on that occasion; do you know the name of that Troy man?

A. No, sir.

Q. 28. Do you know what year he was there?

A. I think in the fall of 1860.

Q. 29. Do you know whether he was there in the fall of 1860 or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. 30. Was that person the counsel now conducting this cross-examination?

A. I cannot tell.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARK, counsel for defendant:

Q. 31. In what did the changes or improvements consist that were made by John Rupp or Peter Hunt?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. 32. Did they make the instrument substantially different from what you have described the one to have been that was first made by Peter Hunt?

(Objected to by counsel for complainant. 1st. That the witness has already answered by saying, I do not recollect what those changes or improvements were. 2d. This witness is not a competent witness to testify as to what is or what is not an equivalent. 3d. He's not a competent witness to testify as to what is or what is not a substantial difference.)

A. 32. I'm not a judge of mechanics; the changes consisted in 1660 the shape of the attachment, as I recollect, and one of them used different kind of wood I think.

Recross-examination:

Q. 33. Do you know what is meant by the terms "substantially different"?

A. I understand about substantially different that they changed the whole contrivance.

Q. 34. Do you know of anything you have stated on your cross-examination that you desire to change, alter, or modify?

A. Not that I recollect.

Q. 35. How did you happen to become a witness in this cause?

A. I don't know what to say to that question.

Q. Did the postmaster or assistant postmaster at Cincinnati post-office direct or request you to come here to be examined as a witness in this cause?

A. Not the postmaster nor his assistant told me personally to appear here. One of the clerks, Mr. Hansman, told me that I was wanted here as a witness yesterday evening about four o'clock; the same did John Rupp and this gentleman here, Mr. Clarke.

Deposition being read over to the witness, he states, with reference to question "18" and answer as follows:

I don't think it was the instrument used by Mr. Hunt that Mr. Rupp changed, but it was his own, i. e., the one that he used.

(Question by Mr. Norton here asked.)

Q. 37. You mean whatever changes were made on those two instruments were either made by Hunt on his own instrument, or by Rupp on his own instrument, do you not, in your explanation as a correction of your former testimony?

1661 A. Yes, I think that's the way it was.

WM. GEILFUS.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 12th day of March, 1878.

CHAS. P. TAFT,
Special Examiner.

Taking of depositions adjourned to 9.30 a. m., Wednesday, March 1878.

WEDNESDAY, March 13—9.30 a. m.

Taking of depositions adjourned sine die by agreement of counsel.

NITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Ohio, County of Hamilton, ss:

I, Chas. P. Taft, a notary public within and for said county, appointed by special order of court, a certified copy of which is hereto annexed, to act as special examiner, under the 67th rule in equity as amended, in the cause stated in the caption, do hereby certify that the foregoing examination was held at my office, Nos. 65 & 66 Johnston Buildings, Cincinnati, Ohio, on the 11th, 12th, and 13th days of March, A. D. 1878; the adjournments being made at the times in said depositions stated.

I further certify that, at the said time and place, I was attended by John Rupp and William Geilfus, witnesses produced on behalf of respondent; that the said witnesses were, previous to the commencement of their respective depositions, by me severally examined, cautioned and solemnly sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and the said depositions hereinbefore appearing were reduced to writing by C. H. Avery, a disinterested party, in the presence 1662 of counsel for both parties, who assented thereto, and read over to said witnesses respectively, and were thereupon by them respectively, subscribed, and were at the same time severally authenticated by my signature.

I further certify that I am not of counsel, nor attorney nor relative of either of the parties to this cause, nor in any manner interested in the result of the same.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my notarial seal, this 13th day of March, 1878.

[L. S.] CHAS. P. TAFT,
N. P., Special Examiner.

1663 Testimony taken orally on behalf of the defendant.

Circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York. In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN trust,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, UNITED STATES POSTmaster, New York.

Before JOHN A. SHIELDS, Esq., an examiner of this court, under the 67th equity rule, as amended.

NEW YORK, January 3d, 1878.

Present, Mr. George H. Williams and Mr. Marcus P. Norton, of counsel for complainant; Mr. Samuel B. Clarke, U. S. ass't attorney, counsel for defendant.

ANTHONY YEOMAN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Anthony Yeoman; 45 years of age; 112 Sullivan street; general superintendent of the New York post-office.

2. Q. How long have you been employed in the New York post-office?

A. About twenty-four years.

3. Q. What work did you do when you first came into the office?

A. Stamped letters.

1664 4. Q. How long did you continue the stamping?
A. I think about five years.
5. Q. What did you do then?
A. I went to making mails on the South letter table.
6. Q. How long did you continue at that?
A. Two or three years.
7. Q. What did you do next?
A. I had charge of bagging the South mail.
8. Q. How long?
A. About three or four years at that.
9. Q. What year was it that you ceased to have charge of bagging?
A. I should judge about 1865, or somewheres in that neighborhood.
10. Q. Have you had, during all the time that you have been in the post-office, an opportunity of knowing, and do you know, what instruments have been used in the office while you have been employed therein, for the postmarking of letters and cancellation of postage-stamps?
A. I think I do know, and that I have had the opportunity to know.
11. Q. Describe, in detail, the sort of instrument that was used for the purpose when you first went into the office.
A. It was a single stamp, with the postmark, which put the postmark on the postage-stamp and cancelled the stamp at the same time, by the postmark.
12. Q. Was the instrument a hand stamp?
A. It was.
13. Q. Did it postmark the letter and cancel the stamp at one blow?
A. It put a postmark on the postage-stamp and cancelled the stamp at one blow.
14. Q. Did the postmark appear wholly on the postage-stamp?
A. The postmark was somewhat larger than the postage-stamp; the rim and portions of it would naturally come on the letter.
1665 15. Q. What is the postmark?
A. New York, day of the month, and month.
16. Q. What shape?
A. Round.
17. Q. Was it an ink mark that was made on the postage-stamp and envelope?
A. It was.
18. Q. Did anything else appear on the postage-stamp and envelope except the ink mark?
A. It did not.
19. Q. Of what parts was the instrument made up?
A. Wooden handle, the stump made of iron or steel, I don't know which; that is about all; I think there might have been there a brass ring to keep the handle from splitting; also loose type designating months and days, which are held in their place by a finger screw on the side of the stamp.
20. Q. How was the—what you call the stamp—attached to the handle?
A. I think it had one of these spindles; it had a prong, I should call it, drove right into the handle.
21. Q. Of what shape and size was the ring which you call the stamp?
A. It was of cylinder shape; the size, I should judge, about an inch or an inch and a quarter in diameter; about two inches high up to the point where it joined to the handle.

22. Q. How long did this instrument continue to be used?

A. I think it was discontinued in 1860, as near as my recollection goes.

23. Q. Who was postmaster when it was discontinued to be used?

A. I think John A. Dix.

24. Q. What was the reason for discontinuing the use of this instrument?

A. There was an order received from the Post-Office Department at Washington, ordering the postmark to be put on the letter or envelope, and the postage-stamp to be cancelled with some other method.

1666 (The last answer is objected to by complainant's counsel, as the order has not been produced, which is the best evidence.)

25. Q. Without stating what the contents of the order were, I understand you to mean that it was in consequence of an order from the Post-Office Department that the instrument ceased to be used; is that so?

(Objected to as above, and because it is leading. Question withdrawn.)

Q. 26. Without stating the contents of any paper, state why the instrument you have described ceased to be used.

(Same objection.)

A. In consequence of an order received from the Post-Office Department.

(Same objection as to the answer.)

27. Q. Describe what sort of an instrument was used after this order was received.

(Complainant's counsel objects to any evidence by this witness showing or tending to show the use of the instrument described in letters patent No. 38175, dated April 14th, 1863, and issued to Marcus P. Norton, prior to his application for that patent, upon the ground that the allegations of the answer are too general and indefinite, and do not sufficiently describe such evidence to entitle the defendant to introduce it.)

A. The first that we used was a canceller soldered on the side of the postmarking hand stamp.

28. Q. What was the shape of this canceller?

A. It was round or cylinder shape.

29. Q. Of what material was it composed?

A. Iron or steel, I don't know which.

30. Q. What configuration did its acting face have?

1667 A. I think it was in the shape of rings; I suppose that is what you call it.

31. Q. Was the cancelling cylinder of the same size, diameter, and height as the postmarking cylinder?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It was considerable smaller.

32. Q. In both diameter and height?

A. Both diameter and height.

33. Q. Was any change made in the postmarking instrument other than the soldering of the cancelling to the side of the postmarking cylinder?

(Same objection.)

A. There was not.

34. Q. Fix the date as accurately as you can when this combined postmarking and cancelling instrument was first used.

A. As near as I can recollect, it was in 1860.

35. Q. Do you remember what part of the year—summer, winter, fall, or spring?

A. I do not.

36. Q. How long did a combined instrument of the kind you have described continue to be used in the New York post-office?

A. Three or four days; perhaps a week.

37. Q. What change, if any, was made?

A. There was a postmark—the cross bar with a cork attached as a canceller.

38. Q. How was the handle attached to the cross-bar, and where?

A. Right in the center of the cross-bar connected by this prong to the handle.

39. Q. What was the shape of the cross bar?

A. It was iron; I should judge about two inches long, half an inch wide, and an eighth of an inch thick.

40. Q. How was the cork canceller attached to the cross-bar?

A. It was screwed on one end, the screw running underneath right through the cross-bar.

1668 41. Q. What was the shape of the acting face of the cork?

A. Round.

42. Q. Was it cut across, or in any way figured?

A. They had different devices; sometimes a cross, star, and other devices.

43. Q. Was any change made in the postmarking cylinder, and how was it attached?

A. There was; it was made smaller than the old style, and screwed on the other end of the cross-bar.

44. Q. Was there any other change than in the size of the postmarking cylinder?

A. Not that I am aware of, at that time.

45. Q. What change was there, if any, in the whole instrument at any time subsequent to the time when it was made with a cork canceller and cross-bar connected to the postmarking cylinder?

A. There has been several alterations; the bar was made longer than the postmark and canceller, have more space between them, as it gave a better impression or appearance on the letters, also the different hours of the day; there was, also, a change made that the postmark cylinder was combined in one solid piece with the bar; that is about all.

46. Q. Was any other substance than cork used for cancellation?

A. There was; there was rubber.

47. Q. Secured to the cross-bar in the same way?

A. Secured to the cross-bar in the same way.

48. Q. Between the year 1860, when the first instrument that you have any knowledge of was discarded, and the year 1864, was any other instrument used for the purpose of cancelling postage-stamps on letters and postmarking the letters on the envelope, wholly apart from the postage-stamp, than substantially the instruments which you have described in the New York post-office?

(Objected to as asking for the judgment of the witness instead for a description of the instruments used.)

1669 A. I think not.

49. Q. Was an instrument having the cancelling cylinder soldered to the side of the postmarking cylinder, in the manner you have described, or an instrument having the postmarking cylinder attached to the cross-bar and a cancelling cork or cancelling rubber attached to the cross-bar, in the manner you have described, used uninterruptedly in the New York post-office between and including the years 1860 and 1864?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. This is the only stamp I know of that has been used during those years.

50. Q. Well, were the instruments referred to used at the time indicated?

A. They were.

51. Q. Were they used without interruption?

A. They were.

52. Q. Look at the instrument which I now produce, and state what changes would have to be made in it in order that it might be like the instrument which was used in the New York post-office when you were first employed there

A. By taking the cross-bar away and putting a prong at the end of the postmarking cylinder, and putting it into the handle; the postmarking cylinder is somewhat smaller.

(Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the instrument mentioned in 52 Q., and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, J. A. S., ex'r., Jan. 3, 1878.)

53. Q. State what changes would have to be made in order that it might be like the instrument used in 1860, in which the cancelling cylinder was soldered to the postmarking cylinder?

A. The same alteration as in the previous answer—an iron canceller soldered to the postmarking cylinder.

1670 54. Q. What changes would have to be made in order that it might be like the instrument which took the place of the one in which the cancelling cylinder was soldered to the side of the postmarking cylinder?

A. None whatever.

55. Q. Do you mean that the instrument is ready for use as it stands?

A. No; it would have to have a cork canceller attached. In the previous answer I forgot to state that it was just the same as this with the exception of the cork canceller.

Cross-examination:

54 & 56. X Q. You commenced as a stamper in the New York post-office about 1853?

A. Yes, sir.

55, 56, & 57. X Q. You continued to be a stamper, you say, for about five years?

A. I did.

56. X Q. During the year 1860, and up to 1864, you were engaged in putting up and bagging the mails—the South mail, as I understand?

A. Yes, sir.

57. X Q. What you know about the adoption and use of stamps during that time was what you chiefly learned from others in the office, was it not?

A. From what I learned from my personal and daily observation.

58. Q. Did you have anything to do with the stamping of letters at that time?

A. I used often to help stamp.

59. X Q. When the postmark was put upon the postage-stamp was it not useless to indicate where the letter was mailed after the postage-stamp was removed?

(Counsel for defendant objects on the ground that the question goes beyond the range of the direct examination.)

A. In a great many cases it was.

1671 60. X Q. Was it not always the case?

A. Not in all cases, because you could get some idea of what the postmark was, even if the stamp was off.

61. X Q. Was not the postmark, when put upon the postage-stamp, generally a feeble or faint impression on account of the color of the postage stamp?

(Same objection.)

A. As a general thing, yes, at that time.

62. X Q. Why was the use of the instrument, soldered as you have described, abandoned after the use of a week or so?

A. For the reason that the solder would break, and it would have to be resoldered again, which caused a good deal of trouble and annoyance, when, I think at the suggestion of Mr. James Holbrook, the cross-bar and cork was substituted.

(Counsel for complainant objects to the last part of the answer as being irresponsive.)

63. X Q. Did you not understand, and was it not the understanding in the office, that this instrument with a cross-bar was the invention of Mr. Marcus P. Norton?

(Objected to on the ground that the "understanding" is not proper to be asked about in view of the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I did not so understand it.

64. X Q. Whose invention did you understand it to be?

A. James Holbrook; that was always my impression.

65. X Q. When and where did Mr. Holbrook have that stamp made?

(Same objection.)

1672 A. Mr. Holbrook suggested this idea to Mr. Charles Smith, then head stamper at the New York post-office, who had it made.

66. X Q. Who made it, and where was it made?

(Objected to on the same ground as before, and also as the witness should be first asked if he has personal knowledge who made it.)

A. I think it was made by a man of the name of Thomas Corbett, in William street, New York.

67. X Q. When was it made?

(Objected to on the same ground.)

A. About the year 1860.

68. X Q. Did you ever hear about that time in the post-office that Mr. Norton had invented such a stamp?

(Objected to as asking for hearsay evidence.)

A. Not at that time.

Adjourned to Friday, January 4th, at 12 m.

NEW YORK, Friday, January 4, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Cross-examination of ANTHONY YEOMAN continued:

69. X Q. When was Mr. Abram Wakeman postmaster in New York?

A. I think it was about 1862 or 1863; I am not certain; somewhere about that neighborhood.

70. X Q. Do you remember that during that time a combined stamp was used in the New York post-office in which the postage canceller was a cutter?

1673 A. I cannot say as to the time whether it was that time or not; there was such a canceller used temporarily as an experiment.

71. X Q. In and about the years 1860, '61, or '62, was there not, by persons in and about the New York post-office, experimenting more or less for the purpose of ascertaining what form or what materials in a combined instrument would produce the most satisfactory results?

A. There has not been a year up to the present time but what there has been an invention in postmarking instruments tried at the New York post-office, and every facility given the parties owning the same a fair trial, that the U. S. Government might benefit thereby.

72. X Q. Then it follows, does it not, that a good many inventions have been tried in the New York post-office which have been found to be useless and impracticable?

A. There has, a great many.

73. X Q. Why was the cutting canceller not used longer than it was in the N. Y. post office?

(Objected to on the ground that it is not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. Because it not only cut through the stamp, but through the letter and contents of the envelope.

74. X Q. Was it regarded as useless on account of the injury which it did to the contents of the letters?

(Same objection.)

A. It was.

75. X Q. How many of the combined stamps did Mr. Charles Smith have made?

A. I cannot say; I would say at a guess that there was about six or eight stampers—it might have been that each stamper had two stamps—making altogether eight or sixteen stamps.

76. X Q. What makes you think that Mr. Holbrook suggested the idea of such combined stamps to Mr. Smith?

1674 A. I was present at the side of Mr. Smith when Mr. Holbrook talked to Mr. Smith in my presence and suggested the same.

77. X Q. State what was said by Mr. Holbrook and Mr. Smith at that time.

(Objected to as asking for hearsay evidence.)

A. Mr. Smith was using a stamp—a postmarking stamp with a canceller soldered on the side, which would continually break off and annoy him very much; Mr. Holbrook was passing by; if my recollection serves me right he had one or two letters which he was about to mail, and, as was his usual custom, he handed them to Mr. Smith to cancel the same; the question then arose about this difficulty of the soldered canceller breaking off; it was then suggested that a piece of iron, or that a cork, be tied and fastened to the postmarking cylinder.

78. X Q. Who made this suggestion?

A. Mr. Holbrook.

79. X Q. Can you give the date of that conversation?

A. It was in the year 1860; that is as near as I can get at it; I can't be more specific about it.

80. X Q. Where is Mr. James Holbrook now?

A. He is dead.

81. X Q. Where is Mr. Charles Smith?

A. He is dead, also.

82. X Q. State as near as you can about the time when these gentlemen died.

A. Mr. Smith died, to the best of my knowledge, in 1870; I think Mr. Holbrook died a little while before; it is mere guess-work relative to the time as to when these gentlemen died.

83. X Q. Was there any period of time between the discontinuance of the single stamp and the use of the combined stamp when the postmarking and postage cancelling was done by separate instruments?

A. I don't recollect of any such case; it was talked about.

1675 84. X Q. You think, then, that on the very day that the single stamp, by which the postmarking was put upon the postage stamp, was discontinued, the combined stamp, by which the postmark was put upon the letter and the cancelling mark on the postage-stamp, was adopted and used?

A. I think the canceller soldered to the postmarking cylinder was immediately used after the discontinuance of the single stamp.

85. X Q. How long was the cutting canceller used?

A. Perhaps a week, or two weeks—I am not certain.

86. X Q. You say that Mr. Smith had eight or sixteen combined stamps made: what became of them?

A. I could not tell you.

87. X Q. What was done about these combined stamps in the N. Y. post-office afterwards; after Mr. Smith's were made?

A. Mr. Smith, as head of the stamp department, had the stamps made; he ordered all stamps during his time.

88. X Q. Then what do you mean by saying that Mr. Smith had eight or sixteen of these combined stamps made?

(Objected to on the ground that the witness has not stated positively the fact assumed.)

A. Mr. Smith being the head stamper, ordered all stamps made for the use of the distribution department of the N. Y. post-office; therefore, I think he must have ordered those.

89. X Q. When did you first hear in the New York post-office anything about Norton's stamp?

(Objected to on the ground that it is not within the scope of the direct examination, and is asking for hearsay evidence.)

A. I could not tell you the year.

90. X Q. Was it as early as 1860?

(Same objection.)

1676 A. It might be '60 or '61.

91. X Q. Are you aware that Mr. Charles Smith, on the 13th day of January, 1865, before Thomas Livey, commissioner of deeds in New York City, made an affidavit, in which he swore that the combined postmarking and postage cancelling stamp was put in the New York post-office for test or trial by Mr. Norton, in the year 1860, and that it was known as the improvement and invention of said Marcus P. Norton?

(Objected to on the ground that the question assumes that Mr. Smith did make such an affidavit, when no such fact is proved.)

A. I am not aware of any such fact.

92. X Q. Would not Mr. Smith, as head stamper, be likely to know more about it than you do?

A. He would.

93. X Q. Where did Mr. Smith have these combined stamps made, of which you have spoken?

A. I think at Mr. Thomas Corbett's shop.

Redirect examination:

Re-D. Q. 94. About how far from the stamping block was your post, when you were engaged in mailing and bagging the South mail?

A. The South table, where the letters were made up, the end of which was from five to ten feet from where Mr. Smith, the head stamper, stamped letters; it was my duty to take these letters, wrap them in brown paper at the South table, direct the packages myself, or have some one assist me in directing them, after which I would carry them about forty or fifty feet, and place them in their proper bags.

ANTHONY YEOMAN.

Sworn to before me this 4th day of January, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Examiner.

1677 ALFRED RYER, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Alfred Ryer; 52 years of age; 66 Second avenue, city; clerk in the N. Y. post-office.

2. Q. State how long you have been in the N. Y. post-office and in what capacities, and the years when you changed from doing one kind of work to another, if you did so.

A. I came into the office on the 1st of April, 1855, and remained in the stamping department about fifteen years; I can't tell exactly the date; I was then changed to the carriers' department, and remained there about one year, and since that time I have been in the foreign department.

3. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 3, and state what change, if any, would have to be made in that instrument in order that it might be like the instrument that was used in the N. Y. post-office for the purpose of cancelling postage-stamps and postmarking letters in the year 1855, when you first went into the office?

A. The change would be made by taking off that cross bar and putting the postmarking stamp right on the handle.

4. Q. Do you mean that the postage-stamp was cancelled by the postmark?

A. The stamp was cancelled by the postmark.

5. Q. If any change was made in the instrument for cancelling and postmarking, describe such change, and state as nearly as you can when it took place.

(Counsel for complainant makes the same objection to this question as was made to Q. 27 to the witness Anthony Yeomans, and upon the same grounds.)

1678 A. There was a change made, and it was during the term of office of General Dix, in the year '59 or '60, I can't tell when; it was soon after he came in office; the change was made in the first place by using either a cork fastened to the stamp—to this plain stamp—and also by soldering a piece of iron on the side to use as a cancelling stamp.

6. Q. Why was this change made, if you know?

A. I think it was from an order from the Postmaster-General on account of some difficulty about a letter—about the date of a letter; the cause was because the date could not be identified; the date was put on the stamp, and it didn't show plain on the stamp, and the order was made to keep the date separate from the stamp.

(Answer objected to because the order is the best evidence.)

7. Q. Describe any subsequent change to the one you have already described.

(Same objection as to Q. 5.)

A. The next change was by adopting the cross-bar, by putting a piece of iron across the handle, as in Exhibit No. 3.

8. Q. Was the cross-bar adopted while Mr. Dix was postmaster?

A. Yes, sir.

9. Q. How long after the time when the canceller was a piece of cork tied on to the postmarking cylinder, and when the cancelling instrument was soldered to the side of the postmarking cylinder?

A. The cork was used only long enough to have the stamps altered, and the iron canceller was soldered on as soon as they could be got ready; that is, I wish to say when it was adopted, to have an extra piece put on, we sent two or three away at a time to be altered, and while they were getting altered we used the corks.

10. Q. Were the iron cancellers fastened in any other way than by soldering at that time—by riveting, for instance?

1679 A. I don't remember of their ever being riveted on; I think they were soldered.

11. Q. How long was it after you first got the soldered cancellers before the cross-bar was adopted?

A. I can't state exactly, but I think it was in one month; very shortly after they were adopted.

12. Q. What sort of a canceller was used after the cross-bar was adopted?

A. The first one used was iron, which came with the stamp; but we found they didn't work well, so we took them off and put on the corks.

13. Q. Did you ever use anything besides cork?

A. Rubber.

14. Q. Did you ever use a canceller of iron having knife edges intended to cut the postage-stamp?

A. We did.

15. Q. How long, should you say?

A. About two or three weeks.

16. Q. While those were being used, were there also used in the office an ordinary instrument having a cork canceller attached to the cross-bar?

A. There was; yes, sir,

Adjourned to Monday, January 7, 1878, at 12 o'clock m.

NEW YORK, Monday, January 7, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Continuation of the examination of the witness ALFRED RYER; continued:

17. Q. How long did an instrument having a cross bar with the postmarking cylinder at one end, and a cork or rubber canceller at 1680 the other end, continue to be used after its first introduction in the post-office?

A. They used them as long as I remained in the stamping department; they used them for ten years at least, as long as I remained in the stamping department.

18. Q. Were instruments of several different patterns used simultaneously at any one time since the canceller was soldered to the side of the postmarker?

A. There have been many different patterns brought in the office for experiments.

19. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, and state whether that is similar to the first combined instrument that was used in 1860.

A. That is the instrument exactly.

20. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, and state whether that is similar to the instrument that was used before the introduction of the combined instrument.

A. It is.

21. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, and state whether that is similar to the first combined instrument in which a cross-bar was used.

A. It is the same.

22. Q. After instruments like Exhibit No. 1 were introduced, state whether instruments like Exhibit No. 5 continued to be used for any length of time simultaneously with instruments like Exhibit No. 1.

A. No, sir; after No. 1 was introduced, we did not use No. 5.

23. Q. Was there any interval of time between the use of Exhibit No. 1 and the use of Exhibit No. 5 in which neither were used?

A. I don't think there was.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

24. X Q. According to your best knowledge, up to what time was the stamp with a cross-bar and cork canceller used?

1681 A. I think they were used as long as I remained in the distribution department, which was about ten years; I think they have been in use in that department until lately, but as I haven't been in that department, I wouldn't like to say positively.

25. X Q. Was the stamp like Defendant's Exhibit No. 4 used at any time for making two impressions, one the postmark upon the letter and the other to cancel the postage-stamp?

A. I don't think it was; that is my recollection.

26. X Q. Was there any time when one clerk put the postmark on the letter and another clerk cancelled the postage-stamp?

A. I think we tried that for a few days, but they found that it took so many men that they stopped it.

27. X Q. How long was the old stamp, with the cork canceller tied to it, used in the office?

A. Long enough to have Defendant's Exhibit No. 5 made.

28. X Q. Was it one day or a week, longer or shorter?

A. I think it was about three or four days.

29. X Q. State why the use of the instrument with the canceller soldered on the postmarker was abandoned.

A. Because it came off very often, and the cross-bar was adopted in the office.

30. X Q. You have stated that you could not tell whether this was in 1859 or in 1860; do you know that it was not January, 1861?

A. It was soon after General Dix came into the office; I think that was in the latter part of 1859 or the early part of 1860.

31. X Q. Will you say that it was before the month of September, 1860?

A. I couldn't say positively.

32. X Q. When did you first hear of Norton's stamp in the post-office?

A. I think it was nearly one year after we were using them in the office.

1682 33. X Q. Do you not know that that combined stamp has been called in the New York post-office Norton's stamp?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I never heard it called by that name.

34. X Q. What did you first hear about Norton's stamp? Give the date.

A. I couldn't give the date exactly; I heard some time after we used that stamp, it might have been nearly a year, that Mr. Norton had claimed the invention of the cross-bar.

35. X Q. When was the stamp with the cutter used in the N. Y. post-office?

A. It was during Mr. Wakeman's administration as postmaster.

36. X Q. How long was the cutter used?

A. I don't think it was used over a month or six weeks.

37. X Q. Why was its use abandoned?

(Objected to as immaterial, and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. Because it cut through the envelope, and destroyed or injured the letter.

38. X Q. Was it also found to injure the contents of letters if they contained any papers, photographs, or anything of that kind?

(Same objection.)

A. It would destroy them.

39. X Q. Are you entirely certain that while the cutter was used in the office, that any other kind of canceller was used at the same time?

A. Yes, sir; there was.

40. X Q. When this matter of a combined canceller was brought to the attention of the office, was there not more or less experimenting to ascertain the best form and materials for that sort of stamp?

A. There was; yes, sir.

1683 41. X Q. You have stated that several different patterns were introduced into the office for experimenting. Was it found that the stamp like Defendant's Exhibit No. 1 was the only useful and practicable instrument for postmarking and cancelling at the same time, and was that the reason for its continued use?

A. It was.

42. X Q. Who was head stamper in 1860 and 1861 in the N. Y. post-office?

A. Mr. Charles Smith.

41 & 43. X Q. When and with whom have you talked over this matter?

A. Within the last few weeks I have been questioned about it by Mr. Clarke, counsel for defendant, and I have had some conversation about it with Mr. George Young and Mr. John Gallagher.

42 & 44. X Q. Who was postmaster of New York when you first heard of Norton's patent?

A. I think it was Mr. William B. Taylor.

43 & 45. X Q. Stamps were used and changed in the office, were they not, according to the directions of the postmaster?

(Objected to as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. They were under the direction of the postmaster, at the request of the superintendents.

44 & 46. X Q. You have stated that the first stamp with the canceller soldered on was like Defendant's Exhibit No. 5. You do not wish to be understood as saying, do you, that the canceller was riveted to the postmarker?

A. The first ones made were not riveted; they might have had some afterwards that were riveted.

45 & 47. X Q. Will you swear that any of those cancellers that were used before the cross-bar had the canceller riveted on to the postmarker?

A. I wouldn't like to swear to it.

46. X Q. When did you first see Defendant's Exhibit No. 5?

1684 A. Since I came up here to-day, and not before.

47. X Q. How long is it since you have seen one of the stamps with the canceller soldered on?

A. I think I saw one about two or three weeks ago in Mr. Clarke's office.

Redirect examination:

48. ReD. Q. In your cross-examination you stated that there were a few days when one clerk put the postmark on the letter and another cancelled the postage-stamp. Was that before the introduction of instruments like Defendant's Exhibit No. 5?

A. It was before.

49. ReD. Q. In your cross-examination you stated that when this combined canceller was brought to the attention of the office, there was more or less experimenting to ascertain the best form or materials for that sort of stamp. Who was the first to suggest the idea of a cross-bar, and when was it suggested?

(Objected to as not arising out of the cross-examination, because the question, if admissible, should have been asked upon the direct examination, and for the same reasons I have stated in objecting to Q. 27 of Yeoman's testimony.)

A. Mr. Post was the first one to use the cross-bar, but I could not say positively that he was the one who suggested it; it was suggested at the time they were experimenting on the new stamps.

50. ReD. Q. Was that while stamps like Defendant's Exhibit No. 5 were in use?

A. Yes; No. 5 was in use at that time, I think.

51. ReD. Q. In your cross-examination you stated that the reason for the continued use of instruments like Defendant's Exhibit No. 1 was because that sort of instrument was found to be the only useful and practicable instrument for cancelling and postmarking at the 1685 same time. Do you mean by that that instruments like Defendant's Exhibit No. 5 were not useful?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. They were not as useful as No. 1.

52. ReD. Q. Were they in any sense useful and practicable?

A. Yes; they were partially so.

53. ReD. Q. Did they accomplish the purpose of postmarking the envelope and cancelling the postage-stamp at one blow, without increasing the number of clerks employed in the post office and without its being necessary to go over the letters twice—first to postmark them, and second to cancel the postage-stamp?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. They acted very well in some cases, but not, as a general thing, as well as No. 1.

54. ReD. Q. Did they accomplish the purpose stated in my last question?

A. They did in some instances, but not as a general thing.

55. ReD. Q. Do you mean that while instruments like Exhibit 5 were in use more clerks were employed for the purpose of cancelling and postmarking than had been employed before the introduction of the combined instrument?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It did not require any more clerks.

56. ReD. Q. Was it then necessary to go over the letters twice, first to postmark and then to cancel?

A. It was not on all occasions.

57. ReD. Q. Was it generally necessary?

A. It was not.

58 ReD. Q. How often was it necessary, if ever?

A. Whenever the stamp failed to make a good impression.

59. ReD. Q. About how often was that?

A. That is a question I could not answer very well.

1686 60. ReD. Q. Have you any idea how many letters pa[illegible] through the stampers in a day?

A. I suppose ten or twelve thousand.

61. ReD. Q. Of those ten or twelve thousand, on how many of them was it necessary to repeat the impression? Make a rough estimate.

A. Well, I suppose one out of every ten or twelve.

62. ReD. Q. After the instruments with the cross-bar like Defendant's Exhibit No. 1 were introduced, was it then ever necessary to repeat the impression?

A. Very seldom.

63. ReD. Q. Was it sometimes necessary?

A. Yes, sir.

64. ReD. Q. Make a rough estimate of the number of letters passing through your hands during the day on which it was necessary to repeat the impression.

A. About two or three per cent.

Recross-examination:

65. Re X Q. You stated that the stamp with the canceller soldered on came apart very often when it was used; was it necessary when it was so broken to take it to the stamp-maker's to have it repaired or made over?

A. It was.

66. Re X Q. While these stamps were at the stamp-maker's to be repaired, how did you put upon the letters a separate postmark and cancelling mark on the postage-stamp?

A. There was seldom more than one that was broken at a time; while that was getting fixed we could use the good ones.

67. Re X Q. How many did you have in the office?

A. I think there was five stampers, and each man had a stamp.

68. Re X Q. So that when one stamp was broken, four clerks were compelled to do the work of five, were they?

1687 A. That would only be for a little while; the head of the stamp-department would take the stamp and have it fixed, and bring it back with him.

69. Re X Q. Where did Mr. Post get the stamp with the cross-bar that he used?

A. I am not positive, but I think he got it of Mr. Hoole, the man who made the stamps for the office.

70. Re X Q. I understand you to say that Mr. Post introduced and used the first stamp with a cross-bar that was used in the office?

A. Mr. Post was the first one that introduced it.

Redirect examination:

71. Re D. Q. Make a rough estimate of how often one of the soldered instruments would break.

A. Sometimes we would have them to come off twice a day, and then sometimes they would last very near a week without breaking.

72. Re D. Q. Do you mean that all the five instruments would break in one day, or that only one or two would sometimes break in the same day?

A. Some days we would have only one or two out of the five; sometimes we then would run nearly a whole week without any breaking.

73. Re D. Q. Was the breaking as frequent after the stamps like Exhibit No. 5, with the soldered canceller, had been used for some time as it was at first?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. No; they did not break in the latter part as often as they did at first.

74. R. D. Q. How often at the latter part?

A. Very seldom.

75. Re D. Q. Do you know the reason why they didn't break at the latter part?

A. I don't know, without there was some other way of fastening them on.

1688 Recross-examination:

76. Re X Q. Was not the stamp with the canceller soldered on regarded by the stampers in the N. Y. post-office as a failure?

(Objected to on the ground that it is immaterial how the stampers regarded it, and because the question calls for hearsay evidence.)

A. They were considered not entirely as a failure.

Redirect examination:

77. Re D. Q. Was the soldered instrument regarded as a success after a method had been found of securing the canceller so that it came off very seldom, and before the cross-bar was introduced?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It was considered the best stamp we had until the cross-bar was invented.

ALFRED RYER.

Sworn to before me this 7th day of Jan'y, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Examiner.

Hon. JOHN A. DIX, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. John A. Dix; 79 years of age; I reside in Suffolk County, N. Y.; I have retired from business.

2. Q. Please state what your occupation was between the years 1858 and 1862.

1689 A. I was postmaster of this city from the early part of '60 to the early part of January, 1861; from the early part of January, '61, to the 4th of March, 1861, I was Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; from the month of May, '61, to the close of the period mentioned in the question, 1862, I was major-general in the army.

3. Q. Describe, as accurately as you can the instrument which was in use in the post-office, when you first became postmaster, for the purpose of cancelling the postage stamps on letters.

A. I don't recollect what stamp was used when I first became postmaster; I am inclined to think that stamps were cancelled by the same instrument by which the dates are fixed to the letters.

4. Q. Please look at the instrument which I now produce, and state in what respect it differs, if in any, from the instrument which put the date on letters, and, according to your recollection, cancelled the postage stamp when you first became postmaster.

A. The instrument used was something like the one you have shown me, I should think; it is so long ago I don't remember the minute details of it.

(Counsel for defendant offers in evidence the instrument referred to in the last question, and the same is marked "Defendant's Exhibit No. 4, J. A. S., Ex'r, Jan. 7, 1878.")

5. Q. Is Exhibit No. 4 an instrument for putting the postmark on letters?

A. I suppose it is, or something like it.

7. Q. Was there any change made while you were postmaster in the nstrument by which the postage stamps are cancelled?

(Counsel for complainant renews the objection to this evidence made to Q. 27 of the testimony of the witness Yeomans, and on the same ground as therein stated.)

1690 A. My recollection is that we were forbidden by the Postmaster-General to use the stamp for affixing the date to the letters for the purpose of cancelling postage stamps; and in order to avoid using two stamps I invented a contrivance by which both operations might be performed by one instrument; it was by affixing on one side of the stamp, which was used for affixing dates, another stamp to cancel the postage stamp; I think they were soldered together very much like the instrument which I now hold in my hand.

(Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the instrument referred to in the last answer, and the same is marked "Defendant's Exhibit, No. 5, J. A. S., Ex'r, Jan. 7, 1878.")

7. Q. What was the purpose of combining them; why were a postmarking instrument and a stamp-cancelling instrument not used separately?

A. The object was to save both time and labor.

8. Q. Does Exhibit No. 5 cancel the postage stamp and postmark the letter by one blow of the hand?

A. Yes.

9. Q. Do you remember whether the canceller was riveted to the postmarker as well as soldered?

A. That I don't recollect.

10. Q. Did you put the instrument that you had thus invented into use in the New York post-office?

A. Yes; I put it into use immediately, I think.

11. Q. Was its working successful?

A. I think so.

12. Q. Did instruments like Exhibit No. 5 continue to be used in the post-office while you were postmaster?

A. I think they were for some time; by going into an explanation, I think I can make my answer more direct.

13. Q. Please give that explanation.

(Same objection as to Q. 6.)

A. It was my intention to procure a patent for my invention 1691 for the benefit of the United States; and I wrote to the Postmaster-General explaining what I had done, and I think also what I intended, and I received an answer from him or the Commissioner of Patents, I don't know which, saying that a patent had already been obtained to accomplish the same object—that is, affixing the date to letters, and cancelling the postage stamps by one instrument; I think, too, that the P. M. General gave me the name of the patentee as Mr. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., and that I wrote to him (Mr. Norton) on the subject; I think so; I think, too, that some arrangement was made, I can't recollect what, to use the stamp in the N. Y. post-office.

14. Q. You understood that at the time of your making this invention it had then already been patented; is that so?

A. No; I had no idea that a patent had been granted for any similar invention; I thought myself an original inventor.

15. Q. What I meant by my question was, whether the information you say you had received from the Commissioner of Patents, or the Postmaster-General, was to the effect that at the time of your inventing this contrivance it had already at that time been patented?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes; I think that either the Postmaster-General or the Commissioner of Patents had informed me that Mr. Norton's invention had been patented in the previous year.

16. Q. Do you remember whether, while you were postmaster, an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit No. 1 was used in the post-office?

A. I have no recollection of this.

17. Q. Please look at the paper which I now produce, and state whether it is in your handwriting?

A. That is my letter; it was written by me.

18. Q. State what it is?

A. This appears to be a letter from me to Hon. Horatio King, First Assistant Postmaster General, dated 8th of August, 1860.

1692 (Defendant's counsel offers this letter in evidence, and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6. J. A. S., Ex'r, Jan. 7, 1878.)

(Objected to by counsel for complainant as incompetent and immaterial.)

19. Q. Please look at the envelope which I now produce, and state whether it is the enclosed envelope referred to in Exhibit No. 6.

A. I have no doubt that it is.

20. Q. Were the postmarks and cancellation marks on this envelope at the time you wrote the Exhibit No. 6?

A. I have no doubt but that the impression on the envelope was produced by the instrument which I invented.

(Defendant's counsel offers the envelope in evidence, and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7. J. A. S., Ex'r, Jan. 7, 1878.)

(Objected to as not sufficiently identified.)

21. Q. State whether Exhibit No. 5 is constructed according to the description that you gave in your letter, Exhibit No. 6.

A. I think it is quite like it; I should say that the only difference was the part of the instrument affixing the date to the letters and the part for cancelling the postage stamps were a little farther apart.

22. Q. Was any change made in the form of the combined instrument while you were postmaster?

A. I do not recollect any.

23. Q. Was the combined instrument which you invented used without any interruption in the post-office while you were postmaster?

A. I can't recollect distinctly, but I think we made an arrangement with Mr. Norton to use this stamp or to use his; my impression is that we continued to use this stamp by an arrangement with Mr. Norton for some time.

1693 24. Q. Do you remember whether you did obtain any stamps from Mr. Norton while you were postmaster?

(Same objection as to Q. 6.)

A. I don't recollect distinctly whether we obtained stamps from him or continued to use this with his consent.

25. Q. Do you know how the stamps were constructed that were made according to the patent which was obtained, as you were informed by Mr. Norton, in 1859?

A. I don't recollect.

26. Q. Was it with reference to stamps made under that patent that you made the arrangement you have spoken of with Mr. Norton?

A. I think I have said that I don't recollect whether the arrangement with Mr. Norton was to use this stamp invented by me or stamps according to his patent of 1859.

27. Q. Do you recollect whether the arrangement related to one of the two stamps, either the one invented by you or the one alleged to have been patented by Mr. Norton in 1859?

A. I think I have answered that question; I don't recollect whether our arrangement with him was to use the stamp I invented or to use stamps made under his patent of 1859.

28. Q. Do you recollect of having any interview with Mr. Norton or with an agent of his?

A. I think I do recollect of having an interview with Mr. Norton or an agent of his.

29. Q. State as nearly as you can what took place at that interview?

A. I can't state distinctly more than I have already; we made some arrangement with him.

30. Q. Did he state anything with regard to his patent of 1859, anticipating your invention?

A. That I don't recollect.

Cross-examination by Mr. Williams deferred for the present until January 8, 1878, at 12 m.

Adjourned to Tuesday, January 8, 1878, at 12 m.

1694 NEW YORK, January 8th, 1878—12 o'clock m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Cross-examination of JOHN A. DIX:

31. X Q. Were the facts as to the introduction and use in the New York post-office of the combined postmark and postage canceller fresher in your mind in the year 1864 than they are at this time?

A. I can't say that they were.

32. X Q. Did you, on the 4th day of February, 1864, before G. E. Stilwell, a United States commissioner for the southern district of New York, make an affidavit concerning those matters?

A. I have no recollection of making the affidavit; I have no recollection of the circumstances.

33. X Q. Did you state in that affidavit as follows: "I found that said Norton was an older inventor of the said stamp and cancelling device than I was. He consented to my using the same in the New York office, with the view of giving it a thorough trial, without charge for such use"?

(Objected to on the ground, 1st. That it assumes that the witness did make the affidavit, whereas he has testified that he has no recollection of making it; 2d. Because if the witness made the affidavit it should be produced and shown to him before it can be proper for counsel to question him as to its contents; 3d. Because the question is not within the scope of the direct examination, and as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I stated in answering a former question that I had no recollection of making this affidavit, but if I did, I used the words which Mr. Williams has read.

34 and 54. X Q. Did you in said affidavit say, referring to Mr. Norton, "I have no claim prior to his. I then believed and now believe the said invention was his, as the original and first inventor, and to be 1695 valuable and useful for the purposes aforesaid," referring to the use of the combined stamp?

(Same objection as before, and also because it is an improper way to refresh the memory of the witness by reading from a printed book, and showing said book to the witness, when there is no evidence of when said book was made or that the witness ever saw the book before, or that the contents of said book are true copies of any affidavit or statement.)

A. I will say, as I did in answer to the previous question, that if I made the affidavit, I have no doubt it contained the words which have been read.

55. X Q. If you did sign and swear to the affidavit as indicated by my first question, you have no doubt, of course, as to the correctness of the statements therein made?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no doubt of it; it accords with what I always said on the subject.

Redirect examination:

56. Re D. Q. Referring to the questions by Judge Williams, on the cross-examination when these questions were asked, was a printed book shown to you in which appeared the statements which you were asked about?

A. Yes.

57. Re D. Q. When did you first see that book?

A. I think I saw it yesterday for the first time.

58. Re D. Q. Under what circumstances did you see it; when and where?

A. It was handed to me by Judge Williams at the close of my examination yesterday.

59. Re D. Q. Does the alleged affidavit in that book, in regard to which you were questioned by Judge Williams, purport to be an original or a copy?

1696 A. I suppose it to be a printed copy of the original.

60. Re D. Q. Do you know whether it is true copy or not?

A. I do not.

61. Re D. Q. If it were shown to you that the patent of 1859, which you were informed had been issued to Mr. Norton, did not cover your invention, would you then have any reason to suppose that Mr. Norton was an older inventor than yourself?.

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I should answer it in this way, that I was informed by the Postmaster-General that my invention had been anticipated by a Mr. Norton; I should otherwise have considered myself an original inventor, or a first inventor.

62. Re D. Q. Was that information which you received from the Postmaster General merely that Mr. Norton had anticipated your invention, or also that it had been anticipated and patented by Mr. Norton?

A. I don't recollect that the Postmaster-General had said that it had been patented, but he said there was a prior invention, and cautioned me, I think, against the use of mine in the post-office in New York.

63. Re D. Q. Did you from any other source than the Postmaster-General receive information that this prior invention you speak of had been patented?

A. I am not sure that I did not receive from the Patent Office a communication confirming the information which I received from the Post-Office Department.

64. Re D. Q. What is your best recollection on that point?

A. My recollection is indistinct, but I have the impression that I communicated with the Patent Office as well as with the Post-Office Department.

65. Re D. Q. What impression, if any, have you had since 1860
1697 as to whether the alleged prior invention of Mr. Norton had or had not been patented before that date?

(Objected to as improper to call for the impression of the witness.)

A. I always had the impression that Mr. Norton's invention was of the year 1859, and I supposed it had been patented, as a matter of course.

66. Re D. Q. In that year?

A. Yes, in that year.

Recross-examination:

67. Re X Q. Were all the communications that you had on this subject with the departments in Washington to which you have referred in writing?

A. I think so.

68. Re X Q. What impression you have on the subject was derived from those communications, was it?

A. From those communications and from my conferences with Mr. Norton in regard to the uses of his invention.

69. Re X Q. Was the invention which Mr. Norton claimed as his put into use in the post office, New York, while you were postmaster?

(Objected to on the ground that it is not the proper place to ask such a question on this recross-examination, not being within the scope of the redirect examination.)

A. I think I stated yesterday that I could not state distinctly whether my invention was used for any length of time with his consent, or whether we procured some of his stamps; my invention was used for sometime with his consent.

70. Re X Q. When you say that your invention was used some time with his consent, do you mean to imply that after that his invention was used?

(Same objection as above.)

1698 A. I am not sure; I think I recommended to the Post-Office Department the purchase of some of his stamps.

71. Re X Q. Did I hand to you the book referred to yesterday, in the presence of the commissioner and counsel for the defendant, with a request that you would refresh your recollection on the subject?

A. Yes; I understood so.

Re-redirect:

Re-Re-D. 72. Q. Did you ever know a man of the name of Ransford, of Troy?

(Objected to as not proper on redirect examination.)

A. Yes; I recollect Mr. Ransford in connection with this matter, and I think he came to the post-office with Mr. Norton.

Re-Re-D. 73. Q. Did he claim any right or ownership of the Norton invention?

A. That I do not recollect.

Re-Re-D. 74. Q. Do you remember whether you ordered any of the Norton stamps?

A. I do not.

Re-Re-D. 75. Q. Do you remember whether you ordered of Mr. Ransford any of the stamps which were made according to the Norton pattern?

A. I do not.

(Complainant's counsel gives notice now that he shall move to exclude all the testimony of this witness as to what was communicated by him to the departments in Washington, or by the departments to him on this subject, on the ground that the same is in writing, and that the writings are not accounted for or produced.

Defendant's counsel gives notice that at the hearing of the above application he shall move to strike out all of this witness's testimony on cross-examination on the objections there stated.)

1699 Re-redirect resumed:

Re-Re-D. 76. Q. Without any reference to the sources from which you received information in regard to the Norton invention, is it or is it not true that ever since 1860 it has been your belief that the Norton invention was patented in 1859?

(Objected to as incompetent to call for the belief of the witness and as leading.)

A. I have always supposed it was patented in 1859.

Re-Re-D. 77. Q. If you made an affidavit in 1864, did you make it with the impression that the Norton invention was patented in 1859?

(Same objection.)

A. Undoubtedly; I have always had that impression.

Examiner, &c.

Adjourned to Wednesday, January 9, 1878, at 12 m.

NEW YORK, January 9th, 1878—12 o'clock m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

THOMAS H. CORBETT, a witness produced on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

1700 A. Thomas H. Corbett; I am 45 years of age; I reside at 30 Lee avenue, Brooklyn, Eastern District, N. Y., and I am an engraver.

2. Q. Have you ever made instruments for the postmarking of letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps for the post-office in New York City?

A. Yes.

3. Q. When have you made such instruments?

A. At various times.

4. Q. When did you first begin to make them?

A. The first charge I have on my books is July 29, 1860.

5. Q. When did you first make any kind of an instrument for the postmarking of letters? I think you misunderstood my last question.

A. I cannot say positively when I made the first stamp—the first killing marking stamp.

6. Q. I am not asking you about a combined instrument, but a simple postmarking instrument. About what time did you first make such?

A. About 1849 or 1850, I think.

7. Q. Were you then engaged in business for yourself?

A. No, sir.

8. Q. About what time did you make such an instrument, being engaged in business for yourself?

A. Well, 1859.

9. Q. Look at the instruments on the table, and if you see any similar to what you made in 1859, pick it out and read the endorsement on the label.

A. There is nothing on the table exactly like it.

10. Q. Look at Def'ts' Exh. No. 4, and state in what respects that differs from those which you made in 1859.

A. They were much larger.

11. Q. Were they in other respects like Exh. No. 4?

A. Yes.

12. Q. Did you ever make a combined instrument for the post-office in this city by which the postmark could be put on the envelope
1701 wholly apart from the postage-stamp, and the postage-stamp could be cancelled at one blow?

(Objected to as leading. Question withdrawn.)

13. Q. Did you ever make an instrument in which a postage-stamp cancelling apparatus was combined with the postmarking apparatus?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes.

14. Q. Describe how the combination was first made, and illustrate what you say by reference to any of the instruments lying on the table before you.

A. It was a plain New York stamp, with a piece of brass soldered on one side of it, and on the brass were filed straight marks—straight lines the same as the one which I hold in my hand, Def'ts' Exh. No. 5.

15. Q. Describe the way in which that instrument is intended to be used, and what sort of marks it is intended to make on letters, and the position of those marks with reference to each other and to the postage-stamp.

A. I was told that the idea of this piece being fastened to the stamp was to cancel the revenue stamp and postmark the letter at the same time.

16. Q. What you were told by others is not evidence. What I want is your own judgment, based on your knowledge as a maker of such instruments, of the matters referred to in my last question. (Last question read to witness.)

A. That's all I knew of it at that time.

17. Q. What I asked did not relate to your knowledge at that time. Please answer the question from such knowledge as you possess now.

A. It was to postmark the letter and cancel the revenue stamp at the same time.

18. Q. What was the position of the postmark and of the cancellation mark with reference to each other and with reference to the postage-stamp?

1702 A. The cancelling stamp was on the left hand side of the marking stamp when ready for use.

19. Q. What I ask about is not the instrument, but the marks the instrument makes on the letter. What is the position of those marks with reference to the postage-stamp?

A. The same as Def'ts' Exh. No. 5.

20. Q. Whereabouts would the cancellation mark appear on the letter when made by Exh. No. 5?

A. On the right hand end of the letter.

21. Q. Will it be on or off the postage-stamp?

A. That depends altogether upon the stamper, or it should have been the man stamping it.

22. Q. Is it intended that the cancellation mark should be on the postage-stamp, as you understand it?

A. Yes, as I understand it.

23. Q. Where is it intended that the postmark shall appear on the letter—on or off the postage-stamp?

A. On the letter and not on the postage-stamp.

24. Q. State as nearly as you can recollect, without reference to any written documents which you may have, when you first made an instrument like Exhibit No. 5 for the New York post-office.

A. In 1860, I think.

25. Q. Can you recollect in what part of the year?

A. Not without looking in my book or paper.

26. Q. Who gave you the order for instruments like Exhibit 5?

A. I am in doubt who that person was, but think it was Mr. Post.

27. Q. Do you recollect whether instruments like Exhibit 5 needed to be repaired ever?

A. Yes; sometimes the killers would come off and the stamps would be worn down and want recutting again.

28. Q. What do you mean by killers?

A. The stamp that cancels the postage-stamp.

29. Q. When the killers were soldered on, do you recollect whether or not they came off frequently?

1703 A. The first one or two that I done being only soldered were knocked off in the stamping, and I afterwards, to make them strong, put a steel pin through the killer and part of the stamp, so that they would not break off in using.

30. Q. About how long should you say it was before you began to use a pin?

A. I couldn't say exactly; perhaps two or three months.

31. Q. Did the pin hold the killer securely to the postmarker?

A. I never heard of any breaking off after I put the pin in it.

32. Q. Did you, in 1860, make any instruments for the New York post-office in which the killer and postmarker were connected by a cross-bar?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Not to my knowledge.

33. Q. Did you at any time receive an order from any employee of the post-office for an instrument with a cross-bar?

A. No.

34. Q. Did you at any time receive a request or proposition from any employee of the post-office to make such an instrument?

A. Yes.

35. Q. At about what time was that?

A. It was some time in 1860.

36. Q. What is your best recollection as to what part of the year it was; spring, summer, fall, or winter?

A. I couldn't tell without consulting my books what time of the year it was.

37. Q. Have you any books which contain an entry in regard to such an instrument being proposed or suggested to you by an employee of the post-office?

A. No.

1704 38. Q. Without reference, then, to your books, endeavor to recollect what part of the year it was that this proposition was made. State as near as you can.

A. I cannot recollect.

39. Q. Who was the person who made the proposition to you?

A. I can't recollect positively which person it was; all I know is it was one of three parties, Mr. Post, Mr. Charles Smith, or Mr. Holbrook; I think it was Mr. Post who was sent by Mr. Holbrook to get the first killer soldered on a stamp.

40. Q. Who was it that proposed the cross-bar?

A. I understood it was Mr. Holbrook.

41. Q. Who proposed it to you, if you recollect?

A. I think it was Mr. Charles Smith.

42. Q. Did Mr. Smith, or the person who made the proposition, bring you a drawing of what he wanted done?

A. I can't recollect.

43. Q. What is your best memory on the subject?

A. I cannot recollect whether he did or did not—it's impossible.

44. Q. Did you ever receive any order for instruments with a cross-bar from other persons than employees of the post-office?

A. What do you mean by cross-bar?

45. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 1. By cross-bar I mean the piece that runs perpendicular to the handle and connects the killer and postmarker.

A. Yes.

46. Q. Do you mean that you did receive such an order?

A. Yes, sir.

47. Q. From whom did you receive it?

A. Mr. Post.

48. Q. When—about what time—did Mr. Post give such an order?

A. I have no recollection.

1705 49. Q. I think you misunderstood my meaning. What I want to know is whether you received such an order from persons not employed in the post-office?

A. Not that I am aware of; I have no knowledge of receiving any order.

50. Q. Do you remember who was postmaster when you first made the instruments having soldered cancellers?

A. I am not positive; I think it was General Dix.

Cross-examined:

51. X Q. Were you the manufacturer or maker of stamps for the New York post-office in 1860?

A. I repaired their stamps—not made them complete.

52. X Q. Didn't you make any of the instruments that were soldered as you have described?

A. Yes, sir; that is, I made the killers for some of the stamps.

53. X Q. Did you do the soldering?

A. No, sir.

Redirect:

54. Re-d. Q. Who did do the soldering?

A. A man named Wilcox.

55. Re-d. Q. Who was he—what was his business?

A. A tinsmith.

56. Re-d. Q. After you had made the cancellers how did Wilcox get hold of the instrument in order to do the soldering?

A. I took it to him to be soldered, as I had no facilities for doing it myself.

57. Re-d. Q. Did you employ and pay him yourself for the work?

A. I did.

Recross:

58. X Q. You and Mr. Wilcox then together made the stamps for the post-office in New York at that time?

A. No; I only engaged or hired him to do that part of the work.

1706 59. X Q. Who else beside you and Mr. Wilcox were concerned or engaged in the preparation of these stamps for the post-office in New York?

A. Edmund Hoole had the government contract for post-marking stamps at that time, and he may have made some for the New York post-office, but cannot say positively.

60. X Q. Have you any knowledge that he made any of those stamps with the killer soldered on them; or do you mean that he had the contract for making the old style of stamps like Defendant's Exhibit 4?

A. I never knew him to make any stamps with the killer soldered on, as per Defendant's Exhibit No. 5.

Re-redirect:

61. Re d. Q. How long should you say it was after you first made the instrument which has the soldered canceller, before Mr. Smith, or Mr. Holbrook, or Mr. Post made the proposition about the cross-bar?

A. I couldn't tell exactly; some months afterwards.

62. Re-d. Q. Should you think it was two months?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I could not tell positively.

63. Re-d. Q. Can you tell whether it was one month or forty?

(Objected to as improper on direct examination.)

A. Inside of twelve months.

64. Re-d. Q. Do you think it was inside of six months?

(Objected to as above, and also because it is leading.)

A. Yes.

1707 65. Re-d. Q. Do you think it was inside of three months?

(The same objection.)

A. I cannot recollect.

66. Re-d. Q. Do you think it was inside of five months?

(The same objection.)

A. I think it was, but I am not sure.

Re recross:

67. Re X. Q. Do you wish to be understood as saying that you cannot fix the time when this proposition referred to was made to you?

A. I do.

TUESDAY, January 15th, 1878.

Present, counsel for the respective parties.

JAMES J. RILEY, sworn as a witness on the part of defendant, deposes and says as follows:

1. Q. What is your age, residence, and occupation?

A. I will be 59 years of age the last day of February; residence, 110 Forsyth street, New York City; occupation, tobacco and segar business, wholesale and retail, 60 Williams street, New York City.

2. Q. Have you ever been a clerk in the New York post-office?

A. I have.

3. Q. State when you first went into the office and when you left it.

A. To the best of my knowledge, I went in the post-office in 1849, under Wm. V. Brady; I was in the post-office over twenty years; I left the post-office between six and seven years ago.

1709 4. Q. Do you remember what President appointed Mr. Brady?

A. Yes, sir; President Taylor, to the best of my knowledge.

5. Q. How long after Mr. Brady was appointed was it before you went into the office?

A. That question I could not decide; I was considered one of the first appointments.

6. Q. State about how long.

A. A year probably, may be less; I could not state it properly; it must have been less than a year.

7. Q. State in what different departments of the post-office you were employed while you were a clerk.

A. That is a very difficult question to answer; if you say permanent position, I will answer you.

8. Q. In what permanent position?

A. Cancelling and stamping letters.

9. Q. Did you cancel and stamp in both the domestic and foreign departments?

A. Yes, sir.

10. Q. In which department did you begin as a clerk?

A. In the domestic.

11. Q. About how long did you continue to be a stamper in the domestic department?

A. That question I could not answer unless I had the date of my appointment in the foreign department.

12. Q. After you had been a stamper in the domestic department were you transferred directly to the foreign department?

A. I don't know what you mean by that question; do you wish me to explain that to you (and counsel says yes); I was appointed in the foreign department at that time; I don't want to add any more.

13. Q. Were you ever transferred permanently to the foreign department?

A. Yes, sir.

14. Q. Do you remember who was postmaster when you were so transferred?

1710 A. To the best of my knowledge, William V. Brady; during his administration.

15. Q. State generally without trying to be precise to a day, or a month, or a year, about how many years you were a stamper in the domestic department?

A. To the best of my knowledge, three years; it might be more or less.

16. Q. Were postage stamps in use to any great extent when you first became a stamper?

A. No, sir; do you wish me to put any addition to that?

(Counsel says yes.)

WITNESS continues: There was no three cent stamps at the time; I wish to correct that further; whatever the reduction in the postage was I was in the office, when they first commenced stamping, as stamper.

17. Q. Were any postage-stamps used when you first became a stamper in the domestic department?

A. Yes, sir.

18. Q. State how they were killed or cancelled.

A. They were cancelled with an iron killer first, then afterwards New York and the date put on.

19. Q. How was the iron killer made?

A. Well, the iron killer was made like any ordinary stamp, about as round or thick as my finger.

20. Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit No. 4 and state how nearly that is like the killer that was in use when you were first a stamper in the domestic department. What changes would have to be made in it?

A. Much smaller than that, with plain bars right straight across.

21. Q. Do you mean that the New York would be off and the plain bars would be on the acting face?

A. Yes, sir.

22. Q. Was any change made in the instrument by which the postage-stamps were killed while you were a stamper in the domestic department?

1711 A. Yes, sir.

23. Q. Describe the first change that was made.

A. The first change that I recollect was a piece of pine wood tied to a stamp. Any farther? With a killer cut in the end.

24. Q. What kind of a stamp was the piece of pine tied to?
A. The ordinary stamp—New York and the date.
25. Q. Was that stamp like Defendant's Exhibit No. 4?
A. No.
26. Q. Who tied the pine to the plain New York stamp?
A. I have myself.
27. Q. Did any one do it before you, to your knowledge?
A. No, sir.
28. Q. Have you in your possession now an instrument made like the one which you have described as having a piece of pine tied to the plain New York stamp?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. I have; except the stamp is much larger, on the same principle.
29. Q. Produce it.
(Instrument produced and offered in evidence, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 6. J. A. S., ex'r. Jan'y 15, 1878.)
30. Q. In Defendant's Exhibit No. 6 what is the killer made of?
A. Pine wood and cork.
31. Q. You misunderstood my question, I think. In this very instrument before you here, Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, what is the killer made of?
A. Cork.
32. Q. Did the plain New York stamp to which you tied the 1712 piece of pine have a rim or ledge where the iron joins the wood, such as appears in Defendant's Exhibit No. 6?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. No, sir.
33. Q. Was there anything to prevent the piece of pine from slipping when the instrument was used; if so, what was it?
A. Yes, sir; a round bead with projection sufficient to keep the killer in its place from slipping.
34. Q. Whereabouts on the stamp was this round bead?
A. Adjoining the steel.
35. Q. You mean where the steel met the wooden handle?
A. Yes, sir.
36. Q. In what respects did the bead differ from the ledge next the iron in Defendant's Exhibit No. 6?
A. I don't call that a bead; it is not a full bead anyhow. I don't know what to call it; I call that a half round.
37. Q. Will you make a drawing of the stamp to which you tied the piece of pine wood?
A. I can't do it now; I shall do it some other time.
38. Q. Look at the drawing which I now produce, and state whether there is anything in that drawing which resembles the bead which you have spoken of?
A. Yes, sir.
39. Q. How is it marked?
A. A A.
(Drawing offered in evidence, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 7. J. A. S., ex'r. Jan'y 15, 1878.)
40. Q. Did the bead keep the pine from slipping?
A. It assisted to keep it.
41. Q. Did you make the killer of any other substance than pine?
1713 A. Yes, sir.
42. Q. Mention what you first substituted for pine?

. Iron. I am not positive whether it was cork or iron; I think it cork.

3. Q. Why did you first tie the pine on to the plain New York stamp?

. To facilitate the business.

4. Q. How was the business facilitated?

. In order not to have to stamp the letters twice, the killer and then New York stamp on.

45. Q. While you were a stamper in the domestic department were e postage stamps ever killed by the plain New York stamp?

A. Yes, sir.

46. Q. Did any of the officers of the post-office object to this?

A. Yes, sir.

47. Q. Who objected, and what was his position?

A. Munson Clarke; his position was—he was called the general superintendent.

48. Q. Did he give any reason?

A. Yes, sir.

49. Q. What was it?

A. Frequently those stamps fell off—taking off the date; of course the date was on the stamp. Any further? (Counsel says yes.) In consequence there was no date to the letter when mailed. In consequence, on reception of the letter there was no date attached to it.

50. Q. How did Munson Clarke direct you to cancel the postage-stamps?

A. With a killer.

51. Q. Do you mean a separate killer?

A. Yes, sir.

52. Q. Did he want the postmarking to be done afterwards?

A. Yes, sir.

53. Q. How much did that increase your work?

A. About double.

1714 54. Q. Did you postmark the letters and cancel the postage-stamps in the way Munson Clarke directed, and so do double work for any considerable length of time?

A. Not a great while; I couldn't exactly specify the time.

55. Q. How did you avoid doing double work?

A. By soldering a piece of steel on the iron stamp.

56. Q. Was that after you had tried the piece of pine and the cork for killers?

A. That question I could not answer; not the way it is put.

57. Q. What is the trouble?

A. The trouble is here: we use the cork in two different shapes.

58. Q. Did you tie a piece of pine on a plain New York stamp for the purpose of avoiding doing the double work which Munson Clarke's directions would have made you do?

A. Yes, sir.

59. Q. Without attempting to be perfectly accurate, state about how long you continued to use the pine killer?

A. It was a very short period, but could not state the exact time.

60. Q. Well, was it a week or two weeks, or a month?

A. I could not state. I should think about two months, or less than two months.

61. Q. Did you then adopt any other sort of a killer attached to the plain New York stamp?

A. Yes, sir.

62. Q. What sort of a killer?

A. A steel killer, or iron, just as you might call it.

63. Q. How was this steel or iron killer attached to the plain New York stamp?

A. By soldering, I suppose it was.

64. Q. Was it fastened securely?

A. Yes, sir.

65. Q. When this instrument, having an iron or steel killer,
1715 was used, did any part of the postmark, the New York, or the date, appear on the postage stamp?

A. That answer I shall have to qualify. Not when properly stamped.

66. Q. How many blows did it take to postmark the envelope and kill the postage stamp?

A. Only one when properly stamped.

67. Q. About how many letters with postage stamps on them used to come into the office in a day at the time that you adopted the piece of pine?

A. I could not answer that question, sir.

68. Q. How did you use to carry them round in the post-office; in a bag, or something of that sort?

A. I did not carry them, sir.

69. Q. Somebody did; what did he carry them in?

A. Do you wish me to answer that? (Counsel says yes.) Witness says he generally took them up in his hand; I suppose, east, north, and south. The clerks carried them away from our tables.

70. Q. What were the letters dropped into when they were deposited in the post-office?

A. In baskets and a table.

71. Q. About how large were those baskets?

A. About two feet long, fourteen or fifteen inches wide; different shapes—round and square.

72. Q. About how high?

A. About a foot, I suppose, as near as I can recollect; it is a long time ago.

73. Q. How many of these baskets would be filled with letters having postage stamps on them in the course of a day?

A. I cannot say.

74. Q. Would more than one be filled?

A. Yes.

75. Q. Would half a dozen?

A. I cannot say.

76. Q. You should think three or four would be filled at that time?

A. I should think so.

77. Q. Did postage stamps begin to be used in considerable numbers while you were a stamper in the domestic department?

1716 A. Yes, sir.

78. Q. About how long do you think you had been in the office before they began to be so used?

A. That question I couldn't answer distinctly; two or three years, I suppose.

79. Q. When did Munson Clarke cease to be general superintendent?

A. That I could not answer.

80. Q. About how long did you use the instrument having the iron canceler soldered on to the plain New York stamp? Speak in round numbers, as near as you recollect.

A. I could not state the exact time.

81. Q. Do you think it was six months or a year?

A. I cannot say.

82. Q. Do you think it was one month? I don't expect you to be perfectly accurat· at that time.

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes.

83. Q. How much more than a month do you think it was used without being perfectly accurate? Give your best recollection.

A. I could not say.

84. Q. Do you think it was used four months?

A. Probably it was, and more; I could not say exactly what time it was.

85. Q. Do you recollect that it ever ceased to be used while you were a stamper in the domestic department?

A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge.

86. Q. Why did you cease to use it?

A. We adopted another mode.

87. Q. Did you ever cancel the postage-stamp with a plain New York stamp after you had begun to use this combined instrument?

A. Yes, sir; not as a rule.

88. Q. When did you use the plain New York stamp afterwards?

A. That question I could not answer; it was against the orders.

1717 89. Q. Whose orders?

A. The superintendent.

90. Q. Was that Munson Clarke?

A. Yes, and others.

91. Q. State all you recollect about using the plain New York stamp.

A. That question I don't know how to answer.

92. Q. You stated that you did use it sometimes. Now, what I want is, to tell all you recollect—at what times and under what circumstances you used it.

A. Do you wish me to state that? (Counsel says, yes.) Witness says: The best of my recollection there was two stampers steady—this is the best of my recollection—and two stamps with killers attached; when hurried, called in an extra clerk to assist, and had to use a New York plain stamp; this is as far as I recollect. If you wish me to say more, I will say more.

93. Q. I wish you'd state all you recollect about it.

A. I have used a plain stamp myself in preference to the double stamp, being much lighter.

94. Q. What did you use whenever Munson Clarke was not in the office?

A. Well, I don't know how to answer that question at all.

95. Q. What I want to know is, whether it made any difference in regard to the instrument you used, whether Munson Clarke was or was not in the office to oversee and know what you were doing?

A. It was immaterial; it was a general rule to use a plain stamp and killer.

96. Q. Attached?

A. Yes, sir.

97. Q. Do you recollect whether Munson Clarke always continued to be superintendent?

A. He was supposed to be.

98. Q. Was he superintendent at the time that you went into the foreign department, if you recollect?

A. Yes, sir; to the best of my recollection.

1718 99. Q. Was the combined killer and postmarker used till you went into the foreign department?

A. Not in that shape.

100. Q. What other shape was adopted before you went into the foreign department?

A. To the best of my recollection it was a hollow tube with cork in it—tube screwed on.

101. Q. What was the tube screwed to?

A. To the iron stamp or steel stamp. I couldn't swear positively whether it was screwed on or soldered on; it is a long time ago. I could not carry it in my head for 30 years.

102. Q. Was the instrument having the cork and tube used till you went into the foreign department?

A. To the best of my recollection it was.

103. Q. State as accurately as you can, according to your best recollection, how long that sort of an instrument was used.

A. I couldn't specify any definite time.

104. Q. Do you think it was six months or more, or less?

A. I could not say.

105. Q. Do you recollect that it was used at all?

A. I don't understand the question. I can't answer it. What do you mean by "at all"? Before or after, you mean?

106. Q. I want to know whether you recollect that such an instrument as you have described, having a tube and cork screwed or soldered to the postmarker, was ever used in the post-office.

A. Yes, sir.

107. You are sure of that, are you?

A. Yes, sir; to the best of my recollection.

108. Q. Now, I ask you what your best recollection is of how long it was used. I don't care whether your best recollection actually agrees with the fact, but I want what you actually remember. It seems to me that you ought to be able to tell somewhere near.

A. I cannot.

1719 109. Q. Do you think it was used for a week?

A. Yes, sir.

110. Q. For a month?

A. To the best of my recollection it was.

111. Q. Was it used for two months? Speak to the best of your recollection.

A. Yes.

112. Q. Was it used for three months? Speak to the best of your recollection.

A. Yes, sir.

113. Q. Was it used for four or five months?

A. I cannot say.

114. Q. Do you recollect that it ceased to be used ever while you were in the domestic department?

A. Yes, sir; no, sir, while I was in the domestic department.

115. Q. Do you recollect whether the superintendent and other officers ever ceased to require that the postmark, consisting of New York and the date, should not appear on the postage-stamp?

A. Yes, sir.

116. Q. Do you mean that they did cease to require that?

A. No; they still continued the order.

117. Q. Do you mean as long as you remained in the domestic department?

A. Yes, sir.

118. Q. Do you know what was used in the domestic department after you went into the foreign department?

A. I cannot recollect.

119. Q. Was the tube and cork which you have spoken of as soldered or screwed to the postmarker fastened securely?

A. To the best of my recollection it was.

Cross-examined:

120. X Q. Pick out of the exhibits on the table the one like that in use when you went into the foreign department.

1720 A. To the best of my knowledge that is one. The stamp is screwed on and the cork screwed on. Exhibit referred to is Complainant's Exhibit A.

121. X Q. Why was the use of the cork or pine wood abandoned as a killer?

A. Well, it was much softer and made a better impression.

122. X Q. Why was the cork abandoned as a killer?

A. I don't know; it was after my time.

123. X Q. Why was the iron or steel soldered on to the plain stamp abandoned as a killer?

A. In order to have a new killer every day.

124. X Q. When the last instrument referred to was abandoned, what was then adopted?

A. I think it was this (referring to Complainant's Exhibit A), with a cross-piece on.

125. X Q. Was the use of this last instrument ever abandoned in the office, to your knowledge?

A. I cannot say. I cannot recollect.

126. X Q. Do you know Anthony Yeomans and Albert Ryer?

A. Yes, sir.

127. X Q. Were they clerks with you in the stamping branch of the New York post-office?

A. To the best of my recollection they were not; at least Mr. Yeomans was not.

128. X Q. Do you know when they became clerks in the post-office?

A. To the best of my recollection Mr. Isaac B. Fowler appointed them.

129. X Q. What sort of stamps did you use in the foreign department after you were transferred?

A. It would be almost impossible to answer such a question as that. We had over forty different stamps.

130. X Q. Do you know anything about what took place in the domestic department after you were transferred?

A. My recollection is very poor in that regard. I cannot state distinctly.

1721 131. X Q. Do you know whether or not they continued the use of the stamp like Complainant's Exhibit A after you were transferred?

A. To the best of my recollection they have.

132. X Q. Where is Munson Clarke?

A. He is dead a good many years.

133. X Q. When did he cease to be general superintendent of the New York post-office?

A. I do not recollect.

134. X Q. You have stated that the use of the stamp like Complain ant's Exhibit A was continued by his direction and the directions of others. Who do you mean by others?

(Objected to on the ground that the witness has not stated what counsel says.)

A. We always had to go by the orders of the superintendents, Mr. George Coffin and Mr. Clement and Mr. Strong.

135. X Q. Were they superintendents during the administration of Mr. Brady?

A. Yes, sir.

136. X Q. Where did you get Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, which you have produced here to-day?

A. This gentleman here, Mr. Clarke, the defendant's counsel, furnished me with the handle and the iron portion; the other portion I furnished myself.

137. X Q. How long is it since you saw one of the instruments which you say was used in the post-office like this exhibit?

A. About six or seven years.

138. X Q. Where did you see it then?

A. In the post-office.

139. X Q. Was it in use?

A. I cannot say.

140. X Q. Who showed it to you?

A. I had free access to it. I am not speaking about this stamp here—Defendant's Exhibit No. 6.

141. X Q. What stamp are you referring to?

A. Well, I couldn't say what stamp particularly. I think it had gutta percha for a killer.

1722 142. X Q. I will repeat my question. When did you last see an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, now shown you?

A. I couldn't state positively; 15 or 16 years, probably; it may be more or less.

143. X Q. State in what year you were transferred from the domestic to the foreign department?

A. I cannot recollect.

144. X Q. Was it before 1853?

A. I cannot say.

145. X Q. Was it before 1860?

A. I think so.

146. X Q. Are you sure of it?

A. Well, I'm not swearing positively; to the best of my recollection I am certain about it.

147. X Q. Who succeeded Mr. Brady as postmaster?

A. Mr. Fowler—Isaac B. Fowler.

148. X Q. Can you tell the year, or anything near the year when he was appointed?

A. I think it was 1853 or 1854.

149. X Q. Where were you when Mr. Fowler was appointed postmaster?

A. That I could not say positively.

150. X Q. You do not know, then, do you, whether or not you were transferred from the domestic to the foreign department during Mr. Brady's administration?

A. Not distinctly.

151. X Q. Do you know in whose administration you were transferred?

A. Not distinctly.

152. X Q. Who succeeded Mr. Fowler as postmaster?

A. To the best of my knowledge it was John A. Dix.

153. X Q. Who was head stamper while you were in the domestic department?

A. Charles Smith.

154. X Q. Did the killer that was soldered on the plain stamp ever break off?

A. Not to my recollection.

1723 Redirect:

155. Re D. Q. Have you a distinct recollection that you were appointed by Mr. Brady?

A. Undoubtedly.

156. Re D. Q. Have you a distinct recollection that while you were in the domestic department you tied a pine killer to an ordinary New York stamp and used the same?

(Objected to as a repetition of the former direct examination, and as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

157. Re D. Q. Is your recollection clear and distinct that an iron or steel killer was substituted after the pine had been used for a little while?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, sir.

158. Re D. Q. Is your recollection clear and distinct that the substitution was made while you were a stamper in the domestic department?

(Same objection.)

A. I think so.

159. Re D. Q. Who soldered the iron killer to the postmarker?

A. To the best of my recollection it was Mr. Hoole.

160. Re D. Q. Do you recollect any circumstances, such as the remarks of fellow clerks to you, which impressed on your mind the fact that your way of combining the killer with the postmarker was a valuable thing?

(Objected to as leading, and as improper on cross-examination.)

A. Yes, sir.

161. Re D. Q. State what you recollect about that.

(Same objection, and also as asking for hearsay.)

1724 A. Mr. Clement and Mr. Thomas Clarke and several others made the remark that I ought to get out a patent for the same.

162. Re D. Q. Was the time when you first used a pine killer the time when postage-stamps first began to be used in considerable numbers?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, sir.

163. Re D. Q. To the best of your recollection who was postmaster when you were transferred to the foreign department? State without attempting to speak absolutely positively.

(Same objection.)

A. I do not recollect.

164. Re D. Q. Do you think that you were as much as five or six years in the domestic department?

(Same objection.)

A. I cannot say.

165. Re D. Q. You can tell what your best recollection is. Please give that.

(Same objection.)

A. Well, I don't think I was in the domestic department five years, if that.

Re-cross:

166. Re X Q. What was your invention for which you were advised to get a patent?

A. On the same principle as Defendant's Exhibit 6.

167. Re X Q. Do you mean that you were advised to get a patent for a principle or for any particular instrument? And if for any particular instrument, describe it.

(Objected to on the ground that it is immaterial what the witness was advised to do.)

A. For an instrument with a steel killer attached to it.

1725 168. Re X Q. How was the steel killer attached?

(Same objection.)

A. The first principle was soldering.

169. Re X Q. What was the next principle?

A. The next principle was a tube, as far as my recollection goes.

170. Re X Q. Did the tube constitute the killer?

A. No, sir.

171. Re X Q. What did?

A. Cork and rubber.

172. Re X Q. What was the next principle?

(Objected to on the ground that counsel ought to specify in his question whether he is speaking of the principle that he was advised to get a patent for, or changes that were actually adopted in the post-office.)

A. I cannot distinctly recollect, we have had so many different kinds.

173. Re X Q. Why didn't you get a patent, as you were advised?

A. The principal reason was, I held a position under the government and gave them the benefit of my ingenuity.

174. Re X Q. Any other reason?

A. Well, there might have been; I did not wish to go to that trouble.

175. Re X Q. Were all the improvements made on the plain stamp while you were in the domestic department your inventions?

A. That question I couldn't answer, sir; I might have some assistance, some advice and some improvement recommended.

176. Re X Q. How do you know that Mr. Hoole did the soldering?

A. I don't know positively; he did the work, and Mr. Corbett.

177. Re X Q. Were he and Mr. Corbett together in the same shop or building?

A. To the best of my knowledge they were.

1726 178. Re X Q. Did you have any communications with General Dix about any stamp?

A. Not that I recollect.

179. Re X Q. How was the tube which you say you used attached to the handle of the instrument?

A. I couldn't recollect distinctly; I think it had a cross-bar or a cross-piece attached.

180. Re X Q. When was your attention first called to this matter, with the idea of your being a witness?

A. I think it was last week; it might have been the week before.

181. Re X Q. Had you thought anything upon this subject prior to that time since these different stamps were introduced into the post-office?

A. Yes, while I was in the office, but not since.

182. Re X Q. When you left the domestic department, as I understand, you left there in use a combined stamp like Complainant's Exhibit A?

A. Well, I can't answer that question positively; to the best of my recollection I have used those—screwed them on.

183. Re X Q. Haven't you sworn here to-day that a stamp like Complainant's Exhibit A was used in the domestic department at the time you were transferred to the foreign department?

(Complainant's Exhibit A shown witness.)

A. I have not sworn it.

184. Re X Q. Have you sworn that the plain stamp with the killer soldered on was in use in the domestic when you were transferred to the foreign department?

A. I swore to the best of my recollection.

185. Re X Q. Give the names of all the clerks who talked with you about your invention.

A. It would be impossible; I cannot recollect; I gave the names of two; the most of them are dead.

186. Re X Q. Are the two who you named dead?

A. They are, sir.

187. Re X Q. Who was postmaster when you quit the post-office?

1727 A. Patrick H. Jones.

188. Re X Q. Was he the predecessor of Mr. James, the present postmaster?

A. Yes, sir.

J. J. RILEY.

Sworn to before me this January 15th, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Examiner, &c.

Adjourned to Wednesday at 12 o'clock m.

NEW YORK, January 18th, 1878—10.30 a. m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

EZRA MILLER, a witness produced on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. Ezra Miller; I am 65 years of age; I reside at Mahwah, New Jersey; I am by profession a civil engineer, and am at present employed in introducing a new invention, which I have patented, entitled Miller's Platforms, Couplers and Buffers for Railroad Passenger Cars; my office is 6 Park Place, in this city.

2. Q. What was your occupation about the years 1857 to about 1860?

A. In 1857 I was engaged and occupied as chief engineer in the building of a railroad in Wisconsin; in 1858, 1859 and 1860, as postmaster of the city of Janesville, Wisconsin.

3. Q. Who was President when you were appointed postmaster?

A. James Buchanan.

1728 4. Q. About how long after Buchanan was inaugurated was it before you were appointed postmaster?

A. About a year.

5. Q. Please give as detailed an account as you can of the instrument or instruments which were used in the Janesville post-office for the purpose of postmarking letters, and of cancelling postage-stamps, when you first became postmaster, and of any changes that were made while you were in the office.

A. The instruments in use in the office for that purpose when I took it were, so far as the iron postmarker is concerned, were very much the same, and about the size of one I find on the table, with a label attached, marked Defendant's Exh. No. 4. It is in the form of a cylinder, about an inch long and about an inch in diameter, with the name of the post-office engraved on the outer edge of the circle, with a square mortise or hole in the center to receive and hold the type used in marking the date, and a small thumb screw to hold those types firmly; the wooden handle used with the iron marker was very much like in form the one I find on Complainant's Exhibit U; the technical name of this kind of handle is brad-awl handle.

6. Q. How were the postage-stamps cancelled at that time and in that office?

A. By the use of the instrument I have just described, and with ink upon the marking face of the instrument; the application of the inked instrument being upon the postage-stamp itself.

7. Q. The postmark and the cancellation mark were the same thing, were they?

A. Yes, sir.

8 & 9. Q. Was any change made, and if so, by whom, and how long after you went into the post-office, and what was the nature of such change?

A. I found that the stamps cancelled in the way that I have described were sometimes cleaned off and used, or attempted to be used, a second time in my office; I directed my clerks to use more force, if pos-
1729 sible in cancelling postage-stamps; the effort to do that caused soreness of the hands; to remedy that I changed the handle, and got up a new stamp with the handle parallel, or nearly parallel, with the face of the stamp, as a carpenter's hammer handle is nearly parallel with the face of the hammer; with this instrument I could get more power in applying the stamp, and with less damage to the hands; this was four to six months after my appointment.

10. Q. Describe more particularly how that part of the new instrument was made into which the handle fitted.

A. In making a plan of the instrument I took the carpenter's hammer first as a starting point, forming the face of the hammer very much like the hand stamp I have before described for marking letters; the claw end of the hammer I utilized by making it in the form of a socket to receive and hold type to be used in marking letters "paid," "missent," "advertised," &c.

11. Q. When the instrument was used, whereabouts on the envelope was the postage-mark put—on or off the postage stamp?

A. On the stamp.

12. Q. Have you drawings which illustrate the hammer stamp?

A. I have, sir; I produce them.

(Drawings marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 8. J. A. S., Ex'r. January 18, 1878.)

13. Q. Please state what the different letters in the drawings represent.

A. The same letters are intended to represent the same parts in the three drawings on the sheet Def't's Exh. No. 8; the capital letter A designates the hammer-head; the italic letter a a thumb-screw used to fasten the type; the capital letter B the handle of the instrument, which I made of wood; the italic letter b a thumb-screw to tighten the types used in marking the dates; the capital letter C the socket in the upper end of the hammer, made to receive the type used to mark the 1730 words "paid," "missent," "advertised," &c.; the capital letter D the position of said type when in use; the capital letter E the screw tenon upon which the marker is screwed or placed; the capital letter F the said marker, and the capital letter G the position of the types for marking the dates.

Q. 14. Did you get the sort of an instrument you have described patented?

A. Yes, sir; it was several months after I commenced using it; it might probably have been a year; according to the date on the paper which came from the Patent Office, I see it was March 22d, 1859; that paper is Defendant's Exhibit No. 8.

15. Q. Did you make an instrument for the purposes enquired about of any other shape than the instrument you have described?

(Complainant's counsel objects because it is not competent for the defendant to give any evidence by this witness showing or tending to show an invention or prior use of the subject-matter in controversy, for the reason that such evidence is not properly described and set out in the answer, as required by statute.)

A. Yes, sir; I made a double-headed one.

16. Q. What was the double head for?

A. One was a marker, the other was a canceller.

17. Q. How many blows did it take to put on the postmark and the cancellation mark?

A. One blow, both at the same time.

18. Q. When the double-headed instrument was used, whereabouts on the envelope did the postmark appear, on or off the postage-stamp?

A. Off the postage-stamp.

19. Q. Will you make a drawing of one of your double-headed instruments?

A. I have a pencil sketch here, which I have just made upon the table here, showing the double-headed stamp, and marked by letters to correspond with the paper already exhibited, marked No. 8, ex-
1731 cepting as to the letter H, which shows the additional head used for cancelling postage-stamps; this instrument was made solid, of one piece of steel.

(Sketch offered in evidence, and marked Def't's Exh. No. 9, J. A. S., ex., Jan. 18, 1878.)

20. Q. I see that this sketch contains some writing in pencil; is that your writing, and is it correct?

A. Yes, sir; it is merely an explanation of the part marked H.

(The matter written in pencil on Defendant's Exhibit No. 9 offered in evidence.)

21. Q. What configuration did the marking face of the canceller have?

A. It was what we called an orange quarter, having four points inside of the circle.

22. Q. You stated the whole of the double-headed stamp was made of steel, did that include the handle?

A. No, sir; the hammer handle was made of wood the same as the original.

23. Q. When did you first make one of your double-headed instruments?

A. It was before I applied for the patent a month or two.

24. Q. Did you ever obtain more than one patent for this sort of a thing?

A. No, sir.

25. Q. Was the double-headed instrument put in use in the Janesville post-office?

A. Yes, sir.

26. Q. State in what year, if you recollect.

A. It was in the winter of 1858, or January, 1859; as soon as I made it I put it right in use.

27. Q. How long did it continue to be used in the Janesville post-office?

A. I couldn't answer; I used it during my term most of the time, and presented it to my successor when I left.

1732 28. Q. When did you cease to be postmaster?

A. Shortly after the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln.

29. Q. Who was your successor?

A. James M. Burgess.

30. Q. While you were postmaster, did you use any other sort of an instrument for the purposes inquired about?

A. Yes, sir.

31. Q. Give a description of that other instrument.

A. I had a separate canceller, similar to that attachment marked H in Exhibit 9, which was used with a brad-awl handle, which was used when the original hammer stamp was used; sometimes using the marker with red ink and the canceller with black, which made it very handsome looking; this was used part of the time, occasionally when the boys had time to do it.

32. Q. What do you mean by "this was used part of the time"?

A. I mean that sometimes we used the double-header alone to stamp letters, and at other times the original hammer stamp to mark the letters with the name of the post-office and date, and the said canceller to cancel the postage-stamps.

33. Q. What was this canceller made of—of what material?

A. The lower end of it was made of steel, the handle of wood.

34. Q. Did you ever use a canceller made of any elastic substance, like rubber, or cork, or wood, if you recollect?

A. I think we did use one that was sent to me by Mr. Zeverly, Third Assistant Postmaster-General I think he was at that time; I think we used it for a little time, and sent it back with my disapproval, because it did not sufficiently cancel the postage-stamps, owing to the elasticity of the instrument.

35. Q. Was that a separate canceller?

A. It was.

36. Q. Describe briefly how it was made.

1733 A. I don't remember exactly, but very much like the canceller I had, excepting the face was covered with an elastic substance; I think it was rubber.

36½. Q. Look at the canceller in complainant's Exhibit U, and state in what respects, if any, the canceller sent you by Mr. Zeverly differs from that.

A. The canceller face in Exhibit U is made of cork, and it is coupled with the marker; the one that Mr. Zeverly sent me was not faced with cork, and was not coupled with the marker.

37. Q. How was the rubber, which you say formed the marking face of the canceller in the Zeverly instrument, connected with the handle?

A. My impression is that the entire instrument was made of wood, excepting a ferule on the lower end of it, which projected beyond the wood about a quarter of an inch, and was filled with the elastic substance.

38. Q. About what time was this canceller of Zeverly's sent to you, as near as you recollect?

A. It was shortly after I obtained my patent papers; it might have been a month or two; in the summer of 1859.

39. Q. Did you use it at all in your office?

A. We did; we gave it a good trial.

40. Q. Did you use in your office any other instrument having brad-awl handles, for the purposes inquired about?

A. Not that I remember; I have had instruments sent to me by other postmasters for trial, but I don't remember what they were.

41. Q. Did you ever use a compound postmarker and canceller having any other sort of a handle than a hammer handle?

A. Not that I remember.

42. Q. Who devised or invented the original hammer stamp and the double header?

A. The hammer stamp was undoubtedly my own invention, and I think the double header was; I had never seen any before; I have seen them since.

43. Q. Why didn't you get a patent for the double header?

1734 A. Because I considered the hammer handle plan or system entirely original, and therefore patentable; the other I was not sure of exactly, but I was sure of one thing—that the hammer-handle was the only one that would give us sufficient power, and would have to be used with any kind of a stamp; it was not necessary to patent a stamp; but it has not since been used.

Cross-examined:

44. X Q. I understand you to say that your double header was made simply by casting on to the side of the postmarker the postage-canceller. Is that correct?

A. Well, it is not cast; it is forged steel; the two are forged together of steel.

45. X Q. You say that the reason why you did not apply for a patent for this double header was that you were not quite sure that it was original. What made you have doubts upon that subject?

A. I had no doubts, because the question never occurred to me; the cancelling of a postage-stamp required, in my estimation, more power than could be used with a brad-awl handle; therefore it would have to be used with the hammer-handle which I had already patented.

46. X Q. Was the invention which you supposed you made any the less original because the separate canceller was forged with the postmarker?

A. The canceller that I found in the office when I took the office, was a postage-stamp canceller and a post-office marker, and used as such at that time as one instrument; they were one instrument; in making my double header I merely separated these two instruments, which I did not think much of an invention; another thing, at that time I had no idea of asking for a patent.

47. Q. Did you not consider that when the separate canceller was forged with the postmarker that an improvement had been made upon your original hammer stamp?

1735 A. I did not; in my invention the thing of value in my estimation was simply in the handle; and in the making the two stamps out of one I merely showed what could be done with the hammer handle, that is all; in further answer to that question I will state that I made one post-office stamp with, I think, six or eight faces, and I presented that one to Postmaster Clephune, at Washington City, to show the usefulness of my invention, the hammer handle.

48. X Q. If you did not consider the attaching of the separate canceller to your original hammer handle marker as as improvement, why did you use the double-header in the office instead of the original hammer handle marker?

A. Simply because I had in my invention the power to use more than one, and in doing so save time.

49. X Q. Then you admit, do you, that your double-header was so much of an improvement upon the original hammer stamp as to save time in its use, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

50. X Q. Did it not occur to you when you applied for your patent that an improvement upon an instrument which would save time and labor was valuable and patentable?

A. When I applied for my patent I had but one idea about it, and that was that the handle would have to be used with any kind of canceller; that the mere putting of ink upon a postage stamp would not cancel it; that the application of the instrument should be of sufficient force to perfectly cancel the postage-stamp without ink; my object was to prevent the washing of stamps.

51. X Q. You did not then, in what you made, consider it at all important that the postmark should be made on the letter off the postage-stamp, did you?

A. I merely considered the printing of the name of the post-
1736 office upon the envelope and off the postage stamp as desirable, because it made it more distinct and plain, easier read; it was more a matter of taste than of economy in that particular.

52. X Q. Was it not an improvement upon the old style of putting the postmark upon the postage-stamp to have a machine that would put the mark plainly and evenly upon the letter, and at the same time cancel the postage stamp?

A. It was undoubtedly, and was being done with two instruments before I made the double-headed one.

53. X Q. Are you absolutely certain that you made and used this double-header before the 22d day of March, 1859?

A. I think I used the double-header before that time, the 22d March, but it was not the solid one; it was a separate canceller attached to the side of the hammer head by two screws, and that the solid one was after I got the patent; that is my recollection at present.

54. X Q. How long do you think you used the double header with the canceller screwed on?

A. Well, it might have been a couple of months, but not all the time, occasionally because the handle was not in the center of the instrument; it was on one side, and the handle was the center of the marker, so that the greater force of the blow was in the marker instead of the canceller, so that they discarded it; then we got the solid double-header after that.

55. X Q. You have stated that Mr. Zeverly sent you a canceller, and that several instruments were sent to you by other postmasters for trial; am I to understand that about that time you and others were experimenting as to the best mode of marking letters and cancelling postage-stamps?

A. At that time I was endeavoring to prevent a second use of postage-stamps; I had consulted Governor Aaron V. Brown, who was then Postmaster-General, upon this subject; he thought it an import-1737 ant matter and worthy of effort; when I returned home I sent a circular letter round among the postmasters, asking advice as to their methods of cancelling postage-stamps so that they could not be used again; in other words, to effectually cancel them; I think I sent one to Troy, and one to Fowler, I think, was postmaster of the city of New York at that time; it was this that brought me those contributions from several post-offices.

56. X Q. All, then, that you ever claimed to have invented, as I understand you, was an instrument that would cancel a postage-stamp so that it could not again be used, better than any other instrument in use?

A. My invention was a method of handling the instruments with such power as to prevent future use of the same stamps.

57 X Q. Was that all of your invention?

A. That was my only object; I don't know about the invention; we invent a good many things without knowing it.

58. X Q. Do you remember to have heard anything about an order from the Postmaster-General as to post-marking on the letter off the postage-stamp?

(Objected to on the ground that it is immaterial what the witness has heard.)

A. I think there was an order of that kind made before I was appointed, or at least a circular advising separate marking and separate instruments issued to the post-offices, to enable them to comply with it; that is my recollection of it; when I say post-offices, I mean the larger offices, not the small country offices; they cancel with a pen and ink as a general thing.

59. X Q. How long, if you know, before you commenced the use of the double-header, had the post-marking in your office been made off the postage-stamp, and on the letter?

A. I don't know; I couldn't tell.

60. X Q. I understand you to say that you are not aware that 1738 this handle stamp or double-header was used elsewhere than in the Janesville post office. I think you made that statement?

A. There were none used in other offices, except my own, and except when I called on the postmaster, and I would remain while the stamping clerks were using it, merely to get their opinion on it.

61. X Q. Have you ever seen any of the stamps in the Janesville post-office since you ceased to be postmaster?

A. Not that I remember.

62. X Q. Do you remember at any time while a bill was pending before Congress, proposing to pay Mr. Norton or his assignees for the use of his stamp by the government, of writing a letter to the Postmaster-General, or any committee of Congress, upon the subject of your inventions in that line?

A. I don't recollect of ever knowing anything about such a bill or such a letter.

63. X Q. Did you ever claim to the Postmaster-General, or anybody, that you were entitled to compensation for inventing a postage-stamp that has been claimed by Mr. Norton?

A. Not the slightest recollection of anything of the kind.

64. X Q. Did you write a letter to the Postmaster-General in 1866 or 1867, in which you claimed that you had invented this combined post-marker and postage canceller in the fall of 1860, or forepart of 1861?

(Objected to on the ground that if such a letter was written it should be produced and the witness questioned as to its contents specially.)

A. I have no recollection about it, but Alick Randall was Postmaster-General at that time, and as postmaster of Waukesha at the time that

I issued that circular letter, he conferred with me a good deal upon the subject of the letter that I issued, and was familiar with what I 1739 was doing at that time, and knew that I had that patent; and it is possible may have written a letter to me, which I may have answered, and which may possibly be the one that you have alluded to; but I have no recollection of it; I was in the habit of writing letters to Mr. Randall, and receiving letters from him.

Redirect:

65. Re D. Q. When you speak of the canceller and the post-marker being forged in one piece, state whether that is the same thing or similar to welding one piece of iron to another?

A. It is not; by the word forging I mean to take a piece of metal, and by heating it and hammering it change the shape of it; that is what I call forging.

66. Re-D. Q. Do you understand, on giving your testimony on cross-examination, that there can be an improvement on an instrument which does not require any invention and which is not patentable?

A. Well, it depends upon whether those improvements were known before or not; if they were not known before, it is an invention; if they were known before, it is not an invention.

67. Re-D. Q. May not a person of ordinary mechanical skill make an improvement in an instrument which is not necessarily patentable, in your understanding?

(Objected to, because the witness is not called as an expert, and it is not proper to go into that matter on redirect examination.)

A. I don't know why he couldn't do it accidentally.

68. Re-D. Q. Was the double-header when made solid put into use in your office as soon as it was gotten up?

A. I think not; I think I was in Washington when it was finished, and I put it into use when I returned home; I gave the plans to a 1740 man named Brooks, a gunsmith, in Janesville; he made the instrument, and I think it was completed several days before I got home from Washington.

69. Re-D. Q. Did you know anything about any combined post-marker and canceller before you yourself combined them in a hammer stamp?

(Objected to as a repetition of the former direct examination.)

A. No, sir; not that I remember.

Recross:

70. Re X Q. Did you tell or in any way inform Postmaster-General Randall, or anybody in the Post Office Department in Washington, of the existence or use of this double-header in the Janesville post-office?

(Objected to on the ground that the time of giving the information inquired about should be made specific.)

A. Mr. Randall knew of it before I made it; he was as familiar with it as I was. I showed him the plans before I made the instrument, in Janesville, and all this was before he was Postmaster-General, but I have no recollection of any conversation with him on the subject after he was appointed Postmaster-General; but as to the people in Washington, I had it with me in Washington, and showed it to them, and used it in the office; this was in 1859.

(Defendant's counsel objects to so much of the answer as relates to what was done before Mr. Randall was appointed Postmaster General as irresponsive.)

71. Re X Q. Did you, while you were in Washington, show this instrument to any officer or officers in the Post-Office Department?

A. I made frequent visits to Washington, and on one of them Mr. Claphane requested me the next time I came to Washington to bring 1741 my new stamp with me; that he wanted to see it. I complied with the request, and when I called on Mr. Claphane he was not there, and I left it with the stamp-cancelling clerks; the next day I called and got it and took it up stairs. I had it in my overcoat pocket and visited several of the departments, and showed it, on request, to the departmental officials and clerks.

EZRA MILLER.

Sworn to before me this 18th day of January, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Examiner, &c.

It is noticed that two of the exhibits in John A. Dix's testimony are marked No. 6 and No. 7, and that two of the exhibits in James Riley's testimony are marked No. 6 and No. 7. The marks for identification are hereby amended, by consent of counsel, by adding the name of the witness on each exhibit, who testified about it, so as to distinguish them apart.

Adjourned sine die.

MONDAY, April 1, 1878.

Present, Sam'l B. Clarke, on part of the defendant, and George H. Williams and Marcus P. Norton for complainant.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of the letters patent granted Frederick G. Ransford and Peter Low, dated Aug. 9, 1859, No. 25036, for improvement in postmarking stamps. The same is marked Defendant's Ex. 145, April 1, 1878, J. S. A., examiner.

1742 (Complainant's counsel objects on the ground as inadmissible under the pleadings, and immaterial.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified duplicate of the model in matter of letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated Aug. 9, 1859, No. 25036, for postmarking stamps. The same is marked Defendant's Ex. 146, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., examiner.

(Objected to because it is not described in defendant's answer, and as immaterial, and is not a duplicate of the original.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of the letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated Dec. 16, 1862, No. 37175, for postmark and cancelling stamp. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 147, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., examiner.

(Objected to because they are not sufficiently described in defendant's answer, and as immaterial.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified duplicate of the model in the matter of the letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated Dec. 16, 1862, No. 37175, for postmark and cancelling stamp. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 148, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Objected to as not sufficiently described in the answer, and as immaterial and not a duplicate of the original.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified duplicate in matter of letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated April 14, 1863, No. 38175, reissued Aug. 23, 1864, No. 1748, and assigned to J. Shavor
1743 and A. C. Corse, reissued Aug. 3, 1869. No. 3586, reissued Oct. 4, 1870. No. 4143, division A, assigned to Helen M. Ingalls, reissued Oct. 4, 1870. No. 4144, division B, assigned to the Secombe

Manufacturing Co., for improvement in post-office stamps. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 149, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., examiner.

(Complainant's counsel objects to said certificate because it is imperfect and false in not stating all the assignments of said patent on record; 2. That it is a mere statement of the Commissioner relating to facts, and not copies of records referred to; 3. The Commissioner has no authority to make any such certificate; 4. The paper tied on to the handle with a string has been attached since the original has been filed, and is no part of it; 5. The alleged model is not a duplicate of the original, and is inadmissible.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of the letters patent granted Emory N. Moore, dated Jan. 16, 1849, No. 6036, for improvement in machinery for post-marking letters, &c. The same is marked Defendant's Ex. No. 150, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., examiner.

(Objected to by complainant's counsel because it is not sufficiently described in the answer, and is irrelevant and immaterial.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of letters patent granted Benjamin Chambers, dated Sept. 23, 1851, No. 8384, for improvement in letter stamps. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 151, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Same objection as to the next preceding alleged copy of a patent.)

1744 Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of the letters patent granted Stephen P. Ruggles, dated Aug. 21, 1855, No. 13470, for hand stamp. The same is marked Defendant's Ex. 152, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Same objection as to the next preceding alleged copy of a patent.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the records of the Patent Office of letters patent granted Ezra Miller, dated March 22, 1859, No. 23307, for post-office hammer stamp. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 153, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Same objection as to the next preceding alleged copy of a patent.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy from the bound volumes of the library of the Patent Office of the specification and drawing in the matter of English letters patent granted Pearson Hill, dated March 25, 1857, No. 832, for improvements in machinery for stamping, marking, or printing or arranging papers, &c. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 154, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Complainant's counsel objects on the ground that no sufficient notice of said alleged letters patent, specifications, and drawings is given in the answer; 2. That the Commissioner has no authority to make any such certificate, and the same is illegal and void; 3. The alleged copy of said letters patent, specifications, and drawings is irrelevant and immaterial; 4. Incompetent, because not the best evidence; 5. Because it does not appear when said publication was made in this country.)

1745 Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the bound volumes from the library of the Patent Office specification and drawing in the matter of English letters patent granted George Thomas Robinson, dated October 6, 1857, No. 2563, for a machine for obliterating postage-stamps on letters, &c. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 155, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Same objection as to the next preceding alleged copy of letters patent, specifications, and drawings.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the files of the Patent Office of the file wrapper and contents in the matter of letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated April 14, 1863, No. 38175, for improvement in post-office stamp. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 156, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Complainant's counsel objects because the alleged copy of the said files is not competent; 2. They appear to be mutilated, marked, and changed; 3. They are irrelevant and immaterial; said files are not admissible to alter, explain, or modify the patent or its specifications.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy from the files of the Patent Office of the file wrapper and contents in the matter of the reissue of letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated Aug. 3, 1869, No. 3586, for improvement in post-office hand stamps and postmarking and cancelling. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 157, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Same objection as to the next preceding alleged copy of file.)

1746 Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the certified copy of the pleadings, of the findings of fact, and conclusions of law found thereon by the court, and of the final judgment in the case of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse vs. United States, in the Court of Claims, No. 2571. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 158, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Objected to as not admissible under the defendant's answer and because it is an imperfect copy of the record in the case.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy of the deposition of Marcus P. Norton, filed on November 21, 1867, in the case of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse against the United States in the Court of Claims, No. 2571. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 159, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Objected to because it is not competent to give the alleged testimony of Mr. Norton as evidence in this case, as he is a competent witness here; 2. It is not admissible under any issue made by the defendant's answer in this case.

Defendant's counsel offers the last two exhibits in connection with each other.

(Objections renewed.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy from the files of the Patent Office of the caveat of Marcus P. Norton, filed October 20 and 27, 1853, for a machine for mailing and folding letters, together with the indorsement of the Commissioner of Patents upon the paper marked Exhibit B, in the said copy of the file, to the effect that said paper, Exhibit B, does not form a valid portion of the caveat. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 160, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

1747 (Complainant's counsel objects to said certificate because it is manifestly false; 2. Objects to what purports to be an indorsement upon the paper marked Exhibit B as unauthorized, illegal, and void; 3. The Commissioner has no right to destroy or mutilate the records of his office; 4. The alleged copy of the file is imperfect and does not contain copies of all that was originally filed; 5. The Commissioner had no jurisdiction to make such endorsement.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copies from the records of the Patent Office in relation to certain charges made against Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., and the action of said Patent Office respecting the same. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 161, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Complainant's counsel objects on the ground that it does not appear that said copies are true or complete records of said proceedings against said Marcus P. Norton; 2. Said copies of said proceedings are not admissible in evidence, because they do not relate to the issues or the parties in this case; 3. They are irrelevant, immaterial, and incompetent, and relate to matters of a criminal nature, and are unauthorized by law; 4. The said copies contain statements which said Commissioner was not authorized to make, record, or certify to.)

Defendant's counsel offers separately and in connection with the last exhibit a certified copy from the files of the Patent Office of Exhibits A, B, C, and D, referred to in charges made against Marcus P. Norton by the Commissioner of Patents, said charges having been served on said Marcus P. Norton on or about that date, Aug. 29, 1871. The 1748 copies of the exhibits are offered separately and together. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 162, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

(Complainant's counsel objects to said certificate as unauthorized and illegal, being an unsworn statement of alleged facts; 2. Objects to said indorsements upon said papers marked B and D because they are made thereon without any authority of law, and are void and not admissible as evidence in this case. They are unauthorized, immaterial, and irrelevant, and the Commissioner had no jurisdiction to make them.)

Defendant's counsel offers the last three exhibits together.

(Objections renewed as above.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the certified copy of a letter on file of the Post-Office Department, to wit, a letter bearing date Washington, D. C., Aug. 10, 1860, from St. John B. L. Skinner, Acting 1st Assistant P. M. G., to postmaster at New York, being the last one in the bundle of three letters under the same certificate. The same is marked Def't's Ex. 163, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy of two original letters on file in the Post-Office Department, to wit, a letter from John A. Dix to Hon. J. Holt, Postmaster-General, dated Post-Office, N. Y., Aug. 21, 1860, and also a letter from John A. Dix to General Skinner, dated Post-Office, N. Y., Aug. 28, 1860. Each of these letters are offered separately, and the endorsement on each is also offered. The first of the letters is marked Def't's Ex. 164, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex., and the second, Def't's Ex. 164 A, J. A. S., ex.

1749 (Complainant's counsel objects to said copies because the parties thereto are competent witnesses and their testimony is the best evidence.)

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence certified copy of the original letter on file in the Post-Office Department, dated Troy, N. Y., March 14, 1864, from Marcus P. Norton to the Hon. Postmaster-General. The same is marked Defendant's Ex. 165, April 1, 1878, J. A. S., ex.

Defendant's counsel, in view of the objection to Exhibits 164 and 164 A, withdraws the exhibits.

Adjourned to April 2, 1878, at 10 o'clock a. m.

NEW YORK, April 2, 1878—10 o'clock a. m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy from one of the records of the Post-Office Department, the same being a record of postage-stamps sent to the Postmaster at New York City in the year 1847 and 1851, and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit 166, J. A. S., ex'r.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a certified copy from the bound volumes of the library of the Patent Office of the United States of the specification and drawing in the matter of the English letters patent granted D. G. Berri, dated April 24, 1860, No. 1020, for an improved date stamp, the same having been sealed the 27th September, 1750 1860, and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit 167, J. A. S., ex'r.

(Complainant's counsel waives objection to said alleged specifications and drawings on the ground that the same are not set up in the answer, but objects to them on the ground that the certificate of the Commissioner is unauthorized by law; second, that they are secondary and not the best evidence; that they are irrelevant and immaterial and incompetent, and the Commissioner has no power by his certificate to make them evidence.)

THOMAS J. W. ROBERTSON, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows, in answer to questions propounded by SAMUEL B. CLARKE, Esq., of counsel for defendant:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Thomas J. W. Robertson; I am 45 years of age; I reside in Washington, D. C., and I am a patent solicitor.

2. Q. What has been your employment or occupation during your life? Answer general.

A. From the 18th to the 24th year I was engaged more or less in the printing business; from the 20th year I have taken great interest in mechanical pursuits, and since 1854 I spent most of my time in the study and practice of mechanism; the last ten years I have been employed as a patent agent, and for the larger part of that period I had charge of one of the branches of the Patent Office practice of Munn & Company, during which time it was my special business to examine and report upon the novelty and patentability of alleged new inventions. I have been frequently called to testify as an expert in cases before the United States courts; as a printer I have taken special pains to 1751 keep myself posted in the various improvements in that art, and have now a small printing office of my own; as a mechanic I have a small machine shop connected with my residence for experimenting and model-making purposes.

2½. Q. Have you examined the certified copy of the specification and drawing of the English letters patent granted D. G. Berri, and which have been offered in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit 167?

A. I have.

3. Q. Are you familiar with the form in which the specifications of English letters patent appear in the United States Patent Office; are they printed?

A. I am; they are printed.

4. Q. Where printed, if you know?

A. They bear the imprint, usually, of an English firm of printers who do most of the work for the English Government in London; of my own knowledge I cannot state where they are printed; I only know that of all that I have examined I never saw one to my knowledge bearing any other imprint than that of the firm above referred to, the last name in which is Spottiswoode, whose names usually appear as the printers of most English Bibles that are imported into this country,

5. Q. How soon after a patent is issued in England does it customarily appear in print?

(Objected to as incompetent for witness to state any custom.)

A. From the imprint on such patents they appear to be printed within a few months of the date of enrollment; sometimes the imprint bears the same date as to the year as the enrollment.

(Objected to as secondary, and not the best evidence.)

6. Q. How soon after they are printed in England are they received in the United States Patent Office?

(Objected to as not the best evidence.)

1752 A. I can give no positive answer to that; to my own knowledge I have seen such patents within a year after the date; this answer refers to the full patents, but abstracts of the English patents are printed in the English journals in from two to three weeks after the date of the provisional specification, which journals are usually received here and are placed on file in the Patent Office as soon as possible after publication.

(Objected to as incompetent evidence.)

7. Q. Please state whether the model which I now produce and show you is made in conformity with the specification and drawings of Berri's patent, Defendant's Exhibit 167.

A. I can see no difference in the stamp itself, but there appears to be a slight difference in the form of the handle, and there is no screw thread shown in the drawing on the shank that enters the handle, nor does there appear to be any ferule shown on the handle in the drawing; with these exceptions the drawing and model appear to exactly agree.

(Defendant's counsel offers model in evidence, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 168, J. A. S., ex'r.)

8. Q. Have you examined the specifications and drawings of the patent granted Marcus P. Norton on the 14th April, 1863, and the reissue of said letters patent on which this suit is brought, being division A, No. 4143, dated October 4th, 1870?

A. I have.

9. Q. Will you please to give, as fully as you can, an account of the state of the art to which the original patent belongs as it existed at the time the original patent was granted, to wit, the 14th of April 1863?

(Objected to because it does not appear that the witness is competent to give such evidence; second, the evidence itself is inadmissible, 1753 as it involves the question of opinion and not a statement of facts.)

A. From my first acquaintance with the printing business, it has been common to produce impressions of two or more types at one blow; it was also common to enclose such types in what are technically known as "chases," which served to keep the types in their proper places and served incidentally as a means to prevent the crushing of the types by the power of the press; types made of wood were commonly employed, to my own knowledge, with the end of the grain of the wood so arranged as to be used for the printing surface; soft materials for types were well known long anterior to the date of the patent referred to; in some cases rubber being employed, in others a composition of glue and molasses, and in other cases printing surfaces of felt enclosed in metal and attached to wood.

Among the devices used to produce the impression were handles of various forms carrying different styles of receptacles for the types. I hold in my hand a hand stamp purchased by me in Broadway, New York, some time previous to March 10, 1856, which consists of a handle bearing a long shallow box or oblong tube with one end closed and having a screw to bind and firmly hold the type in position. This stamp was originally a perfect stamp, with sufficient type to print my name. The most of those type have been lost and I have substituted for them a piece of folded paper to prevent the loss of the remainder.

Defendant's counsel offers this stamp in evidence, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 169, J. A. S., ex'r.

(Objected to as inadmissible under the allegations in the answer.)

(Witness continues:) At the time I purchased Exhibit 169 the same dealer had a different class of stamp, with a broad surface sur-
1754 rounding the type, which surface formed a printing surface, so that the same stamp would produce an impression on any soft material to which it might be applied, showing a name and an ornamental border in addition thereto. Printing presses had been employed having two or more boxes containing types, which boxes were attached to a frame made to receive them and through which the impression was produced. This last form of press I saw in use as early in 1854. Some time previous to 1859 I saw a hand stamp having between the handle and the printing plate a piece of rubber, which rubber was enclosed in a tube or recess formed in the lower part of the handle. Previous to 1856 I saw a device illustrated in the Scientific American, a newspaper published in this city by Munn & Co., consisting of a cross-bar from which depended three pens, by which three marks might be made at the same time by one movement of the handle attached to the centre of said cross-bar, so that three letters could be written at the same time. One class of stamps that had been employed were made with metal boxes to contain wooden type; other stamps for the same purpose has other soft material enclosed in metal borders and provided with a handle by which they were operated.

10. Q. At the time that you purchased that stamp—Defendant's Exhibit 169, on Broadway, in 1856—were there any common and well-known means by which that stamp could have been altered in size and other respects so as to be adapted at one end of the tube for making a postmark on letters, and at the other end of the tube for making a postage-stamp cancellation mark at one operation?

(Objected to as inadmissible under the allegations in the answer, because the witness is not a proper person to give such an opinion.)

1755 A. Defendant's Exhibit 169 could, without any alteration in said tube or handle, have been made to date or postmark a letter and cancel the stamp thereon, by simply taking out the types and using in lieu thereof proper letters and figures to produce the date at one end of the tube, and putting in the other end of the tube one or more letters with their faces downwards, so that the "feet" of the type would produce an impression on the stamp, or even if types were used in the ordinary manner the effect produced would be sufficient to cancel the stamp; at the time referred to the year was seldom given on the postmark, so that there was plenty of room in the tube for the date as then given and a cancelling device besides.

11. Q. Using only common means and means well known to persons familiar with the art of printing in the year 1856, describe how nearly the stamp, Defendant's Exhibit 169, that you bought in Broadway, could then have been made to approximate to the thing patented in Mr. Norton's original patent of April 14, 1863, a duplicate of the model of which has been offered in evidence, marked Defendant's Exhibit 149.

A. So far as relates to the first claim, it was only necessary to have inserted in the tube or box any of the type made of soft material, referred to in my answer to Q. 9, or ordinary wooden type commonly used in all printing offices, to have made the hand stamp marked Defendant's Exhibit 169 essentially the same as the cancelling device referred to in the first claim of said patent; so far as relates to the second claim, a device similar to the combination covered therein may be made by placing in one end of the box in Defendant's Exhibit 169 one of the wooden type, or type made of soft material referred to in my pre-

1756 vious answers. Next, placing an ordinary "space" against the side of said soft type, then inserting type of about the size shown in Defendant's Exhibit 149, sufficient to form the name of the town and date; Defendant's Exhibit 169 thus provided would accomplish all that Defendant's Exhibit 149 would, and would substantially meet the combination claimed in the second clause of the claim of the patent granted to Marcus P. Norton April 14. 1863, No. 38175; at the end of the box the space before referred to in conjunction with the sides of the box would form the equivalent of the cancelling device, and the type at the other end of the box would give the date or postmark; that is, without any other change being made in the tube or box of Defendant's Exhibit 169. By taking other means well known to the art of printing, and changing the form of Defendant's Exhibit 169, two small boxes, one of which would contain a soft type, and the other the type giving the date or postmark (such boxes as are referred to in my answer to Q. No. 9), and attaching them by any means then well known, or by the means by which the boxes referred to were attached to the frame, to the opposite ends of the tube or box of Defendant's Exhibit 169, the same combination would be produced as in claim 2 of the patent referred to; such boxes and means of attaching to the frames carrying the boxes were seen by me certainly as early as 1854, and had then been in use for several years in the Sun office; it was a common device, well known to printers to attach two or more different "chases" to one press, each of which contained different type, and were secured so as to move simultaneously; another class of type holders, called "turtles," were frequently used in clusters of four upon the same frame, each one of which would occupy the same position with respect to the adjoining one that the Norton canceller, described in Plaintiff's Exhibit D, does to the postmarking device therein shown; the two "turtles" being con-
1757 nected by a cross-bar in substantially the same manner as the cancelling and postmarking devices before referred to are connected by the cross bar mentioned in claim 2 of Complainant's Exhibit D; so far as the use of the soft type is concerned in cancelling postage-stamps, it would make no difference whether the said type were used with their faces or feet up, as cancellation would be produced in either manner.

12. Q. Would the changes which you have referred to have been in 1856 essential modifications of Defendant's Exhibit 169, or only formal and immaterial changes?

(The same objection, and also it is not admissible for the witness to give his opinion on that subject.)

A. They were such that were within the knowledge of every one well versed in the printing business, and would therefore be mere formal changes.

13. Q. How far back can you carry the use of the wood or rubber or other soft or elastic type that you have spoken of, and how inclosed, if in any way, when used?

A. Wooden type have been to my own knowledge (having used them myself) in use as far back as 1852; the type used by me at that time were old and well worn; type of soft material I have seen described in a patent issued in 1843, in the United States; the use of printing surfaces of soft material is also described in an English patent granted to Hancock in 1838; the method usually employed for securing the wood type referred to was to inclose them in a "chase," which is a meta frame in which they were tightly wedged; previous to the date 1852 above given, I was employed in a printing office where I have no recollection of seeing wood type used, but metal type were secured in rings or short tubes of substantially the same form as the tube in Defendant's Exhibit 149; this was in the latter part of the year 1850.

1758 14. Q. Please to examine Defendant's Exhibit 145, which is a certified copy of a patent granted to Ransford & Low, on the 9th August, 1859, and state whether from those specifications and drawings an instrument for the postmarking of letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps at one operation, cancellation being done by inking only, and not by cutting, could have been made at the time the patent was granted by a person familiar with the art of printing as it then existed, he making no other changes or modifications or departures from the specifications and drawings of that patent than what were then well-known substitutes for such part or parts, if any, of the thing patented in said patent as it then was necessary to change.

(Objected to as leading and argumentative and for the reasons stated in the foregoing objections.)

A. As I understand the exhibit, an instrument could be made that would postmark a letter and cancel a stamp at the same time without cutting the stamp by any person, whether familiar with the art of printing or not, having ordinary common sense, as it is only necessary to take a stamp made in accordance with such specifications and rub the cancelling device on a stone so as to dull the cutting edges thereof, when the instrument so made would readily postmark and cancel without cutting.

15. Q. Please answer the same question as the last with reference to Defendant's Exhibit 147, which is a certified copy of a patent granted Marcus P. Norton, on the 16th December, 1862, No. 37175.

A. To make a non-cutting cancelling device of the cancellor therein shown it is only necessary to rub said cancelling device on a stone, give it two or three blows of a hammer or possibly a few strokes of a file across the face, when the cancelling device shown in said exhibit would no longer have cutting edges, and it would simply be a cancelling device. In fact, without such rough usage, the edges would soon become so dull as to no longer cut from the rough usage such stamps ordinarily receive.

1759 16. Q. Please to examine Defendant's Exhibit 154, which is a certified copy from the Library of the Patent Office of English letters patent granted Pearson Hill, dated March 25th, 1857, No. 832, and state whether, from those specifications and drawings, you could construct that part of the machine thereby patented which is intended to postmark letters and cancel postage-stamps; and if you could, describe fully that part of the machine intended for that purpose, and how you would make it, being especially specific as to the die.

(Objected to because it is improper for the witness to give the opinion asked for.)

A. I find described in the patent three different machines for postmarking letters. The postmarking device proper consist' in each machine of a pivoted lever, having on one end the postmarking device, which is more particularly shown on sheet 4, Figures 4 and 5. It is also shown in sheets 6 and 7, the postmarking device being represented in each case by the letter E. It is also shown in sheets 1 and 2, but not so clearly. I could from those drawings and specifications readily construct a machine that would postmark letters and cancel postage stamps at the same time. As shown in Figure 11, sheet 7, the machine would consist of a table to receive the letters, a lever having at one end the postmarking and cancelling device, and at the other end is connected by a pitman to a crank attached to or forming a part of a rotary shaft, to which motion is imparted by treadle and pitman, in a manner well known to every one who has seen a scissors grinding or sewing machine, the whole being so arranged that by operating the treadle a rotary motion is given to the shaft represented by letter B in the drawing, which causes the crank C to give motion, through the pitman C, to the postmarking lever D, which is pivoted or journaled at D. With a machine so constructed it is only necessary to operate the treadle to give an up and down motion to the postmarking and cancelling 1760 device E to produce an impression by said postmarking and cancelling device upon a letter placed beneath it. No means are shown in Fig. 11 of sheet 7 for inking said postmarking device, but an inking apparatus, or a substitute therefor, in the form of a continuous ribbon, is shown in Figure 10, sheet 6, where a similar lever is shown. In the drawings Fig. 1, sheet 1, Figs. 4 and 5, sheet 4, another form of inking apparatus is shown, either of which may be used to suit circumstances.

The cancelling and postmarking device on the end of the lever D, as shown in Figs. 4 and 5, consists of three blocks marked E E E, having above each one a piece of caoutchouc or rubber marked Q Q, above which again is a plate, K, which is pressed upon the rubber by a screw represented by R, the blocks of caoutchouc and plate being enclosed in a right angle tube; the blocks E E E have flanges on them to prevent them falling out of the tube, or from being pushed out by the elasticity of the caoutchouc.

It is stated in the specification, on page 11, that "the dies may be made with cavities for the reception of types for the date or for other purposes, and which may be changed from time to time. I also make the die, with the whole design, in duplicate, so that the design with the date may be legibly impressed upon the letter or envelope as well as upon the postage stamp, which is obliterated or cancelled by it."

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Examination of J. W. ROBERTSON continued by SAM'L B. CLARKE, esq., of counsel for defendant:

17. Q. State wherein the apparatus for postmarking and cancelling which is described in that patent of Pearson Hill, No. 832, of 1857, differs from the post-office stamp described in the patent on which suit is brought, and from the duplicate model thereof, Defendant's Exhibit 149, and whether the differences, if any, are only formal and immaterial, or are substantial and essential.

(The same objection.)

A. I find in the reissued patent, No. 4143, two blocks attached to a cross-bar, each of which has a recess; the recess in one block being designed to receive type, to be secured therein by a set screw, in the manner well known to the art of printing and to mechanics generally. The other block is designed to receive in its recess a cancelling die or type which the specification states may be made of wood, cork, rubber, or of any elastic material.

I find in the post-marking and cancelling device represented in figures

4 and 5, of sheet 4, of the English patent, No. 832 of 1857, three blocks marked E, E, E, which it is stated on page 11 of the written copy of said patent "may be made with cavities for the reception of types for the date or for other purposes."

If made of the size shown in figs. 4 and 5, one of the blocks E could be made to contain sufficient type to post-mark a letter, and one of the other blocks could contain a cancelling die or type, by which means a letter could be post-marked and the stamp thereon cancelled equally well, and probably better, than with devices shown in the reissued patent, No. 4143, on which this suit is brought.

1762 As wooden type were then well known, there would be no invention in placing type of wood or similar soft material in a cavity formed in the block E, described in the English Patent No. 832, of 1857.

In view of this, and the state of the art generally, I cannot see any invention that it would be necessary to make to adapt the post-mark and cancelling device shown in said English patent to post-mark a letter and cancel the stamp thereon at the same time, and it is therefore fully equivalent in operation to that described in the United States patent of M. P. Norton, Reissue No. 4143.

The differences between the inventions described in the two patents consists mainly in the method by which the blow is given to the latter in the act of post-marking and cancelling. In the English patent foot power is employed to produce the impression; in the Reissue Patent No. 4143 a handle, such as was then well known, was applied to the cross-bar connecting the post-marking and cancelling blocks. These being mere formal changes, within the power of any mechanic to make, I cannot see any substantial improvement or change in the stamp described in the Reissue Patent No. 4143 that is not shown in the English Patent No. 832, of 1857.

(Complainant's counsel objects to so much of the foregoing answer as undertakes to state as to what does and what does not constitute an invention, and as to what is or is not an improvement, as wholly irresponsive to the question, and an attempt by the witness to swear an argument for the defendant into his testimony.)

18. Q. State wherein the post-office stamp or device for post-marking and cancellation, described in the letters patent granted Ransford & Low, Aug. 9, 1859, Defendant's Exhibit 145, differs from the post-office stamp described in the letters patent on which suit is brought, Reissue No. 4143, and from the duplicate model thereof, Defendant's Exhibit

1763 149, and whether the differences, if any, are formal and immaterial, or substantial and essential.

A. I find in the Patent No. 25036, issued to Ransford & Low, a post-marking device having attached thereto a cancelling device, consisting of a plate, which the specification describes on page 3 as being "for the purpose of cutting, blotting, cancelling, or effacing the frank or postage-stamp, so as to prevent the second use of the same, while at the same time the name of the post-office, the year, the month, and the day of the month, is printed upon the envelope."

I find in the Reissue Patent No. 4143 a post-marking and a cancelling device, which cancelling device, is stated in the specification, "may be of any desired distance from the aforesaid post-marking or dating device or stamp D, or it may be securely fastened to the immediate side of the said post-marking and dating part, or stamp or device, D, by any convenient and suitable mechanical means."

I also find, in another paragraph of said specification, the statement that "I also construct my said postage-stamp cancelling device, die, or type of cast-iron, steel, or suitable metal."

In still another paragraph, I find these words: "The aforesaid metal cancelling device, die, or type, G, figures 5 and 6, may also be fastened or secured to the immediate side of the said post-marking device by any good and sufficient means." I find in the two patents different kinds of type used for post marking the letter, that shown in the Patent No. 25036, issued to Ransford & Low, being substantially the same with that patented to myself in the year 1857; in that described in the Reissue Patent No. 4143 ordinary type are used. These being, at the time the original patent was granted, of which No. 4143 is a reissue, the equivalents for each other, and the method of attaching the cancelling devices being described in said reissue patent as attached to the side of 1764 the post marking device, I can see no substantial difference between the instruments described in the two patents, excepting that the earlier one has an additional feature not described in the Reissue Patent No. 4143, to wit: The cutting edges formed on the bottom of said blotter, which would readily be defaced by rubbing on a stone, or even by the use to which such instruments are usually put. As to the model shown in Defendant's Exhibit No. 149, I find therein a cancelling device, containing a die or type of soft material, which is not shown in the patent of Ransford & Low, but, as stated in previous answers, such type being known to persons conversant with the state of the art, I do not regard this change as anything substantially or essentially different from the blotting or cancelling device shown in the patent of Ransford & Low, when such cancelling or blotting device has become dull from use, or from being rubbed on a stone in the manner before described, when the state of the art of printing is taken into consideration, together with the foregoing extracts from the specification of the Reissued Patent No. 4143.

19. Q. State wherein the post-office stamp or device for post-marking and cancelling postage-stamps which is described in the letters patent granted to Marcus P. Norton on the 16th of December, 1862, No. 37175, differs from the post-office stamp which is described in the patent on which suit is brought, Reissue No. 4143, and from the duplicate model thereof Defendant's Exhibit 149, and whether the differences, if any, are merely formal and immaterial or are substantial and essential.

A. The difference between the two instruments consists in one of the cancellers being provided with cutting edges and the other with a die or type of soft material; in all other respects they appear to be the same, excepting that one has no type in the recess for dating nor no name engraved on the face of the post-marking device, while that 1765 marked Defendant's Exhibit 149 has the type and name which is lacking in the other; in view of the quotations made from the Reissued Patent No. 4143, given in my previous answer, and the state of the art, I do not consider these differences as making any substantial improvement in the art of post-marking and cancelling letters that is not shown in the Patent No. 37175, issued to Marcus P. Norton, Dec. 16, 1862.

(Complainant's counsel objects to so much of the foregoing answer as gives the opinion of the witness on the subject of improvements as irresponsive to the question.)

20. Q. Please to examine Defendant's Exhibit 137 (Wheeler) and Defendant's Exhibit No. 6 (James Riley), point out the differences between them, and state whether the differences are substantial or not, and state wherein, if at all, the two instruments differ from the post-office stamp described in the patent on which suit is brought, reissue 4143, and whether the differences are material or only formal.

A. I have examined Defendant's Exhibit No. 6 (Riley) and 137 (Wheeler). I find Riley's stamp, Exhibit No. 6, to consist of a postmarking device having on one side a cork apparently designed to cancel a stamp on the same letter to which the postmark is applied, said cork being firmly secured to the postmarking device by thread, which thread is partially covered with wax to keep it in position.

Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 (Wheeler) shows what appears to be intended to represent a postmarking device, having on one side thereof a cylinder of wood which is bound to the postmarking device by a string and wire, the postmarking device and the cylinder being flattened so that they may be the better secured to each other. The handle of each of these exhibits have a rim which serves to prevent the rising of the cork or cylinder when used for cancelling or postmarking letters.

1766 They are to all intents and purposes essentially the same so far as the cancelling devices are concerned, although differing slightly in material. With respect to the difference between Defendant's Exhibit No. 6 (Riley) and Defendant's Exhibit No. 137 (Wheeler) and the instrument described in the reissue patent No. 4143, I can see nothing in view of the state of the art of printing that is not a mere formal change.

21. Q. Please to examine Defendant's Exhibit No. 5, Defendant's Exhibit No. 136 (Anthony), Defendant's Exhibit 135 (Powers), and Defendant's Exhibit 138 (Wheeler), and state wherein they differ from each other and whether the differences are material or only formal, and wherein they differ from the instrument described in the patent on which suit is brought, reissue 4143, and whether the differences, if any, are material or formal.

A. I find all four of the exhibits mentioned to be essentially the same, the only difference in three of them being in the names engraved on the postmarking device, the size of the instrument and the metal of which they are composed. Exhibit 138 (Wheeler) differs from the others in being simply a wooden model which I believe to be designed to represent a metal postmarking and cancelling device like the other. In view of the description contained in the reissue patent No. 4143 and the state of the art of printing, I can see nothing but mere formal changes between the exhibits mentioned in the question and any instrument constructed in accordance with the specification of the reissue patent No. 4143.

22. Q. Please answer the same question as the last with reference to Defendant's Exhibit 139 (J. H. Zevely) and Defendant's Exhibit 140 (J. H. Zevely).

A. I find Exhibit 139 (J. H. Zevely) to consist of two cylinders or tubes connected by cross-bar, each tube containing a block of wood, one of the blocks being provided with a recess in which type

1767 could be secured, to print a date. The small block appears to be solid, and with the grain of the wood are arranged to present its end for use in cancelling. The other Exhibit No. 140 I find to consist of a block of wood, having on its face two surfaces, one of which has a mortice or recess, in which type could be secured to print a date, and the other surface is left plain, so that it could be used for blotting or cancelling a postage-stamp at the same time and with the same blow that the date was imprinted on the letter. I consider them to be essentially the same, so far as operation is concerned. I also consider the Defendant's Exhibits No. 139 (J. H. Zevely) and 140 (J. H. Zevely) to be essentially the same with the instrument described in the specification of the reissue patent 4143, the difference between the the exhibits and the instrument described in said patent being merely formal, and within the power of any mechanic conversant with the state of the art of printing to make.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

1. X Q. How long have you lived in Washington?

A. Since April, 1867.

2. X Q. Where did you live before that time?

A. The two years previous I spent in Brooklyn.

3. X Q. Where before that?

A. From 1851 until I moved to Brooklyn, I lived most of the time in New York City. Portion of that time I spent in Europe, in Washington City, and Staten Island.

4. X Q. What did you do during the latter period, which you described in your last answer?

A. From 1851 until 1854, I worked at the printing business in Staten Island, New York, and Washington. From 1854 until 1867, I devoted my time to making inventions in various classes of mechanics, but I occasionally worked at the printing business for two or three years after 1854. I spent a portion of the time in Europe in endeavoring to dispose of some inventions in sewing-machines. The balance of 1768 the time spent there I devoted to sight-seeing, visiting, and to devising other inventions.

5. X Q. Did you obtain your livelihood during that period by making inventions?

A. Part of the time by making inventions, obtaining patents for them, and manufacturing articles by the use of my inventions, and part of the time I worked at my trade as a printer, and a portion of the money which I spent in maintaining myself and family I obtained from a capitalist who was interested in my inventions. I also obtained various sums of money for the sale of patents obtained on inventions made by me.

6. X Q. What articles did you manufacture under your inventions for which you received money?

A. I made clothing on sewing-machines, or rather such articles were made under my direction on my patented machine. I also engraved thousands of dozens of glassware on my patented machinery for engraving glassware.

7. X Q. You are now a clerk in the office of Munn & Co. in Washingington, are you not?

A. I am not; I left their employ over a year and one-half ago, and am now in business for myself as a patent solicitor.

8. X Q. Didn't you swear upon your direct examination "that for the last ten years I have been employed, and for the larger part of that period I had charge of the Patent Office practice for Munn & Co"?

A. Those are not my words as I gave them. It is a mistake on the part of the examiner in taking down my words; what I said was that "I had been employed as a patent solicitor for the last ten years, and for the larger part of that time I had charge of one branch of the Patent Office practice of Munn & Co.;" those are substantially my words.

9. X Q. Were you ever a clerk in the employ of Munn & Co.; and, if so, for how long, and when did you commence, and what was your salary?

1769 A. I was never what I consider a clerk in their office, my time not being devoted to clerical duties, but I was employed as an examiner to report upon the novelty and patentability of alleged new inventions after making due search in the models and records of the Patent Office. I entered their office in Washington in April, 1867, and continued with them until about August, 1876; a portion of that time I received a salary of $30.00 per week, which was increased to $35.00 for the latter portion of that period.

10. X Q. When did you first have anything to do, in any capacity, with the Patent Office in Washington?

A. I made my first preliminary examination either in November or December, 1853, to find out if some of my own inventions were patentable or not.

11. X Q. Have you, from time to time since that date, examined the files and models in the Patent Office for any purpose?

A. During portions of 1853 and 1854 I made frequent examinations in the Patent Office of the models, records, and drawings therein, and during the period included between April, 1867, and Aug., 1876, I was continually making such searches; I believe I have made at least 14,000 searches and wrote reports thereon.

12. X Q. I understand you to mean by your last answer that you did not make any such examinations between 1854 and 1867?

A. I have no recollection of making such in the Patent Office, but during that time I made frequent searches in the Patent Office reports, the volumes of the Scientific American, and the English patents in the Astor Library, and also in such foreign scientific publications as were accessible to me in the Cooper Institute.

13. X Q. What did you make all those extended examinations for?

A. To see if the various inventions which I devised during that period were patentable.

1770 14. X Q. Why did you so studiously avoid examinations in the Patent Office during that period to see whether your inventions had been anticipated or not, when you made examinations prior to and subsequent to that period for that purpose?

A. Because it was most convenient for me to make the examinations in New York when I made them in New York, as I then resided in New York and Brooklyn; when I made the examinations in Washington I lived in Washington, except on one occasion in 1854, when I was in Washington to see about an application for a patent that had been rejected. I then made several examinations in Washington, although residing, for the latter portion of the year 1854, in New York.

15. X Q. Did you reside in Washington in 1853?

A. I did in the latter part of 1853 and in the commencement of 1854; up to about April, I think.

16. X Q. Did you make application for any patents between 1854 and 1867; if so, how many?

A. I did; I can't remember all the applications that I made during that period; I obtained some seven or eight patents on sewing-machines, a patent on a braiding machine, a patent on a hand stamp, and three patents on glass-grinding and engraving machines.

17. X Q. I understand that during that time you never went to Washington to see about these applications or obtaining these patents; is that so?

A. I was never in Washington for the purpose mentioned or any other from 1855 up to the time that I went to Washington in April, 1867; I was too poor during most of that time to pay the fare and other expenses that were incidental to such a trip.

18. X Q. You spoke of obtaining a patent for a hand stamp; did you ever have any controversy with anybody about that patent?

A. I did.

19. X Q. With whom?

1771 A. I had one with Marcus P. Norton in 1871, when I made application for the extension of the patent granted for the hand-stamp; I had also law suits with various parties, all of whose names I cannot now recollect, for infringing said patent after extension, in at least one of which the claims of said Marcus P. Norton to said invention were thoroughly ventilated, and the patent in all the suits was sustained.

20. X Q. State, if you know, upon what ground Mr. Norton claimed to contest your right to a patent for that hand stamp.

(Objected to as immaterial and as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. Mr. Norton claimed to be the earliest inventor of the stamp in question, to prove which he referred to the file of a caveat, which caveat contained a paper purporting to be a description of my invention as patented to me in my hand-stamp patent, which paper, after due trial before a commission in the Patent-Office, was adjudged to be fraudulent, and as being written at a much later date than the date it bore on its face.

21. X Q. Did you make any affidavit or have anything to do with those proceedings?

(Same objection.)

A. I was called upon by one of the assistant examiners to make a statement as to what I knew about Mr. Marcus P. Norton's connection with the opposition to the extension of my patent, and also as to what I knew about the paper referred to in my last answer; I made such a statement in writing, which statement I afterwards swore to at the request of the assistant examiner before referred to; that was all that I had to do with the proceedings against Mr. Norton, except as an auditor at the trial.

22. X Q. Do you know Jeremiah D. Green, Peter Low, F. G. Ransford, or either of them?

1772 A. I have a speaking acquaintance with Mr. Green; the other two names mentioned I have frequently heard, and it is possible, and very probable, that I met one or both of them two or three times in April, 1861; I have not seen these gentlemen (meaning Low and Ransford) to my knowledge since that time, if I saw them then.

23. X Q. Were they not witnesses for you on the trial in the extension case before the commissioner, and also in the court where the Norton claim was in controversy?

A. I believe they were, but I was not present when their evidence was given.

24. X Q. Did you ever have any business transactions with Ransford & Low?

A. I cannot answer positively that I had anything to do with them personally, but I was called upon by two gentlemen in April, 1861, who negotiated with me for the purchase of my hand stamp patent; those gentlemen may have been Messrs. Low & Ransford; I have no knowledge whether they were or not, but I believe them to be; I have no recollection of their introducing themselves to me under those names, and they certainly were not introduced by any one else; the papers connected with the transfer of the patent were made out under their direction in the office of Mr. Stetson, a patent agent in this city.

25. X Q. Where do you keep your printing office in Washington City?

A. In my office, where I transact a portion of my patent business.

26. X Q. Please give the number and street.

A. 820 F street.

27. X Q. Do you print any newspapers or books, or documents of any description?

A. I have not as yet; I bought the type with the idea which I have not yet carried out, of starting a scientific journal.

28. X Q. Have you any printing press in that office?

1773 A. I have not, as I intended to get my press-work done by pressmen who make a specialty of that work, as is commonly done with some of the largest and most successful publications in the country.

22. X Q. Your type is at present stored away in boxes, is it not?

A. It is in the ordinary cases employed by printers to keep their type when in use, and my type is now ready for use.

30. X Q. Were the type that you purchased old or new?

A. They had been used, some of them; I may say most of them had been used.

31. X Q. Of whom did you buy those type?

A. I bought them of a printer who was giving up business.

32. X Q. What is his name and how much did you give him for them?

A. His name is Knight; I can't give his first name; I think it was W. D. Knight; I gave for the type and cases $30; and I believe they were worth about $200, if I had to buy them new.

33. X Q. When did you make that purchase?

A. I think it must have been October, 1878.

34. X Q. Is that the first printing establishment you ever owned?

A It is.

35. X Q. Where do you keep your machine shop?

A. As stated in a previous answer, in the rear of my dwelling, which is at 818 O st., northwest, Washington, D. C.

36. X Q. What articles do you manufacture in that shop?

A. I use it simply as previously stated, for experimenting and model-making purposes; I do not manufacture articles for sale therein.

37. X Q. Have you any blacksmith bellows or anvil, or tools of that description there?

A. I have neither anvil nor blacksmith's bellows there, constituting no part of a machine-shop proper, but are the working tools of a blacksmith.

38. X Q. Do you work in iron or altogether in wood?

1774 A. Mostly in metal, seldom in wood.

38. X Q. When did you start that establishment?

A. I bought one of the lathes, I think, about four years ago; the other one I think I bought it about 1865; I built the shop for these tools about three years ago.

40. X Q. You make models, as I understand you, there exclusively for your own use for the Patent Office?

A. I have built models for my own use, and I have altered models for other people, but most of the work done in that shop was done by my son, who makes models and working machinery for himself and other parties.

41. X Q. Did you not say in your answer to question 36 that you did not manufacture articles for sale?

A. I did.

42. X Q. What then do you mean by saying machinery models were made there for other persons, in your last answer?

A. The models and machinery then referred to were made to order, and not intended for sale as an ordinary article of merchandise is.

43. X Q. How do you know that Spotiswood & Co. do the printing for the British Government in London?

A. All the publications of the British Government that I have seen bore the imprint of the firm mentioned in my answer to question 4.

44. X Q. When you say, then, that the English firm, of which Spotiswood is one member, do most of the work in London for the English Government, you mean that they do the work of such publications as you have seen?

A. I do.

45. X Q. How do you know that Spotiswood & Co. print most of the English Bibles that are imported?

A. All that I have seen of English Bibles imported into this country bear their imprint.

46. X Q. How many thousand of such Bibles do you think you have seen?

1775 A. I don't know that I ever saw a thousand.

47. X Q. Do you know that you ever saw a hundred?

A. I may have done so, but cannot state positively.

48. X Q. You have never been particularly engaged in the Bible business, have you?

A. During a portion of the time that I was engaged in the printing business, one of the offices with which I was connected had in connection with it a book and stationery store. I was frequently engaged in said store during the absence of the regular attendant, and Bibles were for sale there.

49. X Q. When was that, and where was that printing office?

A. In Stapleton, Staten Island; that was in the winter of 1851, and a portion, if not all, of the year 1852.

50. X Q. About how many English Bibles do you think that printing office kept for sale?

A. I can't say.

51. X Q. How large is one of those books in the Patent Office which contains a description of English patents?

A. The English patents are bound up in volumes of two sizes; the printed specifications being contained in volumes about the size of a half sheet of legal cap, being, as near as I can remember, not quite so long, but a little wider; the drawings are in much larger volumes, probably about two feet in one direction and about eighteen inches in the other; these are the nearest measurements that I can give, as I never gave any attention to the size of the books, but only to their contents.

Adjourned until Thursday, April 4th, 1878, at 10 o'clock a. m., by consent.

1776 NEW YORK, April 4th, 1878—10 o'clock a. m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Cross-examination of the witness J. W. ROBERTSON, continued by the Hon. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS, of counsel for complainant:

52. X Q. State about how many pages are contained in one of those books in the Patent Office.

A. I can't tell with any degree of exactness, but I believe the volumes of specifications to be from one inch and a half to one inch and three quarters thick; many of these volumes contain a large amount of blank paper so as to make the volumes of uniform size.

53. X Q. How long do you think it takes in England to make such a book from the date of the earliest to the date of the latest patent which it contains?

A. Possibly about a week.

54. X Q. Do you mean that all the patents which are contained in one book are filed or enrolled within a week?

A. I cannot say as to that, but in some of the recently bound volumes have one hundred patents in each, which I believe to be about the number issued weekly by the English Patent Office.

55. X Q. Does the Patent Office in Washington receive one such book every week from England?

A. I do not think they do; I believe the specifications and drawings are sent unbound to the United States Patent Office and are then bound at the Government bindery in Washington City.

56. X Q. How does it happen then that these books bear the imprint of Spottiswoode & Company?

A. Each separate patent is issued as a distinct publication with a separate cover, which cover bears the imprint of the firm I have mentioned.

57. X Q. In what shape are the abstracts to which you have referred?

1777 A. The abstracts are made, I believe, from the specifications on file in the British Patent Office by patent agents and published in the journals which such patent agents publish; another set of abstracts are made for publications in the Engineer, a weekly journal published in London.

58 X Q. Who is it that files these papers "as soon as possible," as you have stated, in the Patent Office?

A. I have no knowledge, but suppose the Patent Office subscribes and pays for them, when they are forwarded by the publishers in the ordinary course of business; the Patent Office authorities prefer to have all their foreign publications and patents open to examination to prevent the granting of patents for inventions that have already been patented abroad.

59. X Q. Are these books and papers to which you have referred accessible to the examiners of the Patent Office?

A. They are.

60. X Q. When Mr. Norton made his application for a patent in 1863 had the examiners the opportunity, and was it their duty, to examine the books and papers to which you have referred to ascertain if the invention had been anticipated in England?

(Objected to so far as it asks for the duty of the examiners.)

A. I have no knowledge as to the opportunity the examiners had in 1863, as I was not then in Washington, but if such books were there at that time I have no doubt but that they had full opportunity to examine such books and papers, and it was their duty to do so.

61. X Q. Do you consider the examiners of the Patent Office competent to decide whether the patent to Pierson Hill, dated March 25th, 1857, No. 832, for improvements in machinery for stamping, marking or printing, and arranging papers, did or not anticipate the patent of 1863 to Norton, for his combined postmarking and post-cancelling instrument?

1778 (Objected to because it is immaterial what the examiners did or were competent to do, and because it is improper to ask a witness his opinion as to the competency of examiners.)

A. Some of the examiners of the Patent Office are considered to be competent examiners, but the examiner who I believed passed the patent of 1863 was dismissed from his position as primary examiner because of incompetency; in addition to this, I desire to state that I have no knowledge that the examiner who passed the patent issued to Mr. Norton in 1863 ever saw the patent of Pierson Hill, referred to in the question.

(Defendant's counsel objects to all the answer after "competent examiners," as irresponsive.)

62. X Q. What was the name of the primary examiner so dismissed?

A. Mr. Peale.

63. X Q. Do you not think it probable that the examiner or board of examiners, or some officer in the Patent Office, saw this patent of Pierson Hill's, if it was on file there at that time?

(Objected to, as it does not ask for any fact.)

A. I can give no answer to this question as I was not conversant with the practice of the office at that time; I only know that many of the examiners do not make very careful examinations of the foreign patents, and that the examiner whose duty it was to examine the application of Mr. Norton may have overlooked the patent referred to.

64. X Q. Could not the validity of Norton's patent of 1863 have been raised on account of the patent to Pearson Hill at the time of its several reissues?

(Objected to as asking the opinion of witness on a question of law.)

1779 A. The examiners in the Patent Office do not usually consider the validity of the patents sent to them for reissue, but they endeavor to meet the claims presented in the new application by such references as they may be able to find.

65. X Q. Do you mean to say that upon the application for the reissue of a patent, the question as to whether the patentee was the first and original inventor is never considered?

(The same objection and also as immateral.)

A. It is usually considered.

66. X Q. Do you think that the patent to Pearson Hill, Defendant's Exhibit No. 154, is void for the for the want of novelty?

(Objected to on the same grounds as above.)

A. I have no reason to think so.

67. X Q. Is that machine anything more than a combination of well known parts, elements, or instruments?

A. That machine shows elements combined together in such a manner as to require invention to arrange them, and motions were given to the parts so arranged that I believe to have been new at the time such patent was granted; I therefore consider it something more than a combination of well-known parts.

68. X Q. What do you mean by saying that new motions were given to parts?

A. I mean, for instance, the motion given to the lever J^3 in Fig. 11 of sheet 7.

69. X Q. What is there new about that motion?

A. The peculiar motion given to the upper end of said lever is indicated by the dotted lines shown in connection therewith.

70. X Q. Describe, without reference to the drawings, the newness and peculiarity of that motion.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

1780 A. I find the lever referred to to be connected with a treadle or lever, and also with a crank, the two movements of which, when combined together, produce an elliptical movement of the upper end of said lever.

71. X Q. Were not a combination of a treadle and a crank connected with a lever known before 1857?

A. That question is too indefinite to answer properly, but I have seen no lever, treadle, and crank combined together in the manner shown so as to produce the motion indicated in the drawing of the patent referred to.

72. X Q. What do you mean by an elliptical motion of the lever?

A. I mean the motion that is given by the combination of parts referred to to the extreme upper portion of said lever, which is clearly indicated by the dotted line in the drawing, Fig. 11, sheet 7.

73. X Q. Define the meaning of the word elliptical as applied to motion.

A. Anything traveling with a circular motion, always maintaining the same distance from the centre, may be said to have a circular motion; anything traveling in a line in a similar manner but at different distances from the centre, when the space enclosed within the line traveled by the object having an elliptical motion has two different diameters, may be said to have an elliptical motion; by taking an egg and passing the finger around the longest circumference, a substantially elliptical motion will be given to the end of the finger.

74. X Q. That motion you consider the invention of Mr. Pearson Hill, do you?

A. I have no knowledge of such a combination of mechanism to produce the motion referred to of earlier date than that of Pearson Hill's patent; I therefore suppose it to be his invention.

75. X Q. Why does the combination of a treadle with a crank produce this elliptical motion?

A. The treadle gives the lever an up and down motion; the 1781 crank gives the lever a vibratory motion, and the combination of these two movements produces in the upper end of the lever the elliptical motion before referred to.

76 X Q. Were not treadles, cranks, and levers well known before 1857?

A. Cranks, treadles and levers were well known in 1857, but not in the same combination shown in Fig. 11 of Pearson Hill's patent.

77. X Q. Then the invention lies in the combination of well known parts or instruments, does it not?

A. It does, excepting that I am not aware that a lever of this precise form, constructed to be connected with a crank and treadle, had ever been before known or used.

78. X Q. Do you wish to be understood as saying that there is invention in changing the form of the lever?

A. I do in this instance.

79. X Q. How does that form differ from any other form of a lever?

A. The lever differs in this case from those previously employed, in being connected to and forming part of a pitman or connecting rod, so as to change the usual circular vibratory motion of said connecting rod into the elliptical motion described by the upper extremity of said lever.

80. X Q. You have said in your last answer how this lever was connected so as to produce a certain motion, but you have not stated how the form of the lever itself differs from others; please answer as to that point.

A. In answering question 78, I meant that in changing the ordinary pitman or connecting-rod J into a lever, I consider that invention has been shown in such change.

81. X Q. How does that lever differ from an ordinary pitman or connecting-rod?

A. In having an additional length added to it.

82. X Q. You are then of the opinion, are you, that invention
1782 may consist in changing the form of a rod so as to make it larger than it ordinarily is when used for the same purposes?

(Objected to as immaterial, and because it is not proper to ask the witness his opinion on something outside of the case.)

A. I am of opinion that when by such a change a new motion or a new effect is produced, as in the case referred to, an invention may be made by such change.

83. X Q. You say in your answer to Q. 67 that that machine of Hill's shows elements combined together in such a manner as to require invention to arrange them; state wherein the invention lies in that combination.

(The same objection.)

A. All the elements of that combination are old excepting the addition to or extension of the pitman J, so as to change the pitman into a lever; this extension of itself would not constitute an invention, as it would produce no useful effect unless arranged in substantially the same way as shown in Fig. 11 of Pearson Hill's patent, with the other elements which I have stated form part of that combination.

84. X Q. What constitutes the invention in that machine of Hills's?

(The same objection.)

A. Do you mean all the machine described in the patent, or the one I have been questioned about?

85. X Q. How many machines are described in Hill's patent?

A. At least three.

86. X Q. What are they?

A. They are described in the specification as improvements in machinery for stamping, marking, or printing, and arranging papers, letters and other articles.

1783 87. X Q. Are there three different and distinct machines, or is it one machine capable of producing three different effects?

A. There are three different machines described, each of which is of different construction from the others, but all are designed to accomplish the same purpose.

88. X Q. Do you consider that either of said machines is void for the want of novelty?

(The same objection.)

A. I have no reason to believe that they are, but I couldn't undertake to say that they are or are not void for want of novelty, as I have not had sufficient time given me to consider such a question or to make the necessary examination into the state of the art; the answers that I have given as to the novelty of the invention described in Fig. 11 refer only to my knowledge of the state of the art at the time that Pearson Hill's patent was granted.

89. X Q. Is the postmarking and stamp-canceling machine, as described in Hill's patent, as you understand it, void for the want of novelty?

(The same objection.)

A. I have never heard of Machines being void for want of novelty; patents sometimes are declared void for want of novelty, but for reasons before stated, the combination of mechanism shown in Fig. 11 of Pearson Hill's patent seems to me to present sufficient novelty and utility to make said patent valid, leaving out of question the other machines described in the other ten figures.

90. X Q. What is the machine described in Fig. 11?

A. It is a machine designed to postmark or stamp letters or other papers.

91. X Q. How do you know that by means of that machine a letter can be postmarked and the stamp thereon cancelled equally as well and probably better than with Norton's postmarking and stamp cancelling device?

1784 A. From my general knowledge of mechanics and the art of printing, I believe that a machine constructed on the principle shown in that drawing and in accordance with the specification would be capable of producing a more even and better impression on a letter and postage-stamp than can be produced by any stamp that is held in the hand, and which works without any means of producing an even impression.

92. X Q. Do you know that that machine has been used anywhere, or is of any practical utility?

A. I do not know of any such machine having been constructed, but I have every reason to believe that a machine constructed as described would be of practical utility.

93. X Q. Are you aware that one of the great objects is speed in the postmarking and stamp-cancelling letters?

A. I am.

94. X Q. Wherein does the invention lie in the machine described in Fig. 11 of Hill's patent?

(Objected to, because it is immaterial whether there is or is not any invention in that.)

A. All the invention that I can see in that figure is in the extension of the pitman J, so as to form a lever, and the combination with a lever so formed of the crank and treadle.

95. X Q. Is that all the inventions you find in any of the machines described in Hill's patent?

A. To answer that question it would require a thorough examination of all the other six sheets of drawings, and the eighteen pages of closely written manuscript contained in the specification, which would require at least one day to thoroughly understand and consider; I therefore cannot now give the answer requested, as I have only examined the patent on certain points, but there are probably other novel and patentable features contained in some of the details of construction and arrangement of parts.

1785 96. X Q. When I asked you what constituted the invention in Hill's patent, you inquired of me if I meant all the machines contained in the patent, or the one you have been questioned about. What one did you then refer to?

A. The one shown in Fig. 11 of sheet 7.

97. X Q. What has the elliptical motion of the lever to which you have referred to do with the postmarking and stamp cancelling of letters?

A. It has nothing to do with the postmarking or cancelling proper; its object is to remove the letter after it has been stamped or cancelled.

98. X Q. Did you not state in your direct examination that the difference between the inventions described in Hill's and Norton's patents consists mainly in the way in which the blow is given to the letter in the act of postmarking and cancelling?

A. I did; by the "inventions" I meant the instruments described in said patents.

99. X Q. Did you not swear, in your direct examination, that the changes from one instrument to the other would be merely formal, and within the power of any mechanic to make?

A. I did swear to substantially that effect, having reference to the changes necessary to make the postmarking and cancelling device shown in the Hill patent into that shown in the reissued patent No. 3143.

100 X Q. Can a patentable invention be made by a new combination of o d elements?

(Objected to as asking for the opinion of witness on a question of law.)

A. If such new combination displays invention, and not mere mechanical skill or good judgment, such a combination may be patentable.

101. X Q. What is invention?

(The same objection.)

A. Invention, as I understand it as applied to machinery, consists in combining the parts of a machine in such a manner as to produce 1786 some new and useful result; not meaning thereby a mere aggregation of parts which any mechanic skilled in the art to which the machine belongs could readily combine together.

102. X Q. Was the postmarking a letter and cancelling the stamp upon it at the same time and blow a new and useful result when the patent was issued to Pearson Hill in 1857?

A. I do not so consider it, and I do not think from the specification forming part of the letters patent granted to Pearson Hill that he considered the stamping and cancelling portion of the machinery described in said patent, or the cancelling and postmarking of a letter and stamp at the same time, as any part of his invention, as his claim covers only the combination with the mechanism described for stamping, marking, or printing of the fingers or instruments for removing the letters after they have been postmarked or stamped, one form of such instrument being the lever mentioned several times previously by me as forming the novel feature in Fig. 11, sheet 7, of Pearson Hill's patent; I consider the postmarking and cancelling of a letter and the stamp thereon at one blow and at the same time as being nothing more than the stamping or printing of two marks at the same time on any other article, a sheet of paper for instance, as such stamping or printing two or more marks is the foundation of the art of printing, and should not be monopolized by any patent at this late day, or the day when said Pearson Hill's patent was granted.

103. Q. Suppose an instrument or machine is invented by which there is great economy of time and expense in producing a well known and not new result, could that be patentable?

(Objected to as asking for the opinion of witness on a question of law.)

A. If the production of such machine required invention, such a machine would be patentable.

1787 104. X Q. You were mistaken, then, were you, in saying that to constitute an invention it was necessary to produce a new and useful result?

A. If I made the statement referred to I probably meant the new result that would be produced in the making of an article by machinery that had heretofore been made by hand, but I have no recollection of making the precise statement as given by the counsel, and must request that the whole question and answer be given to me or be read to me before I can tell whether I was mistaken or not in the answer I then made.

105. X Q. Counsel reads to the witness Q. 101 and answer.

106. X Q. Do you wish now to make any further answer?

(Objected to as assuming that the part read is the same thing as the counsel's next preceding question implies to have been the statement of the witness, and as therefore assuming that the next preceding question needs further answer.)

A. I do not.

107. X Q. Are you aware that the great proportion of the inventions patented are labor-saving machines?

A. I am.

108. X Q. Suppose the machine of Pearson Hill, as described in his patent, enabled one man to do the work which it took two or three others to do before that time, would it not be an invention?

A. That would depend upon the question whether the machinery employed required invention to produce it or not; I find I misunderstood the question; it would be an invention, but not because it did the work with one man that it took two or three to do before, but because of the invention displayed in the construction of the machine.

109. X Q. I understand, then, from your answer, that invention does not depend upon the result produced, but upon the form of the 1788 machine, and that a complicated machine, producing the same result as a preceding and simple one, would be an invention; am I right?

A. The mere form of the machine or its complication has nothing to do with the question whether such machine would contain patentable features or not, as a simple machine might contain elements of patentability that might be lacking in the more complicated one.

110. X Q. Does the result produced have anything to do with the patentablity of a machine?

(The same objection.)

A. It depends upon what you mean by result; if, for instance, a shoemaker takes a sewing machine that had been previously only used on cloth and applied it to sewing shoes, the result produced in that instance, to wit, shoes sewed by machinery, would not make such a machine patentable, although he might have made some slight changes therein if such changes did not require invention. If, however, to make that machine sew shoes it was necessary to make changes requiring invention, then the machine would be patentable.

111. X Q. Is a machine which produces no good or useful results patentable, irrespective of its construction or form, if invented by the maker?

(The same objection.)

A. Under the patent law patents are only granted, or should be only granted, for new and useful inventions; a machine, therefore, that produces no good or useful results is not properly patentable, although hundreds are patented every year that I believe produce no good or useful results.

112. X Q. Patentability, then, depends on results, does it not?

(The same objection.)

A. As before stated, some invention is required to render a machine patentable.

1789 113. X Q. Is not a new combination of old elements, producing new or useful results, an invention?

(The same objection.)

A. That depends, as before stated, upon whether there is any invention in combining those elements, or whether those elements produce any new result which is due to the combination, and is not the mere addition of the result produced by such elements working separately; that is, as I understand patent law.

114. X Q. Suppose certain elements, when worked separately, would take two or three men to produce a given useful result, should be combined so as to produce the same result by the labor of one man, would the latter be a useful result due to the combination of such elements?

(The same objection.)

A. The saving of the labor of two men would be a useful result due to the combination of such elements, if I understand your question rightly.

115. X Q. Would not that combination then be patentable?

(The same objection.)

A. That would depend upon the manner in which those elements were combined; if, for instance, two grindstones are mounted in separate frames, each stone turned by a separate man, there would be no combination that would be patentable in connecting those stones together by ordinary mechanical means, so that one man could turn them, so as to dispense with the labor of one man; but if the two grindstones should be connected by some mechanical device in a novel manner not heretofore known as a means of connecting rotating shafts or other rotary objects, then such a combination of parts would, in my opinion, be patentable, not because it saved the labor of one man, but from the new combination that it required invention to produce.

1790 116. X Q. Will you stake your reputation as an expert upon asserting that if two grindstones are mounted in separate frames, each stone turned by a separate man, there would be no combination that would be patentable in connecting those stones in any way not before known, so that one man by performing the same labor that he did before could do the work of the two men, and produce the same results that were before produced?

(Objected to as assuming that this witness has, or pretends to have, some reputation as an expert in questions of law to stake.)

A. I do not stake my reputation upon any such assertion; in my previous answer I sa d nothing about the single man performing the same labor as the two men did.

117. X Q. Did you not speak of the combination of grindstones, so that one man could turn them, so as to dispense with the labor of one man?

A. I did; but I did not say that the one man would not have to work harder in turning two grindstones than he would have to do in turning one.

118. X Q. Suppose then that the two grindstones were so combined that one man without working any harder than he did before in turning one of the grindstones could turn the two grindstones, and produce the same results that were before produced by the labor of the two men, would that be a combination producing a useful result and patentable?

(Objected to as asking for the witness's opinion on a matter of law.)

A. I hardly know how to answer that question; it assumes as a fact, as I understand it, that it is possible to produce such a combination of mechanism as would enable one man to do the work of two men in turning grindstones, without extra labor on the part of the one man; I am willing to stake my reputation as a mechanical expert on the 1791 assertion that no means are known that will enable one man to turn two grindstones by manual labor alone as easy as he could turn one on the same conditions in both cases; but if any one should ever discover a means whereby one man can perform the labor of two in turning grindstones without any extra exertion on the part of the single man, he will then discover or have invented some new means not now known to mechanics, and such means would be patentable, whether applied to grindstones or any other machinery.

119. X Q. Assuming the latter part of your answer to be true, does it not follow that if any man has discovered a means by which one man can perform what was before the labor of two in postmarking letters and cancelling the stamps thereon without extra labor on the part of the one man, he has discovered a means of saving labor that is patentable?

A. If it were possible, which I deny, that one man can perform the labor of two in postmarking stamps by hand without extra labor on the part of the one man, the means by which the result referred to is produced would be patentable, but I regard it as impossible for one man to produce as many and perfect cancellations and postmarks with a double stamp as two men can do, each operating a single stamp, without extra labor on the part of the one man, as it requires more force to give an impression with a double stamp than it does with a single one.

120. X Q. You state in substance in your answer to question 17 on your direct examination, that in the English patent (referring to Hill's) foot power is employed, and in the Norton, hand power is employed, and that the change from one to the other is a mere formal change. Do you mean by that answer to say that the substitution of one sort of power for another in running or using a machine is always a matter of form?

A. Not necessarily.

121. X Q. Why not necessarily, if your answer to which I have referred is a correct proposition?

1792 A. Because it frequently requires invention to make a change from one power to another in running machinery; as, for example, the application of steam to running carriages at the time when steam engines had not been used for that purpose.

122. X Q. Suppose a machine is used which is run by the use of the hands of the operator, and some one discovers a way of running it by the use of the foot, so that the hands might be otherwise employed, would that be a mere formal change in the machine?

A. It would require something more than a mere change from the use of hand power to the use of foot power to make it anything more than a mere formal change, in view of the fact that hundreds of thousands of machines have been placed upon the market and are in constant use, in which either hand or foot power can be applied at will, and the fact that it has been a common practice with mechanics to apply cranks and treadles on machines that were designed to be turned by hand. If any invention was displayed in making such change from hand to foot power, and such invention was new, then the change, or, rather, the means of making the change, would be something more than a mere formal change.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Cross-examination of the witness T. J. W. ROBERTSON continued by the Hon. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS, of counsel for complainant:

123. X Q. Are the crank and lever with the other parts of the 1793 machine described in Fig. 11, sheet 7, of Hill's patent, a combination of elements different from the handle, cross bar, cylinder, cork, &c., as described in Norton's patent of 1863?

A. They are, and would be patentable as a new combination, had the combination been invented after Mr. Norton's patent of 1863 was granted.

124. X Q. I understand you to mean by your last answer, that if Hill had made and used his machine as described in Fig. 11, sheet 7, of his patent in the United States, after the Norton patent of 1863 was granted, he would not have infringed the Norton patent?

A. My last answer had no reference the question of infringement; a patent may be for a valid combination, and yet a machine constructed according to it may infringe a previous valid patent.

125. X Q. Explain your last answer so as to show how a patent may be valid, and a machine constructed in accordance with it an infringement upon another patent.

(Objected to as asking this witness a question of law.)

A. For illustration of my meaning, I will cite cases of the various sewing machine patents; the patent of Elias Howe, jr., Sept. 10, 1846, had as one of the elements described in said patent a needle having an eye near the point and a groove running longitudinally along its side; the machine shown in the patent of A. B. Wilson, granted, I think, in November, 1850, used a similar needle, but the machine itself was essentially different in construction from the machine patented by Howe, yet this machine was considered an infringement of the Howe patent because it used a similar needle, and the owners of the patent of Wilson are believed to have paid hundreds of thousands of dollars to Howe on this account; this same patent granted to Wilson was always sustained by the courts whenever its validity was contested, because the claims in said patent covered inventions not described in Howe's patent.

1794 126. X Q. Was Wilson's patent held good as against Howe in those cases?

A. I never heard, nor do I believe, that there was ever any suit brought by the owners of the Wilson patent against Howe.

127. X Q. Was there any suit by Howe or his assignees against Wilson or his assignees?

A. Not that I am aware of; but Howe or his assignees brought suit against Isaac M. Singer & Co., who also held patents that were sustained by the courts, granted subsequent to the said Howe patent, and the Howe patent having been sustained in that suit, most of the other manufacturers of sewing-machines took licenses from Howe, paying from five to ten dollars for each machine they made; some few manufacturers continued to make sewing-machines, but were stopped when found out by injunctions; this I give from the reports in the journals, papers, books, verbal reports and such other means as were open to me, and not of my own knowledge by seeing the transactions referred to, but believe all that I have stated to be true.

128. X Q. Do you not understand that Howe claimed to have invented a needle, the claim for which was recognized as valid, and it was held that other persons could not use his invention without his license?

A. I do.

129. X Q. When did you first examine the Pearson Hill patent?

A. Last week, on Tuesday.

130. X Q. Where?

A. In this building.

131. X Q. That was about a week before we commenced taking testimony, was it?

A. It was.

132. X Q. Do you consider a saw and a knife mechanical equivalents?

A. Under many circumstances the two instruments referred to would be the equivalents of each other; there may be instances where 1795 one of them may be employed in preference to the other, and the employment of either of them to accomplish the desired result would depend upon the judgment of the person employing the instrument; a knife is really only a saw having infinitesimal teeth, as can be seen by examining the edge of a knife under a miscroscope.

133. X Q. Would a machine that sawed and a machine that cut perform different functions?

A. I can see no difference in the functions performed by said instruments, as they both produce the same result, to wit, a separation of the article operated on.

134. X Q. You think, do you, that a knife in as aw-mill for converting logs into boards would be the equivalent of and perform the functions of a saw?

A. It is a matter of convenience or good judgment whether a knife or a saw is used in a saw-mill. Knives are used in many machines for cutting wood in the same manner as saws are employed; veneer-cutting machines in some instances have saws, in other instances have knives, for separating the veneer from the log.

135. X Q. Do you not know that those differences have been patented as inventions?

A. I do not know nor do I believe that any patent has been granted in this country covering broadly the employment of either a knife or saw in wood-cutting machines within the last forty years, although various patents have been granted for various combinations of mechanism designed to be used in connection with saws or knives; I say within the last forty years, and I except the patents granted abroad, because patents are granted in foreign countries having claims which would cover anything that inventors choose to ask for, and because a somewhat similar custom formerly prevailed in this country.

136. X Q. Do you think that if there was no mode for manufact-
1796 uring logs into lumber except with knives, and that a man should invent a saw for that purpose, he would make a patentable invention?

(Objected to as asking a question of law, and because it is improper to put a supposititious case that has no relevancy to this suit to the witness.)

A. I am not prepared to give, at this short notice, an answer to that apparently simple question. As before stated in a previous answer, a knife is nothing more than a saw with infinitesimal teeth. The question, therefore, appears to hinge upon the size of the teeth in the knife and saw, which is simply a question of degree. As, however, a saw might be applied to produce an article that is useful in many circumstances which could not readily be made with a knife, to wit, sawdust, I am inclined to think the invention of a saw would be patentable.

137. X Q. Do I understand you to say that the chief object of using saws is to make sawdust?

A. I have no wish to be so understood.

138. X Q. Are you not aware that patents have been granted recently upon ripping, belt, and other sorts of saws?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I am aware that patents have been granted for various forms of saw teeth, but I do not believe that any patent has been granted, nor that the Patent Office would now grant, any patent on making teeth larger or smaller. No United States patent has been recently granted for what is known as the belt saw, although patents have been granted for combinations of mechanism for running such saws.

139. X Q. Do not those various combinations of mechanism designed to be used in connection with saws or knives, to which you have referred in your answer to Q. 135, perform different functions?

A. In some instances they do and in others they do not. Some 1797 of the combinations, for instance, have reference simply to the means of moving the log to the saw; others have reference to the driving of the saw; others, again, are for the purpose of securely holding the log to the carriage; others are designed to give a slow motion to the carriage when the saw is operating on the log, and a fast one when the saw is not operating; and still others are for the purpose of conveniently and regularly moving the log latterly in the log-carriage after each board is separated from the log. Each of these classes of mechanism perform different functions, when the classes are considered, but the different combinations of mechanism in each class may be said to have the same functions.

140. X Q. Would a machine that produced the printing of letters on paper perform the same function as a machine that would produce only the cutting of the paper?

A. That question is very indefinite. If the object was the separation of the paper into two or more pieces, the printing of letters on said paper would not always effect the object. I have, however, frequently seen cuts made in paper by the act of printing letters on its surface. If the object of said cutting and printing were the defacing or cancelling of printed papers, the function of the machines would be the same, although performed in a somewhat different manner.

138 & 141. X Q. Is that the most intelligible answer that you can give to my question?

(Objected to unless counsel will define what he means by function.)

A. I do not see that I can give a better or more intelligible answer to the question in its present indefinite form.

139 & 142. X Q. Do you think that a printing press and a machine for cutting paper so as to make paper bags perform the same functions?

A. I do not.

1798 140 & 143. X Q. Suppose the knives upon Defendant's Exhibit 146, produced with the patent of 1859, were filed off so as to make a flat surface; would not that surface be then so much above the surface of the postmarker as to not make any, or but a faint, impression upon the paper when the instrument was applied to it?

A. I find on examination that if the sharp edges, which I suppose to be what the counsel means by knives, were filed entirely away so as to produce a perfectly flat surface on said cancelling device, that the impression then produced by the cancelling device would be a comparatively light one; if, however, the filing was only sufficient to dull the knives, it would still make a perfect cancelling instrument, as a portion of the said cutting edges projects above the postmarking device; I mean by "above," when I hold it in my hand with the face of the instrument upwards. There is another feature to be considered in reference to this question. The cancelling device operates on a surface that is higher than that on which the postmark is placed, by the thickness of the postage stamp, so that to produce an even impression of both the cancel and postmark there should be a slight difference between the height of the postmarking and cancelling devices, to correspond with the difference in height between the stamp and the letter.

141½. X Q. Suppose Mr. Thomas L. James, the postmaster in New York, was using a stamp exactly like the model marked Deft's Exh. 149, produced with the patent on which suit is brought, and the owners of the patent with which the model marked Exh. 146 is produced should bring a suit against him for the infringement of their patent, do you think he could successfully defend upon the ground that the instrument used by him cancelled the stamp by blotting it with ink from a cork canceller instead of cutting the stamp by means of metal knives, or sharp cutting edges, as you prefer to call them?

(Objected to as being a question of law.)

1799 A. In view of the state of the art of cancelling and postmarking stamps and letters, as developed by the various exhibits filed in this suit, I am of the opinion that the court would construe the claim in patent No. 25036, issued to Ransford & Low August 9, 1859, which I believe to be the patent referred to by the counsel in his question, as covering only a cutting canceller attached to the postmarking device, and, as there is no cutting device connected with the canceller shown in Defendant's Exhibit 149, there would, therefore, be no infringement of said patent in its use.

142. X Q. Suppose the instrument, the model of which is marked Def't's Exh. 146, produced with the patent of August 9, 1859, had been thoroughly tested and tried as a postmarking and stamp cancelling device, and had been found not only to be useless but pernicious, and for that reason wholly disused, would not the patent for that instrument be void for the want of utility in the alleged invention?

(Objected to as being a question of law.)

A. The mere fact, if it be one, that the instrument constructed according to said patent had been proved to be not only useless but pernicious for the especial purpose referred to, would not vitiate the patent, because the instrument may be useful for other purposes beside postmarking and cancelling letters and postage-stamps. The objection to the use of the instrument referred to is said to be that it destroyed or injured the envelope or its contents; this objection would not apply to the cancelling of a revenue stamp, and the invention would, therefore, be useful for that purpose.

143. X Q. Could the instrument of which Defendant's Exhibit 146 is a model be used for cancelling revenue stamps without postmarking the document or paper to which the stamp is affixed?

A. Some revenue stamps are large enough to receive the im-
1800 pression of both the canceller and postmarker devices, and, in that case, there would be no mark on the check or other article to which the revenue stamp is attached. It has usually been the custom in cancelling revenue stamps to add the date of cancellation. I believe there was a rule at one time, if there is not now, requiring the date to be given in the cancellation of revenue stamps. If, however, there is any objection to the dating and cancelling of the revenue stamp at the same time, it is a very easy matter to remove all the type, leaving only the cancelling device attached to the instrument, and in this manner the instrument could be used for cancelling revenue stamps without postmarking the document or paper to which the stamp is affixed, even if the small size revenue stamp were used.

144. X Q. State the difference between a formal and a substantial change in a machine or instrument.

A. As I understand the terms, and as I have used them in my answers to previous questions in this suit, I mean by "formal" such change as a mechanic conversant with the state of the art to which the machine or instrument pertained could make without invention; by substantial changes I meant to refer to such changes which an ordinary mechanic could not make without invention. If, for instance, stamps for cancelling letters had been always operated by hand, and some new means were devised for operating such instuments by foot power, such means, if it required invention to produce them, would make more than a mere formal change in stamp cancelling instuments; it would then be a "substantial" change. Such means, however, must be new, and require invention to produce them. If, on the contrary, such means were well known and had been in common use for a similar purpose, such change would be a mere "formal" change.

145. X Q. Can you tell with certainty whether you purchased the little lettering stamp which you have produced, marked Def't's Exh. 169, in 1855 or in 1856 or in 1857 or in 1858?

1801 A. It was purchased before March 10, 1856, how much previous to that time I cannot state exactly; it may have been a month or two, or it may be a year or more previous to that time; it was not purchased afterwards.

146. X Q. How do you know it was purchased before the 10th of March, 1856?

A. Because on that day I left New York to take a trip to Europe and the stamp was purchased to mark some of our clothing sometime previous thereto.

147. X Q. Do you think that if you had obtained a patent for the letter-stamp produced by you in 1856 that the construction and use of an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 149, produced with the patent on which this suit is brought, would have been an infringement of that patent?

A. That would altogether depend on the claims I obtained in such patent and whether such claims were valid; with my knowledge of the state of the art of printing I do not think I could have obtained valid claims that would cover an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 149.

148. X Q. Leaving out of view your extensive knowledge of the state of the art, to which you constantly refer, suppose you had obtained a patent with claims covering the construction of the said letter stamp, and all the purposes to which it could be applied if so constructed, could the manufacture and use of an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 149 be an infringement of your patent?

(Objected to as an improper supposition, and because the question is not definite as to the extent of the claims and how much they are supposed to cover, it thus being left undetermined whether the witness shall have in mind the same idea as to what the supposed patent would cover as complainant's counsel had in asking the question.)

1802 A. My knowledge of the state of the art, whether it is extensive or not, has no bearing on the question, but the state of the art, as known to mechanics generally, would have a bearing on the subject, and if I should have obtained at that date claims covering the construction of the said letter-stamp, and all the purposes to which it could be applied, such a patent or such claims would be invalid, as in my judgment there was nothing patentable in that stamp at that time; if, however, it was possible at the time referred to to have obtained valid claims covering the construction of the said letter-stamp and all the purposes to which it could be applied, then an instrument like that shown in Defendant's Exhibit 149 would be an infringement of said patent.

146 & 149. X Q. It is your opinion, then, is it, that the use of the letter-stamp marked Def't's Exh. 169, as it is now constructed, is an infringement of Norton's patent of 1863?

A. Most decidedly not.

147 & 150. X Q. Is it not, as you have last answered, because there is a substantial difference between the said letter stamp and this combined postmarking and stamp cancelling instrument, patented to Mr. Norton in 1863?

A. The main reason that it is not an infringement is because the invention and sale of said stamp was long anterior to the date of Mr. Norton's patent and the fact that said patent has no claims, nor could have any valid ones, covering the construction of said letter-stamp.

148½. X Q. Suppose said letter-stamp had never been made or known until after Norton's patent, would it then be an infringement to make and use it, supposing the claims to be in that patent the same as they are in the patent on which suit is brought?

A. If the said claims are valid, by putting appropriate type, sufficient to postmark the letter and cancel the stamp at the same time, the manufacture and use of said letter-stamp would be an infringement 1303 of said claims. To make it an infringement of the claims given in said letters patent, were such claims valid, it would only be necessary to remove the type now in it and place therein type for the postmark at one end of said stamp and wood or other soft type for cancelling at the other, when it would be substantially the same with Defendant's Exhibit 149, and with the stamp described in the patent of 1863, issued to Marcus P. Norton, of which No. 4143 is a reissue; but if the stamp and the type therein are only those that it originally contained, namely, those used in marking a name on clothing, the manufacture and use of such stamp would not infringe the claims of said reissued patent, so that the question whether said stamp would be an infringement of said reissued patent, or of the original patent, provided their claims are valid, would depend upon the question as to the type it contained and the use to which it was put.

149. X Q. How would you manage to put into this letter-stamp, marked Exhibit 169, the words "Washington, Jan'y 31st, 8 p. m., D. C."?

A. Any boy who had served three months at "case" in a printing office would put those letters and figures in less than half the space contained in the type receptacle of said stamp.

150. X Q. Would those letters be in a circular form or in a straight line?

A. The letters, if put in by the boy referred to in my last answer, would probably be in two straight lines, but a printer of ordinary ability would be able with the resources at his command in most printing offices to put a portion of said type in a curve line and the remainder within the space enclosed between said curve line and the side of the type receptacle.

151. X Q. Would not a man ordinarialy need a microscope to read the letfering made in that way?

A. Any person with ordinary good eye-sight could read such lettering without any assistance from any kind of instruments if ordinary care were taken in producing the impression.

1804 152. X Q. To cancel the letter-stamp with that instrument, what could be inserted?

A. Any type in use in a printing office that was small enough to go in the cavity could be used for that purpose, or such type as were originally used when the art of printing was first discovered in Germany, about 400 years ago, as the type then used when placed in the type receptacle of said hand stamp would be a perfect answer to the first claim of said reissued patent No. 4143, the type referred to being of wood, as metal type was a subsequent invention; this last statement I give as I obtained it from historical works on the subject of printing and not of my own knowledge, as I am not of sufficient age to have witnessed the use of such wood type.

153. X Q. Do you know that type inserted as you have stated in this letter stamp would effectually cancel the stamp upon a letter?

A. I never tried it, but from my knowledge of printing I have not the least doubt of it.

154. X Q. How would you fasten the cancelling type in this instrument?

A. By various ways known to the art of printing, one of which would be by the use of the screw contained in the end of the stamp, another would be by filling up the space not occupied by the letters for postmarking, and the cancelling type with "spaces," and then forcing between them what is called a "hair space," which is a very thin piece of metal about as thick as paper, or as I have sometimes seen done, a little plaster might be run in the receptacle; I should not recommend the last plan, however, for steady use.

155. X Q. Do your answers contemplate a vacancy between the postmarking and the stamp canceller as in the Norton instrument?

A. In my last answer I referred to filling up the space not occupied by the postmarking letters and canceller with "spaces," such spaces I intended to put between the canceller and postmarking letters, which would leave an opening or vacancy between the postmark and the cancelling type.

1805 156. X Q. Could this little stamp which you produced (Exhibit 169) be conveniently used to do the postmarking and stamp cancelling in the larger post-offices of the country with the present handle on it?

A. It would undoubtedly be much more convenient with a larger handle.

157. X Q. (Question repeated and the witness requested to answer it.)

A. I can see no reason why it could not be conveniently used.

158. X Q. Is that all the answer you can make to my question?

A. To make it more emphatic, I will say that it could be conveniently used, but as stated in answer to Q. 156, the larger handle would be more convenient.

159. X Q. Is there any ferule around the handle in the stamp that you have produced to correspond with that around the handle in the Norton instrument?

A. There is not.

160. X Q. Is there any cross-bar in that little stamp that you have produced, such as is found in the Norton instrument?

A. I do not find any cross-bar of exactly the same form as that shown in the Norton instrument; I find, however, at the bottom of the receptacle for the type some metal that corresponds in position with the cross-bar in the Norton hand stamp, which metal serves the same purpose as the cross-bar referred to in the question, inasmuch as a shank which connects the stamp with the handle arises from it and it serves as a means of transferring the power given by the hand from the handle to the type; the whole box or tube forms a cross-bar, but it differs from the Norton bar in having one long recess to receive the type instead of two circular ones to receive the type block and cancelling tube.

161. X Q. Is not the bottom of the type receptacle to which the 1803 handle in the stamp you have produced different in shape, width, depth, and material from the cross-bar in the Norton instrument?

A. It is.

162. X Q. Do you find any screws in the bottom of the type receptacle of the stamp you have produced corresponding with the screws in the cross-bar of the Norton instrument?

A. I do not.

163. X Q. Is there any hollow cylinder attached to the bottom of the type receptacle in your stamp like that holding the cork canceller screwed to the cross-bar in the Norton instrument?

A. There is no hollow cylinder exactly like that in the Norton patent, nor is there any cylinder attached by a screw to a cross-bar of the stamp produced by me; there is, however, an oblong receptacle formed on or forming part of the cross-bar, which receptacle can be used for the same purpose as the cylinder in Norton's patent in the manner indicated in the last paragraph on page 39 of the amended bill of complaint, folio 156, where it is stated that "such cancelling dye or type G may extend upwards to the said cross-bar B, and there be connected to the same by means of a screw, pin, or small bolt. In such case there would not be any tube or pipe surrounding said cancelling die or type G; the operation and effect produced would in such case of construction be the same." In this case the Norton die or type would extend up into the recess in the cross-bar in the same manner as the type does in the hand-stamp shown in Defendant's Exhibit 169.

164. X Q. Do you swear that the type receptacle in the instrument produced by you, or anything in it, is described by what you have quoted in the patent in suit?

A. I do not swear that the exact construction of the stamp shown in Defendant's Exhibit 169 is described in the reissued patent 4143, but I swear that I believe the quotation refers to the holding of a can-
1807 celling dye or type in a receptacle in said cross-bar by a screw, pin, or small bolt, and the type is held in a receptacle in the Stamp Exhibit 169 by means of a screw or small bolt; and I am borne out in this by Fig. 5 of reissued patent No. 4143, which shows a cancelling die or type secured in a receptacle, although the screw or small bolt is not there shown.

165. X Q. Do you swear that Fig. 5 of the drawings to said patent shows a receptacle in the cross-bar for the cancelling device, or do the words of the specification describe any such thing?

(Objected to, the question being for the court.)

A. As I understand the words receptacle and cancelling device, I do swear that there is a receptacle shown in the drawing at Fig. 5 for the reception of a portion of the cancelling device in substantially the same manner as in the hand-stamp referred to, although the means of securing said cancelling device in the recesses or receptacles are different to some extent, and there is more of the type enclosed in its recess or receptacle than there is of the cancelling device enclosed in its recess or receptacle; the means shown of securing the cancelling device in its recess or receptacle, and the type in its recess or receptacle, are both well known means of securing articles in their place, and either is used as may be most convenient to the person constructing the receptacle.

1808 NEW YORK, April 6th, 1878.—10 o'clock a. m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Cross-examination of the witness, T. J. W. ROBERTSON, continued by the Hon. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS, of counsel for complainant:

166 X Q. Is there any receptacle in the cross-bar of the Norton instrument for type as shown in the model produced?

A. In the model Exhibit 149 the receptacles in the arm are for the purpose of receiving two tubes or holders, one of which is for the purpose of receiving type for postmarking, and the other the type for cancelling, which in the model referred to is of cork; so far as appears from that model, the receptacles in the cross-bar are not intended to receive the type; but I find in folio 160 of the amended bill of complaint, which is a portion of the reissued patent No. 4143, purporting to describe one of the means of carrying out the alleged invention, of which the model referred to is an example, the following passage: "I also construct my said postage-stamp cancelling device, die, or type, of cast-iron, steel, or other suitable metal, substantially as shown in G[1], Figs. 5 and 6, and which may be secured to the said cross bar or piece, B, in like manner as the said tube or cylinder C, Figs. 2 and 4, and which is done either by screw and nut, where the same unites with the said cross-bar, or it may there be firmly fastened by means of suitably constructed and arranged pins or rivets." This passage from the specification fully proves to my mind that it was the intention of the inventor to use said receptacle in the cross-bar for the reception of the type for cancelling.

167. X Q. Is it possible for you to give a direct answer to a plain and simple question of mine without obtruding into that answer what you suppose to be an argument for the defense, wholly irresponsive to the question?

1809 A. In my answers to the questions of the counsel, I have endeavored to give such answers as would make myself understood. In answering questions as to a model belonging to a patent, I consider myself at liberty to take the specification and drawings of said patent as a means of informing myself of the object of any part of the model referred to, which is all that I have done in answering the previous question.

168. X Q. In the letter stamp which you have produced, is there any cork of the shape, size, or any place for the cork, or any other substance of similar size and shape, as shown in the model of the Norton instrument?

A. There is not, of similar size or shape.

169. X Q. Is there in said letter stamp any tube or cylinder of the size and shape as in the model of the Norton instrument, for the reception of the type used for dating the time of stamping and cancelling letter?

A. There is no tube or cylinder of the same size and shape shown in Mr. Norton's instrument in said letter stamp.

170. X Q. Is there in or about said letter stamp any permanent and solid lettering to indicate the location of the post-office when the stamp is used, as shown in the Norton model.

A. There is not.

171. X Q. Excepting the handles of the two instruments, which are made of wood, does not the Norton instrument for postmarking letters and cancelling the stamps thereon at the same blow, differ in construction, form, weight, and the materials of which it is made, from the clothes-marking stamp which you have produced?

A. It does.

172 X Q. Did you ever know or hear or learn in an any way that an instrument in all respects like the one you have produced, marked Exhibit 169, was used for postmarking and stamp-cancelling letters prior to 1863?

1810 A. I never did.

173. X Q. Where have you kept this instrument that you have produced since you purchased it?

A. That is almost impossible for me to tell; I believe that it has always been in some portion of my house during the time I lived in Washington, and in one or other of the rooms occupied by me in New York and Brooklyn, ever since I bought it, until I brought it from Washington to produce it here, except during my trip to Europe, and I am not certain whether I took it with me then or left it locked up in a bookcase, which was in the care of my wife's brother-in-law.

174. X Q. Can you tell how often you have seen this instrument within the last ten years?

A. I cannot; but I have not seen it many times.

175. X Q. When was this paper wadding that appears in the instrument put into it?

A. I put some paper wadding in it, I think, on Sunday last, to keep the type from falling out.

176. X Q. Such instruments have been on sale, have they not, in the proper shops, since you purchased that one?

A. I believe they have.

177 X Q. I understood you to say that you claim to be the inventor, and had a patent for the stamp to which the cutting canceller is attached, as shown in Defendant's Exhibit No. 146 produced, with the patent to Ransford & Low, dated Aug. 9, 1859; is that correct?

A. I am the inventor of and had a patent issued to me for a postmarking stamp, substantially the same, with the postmarking device shown in Defendant's Exhibit 146, when the cutting cancelling device is removed therefrom.

178. X Q. Did not that invention consist in a new combination of wheels, types, and other elements well known to mechanics and printers at that time?

(Objected to as not the best evidence.)

1811 A. It did consist in a combination of elements, some of which were known before, others were new, and all the elements were combined in a manner not previously known.

179. X Q. What were the new elements in that combination?

(Objected to as raising an issue out of this case.)

A. The dating type-wheels had not been known before my invention, neither had a plate to receive a permanent inscription been so made as to allow the dating wheels to be turned without removing the plate.

180. X Q. Do you swear that wheels with types or figures on them were never made before you invented that instrument?

A. I do not: but wheels so combined as to be used for dating purposes never had been, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

181. X Q. Then you simply combined what was known to exist so as to produce what you believe to be a new and useful result, did you not?

A. I combined wheels having types therein to indicate figures which were old, with other wheels having types to indicate the months which were new, with a plate having engraved thereon the name of a place, the plate being so constructed as to allow of the wheels turning through an aperture formed in said plate without the necessity of previously separating the inscription plate and the type-wheels, which was also new.

182. X Q. Do you mean to say that wheels with tellers or figures on their periphery were inventions by you?

A. I expressly stated above that wheels having figures were old; I had never seen, previous to my invention, nor am I aware that wheels had ever been formed previous thereto with types arranged on their peripheries in such a manner as to give the names of the twelve months of the year.

1812 183. X Q. Could not a mechanic well acquainted with the art of printing substitute on the periphery of a wheel letters indicating months or names, in place of figures indicating dates?

A. He could, probably, if the idea had ever been suggested to him.

184. X Q. Do you think the idea is one that would ordinarily occur to such a person as I have described in the foregoing question?

A. I do not; for numbering wheels had been known many years previous to my invention, and also hand stamps with ordinary types for dates; and no one, as far as I am aware, had ever suggested the idea until I had made the invention shown in my hand-stamp patent.

185. X Q. Do you know that wheels with letters on their periphery were not known before your invention?

A. I cannot call to mind a single instance of wheels with letters on their periphery having been used previous to my invention.

186. X Q. You think, then, do you, that it would require invention to substitute letters for figures on the periphery of a wheel?

A. I do not, as it would be but a mere change of characters; but the combination of such a wheel or wheels with other devices by which they might be conveniently used for dating purposes, provided there was any invention, ever so small, in the whole device or instrument would be a patentable invention.

187 & 188. X Q. Can you tell from your scientific knowledge, or knowledge of the art of printing, by merely looking at it, whether or not an instrument when used would be a perfect or effective postmarking and stamp cancelling instrument?

A. That answer depends upon what you mean by a perfect or effective cancelling instrument; the Post-Office Department, I believe, has yet to find what it considers a perfect and effective cancelling instrument, as the cancellation marks made by any ink with which we 1813 are at present acquainted can be removed if suitable means were taken, leaving the stamp apparently uncancelled, unless ink of such character as to burn the stamp be used, when there is danger of destroying the envelope or its contents, and of injuring the cancelling device.

188 & 189. X Q. What I mean is, can you tell by looking at the instrument before any experiments have been made by its use, whether or not it will post-mark letters—cancel the stamps thereon at a single blow in the most effective manner known at this time?

A. I cannot, as I do not know all the means that have been devised for cancelling stamps and post-marking letters up to this time, so many patents having been granted for different devices for this purpose.

190. X Q. You are also aware, are you not, that there has been a good deal of experimenting to ascertain the best and most effective way for post marking letters and cancelling the stamps thereon since the introduction of postage-stamps?

A. I am.

190½ X Q. Referring to Defendant's Exhibit No. 6, do you wish to be understood as stating that it shows the same combination of elements in its construction as the model, Defendant's Exhibit 149, called the Norton instrument?

A. I find the cancelling and post-marking types to be essentially the same in both instruments, but I do not find the cancelling type or die enclosed in the tube in Defendant's Exhibit No. 6 that is shown in the Norton stamp, nor is the cross-bar of the latter shown in Exhibit No. 6.

192 X Q. Look upon what I hold in my hand, which is an ordinary lead pencil made of wood and lead, both of which are old and well known elements; suppose they were now for the first time so combined as to produce that pencil, would you regard that as an invention?

(Objected to as raising an issue outside of this case.)

1814 A. I have no doubt but that a patent would be obtained for such an instrument, but whether the courts would sustain it is another question in view of a decision of the Supreme Court, where somewhat similar invention was involved, namely, a combination of a rubber tip with a lead pencil, in which the court took the ground that there was no invention in combining the two substances, although it produced a new and useful article.

193. X Q. I did not ask you for the opinion of the Supreme Court, with which I am familiar, and which you have misstated, but I want your judgment as an expert in answer to my former question as to whether or not the combination named would be an invention.

A. I do not set up for an expert in patent law, nor am I here to be examined as one; the question put to me by counsel involves some very nice points of patent law, and will require considerable time and thought to give a reliable answer to it, but I think that as pens of various kinds have been mounted in wooden handles, and tools of various kinds, and metals of various kinds have been used for marking purposes, and that chalk has been enclosed in handles, there would seem to be very little, if any, invention in enclosing lead or plumbago in wood so as to form a pencil.

194. X Q. I do not wish you to evade the question by such statements as you have just made. I therefore ask you if wood and any metal or article that could be used for writing or making marks was combined, as indicated in the lead pencil, for the first time in the world, would that, in your judgment, be an invention?

A. If nothing had ever been enclosed before in a handle, or lead had never been before used for writing, I think such a combination would be an invention.

195. X Q. Look at the edge of the lid of this table which is before you, you see there evidences of planeing and the formation of 1815 a cone or groove in the edge of it. Suppose the planing was done by one instrument and the grooving with another, each used by a separate man, and the two tools should be so combined in one tool that one man could work the tool and produce thereby what was before the separate result of the two, would that combination, in your judgment, be an invention?

(Objected to as raising an issue out of this case, and because it is improper to put such a supposition to a witness.)

A. That question is one which, as stated by the counsel, no man, having a regard for his reputation, would wish to answer without further data than is contained in the said question; I have, heretofore, in answer to various questions, given my opinion that the mere idea that labor was saved by an alleged new combination was not patentable, or, in other words, that it is not an invention simply to combine two instruments together; that it depended entirely upon the means by which the two instruments were combined, and that if the means of combining them were new it would be an invention to combine them; but if the means for uniting the two were old and well known there would be no invention, in my opinion, in the combination referred to, simply as a combination; if, however, some new effect other than the mere addition of the results of the two instruments were produced by such combination, then it would be an invention to combine such instruments; but from the conditions stated by the counsel I can see no reason for supposing that any other result would be produced beyond the mere addition of the effects produced by the two instruments working separately.

195½. X Q. Can there be, in your judgment invention in changing the form of an instrument or a machine?

A. Sometimes.

196. X Q. Can there be invention in changing the substance or material of which a machine or instrument was made?

1816 A. Usually mere change of materials are not considered inventions, but circumstances may be such that a change of material would be an invention.

197. X Q. Do you think that the substitution of an India rubber for a cloth covering of a roller in a washing machine would be an invention if such a thing was never before known?

(Objected to as indefinite, and as raising new issues.)

A. If rubber rollers in washing machines were substituted for cloth rollers there would be a new effect produced by the substitution, as the rubber would be impervious to water; but if rubber rollers were well known for a similar or analogous purpose, it would be no invention to transfer a rubber roller from one machine to another, unless in the new position it accomplished some object that it did not in the other, as its mere use for one thing in place of another is not considered invention; if, for instance, rubber rollers had been used in wringing machines, the mere change of a rubber roller from a wringing machine to a washing machine, where it acted simply as a means of squeezing the water out of the clothes being washed, it would be no invention to make such change.

198. X Q. Suppose a washing machine is made with a roller covered by cloth, and for that reason it will not work, and is worthless, and some man should substitute an India-rubber covered roller for the cloth roller, and the machine should then prove of great utility, would that change be an invention?

A. That would depend upon the question whether rubber rollers had been used for an analogous purpose before; as the rubber rollers have been used in wringing machines where they act in a similar manner to the rollers in some styles of washing machines, I can see no invention in making such change; but if, in the new position, said rubber-covered roller produced some new effect, it would in that case be an invention, or what is ordinarily considered such.

1817 199. X Q. May not invention sometimes consist in changing the shape, length, or size of an element or part of a machine?

A. It may sometimes, but not ordinarily.

200. X. Q. You have stated that you were not here to be examined as an expert in patent law; will you state what you are here for?

A. As a mechanical expert, conversant with the art of printing and mechanics generally; although in the course of my experience as a patent solicitor and mechanical expert I have gained some knowledge of patent law, I do not presume to, or wish to, instruct the court trying this suit on that subject; though I believe I have some little knowledge of the theory and practice of mechanics.

201. X Q. When did you go into preparation to be a witness in this suit?

A. What do you mean by preparation?

202. X Q. When did you commence any examination with reference to the subject matter of this suit?

A. I have had occasion to examine many of the patents referred to in my testimony, on several occasions previous to my engagement to act as expert in this suit, but I did not commence a thorough and systematic examination of all the patents, exhibits, and papers connected with it until a week ago last Tuesday.

203. X Q. Who engaged you as an expert in this case?

A. Mr. Clarke, defendant's counsel.

204. X Q. Have you had any conversation about your services as an expert in this caswith any other person but Mr. Clarke?

A. I have mentioned to two or three gentlemen, mostly personal friends, that I was in the city for the purpose of acting as an expert in this case; I have had no other conversations that I can remember, excepting that one of the examiners in the Patent Office asked me if I could act as such, and I replied that I thought that I was toler-

1818 ably conversant with the subject of hand stamps, and should be willing to act as an expert; that is about all the conversation that I remember just now.

205. X Q. Have you seen Mr. Jeremiah D. Green since this suit was commenced?

A. I have seen the gentleman referred to on several occasions lately, but I don't think that I have spoken a dozen words to him on the subject of this suit; I think, however, that he informed me in the record room of the Patent Office in Washington, some three or four weeks ago, that such a suit was going on; I also met him in Mr. Clarke's room, where we may have exchanged some few words, but neither of the conversations referred to had, in my opinion, anything to do with my testimony in this case.

206. X Q. How long was Mr. Peale, to whom you have heretofore referred to in your evidence, examiner in the Patent Office?

A. I do not know but he has been there many years.

207. X Q. Mr. Clarke, to whom you have referred in your answer next preceding the last one, is the gentleman who appears for the defense in this case—is he?

A. He is.

Redirect:

208. R. Q. In the early part of your testimony, on cross-examination, some reference was made to a patent for a hand stamp that had been granted to yourself, and in regard to it I think you stated there has been some controversy in the courts and the Patent Office. Have you a copy of that patent?

A. I have, and I produce it.

Defendant's counsel offers copy in evidence, and it is marked Def't's Exhibit 170, Robertson. J. A. S., Ex'r.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the introduction of this 1819 document as part of the examination of this witness, after the cross-examination is closed.)

209. Re D. Q. I think you have stated on your cross-examination, substantially, that a mechanic, without the exercise of any invention, and by using only well-known mechanical means, could construct from the patent of August 9, 1859, a combined postmarker and canceller, by means of which the cancellation could be done by inking only, without cutting. I think you have also stated substantially that the use of an instrument like the duplicate model of the patent on which suit is brought, Defendant's Exhibit 149, would not be an infringement of the the 1859 patent, in your opinion. If I am right in my understanding of your testimony, please state fully how your two opinions are reconcilable.

(Objected as leading, and re-examination upon the same subject upon which he has been already examined and cross-examined.)

A. Because the patent granted for the invention represented by Defendant's Exhibit 146 has a claim that could only be sustained, in view of the state of the art, by construing it to cover only a postmarking device, having attached thereto an instrument for the purpose of cutting the postage stamps so as to thoroughly efface or cancel them; I do not find in the stamp marked Def't's Exh. 149 any cutting device, and its use would not therefore infringe the claim of the patent for the instrument shown in Def's Exh. 146; a person may use all the parts that may be shown in a patent, not covered by the claim, without infringing the patent in the least; and therefore, although the user of the stamp marked Defendant's Exhibit 149 would use a cancelling device attached to or connected with a postmarking instrument, yet, as he did not use the cutting part of the cancelling device, the use of the combined canceller and postmarker shown by Defendant's Exhibit 149 would not be an infringement of the claim of the patent issued for Defendant's 1820 Exhibit 146, as such claim would necessarily have to be construed by the court if it was sustained.

NEW YORK, April 8th, 1878—10 o'clock a. m.

Pursuant to adjournment.

Present, counsel as before.

Witness desires to make the following statement:

It appearing to me, from the questions asked me by complainant's counsel, that my connection with the controversy between myself and Mr. M. P. Norton, that some objections may be made to my testimony on that account, I desire to state that, with all due sincerity and solemnity, I am willing to swear, and do swear, that I have no personal feeling against Mr. Norton any more than against a perfect stranger, whom I never met before, and that I would as soon do him a favor as I would any other stranger, but I would not go out of my way to do it.

I have no longer any interest in the controversy about the patent on hand stamps issued to me in 1857, nor in the extension of the same patent granted in September, 1871, as I disposed of my whole interest in it to Mr. B. B. Hill, of Springfield, Massachusetts, some two or three years since.

I would like also to add a little explanation of my meaning in the answer given to the cross-question 194, which refers to the question whether it would be an invention to combine a planing tool with a moulding tool in such a manner that one man could use both at the same time. The statement I then made I still believe to be true, but think it may possibly be distorted, in its present form, out of its proper meaning, and I therefore wish to add that I con-
1821 sider the junction or combination of two knives, one of which is a planing device and the other a moulding instrument, would be simply the uniting of two short knives into one long one, and that as moulding knives or cutters have sometimes narrow straight portions, there would be no invention in extending said knives or cutters so as to form planing cutters, as a planing cutter and a moulding cutter is essentially the same, and operates the same way, the only difference being in the forms of their edges.

T. J. W. ROBERTSON.

Sworn to before me this 8th day of April, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELD,
Examiner, &c.

NEW YORK, April 8th, 1878.

Present, counsel as before.

THOMAS D. STETSON, a witness produced on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories propounded by SAMUEL B. CLARKE, Esq., of counsel for defendant, testifies as follows:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Thomas D. Stetson; I am 50 years of age; I reside at 950 Lexington avenue, N. Y. City; occupation, solicitor of patents.

2. Q. State what you know, if you know anything, in regard to the trial of the case of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse against Edmund Hoole in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of New York, in the latter part of the year 1864?

A. I was present; there was a jury; there was counsel for complainant; there was no counsel for defence, and no testimony was put 1822 in for the defense; at some stage I addressed the court and stated that I was in the employ of the defendants, but was not one of the defendants, and was not a member of the bar; I stated that the defendants wished to put in a defense, and asked an adjournment to the next morning for the purpose; counsel for the complainants, Mr. Norton, asked the court to proceed and have judgment entered and said something to the effect that it could be reopened afterwards; I don't remember the exact words which passed between the counsel and the judge; I am not sure that I understood their full purport at the time; the result was a verdict immediately for the complainants; the damages were merely nominal.

(Objected to as irrelevant, and that the record is the best evidence.)

3. Q. Is that all that you recollect as to what yourself said or what Mr. Norton said, or what was done?

A. Yes.

4. Q. Why did you make your statement to the court?

A. I believed it was true and that it was important to the interests of defendant and to the obtainment of justice.

(Objected to as the opinion of the witness.)

5. Q. Why did you believe it to be true that the defendant wished to put in a defense?

A. I am going to decline to answer; I have devoted much time and labor in preparing myself to serve professionally in proceedings on patents; I have not been employed professionally in this case; I am unwilling to be drawn into an examination involving the merits on a simple subpœna, as has been served on me; I decline to answer.

6. Q. What facts connected with that case were there which made you believe that the defendant therein wished to put in a defense, 1823 and which induced you to make that statement to the court which you have referred to?

A. I decline to answer.

7. Q. Were there any witnesses present on the part of the defendant in that case to your knowledge?

A. None but myself; I was employed as an expert.

8. Q. What preparation, if you know, was made for the defense?

A. I had been employed to ascertain what testimony was available and to prepare to serve as expert, and had done so; I don't remember the specific facts; in general there had been a defense prepared; I think it was exactly as indicated in the amended answer, filed in that suit.

9. Q. State what you had to do with that suit before the trial, if anything.

A. The original answer was prepared and filed before I was called into it; the amended answer I prepared in whole or in part; I think I investigated the facts and aided to determine what was expedient to put into the answer; I probably attended very closely to the construction, the mode of using and the effect of different stamps, because I always do that, but I don't now recall the specific steps; probably I searched the American Patent Office and the printed records of British and French patents; probably I discussed the matter with counsel with a view to aid each other in arriving at correct conclusions on the pertinacy and effect of the testimony; I don't recollect specifically, but I consider it nearly certain that all that had been done; I esteem them always proper to be done; I had done what I considered the proper thing in that case.

10. Q. Were any other witnesses than yourself subpœnaed in the case?

A. I don't know; I was not subpœnaed.

11. Q. Were copies of any letters patent obtained to support the defense set up in that answer?

1824 A. I am quite confident that one earlier patent granted to the same Mr. Norton, dated August 9, 1859, with certain assignments thereof, were ready in form of certified copies from the Patent Office; I think there were others, but cannot be certain as to others.

12. Q. Were any models constructed after the specifications and drawings of the 1859 patent?

A. I don't remember.

12½. Q. Had any testimony been prepared as to what sort of instruments for postmarking and cancelling had been used in the New York City post-office?

A. My impression is that there was no question on that point; that a sample was ready which it was to be admitted all round Mr. Hoole, the nominal defendant, had made and sold to use; I think I should have remembered it if there had been any dispute or doubt as to that; I don't remember positively.

13 & 14. Q. Describe that sample as well as you can.

A. I think it was about like this Defendant's Exhibit 148, letters being cut or cast in the circle on the large end, and type being filled in the middle.

15. Q. Do you notice any other respect in which this exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit 148, differs from that sample?

A. No; but I can't be positive about the construction; I am quite confident that there was a cross-bar with the stamping device at one end and the cancelling device at the other, and the handle connected or near the middle; that the canceller was smaller than the stamper with its face about even with it, and engraved somehow; I think the cancelling face was iron, the surfaces being dull so as to deface with ink without cutting; I think the face of the canceller was not swelled or raised in the middle beyond the edges like this Defendant's Exhibit 148; if there is any merit in that latter feature projecting the middle of the cancelling face out beyond the plane of the edge, that is a later improvement.

1825 16. Q. Did that sample stamp have any patent mark on it?

A. No.

17. Q. Was any testimony prepared as to what sort of instrument was used in the N. Y. City post-office in support of the defense on that point in the answer?

A. I don't recollect any.

18. Q. Why did you state to the court that the defendant desired to put in a defense?

A. Because he had a defense which I had been at some pains to aid in preparing. I was his servant. I believed that he wanted to offer it. I don't remember any specific reasons for the belief, or any specific reasons for my saying what I did or for not saying more. I was at some loss to determine there, as I am here in this examination, to determine what course to pursue.

19. Q. I think in one of your answers you spoke of Mr. Hoole as the nominal defendant. Why did you call him the nominal defendant?

A. His name was used, but I understood he was not much interested.

20. Q. State the facts which led you to that understanding.

A. The damages finally arrived at, 6¼ cents, had been, I think, previously fixed on as the amount prayed for. Mr. Hoole took very little or no pains to search for testimony or discuss its bearing. I think he had gone out of the business or was about going out of making these stamps.

21. Q. Who had fixed on 6¼ cents as the amount of damages, and when?

A. I am not positive; my impression is that that had been arrived at a long time before the trial.

22. Q. What is your best recollection as to who the parties to the arrangement were?

A. I don't believe I knew at the time. I certainly don't now.

23. Q. How did you get the idea there was such an arrangement?

1826 A. I should say it was from common consent.

24. Q. Who were the parties to the common consent?

A. I don't know.

25. Q. During the progress of the suit did Mr. Hoole make any statement in your hearing as to his interest therein?

A. Not that I remember.

26. Q. Did any person beside yourself and the defendant and the lawyers have anything to do with preparing the defense or with advising about it?

A. Yes; I think a good many did.

27. Q. Who were they?

A. I think a good many stamp men, some bakers, some post-office clerks, some parties connected with Mr. Hoole in the manufacturing, and various parties in the Patent Office. I don't remember specific acts or words, but I think all these will come within the range of that question.

28. Q. Did a person of the name of Hatch have anything to do with the case?

A. Yes; Mr. W. B. Hatch, of Messrs. Fairbanks & Co.; he was interested as a part owner of one or more patents, and as being concerned in the manufacture, as I understood it. I think I was paid for my services through him. The case was managed a good deal like this one, in an uncertain and bungling way. Mr. Hatch was about the only one I distinctly understood. He said go ahead and do what ought to be done and make a defense, and he would see that I was paid the ordinary amount for such professional services.

29. Q. What connection was there between Mr. Hatch and Mr. Hoole?

A. I think Hoole had manufactured the stamps, and Fairbanks & Co. sold them.

30. Q. Did Hoole know what Hatch was doing in the case, or had you any reason to suppose that he knew?

A. I think he knew.

1827 31. Q. While the suit was going on did Hatch make any statement in your hearing as to what damages would be recovered, or anything on the subject of the result of the case?

(Objected to as hearsay.)

A. I don't remember.

32. Q. Did either Hoole or Hatch ever state why the defense was not put in at the trial?

(The same objection.)

A. I think not.

33. Q. Did any of the lawyers for the defendant, either before or after the trial?

(The same objection.)

A. No; if there was any collusion in the case it was concealed from me at the time and has been ever since.

34. Q. Did you ever ask an explanation from Mr. Hoole or Mr. Hatch?

A. I don't believe I ever did.

35. Q. Or from any of the lawyers?

A. No.

Cross-examined:

36. X Q. You made, as I understand, a pretty thorough examination for the defense in the case against Hoole and prepared the amended answer after that preparation; did you set up in that answer all the defenses which you considered available for Mr. Hoole in that case?

A. Yes; I set up all that I considered available at the time of making the amended answer; it is very common to wish afterwards the answer was different; I don't remember how it was about that at a later period.

37. X Q. Your attention was called in that case to the caveats of Norton dated 1853 and 1854, and you claimed, did you not, in that case that they had been assigned to Ransford & Low?

1828 (Objected to on the ground that what this witness claims is immaterial.)

A. I infer that from the answer.

38. X Q. Who was Mr. Hoole's attorney in that case?

A. There was a good deal of fog about the case at the time, and I have forgotten a good deal since; I don't remember anybody but Mr. George Gifford, and I don't remember his taking any very active part.

39. X Q. Who was the presiding judge at the trial?

(Objected to as secondary evidence.)

A. I think it was Judge Hall.

40. X Q. That case was regularly called on the docket, was it not?

A. I understood so.

41. X Q. Did the judge give instructions to the jury in the case after the evidence was submitted?

A. I think he made a charge in something like the ordinary form, but rather brief.

42. X Q. Did Mr. Tiffany or any other lawyer appear for the plaintiff in the case at that time?

A. I think there was another gentleman besides Mr. Norton; I had the impression that Mr. Norton opened and conducted the case, but he may have appeared only as a witness.

43. X Q. Do you remember to have seen Mr. Hoole or Mr. Gifford in Albany, where the trial was had, at or about that time?

A. No.

44. X Q. When you interposed and requested an adjournment of the case for a day, you then believed, as I understand you, from all that had before that time transpired, the defendants wanted to defend the case upon the trial?

A. I may have been; I think I was puzzled; but I had received no instructions to relax my efforts for a defense, and I made that request to the court as a part of them.

1829 45. X Q. Fairbanks & Co., to which Mr. Hatch belongs, were the contractors with the government, and sub-let the making of these stamps to Mr. Hoole; was not that as you understood it?

(Objected to as the witness can speak from his own knowledge.)

A. I don't know whether it was a sub-letting of a contract or an employment in some other capacity; otherwise, yes.

46. X Q. Didn't you understand from Mr. Hatch, and from the interest that he took in that suit, that Fairbanks & Co. might be held to be infringers of the patent on which suit was brought in case the plaintiffs therein recovered a judgment against Hoole?

(Objected to as immaterial what the witness understood.)

A. I don't know; things were very much mixed; there had been several patents and several assignments of doubtful effect. I understood that it was Mr. Hatch's wish to have me do my best in aiding to get up and present to the court a defense. I think contented myself with that without any speculation on the precise extent of the consequences of a defeat.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN trust,
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES, UNITED STATES POSTmaster, New York.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, ss:

I, John A. Shields, a standing examiner, duly appointed by the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, do hereby certify that the several witnesses named in the annexed depositions appeared before me on the days therein specified, who, being by me duly sworn, gave said testimony, which was reduced to writing by a clerk appointed by me for that purpose, and in their presence, and they subscribed the same.

I further certify that Samuel B. Clarke, esq., counsel for defendant, and George H. Williams, esq., and Marcus P. Norton, esq., counsel for complainant, appeared on said examination.

July 2, 1878.

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Examiner, &c.

1831 Depositions of sundry witnesses taken before me, Hannibal Forbes, esquire, special examiner, appointed for the purpose, at the city of Wheeling, in the State of West Virginia, on the fourth day of March, 1878, and following days, in a suit pending in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, wherein Christopher C. Campbell is complainant and Thomas L. James is defendant, counsel for both parties being present.

At a stated term of the circuit court of the United States, for the southern district of New York, held at the city of New York, on the 25th day of February, 1878.

Present, Hon. Samuel Blatchford, Judge.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

On reading and filing the subjoined consent, and on motion of Stewart L. Woodford, U. S. attorney, the defendant's solicitor herein, it is ordered that Hannibal Forbes, esq., of Wheeling, West Virginia, be, and he is hereby, appointed a special examiner of this court under the 67th equity rule as amended, to take the testimony at said Wheeling of such competent witnesses as may be brought before him on the behalf of the defendant herein.

(Signed) SAMUEL BLATCHFORD.

MARCUS P. NORTON,
Solicitor for the Complainant.

Circuit court of the United States, southern district of New York, in equity.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant at the city of Wheeling, West Virginia, before Hannibal Forbes, esq., special examiner appointed for the purpose, on the fourth day of March, 1878.

Present, pursuant to agreement, Marcus P. Norton, solicitor and counsellor for complainant, and Samuel B. Clarke, assistant United States attorney for the southern district of New York, for the defendant.

JOHN H. ZEVELY, a witness called for and on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows:

1833 Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. John H. Zevely; age 32 years, and am a stamp and seal manufacturer, and reside at Wheeling, West Virginia.

2. Q. How long have you been engaged in manufacturing stamps and seals?

A. I have been manufacturing stamps for twenty years, and seals and stamps on my own account for eight years.

3. Q. How and with whom were you employed in this business prior to eight years ago, and how long had you been so employed?

A. I worked for my father, and for about twelve years.

4. Q. What is your father's name, and where is he now?

A. His name is E. S. Zevely, and resides at Cairo, West Virginia.

5. Q. What sort of stamps were manufactured by your father?

A. Post-office, boxwood, marking and rating stamps.

6. Q. Any other sort of stamps for post-offices?

A. In general way, marking and rating includes all kinds of stamps; we made all kinds of boxwood post-office stamps.

7. Q. Do marking and rating stamps include instruments made for the cancellation of postage-stamps?

(Complainant's counsel objects to question on the following grounds, viz: First. The witness has been twice required to state the kind of post-office stamps said to have been manufactured by his father; the record shows the witness has twice made answer fully to those questions. Second. Question is leading and improper.)

1834 A. They do.

8. Q. Describe some of the sorts of instruments which were made in your father's manufactory for post-marking and for the cancellation of postage-stamps.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question for the following reasons: First, as improper and immaterial; and, second, as suggesting to the witness the kind of answer desired from him by defendant's counsel.)

A. Do I understand that to mean a combined stamp? If so, one kind of stamp was made of boxwood, surrounded with a brass tube, or circle, and mortised for the insertion of dates, to which was attached a smaller brass tube, by means of a small brass bar about one-eighth of an inch thick; this small tube was intended to hold the piece of cork or wood or other substance for the purpose of cancelling; the handle to this stamp was inserted in the large stamp, and supported the dates; another kind was made of a piece of boxwood in an oval shape or form, on one end of which was cut or engraved the office stamp or date, and on the other end was engraved a postage-stamp canceller of various devices; another kind was made of boxwood for the office stamp or dater, and a separate piece of boxwood on which was engraved different devices or letters and words for the purpose of cancellation; this was attached to the larger stamp or dater by means of a wire cord or screw.

9. Q. My last question was general, and not limited to combined stamps; if any separate stamps for post-marking and cancelling were made, please describe them.

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as improper and leading.)

A. The office or dating stamps were made of boxwood in circular form at that time, about one and three-eighths to one and one-half inches
1835 in diameter, and about one and one-half inches long, with the name of post-office and State engraved on the face, and mortised for the insertion of dates for the days, months, and sometimes years; a black walnut handle or other hard wood was inserted in the bottom, and supported the dates; these stamps were sometimes made with a brass circle; cancelling stamps were made in various forms, but generally horizontal lines or bars; these were made of different kinds of wood.

10. Q. What was the shape of the handle, and about how large was it in the last post-marking stamp you have described?

A. Hardly know how to describe that; it was of irregular form, about four inches long.

11. Q. Where was the brass ring on this post-office stamp put, and what was its function?

A. The brass ring round the office stamp was intended to form the outer circle in stamping and to add to the appearance of the stamp.

(Complainant's counsel objects to both question and answer on the ground of immateriality, and as wasting the time of this examination upon useless and frivolous matter.)

12. Q. What do you mean by the outer circle in stamping?

(Same objection as to the last question and answer.)

A. I mean the circle surrounding the name of post-office and State engraved on the face of the stamp.

13. Q. Did this brass ring tend to strengthen the stamp, and to prevent the wood from wearing or splitting and make the instrument in general more durable?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel for the same grounds last above stated, and, further, as leading and incompetent.)

1836 A. It did.

14. Q. Did the separate cancellers you have spoken of have a separate handle attached as in the case of the dating stamp?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as incompetent and leading.)

A. Sometimes, but generally they were one piece.

15. Q. Did these cancellers ever have a brass ring around them?

(Same objections as last above.)

A. Sometimes.

16. Q. Whereabouts?

(Same objection as last above.)

A. Around the faces, or head of canceller.

17. Q. Do you mean the acting face, that part of it that comes in contact with the paper when the instrument is used?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as immaterial, incompetent, and leading.)

A. Generally the brass ring formed a part of the impression, but they were sometimes made so as not to show any impression.

18. Q. In the several sorts of stamps, both post-marking and cancelling, which you have described, in what direction did the grain of the wood run with reference to the plane of the acting faces?

A. At right angles, or across the grain.

19. Q. The wood was used endwise, was it?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as not only leading, but as being the testimony of defendant's counsel, unlawfully put into the mouth of the witness for him to say "yes" to, more properly known as "cramming," and second as having been fully answered by the witness in his answer to the last question.)

A. All our stamps were cut on the ends of the grain of wood.

1837 20. Q. With what sort of substance were these several instruments that you have described intended to be used in order to make the impression?

A. With ink in general use in post-offices for stamping purposes; the ink generally used at that time being such as was used by printers.

21. Q. What was done with the several instruments for postmarking and cancelling, which you have described, both the combined and the separate ones, I mean; what did your father do with them?

(The last part of the question is objected to, commencing with the words, "what did," as incompetent, and hearsay, and improper, and as leading.)

A. These stamps were sent out to postmasters to fill orders received from them.

(In view of the answer given, the complainant's counsel withdraws the objections last above taken.)

22. Q. Were they sold?

A. They were.

23. Q. Have you a model of any of the sorts of the combined instruments you have described?

A. I have.

24. Q. Please produce it.

(Witness produces model asked for, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 139, J. H. Zevely, March 4, 1878, H. F., sp'l examiner.)

25. Q. Point out all the respects which you notice in which this model differs from one of the combined instruments for postmarking and cancelling, which was made in your father's manufactory, for sale?

(Complainant's counsel objects to any and all questions with referenence to this alleged model, on the ground that it is not in evidence in this cause, and second, it having the appearance of recent construction, cannot be received in the evidence in this case; therefore it is improper and incompetent to put this or any other question to this witness about the same.)

1838

A. This is substantially the same as was made at that time, excepting the form or shape of mortise; sometimes they were made a little larger, as was customary at that time.

26. Q. I notice that neither the acting face of the canceller, nor the postmarker, is engraved with any device or lettered, and that there are no dating type in the mortise of the postmarker; are these respects in which this model differs from one of the instruments, actually made?

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question for the reasons last above stated; and second, as leading; and third, it is wholly immaterial as to what defendant's counsel notices or does not notice, as stated by him to the witness, so long as he himself is not on the witness stand.)

A. They are.

27. Q. In all other respects except those which you and I have pointed out, is this model, Defendant's Exhibit 139, a perfect representation of an instrument made in your father's manufactory and sold by him?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel and each and every of the objections above assigned against this model, and against all questions put to this witness concerning it, are here interposed as objections to this question, with the further objection that the question does not correctly state the fact in denominating this model as "Defendant Exhibit 139," as there is no such exhibit in this case on the part of the defendant.)

A. I think it is.

28. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

1839 (Same objections as last above.)

A. With the above exceptions it is the model as near as can be made.

Defendant's counsel here offers the Exhibit 139 in evidence, it being marked as above indicated. To the introduction and reception of this model in evidence in this cause, complainant's counsel here objects, and for his objections here assigns and interposes each and every of the objections taken when this newly-made model first made its appearance upon this record, and he further assigns as objections each and every objection taken by him to the several questions put to this witness by defendant's counsel concerning the same.

(Complainant's counsel further objects that the model has not yet been brought as an exhibit in this cause other than for the purposes of identification, and if marked at all as an exhibit in evidence it can only be marked by the examiner after the objections to it have been stated by complainant's counsel, which has not yet been done by the examiner.)

29. Q. In what respects, if any, does the handle in this model, Defendant's Exhibit 139, differ from the handles of the other instruments which you have described?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel upon the same grounds already stated as objections to this model.)

A. It is similar in shape and form to the others.

30. Q. Will the brass ring which you have testified encircled some of the separate postmarkers and cancellers come up as high on the body of each postmarker and canceller as the brass tubes do in Defendant's Exhibit 139.

1840 (Complainant's counsel objects to the question on the same grounds as already assigned as objections to this model and all questions relating to it.)

A. They did.

31. Q. Have you a model of either of the other sort of combined postmarker and canceller, which you have described?

A. I have.

32. Q. Please produce it.

A. Witness produces model, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 140, J. H. Zevely, March 4, 1878, H. F., sp'l examiner.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the model and to its being marked in the manner in which it has been marked by the examiner, and the grounds of his objection are the same as those assigned and interposed against the model alleged to have been marked "Defendant's Exhibit 139," and complainant's counsel objects to any question being put to this witness concerning the said alleged model, and assigns as objections therefor as those already assigned to the model called Exhibit 139, and all questions that were put with reference to that model.)

33. Q. Like which of the three sorts of combined in statements described by you in your answer to question 8 is this model (Defendant's Exhibit 140), if it is like any of them?

(Answer to Q. 8 read as part of this question.)

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question, and assigns therefor each and every objection heretofore taken with reference to the defendant's so-called Exhibit No 139, and all questions relating thereto, and as has been already assigned with reference to this model called De-1841 fendant's Exhibit 140, and a special objection is assigned to the question as to the impropriety of defendant's counsel incorporating into his question a previous answer, and then reading it to the witness himself as part of his question.)

(Examiner's note.)

(Witness inspects answer to question 8, to which entry on the record complainant's counsel objects.)

(Examiner's note.)

(Complainant's counsel states that the reading of the answer by the witness was after the defendant's counsel had previously read it to him, and after the objections taken by complainant's counsel were made upon the record, and requests the examiner to note the same on the record.)

A. It is like the second kind described in my answer to question 8.

34. Q. Like which of the sorts of combined instruments described by you in that answer is the model Defendant's Exhibit 139?

(Complainant's counsel objects to the question and assigns as reasons each and every of the objections heretofore taken with reference to these models and all questions put in respect to them.)

A. Like the first.

35. Q. Point out all the respects which you notice in the model (Defendant's Exhibit 140) in which it differs from an instrument in your answer to question 8, belonging to the second class, described by you, actually made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Complainant's counsel objects to this question, and assigns as reasons the objections last-above stated.)

1842 A. In general form and shape it is the same, excepting that the name of the post-office and State is not engraved on the face, and the design on the canceller is not engraved, and that there are no dates inserted in the model, or a thumbscrew to hold dates.

36. Q. The model (Defendant's Exhibit 140), exclusive of the handle, seems to consist of two blocks of boxwood glued together; is that the fact?

(Same objection as last above.)

A. It is.

37. Q. Was that the case with the instruments actually made for sale, of which this is a model?

(Same objections as last above.)

A. They were generally made of one piece, but sometimes of two.

38. Q. In all other respects except those which you have pointed out, is this model (Defendant's Exhibit 140) a perfect representation of a class of instruments actually made in your father's manufactory and sold?

(Question objected by complainant's counsel for the grounds last above stated.)

A. It is as near as a model can be made.

39. Q. Please describe a little more in detail the third sort of combined instruments referred to by you in your answer to question 8; use, if you please, the models (Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140), or parts thereof, to illustrate what you say.

(Same objection as last-above stated, and further as incompetent, improper and leading.)

A. The third kind was similar to the first kind, with the exception of the brass circle to which was attached, by a wire cord or screw, a piece of boxwood or other hard wood with device engraved thereon, for the purpose of cancelling. This was attached to the right
1843 hand side of the stamp, one side of the stamp being flattened below the outer circle, and the attachment being flattened on one side so as to fit up close and secure. This attachment had a shoulder on one side so as to throw it out, that is the face of it, about one-eighth of an inch from the circle of the office-stamp face.

40. Q. You say the third-class was like the first-class, "with the exception of the brass circle to which was attached, by a wire cord or screw, a piece of boxwood," what does that mean exactly?

(Objected to on the grounds last above stated, and for the further reason that complainant's counsel claims the exclusive right of cross-examining the witness.)

A. That means it was like this first class, leaving off the brass tubes, or like the boxwood part and handle only. To the boxwood part the canceller attachment was made.

41. Q. You say that this canceller was attached by cord or wire sometimes; were cord or wire capable of holding the postmarker and canceller securely together, and did they so hold them?

(Objected to on the same reasons as last above stated, and as incompetent and immaterial, and leading and improper.)

A. They were, and they did.

42. Q. Fix the earliest date you can at which a combined instrument belonging to the first class referred to by you in your answer to question 8, and represented by the model (Defendant's Exhibit 139), was made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Objected to on the grounds last above stated, and further for all the reasons heretofore stated.)

1844 A. To the best of my recollection they were made and sold as far back as the winter of 1860 and 1861; I cannot give the exact time.

At 6 o'clock p. m. adjourned to 9 o'clock a. m., March 5th, 1878.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Sp'l Examiner.

To which adjournments complainant's counsel object on the grounds that the examination of this witness did not commence until 2 o'clock this afternoon, and because the time beyond that provided in the 69th equity rule has been extended for 30 days at the request of defendant's counsel. In view of these facts, complainant's counsel proposes an adjournment until 7 o'clock this evening for a session of two or three hours' work.

The defendant's counsel dissents from the above statement of facts.

MARCH 5, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, the same counsel as before.

43. Q. Fix the earliest date you can at which combined instruments of the second class described by you, represented by the model (Defendant's Exhibit 140), were made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Same objection as last above stated.)

A. To the best of my recollection they were made as early as the latter part of 1860.

44. Q. Fix the earliest date you can at which combined instruments of the third class described by you, were made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Same objections as last above stated.)

A. About the same time the others were made.

45. Q. Do you mean as early as 1860?

1845 (Same objections as last above stated, and further that the court will have no trouble in ascertaining what this witness means in his last several answers. They are in good English, and therefore the witness needs no stuffing from defendant's counsel by the putting of leading questions.)

A. I do.

Q. 46. Fix the earliest date you can in which the separate cancellers made of boxwood and having brass rings on them in the manner you have described, were made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Same objections as last above, and further as having about as much to do with this case as a proclamation by the Tycoon would.)

A. To the best of my recollection, about the same time the others were.

Q. 47. Fix the earliest date you can at which the separate boxwood post-marker having the brass ring round it as you have described, was made in your father's manufactory and sold.

(Same objections as last above stated.)

A. To the best of my recollection, about the same time that the others were.

48. Q. What can you say on the question of whether these instruments that you have described, all or any of them, were made and sold by your father prior to 1860?

(Same objection as last above stated, and further, that it is immaterial what the witness can or cannot say on that subject, and as incompetent and improper. and further, the witness has already answered fully with reference to time.)

A. I recollect of my father having made and used in the post-office, at Pleasant Grove, Maryland, a stamp similar to the third class
1846 or kind mentioned in answer to question 8, as early as 1853; but as to their being made and sold, I have no recollection.

49. Q. What position did your father have in that post-office?

A. He was postmaster.

50. Q. When did he cease to be postmaster?

A. That I can't answer.

51. Q. Come as near it as you can.

(Same objections as last above stated.)

A. It was about the year 1853.

(Defendant's counsel here offers the model Defendant's Exhibit 140, in evidence, the same being marked as heretofore indicated, and renews the offer of Defendant's Exhibit 139.

Complainant's counsel objects to the same, and to each of those models being introduced and received in evidence in this cause for any purpose whatever, excepting to show the fact of their recent construction, and that they were manufactured for the purpose of attempting to use them as evidence in this cause.

Complainant's counsel here interposes as objections against each of these models, each and every objection taken with reference to them on this record during these proceedings before this special examiner.

And also the several objections taken to any and all questions having reference to these models, or either of them.)

Cross-examination of the witness de bene esse, with reference to Def't's Exhibits 139 and 140, by complainant's counsel, MARCUS P. NORTON:

(Defendant' counsel objects to a conditional cross-examination.)

1847 52. X Q. Do you know Mr. A. M. Zevely, of Washington, D. C.?

A. I do.

53. X Q. Is he a relative of yours; and, if so, in what degree?

A. He is my uncle.

54. X Q. Was he ever Third Assistant Postmaster-General of the United States?

A. He was.

55 X Q. When was he appointed, and when did his term of office cease?

A. His term of office ceased in the spring of 1869, and I think he held that position about or from eight to ten years; he was in the Post-Office Department from 1835, or about, until the spring of 1869.

56. X Q. Did you ever have any conversation with your uncle, Mr. A. N. Zevely, concerning the matters, or any of them, which you have testified about on your direct examination?

A. No.

57. X Q. You never did?

A. No.

58. X Q. How old were you in the year 1853?

A. I was in my eighth year.

59. X Q. In what business were you engaged at that time?

A. Not in any business.

60. X Q. State some particular thing outside of post-office matters that happened during that year, of which you have as vivid a recollection, as you now swear you have, concerning the third class of contrivances described by you in your answer to the eighth question of your direct examination, recollecting at the same time that you make your answer that you were then but seven years old, and in the eighth year of your age.

A. During that year my father moved from the country into the town of Cumberland, five miles off.

61. X Q. What enables you to make the statement you made in your last answer?

1848 A. My father lived in Cumberland about seventeen years; he left Cumberland in the winter of 1870 and 1871.

62. X Q. How do you know your fat' er lived in Cumberland seventeen years, as you have stated?

A. I know I was then about eight years old, and lived seventeen years in Cumberland and about seven years here, making my present age.

63. X Q. How do you know that at that time you were about eight years old. as stated in your last answer?

A. The family records show I was born in the year 1846.

64. X Q. Is that the only answer you are willing to give and can give to the last question?

A. I think so.

65. X Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I don't doubt the record.

66. X Q. What record?

A. The family record in the Bible of my birth.

67. X Q. Now please explain to the court just what the records of your birth in your family Bible, or anywhere else, has to do with your recollection of events or things that happened during the year 1853, and while you were but a little more than seven years old?

A. By that means I fix the date of the occurrences just mentioned.

68. X Q. And from the record of your birth you are enabled to state your recollection of events or things that happened during the year 1853, is that it?

A. By that record I fix the date; I recollect the facts very distinctly.

69. X Q. Now state the means and by what it is, that enables you now to say, "I recollect the facts very distinctly"?

A. By certain associations connected therewith.

70. X Q. What associations have you reference to in your last answer?

A. My recollection of playmates and associates and family friends enable me to recall the facts.

1849 71. X Q. Recall what facts?

A. The facts above stated.

72. X Q. What are those?

A. The use of this stamp and the removal of my father to Cumberland about or in the year 1853.

73. X Q. Describe the hat, the coat, vest, pants, boots or shoes worn by you during that eventful year of 1853.

A. I can't describe them exactly.

74. X Q. Describe the hat, coat, vest, boots or shoes worn by your father during that same year.

A. I cannot describe them exactly.

75. X Q. Describe anything that you saw your father do during that year.

A. One thing I recollect of, his sending out a great many circulars, and of my having to assist in folding them; I also recollect who did the printing and who directed these circulars, or assisted in doing it.

76. X Q. What are those circulars about, and how many were sent out in that year?

A. Circulars were about the stamps and other things; just how many were sent out I don't recollect.

77. X Q. What kind of stamps were those mentioned by you in your answer to last question?

A. All the kinds that were made at that time.

78. X Q. What kind of stamps were those?

A. Post office marking and dating stamps.

79. X Q. Any others?

A. That includes all kinds.

80. X Q. To whom were those circulars sent?

A. To the postmasters.

81. X Q. Informing them of what?

A. That he was prepared to furnish those kind of stamps and other matters.

82. X Q. What kind of stamps and what kind of other matters did your father inform postmasters that he was prepared to send out?

A. I think I answered that question in substance before.

1850 83. X Q. Point to the answer by the number of the question where in substance you have answered the last question before, as stated by you.

A. In answer to questions 78 and 79 of cross-examination.

84. X Q. You have now stated everything that you recollect as having happened during the year 1853, have you not?

A. I don't know that I have.

85 X Q. Proceed and state everything you now remember that happened during that year when you were little past seven years of age.

A. My answer is, I don't think they would be pertinent to the question.

86. X Q. Do you know of anything that took place during that year that would, in your opinion, be pertinent to any of the issues in this case?

A. Not any more that I have stated.

87. X Q. Well, what is that?

A. What I have stated in answer to questions 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77 and to 86, inclusive, of my cross-examination.

88. X Q. How many inhabitants were there in the town of Cumberland in the year of 1853, when you were but little past seven years of age?

A. Being so young I did not take the census of the town.

89. X Q. About how many letters were daily received by and delivered from the post-office at Cumberland in the year 1853, and when you were a little over seven years of age?

A. I don't know, as I have no recollection of ever being in the Cumberland post-office during that year.

90. X Q. State how many letters were daily received by and delivered from the post-office at Pleasant Grove, State of Maryland, in and during the year 1853, when your father was postmaster there, and when you were but little more than seven years of age.

A. That I cannot answer.

91. X Q. About how many?

1851 A. I cannot state.

92. X Q. To what post-office did you refer when you stated about the circulars being sent off during the year 1853?

A. Pleasant Grove, Maryland.

93. X Q. For what length of time was your father postmaster at that office?

A. I can't say exactly.

94. X Q. Why not?

A. Because I don't know when he was appointed.

95. X Q. What year did your father move from Cumberland to Pleasant Grove, or what year did he move from Pleasant Grove to Cumberland?

A. He moved from Pleasant Grove to Cumberland in the year 1853.

96. X Q. What part of the year?

A. It was during the spring, summer, or fall—no winter about it—during warm weather.

97. X Q. In answer to question 48 of your direct examination, you state in words and figures as follows: "I recollect of my father having made and used in the post-office at Pleasant Grove, Maryland, a stamp similar to the third class or kind mentioned in answer to question 8, as early as 1853." Describe the exact construction of that so-called device, and each and every part of it.

A. That stamp had a handle similar to that on Defendant's Exhibit 140; the face part of the stamp was made, I think, of mountain laurel, the name of the post-office, county, and State being engraved on the face of the stamp; the face of the stamp was mortised for the reception of dates; these dates were made of the same material as the face of the stamp; the face of the stamp was in a circular form, about one and one-half inches in diameter; the dates were held in their place by a thumb-screw; to one side of this stamp was attached a separate piece of wood by means of a screw and glue, on which was engraved the word "paid."

1852 98. X Q. What was the form or shape of that piece of wood glued to and screwed upon the side of the postmarker and having the word "paid" engraved upon its acting surface, as stated in your last answer?

A. Well, it was oblong in shape and curved out on one side, so as to fit up close to the side of the office stamp.

99. X Q. The curving was on the same circle as the post-office stamp, was it not?

A. Of course it was curved out so as to fit the circle of the stamp.

100. X Q. On the acting surface of that piece glued upon and screwed to the circular side of the postmarking stamp was engraved the word "paid," was it not?

A. Yes.

101. X Q. For what purpose was that word "paid" used?

A. At the time postage could be paid in money and when paid in money the word "paid" was required to be stamped upon the face of the letter or envelope.

102 X Q. What was the size of the letter used in forming the word "paid?"

A. To the best of my recollection it was about $\frac{3}{16}$ of an inch, and a black-faced letter.

103. X Q. And that attachment was only sufficiently large enough to engrave upon its acting surface the word "paid."

A. Yes.

104. X Q. Upon which side of that circular or postmarking stamp was that word "paid" affixed in the manner and by the means described by you; I now have reference to the air line of printing that would be done by the type forming the month and day of the month?

(Objected to by counsel for defendant, because it assumes that the standard given in the question is so fixed that the witness can answer intelligibly to it.)

1853 A. My recollection is that it was at the top, over the date; the reason of that was to make the stamp more symmetrical in form, and to make the impression look neat.

105. X Q. You could more easily read it when thus arranged; I mean the post-office dating, the name of the post-office, and also the word "paid," could you not?

A. Yes.

106. X Q. Now, how many of that kind of stamp did you see your father have and use in the post-office at Pleasant Grove, in the year 1853?

A. I only recollect of this one.

107. X Q. What became of that one stamp?

A. I don't know.

108. X Q. When did you last see it?

A. I think it was in 1870.

109 X Q. Where was that?

A. In Cumberland, Maryland.

110. X Q. When was its use discontinued with the post-office at Pleasant Grove?

A. When the office was discontinued.

111. X Q. When was that?

A. When my father removed from Pleasant Grove to Cumberland; it was established through the influence of my father.

112. X Q. What were the dimensions of that post-office, inside and out, as to business or anything else, and in whose house was it kept, if in anybody's?

A. The building that it was located in was one story high and about 20 by 30 feet in size, the front part of it being used for the post-office.

113. X Q. What was the back part of it used for?

A. For storing of wood and turning.

114. X Q. How large was the business transacted at that post-office during that year?

A. I cannot say.

115. X Q. What was the salary of your father as postmaster of that office during that year?

(Objected to as immaterial, and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

1854 A. I don't know.

116. X Q. Was that post-office located in a village, on a farm, or in the woods?

(Same objection.)

A. Neither one.

117. X Q. Where was it located?

A. It was located on the National Road, and there was no house nearer than one-fourth of a mile, except the one we lived in; that was not more than ten yards off.

118 X Q. Was there any Baptist or other churches, school-houses, stores, manufactory, or other buildings for industries in that immediate neighborhood?

(Same objection.)

A. There was one church, and one school-house, each about one-quarter of a mile off.

119. X Q. I observe that you are now holding in your hand a letter; where did you get that letter, and when was it handed to you?

A. I got it from Samuel B. Clarke a few minutes ago.

120. X Q. And while you were under cross-examination?

A. Yes.

121. X Q. The Clarke referred to by you is defendant's counsel, and now present, is he not?

A. I believe so.

122. X Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. Not any.

123. X Q. Look at the handwriting on the back of that envelope and state in whose handwriting it is, and to whom it is addressed.

A. It is my father's writing, and addressed to Samuel B. Clarke, esq.

124. X Q. And your father is expected to be a witness in this case, is he not, for the defendant?

A. He is.

Recess for dinner until 2 o'clock p. m.

1855 2 O'CLOCK p. m.

Examination resumed.

Present, same counsel as before.

125. X Q. Have you had a conversation with the defendant's counsel, during the intermission for dinner, concerning this case or anything appertaining to it?

A. Not any except in relation to the attendance of my father as a witness in this case.

126. X Q. State if you know who constructed Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, J. H. Zevery, March 4, 1878?

A. I did.

127. X Q. When and at whose request, if anybody's?

A. No. 139 I have had on hand for some time; I made No. 140 yesterday by request of Mr. Clarke, defendant's counsel; I sold the two to him.

130. X Q. How much did he pay you for them, separately considered?

A. I don't think it is material.

131. X Q. Question repeated.

A. He is to pay me $2.50 for both.

132. X Q. For what purpose did he buy them of you, if you know?

A. He said he wanted them for models to use in this case.

133. X Q. Did he at the same time say anything to you about your being a witness in this case?

A. He did.

134. X Q. What did he tell you he wanted to prove by you?

A. I didn't understand him to say.

135. X Q. State what you did understand him to say about those models, and about your testimony.

A. I understood him to desire to know any information or knowledge I might have in relation to this class of stamps represented by the models.

1856 136. X Q. How did he know you had any information on the subject?

A. I don't know positively how he knew it.

137. X Q. Have you had any conversation within the last three or four months with anybody on this subject as to what you knew, or didn't know about it?

A. I have.

138. X Q. With whom?

A. The postmaster of Wheeling.

139. X Q. Who else?

A. No one else, except the defendant's counsel.

140. X Q. What did the postmaster at Wheeling say to you about it?

(Objected to as immaterial, as asking hearsay, and not proper on cross-examination.)

A. He stated to me he had received a communication from New York in relation to this case, and asked me to be kind enough to state to him what I knew about these stamps, if anything.

141. X Q. Did you see the letter he had reference to, as having received it from New York?

A. I did.

142. X Q. State whether that letter was in the following words and figures, or substantially so, to wit:

OFFICE OF UNITED STATES ATTORNEY
FOR SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF N. Y.,
New York, Dec. 6, 1877.

To the Postmaster at Wheeling, West Va.:

SIR: A suit is pending against Postmaster James, of this city, on a patent granted to Marcus P. Norton in 1863.

In preparing the defense, it has become very important for me to know at what date a hand instrument by which the letter can be post-marked wholly on the envelope and apart from the stamps, and the postage-stamp cancelled at one blow, was first used in your office. I have therefore the honor to request that you kindly furnish me with information on this point, and give me at the same time the names 1857 and addresses of the witnesses by whom your information can be substantiated. An early reply will greatly oblige,

Your obedient servant,

STEWARD L. WOODFORD,
United States Attorney Southern District of N. Y.

(Same objections, and also that the circular letter itself should be produced or its loss accounted for before secondary evidence of its contents can be given.)

A. To the best of my recollection it was.

143. X Q. Was that letter part in print and part in writing, or wholly in print or wholly in writing.

(Same objections as last above.)

A. It was partly in print and partly written, to the best of my recollection.

144. X Q. How many times did the postmaster at Wheeling show you that letter?

A. Once.

145. X Q. What answer did you make to him with reference to it?

A. I told him about what I knew about those things.

146. X Q. What did he tell you that it was desirable to prove by the defendants so as to defeat the patent on which Postmaster James had been sued?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as asking for hearsay.)

A. He said it was desirable to prove, if possible, that this class of stamps, or similar stamps, had been made and used prior to the date of the Norton patent.

147. X Q. On receiving that information from the postmaster at Wheeling, what steps, if any, did you take with reference to that matter?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

1858 A. Not any, except what I have stated above.

148 X Q. Did you write to anybody on the subject then, or since then?

(Same objection.)

A. No.

149. X Q. State, if you know, the kind or the construction of the instrument now used in the post-office in this city for post-marking letters and the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon.

(Same objection, and that the question is not within the scope of the examination.)

A. I don't know of my own knowledge.

150. X Q. On your direct examination you have stated in substance that you father had been engaged in the manufacture of wooden post-office stamps for post-marking letters; is he still in that business, or in any way connected with it?

A. No.

151. X Q. When did he discontinue that kind of business, if you know?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. In June, 1870.

152. X Q. Where was it?

A. At Cumberland, Maryland.

153. X Q. You have stated on your examination-in-chief that you are a stamp and seal manufacturer; how long have you been engaged in that business, and where—what place or places?

A. About eight years; about one year in Cumberland, Maryland, and about seven years in Wheeling, West Virginia; that is, on my own account.

154. X Q. You were your father's successor in that business in Cumberland, were you not?

A. I was.

155. X Q. You bought out his interest in the business, did you not?

1859 A. I did.

156. X Q. On you direct examination you state in substance that you have been a manufacturer of stamps and seals for twenty years; how old were you when you went into that business?

A. About twelve years of age when I commenced working for my father

157. X Q. What was the first business you did when you commenced that employment?

A. The first thing I did was to make horizontal bar cancellers.

158. X Q. In what year was that?

A. About the year 1858.

159. X Q. What did you next do after that in that shop?

A. I made the "paid," "free," and "due" stamps, of which we had a great many to make.

160. X Q. Those were each separate stamps, were they not, and for the purposes designated on their acting faces?

A. They were.

161. X Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit 139, and also to your answer to question 42 of your direct examination, and state whether that exhibit is the device you refer to in that answer.

A. It is.

162. X Q. State the precise time when you first saw an instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit 139, and where it was.

A. In my father's manufactory, and about the year 1860, in Cumberland, Md.

163. X Q. What do you mean when you say about the year 1860?

A. It might have been the last part of the year 1860, or it might have been the first part of the year 1861.

164. X Q. Can you state positively whether it was in the last of 1860 or the fore part of the year 1861? I desire a direct and positive answer to this question one way or the other.

A. It was about the latter part of 1860; I cannot give the exact date.

1860 165. X Q. Why are you unable to give a positive answer as to the time when you first saw, anywhere, an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 139?

A. Because we made but few of them at that time, and not having any books or orders to refer to I am unable to give a more exact date.

166. X Q. How many of such instruments were made during the time referred to in your last two or three answers, and also referred to in your direct answer to question No. 42?

A. I can't give the exact figures, but there were not very many of them.

167. X Q. Give your best recollection of the number?

A. I can't do that.

168. X Q. What became of those instruments?

A. They were sent out to postmasters.

169. X Q. To what postmasters, and where?

A. Not having any records I cannot give the names.

170. X Q. Where are those stamps now?

A. I don't know.

171. X Q. Were they furnished by directions of the Postmaster-General at Washington?

A. No.

172. X Q. Were they furnished by any authority of any one of the Post Office Department at Washington?

A. No.

173. X Q. Who paid for those stamps, if anybody?

A. The persons ordering them, or the persons to whom they were sent.

174. X Q. Did you send any to anybody without being paid for them.

A. The rule of the business was cash in advance; no stamps were sent out without being paid for.

175. X Q. Now give the names, residences, and names of the post-offices to whom those stamps were sent, or any one of them.

A. Not having any records I cannot give the names.

1861 176. X Q. What do you mean by records?

A. Book of orders received and filled.

177. X Q. Where is that book of orders received and filled, referred to in your last answer.

A. To the best of my knowledge they have been destroyed by fire.

178. X Q. By what fire and when was it?

A. I think they were burned about the time I bought my father out; they were burned by a bonfire, and lot of old papers at the same time.

179. X Q. Not being able to state, either on your direct examination or your cross examination, the time when you first saw a contrivance like Defendant's Exhibit 139, can you state the time when you saw such a device a second time, if at all?

(Objected to as misconstruing what the witness has stated.)

A. In the winter of 1860 or 1861.

180. X Q. And that was the same stamp of which you say there were a very few made, was it?

A. It was.

181. X Q. After that first lot, of which you say there were a very few made, were there any more of that kind of instrument made at your father's manufactory?

A. Yes.

182. X Q. In what year and how many?

A. They were made from time to time, whenever ordered?

183. X Q. Down to when?

A. To the time he sold out to me.

184. X Q. State the names of any persons or postmasters ordering any such kind of device as Defendant's Exhibit 139.

A. Not having any records, I cannot answer.

185. X Q. You cannot state the name of a single person ordering such a kind of an instrument as Defendant's Exhibit 139, during that time, can you?

A. I cannot.

1862 186. X Q. State the name of a single person for whom and to whom your father made and sold, or caused to be made and sold, an instrument represented by Defendant's Exhibit 139.

A. Not having any records, I cannot answer.

187. X Q. Your recollections of events and things that took place when you were seven or eight years old are more bright and to be depended upon than events or things that may have taken place in 1861, are they not?

A. I don't think they are.

188. X Q. About the same thing, are they not; if not, which do you remember best?

A. About the same.

189. X Q. Are you at the present time engaged in the business of making and selling instruments like Defendant's Exhibit 139?

A. I make or furnish all kinds of post-office stamps.

190. X Q. Did you understand my last question the time you made answer to it?

A. I think I did.

191. X Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I think not.

192. X Q. Having stated that you understood ques. No. 189 at the time you made answer to it, and that you had no doubt on that subject, the question is here repeated to you and the examiner requested to read it for your further information, and you are respectfully requested to answer it by "Yes" or "No."

(Objected to as immaterial and not as within the scope of direct examination.)

A. My answer is the same as to question 189, with the word "all" underscored.

193. X Q. Do you refuse to answer the last question as therein requested?

(Same objection.)

A. I think I have answered it.

1863 194. X Q. The question is whether, since you have been in business you have made and sold to anybody an instrument like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show you.

(Same objection.)

A. I think my answer to question 189 is an answer to this question, and further, I think these questions are not pertinent to the question or case now under consideration.

195. X Q. Without evasion, and without an attempt on your part to dodge and to refuse a fair and manly answer to a question which you say you understand, question 194 is now and here repeated, and the examiner is requested to read you that question, and you are kindly invited to give it a fair, square, and manly answer, because you know, if you know anything, whether you have made and sold, since you have been in business, an instrument like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show to you for your inspection.

(Same objection.)

A. I think I have answered the question in a fair manner.

196. X Q. Is that the only answer you can and will give to the subject matter of the inquiry?

(Same objection.)

A. That is my answer.

197. X Q. What is your answer?

(Same objection.)

A. My answer is the same as above given.

198. X Q. Did you, at any time since you were seven years old down to the present time, make and sell an instrument like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139 which I now show you for your inspection, other than this exhibit itself?

(Same objection.)

1864 A. I made them for my father.

199. X Q. Have you ever made them for yourself of that kind?

A. My answer is the same as to 189.

200. X Q. Is that the only answer you can and will give to the last question.

(Same objection.)

A. That is my answer.

201. X Q. During the last eight years that you have been in business in this city and in Cumberland, how many instruments have you made like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show you for your inspection?

(Same objection.)

A. I have made many kinds, and cannot tell how many of any one kind I have made.

202. X Q. Do you keep books of account at your establishment here in this city?

(Same objection.)

A. do.

203. X Q. Will those books show the kind of instruments that have been made by you since you have been in business?

(Same objection.)

A. They will.

204. X Q. Will they show how many have been sold of each kind?

(Same objection.)

A. They will.

205. X Q. Will you bring those books before this special examiner, for the sole and only purpose of ascertaining whether you have made and sold any instrument or instruments like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show you for your inspection?

(Same objection.)

1865 A. Believing that these questions are not pertinent to the case now pending, I cannot consent to bring my books before this special examiner.

206. X Q. You refuse, then, to bring your books here for the purpose stated in the last question, do you?

(Same objection.)

A. I do, unless it is required by the special examiner.

207. X Q. What do you think the special examiner has to do with the matter stated in questions 205 and 206?

(Same objection.)

A. What I mean by that is that I will not produce my books for the purposes mentioned unless it is shown clearly to me that I must do it, or can be compelled to do so by law.

208. X Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit 140 and state whether that is the instrument referred to in your answer to question 43 of your direct examination, and also referred to by you in your answer to question 8 of that same examination as the second class.

A. It is.

209. X Q. When and by whom, if you know, was Defendant's Exhibit 140 made?

A. It was made yesterday by myself.

210. X Q. For whom and for what purpose was it made?

A. For Mr. Clarke, defendant's counsel, to be used as a model in this case.

211. X Q. On your direct examination, defendant's counsel asked you the following question, to wit (No. 44): "Fix the earliest date you can at which combined instruments of the second class, described by you, represented by the model (Defendant's Exhibit 140), were made in 1866 your father's manufactory and sold." Under objections to the question, you made the following answer, to wit: "To the best of my recollection they were made in the latter part of 1860." How do you know, and by what means are you enabled to state, that a device like that exhibit was made in the latter part of the year 1860?

A. Well, I associate with that the fact of the beginning of the war in the spring of the year 1861; my recollection is it was some months before that time.

212. X Q. In what month did the war of 1861 commence?

A. In the month of April.

213. X Q. Now, how many months before that time was it that you first saw an instrument like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 140, which I now hand to you for your inspection?

A. I cannot give the exact time.

214. X Q. How many such instruments as that did you ever see?

A. I can't say, exactly; not very many like that one.

215. X Q. About how many, and where was it?

A. It was in Cumberland, Md.; just how many I could not say.

216. X Q. What has become of those you did see at Cumberland, Md.?

A. I don't know.

217. X Q. Do you know where they now are?

A. No.

218. X Q. When did you last see them and where was it?

A. It was in the same place, Cumberland, Md., and within a year or two after I first saw them.

219. X Q. State the name of any person to whom any such device as Defendant's Exhibit 140 was ever sold.

A. Not having any records I cannot give it.

220. X Q. State the place and time where any instrument like, or substantially like, Def't's Exhibit 140 was ever used.

1867 A. Well, not having any records I can't say, excepting what we used ourselves.

221. X Q. What do you mean by the words "used ourselves," in the last answer, as there stated?

A. I mean the stamps used in my father's manufactory as samples.

222. X Q. And your last answer is all you know upon the subject inquired about, is it?

A. It is.

223. X Q. How many classes of stamps do you refer to in your answer to question 8 of your direct examination?

A. Three.

224. X Q. Is Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show you, class 1?

A. It is.

225. X Q. Is Defendant's Exhibit 140, which I now show you, class 2?

A. It is.

226. X Q. Have you, during this examination, produced or offered to produce a model representing what you call class 3 of these post-marking instruments?

A. No.

227. X Q. But you describe' that in your answer to question 8, did you not?

A. I did.

228. X Q. During your direct examination defendant's counsel put to question No. 44, which is in these words, viz: "Fix the earliest date you can at which combined instruments of the third class described by you were made by you in your father's manufactory and sold." And under objections you answered as follows: "About the same time the others were made." Thereupon defendant's counsel put to you this question, to wit: "Do you mean as early as 1860?" And under objections your answer was, "I do." In what part of the year 1860 do you have reference to in those several answers?

A. To the latter part.

1868 229. X Q. How do you know, and by what means are you able to state, that it was during the latter part of the year 1860?

A. The answer to this question is the same as the answer to a former question, viz: By association at the beginning of the late war, in the spring of 1861, with the fact that these stamps were made a few months prior to that time.

230. X Q. Will you swear positively whether it was the latter part of the year 1860, or the fore part of the year 1861?

A. No; I will say it was about the latter part of 1860.

231. X Q. You mean by that, do you not, that you cannot now positively say whether it was in the months of November and December of 1860, or the months of January and February of 1861?

A. That is as near as I can fix the date.

232. X Q. How many of this third class of stamps mere made at your father's manufactory at the time, of which you have no positive recollections, as already stated by you?

A. I can't say how many, but there was very few of them.

233. X Q. What has become of those stamps?

A. It is beyond my recollection.

234. X Q. Have you seen them since that time?

A. I saw them for some time after they were finished, probably, a year or two, when they were sent out or lost; I don't know what became of them; they were only made occasionally after that.

235. X Q. State the name of any person who ever used, and where used, one or more of the stamps of the third class you have described?

A. I cannot say, excepting the one that was used in the Pleasant Grove, Md., post-office; as to the others I don't know to whom they were sent or were used, not having any records to show.

Six o'clock p. m. having arrived, this examination is adjourned to tomorrow, March 6, 1878, at 8 o'clock a. m.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Special Examiner.

1869 MARCH 6, 1878—8 o'clock a. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

236. X Q. Which of the three several classes of stamps described by you, in answer to question 8, and also in answer to question 39 of your direct examination, were first made some time during the last part of the year 1860, or the first part of the year 1861, which you state on both your direct and cross examination you do not remember and cannot swear positively as to the time in which they were made?

A. They were all three made about the same time, i. e., to the best of my recollection, about the latter part of 1860; I cannot say which was made first.

237. X Q. You do not remember which of the three contrivances were first made, or when they were made, do you?

A. My answer to that is the same as to the previous question.

238 X Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I think so.

239. X Q. State what that question required of you to state.

A. I understand it was intended to get me to say which of the three kinds was made first and when.

240. X Q. It did not require of you any such thing; it simply inquired of you to state whether you remembered which of the instruments referred to was first made, and whether from your memory or anything else you could tell the time, I mean the exact time, in which they or either of them were made.

A. I think that question was answered.

241 and 242. X Q. I desire you to answer it again, although you may have answered it fifty times previously in your own opinion—you are not to be both court and witness in this cause.

A. My answer is they were all three made about the same time, i. e., to the best of my recollection, about the latter part of 1860; I 1870 cannot say which was made first; this is as definite answer as I can give to this question.

243. X Q. While answering the last question you read from a paper held in your hand; what paper was that, and what did you read to the examiner as a part of your answer?

A. It is sheet No. 49, and my previous answer to cross-question 236 of this record, and was what I read to the examiner as part answer to last question.

244. X Q. You have now given your most positive as well as your best recollections concerning the matter about which you have been inquired of during your cross-examination this morning, have you?

A. I have.

245. X Q. Then I understand you to say that you will not swear positively as to which of those three instruments was first made, nor as to the time in which they or either of them were first made; do I understand you correctly on those matters? I ask you to state your answer categorically, and without any reference whatever to any other matter or thing than that contained in the question, and when you have thus answered you are requested to say no more until you are farther interrogated by examining counsel.

A. No.

246. X Q. Please state, in view of your last answer, which of those three instruments were first made; I now refer to Defendant's Exhibits 139, 140, and the other contrivance described by you on your direct examination, without the use of any model, and, whatever answer you give, I desire you to be positive in it.

A. To the best of my recollection the only stamp of either kind that I know of having been made and used prior to the latter part of 1860 is the one referred to in my answer to question 48 on direct examination; that stamp was similar to class 3, mentioned in answer to question 8; as to which of the kinds were first made and sold in the latter 1871 part of 1860 or the fore part of 1861, I cannot swear positively.

247. X Q. At the time you answered the last question did you understand it?

A. I believe I did.

248. X Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. Yes.

249. X Q. Which is it?

A. Well, I understood it.

250. X Q. Then if you did understand that question as you swear you did understand it at the time, why did you not answer it as examining counsel requested you to do in the question itself, which the examiner will please read for your further information?

A. Well, my answer was a direct and positive answer to that question 246, as requested.

251. X Q. I again ask you, and for the third or fourth time, to state to this court which of the devices described by you in answer to the several questions put to you on your direct examination, was first made. If you remember, say so, and if you do not remember, say that.

A. The stamp referred to by me, in answer to question 48 I think it is, on direct examination, is the one that I referred to as having been used in the Pleasant Grove, Md., post-office, it being of the third class or kind mentioned in answer to question 8 on direct examination; therefore the third class or kind was first made.

252. X Q. On your direct examination, in answer to questions 1 and 2, you state in substance that for the last past eight years your business has been and now is a manufacturer of "stamps and seals" and "seals and stamps." I desire you at this time to describe with a great deal of care the construction of each and every stamp or seal made by you, as stated by you in answer to those questions, giving the several parts thereof, their relations to each other, and the functions performed or the results attained by the same.

1872 (Objected to as immaterial, and as not coming within the scope of his direct examination.)

A. I don't desire to describe any or all of the "stamps or seals" or "seals and stamps," because I do not consider it pertinent to the question or to this case.

253. X Q. You have now stated your sole and only reasons for refusing to answer the last question, have you?

(Same objection.)

A. I have, with the additional reason that I do not care to make known any matters of my private business.

254. X Q. You have not been inquired of concerning your private business, but you have been inquired to state concerning that which you swear on your direct examination is your business, and has for eight years been your business, which in your own words is as follows: "I have been manufacturing stamps for twenty years, and seals and stamps on my own account for eight years." I again ask you to describe in detail, and with a great deal of care, the construction of those devices or instruments which you say you have been engaged in manufacturing during the past twenty years, and up to the time you were sworn as a witness in this cause.

(Same objection.)

A. I am not disposed to describe any of the articles manufactured by me.

255. X Q. With painful anxiety during your cross-examination I have observed that you have several times undertaken to teach this court what is and what is not "pertinent" to the issues or matters involved in this cause. Do you regard it as a part of the business of a witness to refuse to answer questions as you have several times refused, because you did not regard the question as a proper one or pertinent to any of the matters involved in this cause?

1873 (Same objection.)

A. I will leave that matter with the court.

256. X Q. Have you at the present time any contract or contracts with the Post-Office Department at Washington for the manufacture of seals, stamps of any kind, mail bags, locks and keys, postal railway cars, postage-stamps, letter envelopes, or any other kind of thing that you can remember as being required by that department for use in the postal service of the government?

(Same objection.)

A. No; neither directly or indirectly.

257. X Q. Have you ever had any such contract directly or indirectly?

A. Yes.

258. X Q. When was that?

A. Indirectly from July, 1870, to April 1st, 1871, and directly for four years beginning April 1, 1871.

259. X Q. What did you manufacture for the Post-Office Department at Washington during time stated in your last answer?

(Same objection.)

A. I manufactured what was known as the Class 3 stamps—Class 3 stamps made of boxwood, in circular form, about one inch in diameter, with the name of the office and State engraved on the face, mortised for the insertion of type for the days and months, with a brass thumb screw to hold the type in, and a black-walnut handle; also what was known as miscellaneous rating stamps, such as "Due 3," "Due 6," "Forwarded," "Missent, "Held for postage," "Not called for," and similar words or figures. These stamps were made with a boxwood face and a black-walnut handle.

260. X Q. Please state, if you remember, how the third class

1874 of stamps which you named compare in construction with Def't's Exhibit 139, which I now hand you.

(Same objection.)

A. It is like it in general form and shape, leaving off the brass tubes; it had no canceller attachment and no brass rings.

261. X Q. Since April, 1863, and until now, have you submitted any bids or propositions to the Post Office Department at Washington for the manufacture of the combined post-marking and postage-cancelling instrument since then and now in general and continuous use in the postal service, by order of the Postmaster-General, or anything substantially the same?

(Same objection.)

A. No.

262. X Q. Has your father ever submitted a bid or proposition of the kind inquired about in the last question, and within the time there stated?

(Same objection.)

A. I can't say positively.

263. X Q. Give your best recollections about it.

A. I would not like to trust to memory on that question.

264. X Q. Were you in the city of Washington in the month of April, 1863, in company with your father?

(Same objection.)

A. To the best of my recollection I was not there in April.

265. X Q. Well, were you there at any other time during that year?

A. I think I was there some time in the month of March. My father was along.

266. X Q. Did your father submit a bid that year to the Post-
1875 Office Department to manufacture for the postal service the kind of instrument last above inquired about?

A. I know he submitted a bid for the making of stamps, but whether class or kind last inquired about were included I cannot now say.

267. X Q. Do you know whether since that time and until the present time he has at any time submitted a bid or proposition to that department of the kind above inquired about?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know whether he has or not.

268. X Q. Has your father been a contractor with the Post-Office Department for the manufacture of, and to use in the postal service, the kind of miscellaneous stamps which you have described to-day during your cross-examination?

(Same objection.)

A. He has.

269. X Q. Do you remember when that kind of business commenced, and how long and through what years it continued with that department?

(Same objection.)

A. My first recollection of the making of those stamps was when I first commenced making them, about the year 1858; through each year and up to the spring of 1871, with the exception of an interval of four years; when that was I don't remember.

270. X Q. Since April, 1871, and until the present time, state, if you know, who has manufactured that kind of stamp for the Post-Office Department at Washington.

A. I made them for four years. I do not know who has made them since.

271. X Q. Did you at any time since "the latter part of 1860 or the fore part of 1861," in any manner whatever, communicate to the Post-Office Department, or any officer in that department, in Wash-
1876 ington, any matter or thing concerning the devices referred to in your answer to question 8, two of which devices you say are represented by Def't's Exhibit 139 and 140.

A. No.

272. X Q. To your knowledge, or from any information received by you from your father, did he ever communicate any information in the manner or of the kind or character inquired about in the last question?

(Objected to, asking for hearsay.)

A. I don't know of my own knowledge.

273. X Q. Since April 1st, 1860, how many times have you been to your uncle's, A. N. Zevely's, house in the city of Washington; about how many times, up to 1870?

A. Probably 3 or 4 times, certainly not more than 5 times, to the best of my recollection. I also saw him at my father's house one time.

274. X Q. During those times, did you ever have any conversation with your uncle, A. N. Zevely, concerning the matters, or any of them, about which you have testified during this examination?

A. No.

NOTE BY EXAMINER.—Any questions put to this witness while under cross-examination with reference to a letter handed the witness by defendant's counsel and from E. S. Zevely to the counsel are hereby eliminated from this record by complainant's counsel, and no reference whatever shall be made to them, or either of them, during the final hearing of this cause, those questions having been put to witnesses by complainant's counsel under what has since appeared to be a misapprehension by counsel of the purpose of the handing of that letter to the witness while under cross-examination, the witness not having read the letter.

1877 Redirect by Mr. CLARKE:

275. Re D. Q. Have you, either on your direct or cross-examination, meant to convey the impression that the combined instruments which you have described were not made and sold in your father's shop prior to 1860, or has your intention been simply to convey the idea that you cannot recollect with certainty of their having been made before the latter part of 1860?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the following grounds: 1st, as leading; 2d, as asking the witness to sum up his own testimony before this court; 3d, as expressing a want of ability and integrity of this court to understand and pass its judgment upon the testimony of this witness already rendered; and, 4th, the witness having been already thoroughly examined, both by the direct and cross-examination, upon the various subject matters stated in the question, that testimony must stand as recorded for the inspection and judgment of this court, unless the witness shall desire to make mere verbal corrections—the question is therefore inadmissible and improper.)

A. My intention was to convey the idea that I could not recollect of their having been made and sold prior to that time.

Recross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

276. Re X Q. Is there anything you have testified to during your cross examination that you now and here desire to change, modify, or in anywise alter?

A. There may be after I have heard it reread.

277. Re X Q. Have you any doubt about having testified to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth on and during your entire cross-examination in this case?

1878 A. Not any, according to the best of my knowledge and belief.

278. Re X Q. Shall I understand you to state by your last answer that you cannot now tell whether you testified to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth upon and during your entire cross-examination in this cause?

A. No.

EXAMINER'S NOTE.—The deposition having been read to the witness, he states he desires to make no correction.

JOHN H. ZEVELY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 6th day of March, 1878.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Special Examiner.

Recess till 2 o'clock.
Met pursuant to recess.
Present, same counsel as before.

EDMUND S. ZEVELY, a witness on behalf of defendant, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Edmund S. Zevely; I am in my fifty-ninth year; reside at Cairo, West Virginia, and am a printer and publisher. For about twenty years I was in the stamp business, from 1850 onward.

2. Q. What sort of stamps, and for what purpose?

A. My principal business was making post-office stamps. I made all kinds of stamps, however, for private use.

1880 3. Q. Did you make instruments for the cancellation of postage stamps?

A. Yes, sir; various kinds.

4. Q. Describe some of the earliest sorts of cancelling stamp.

A. They were usually made at first with parallel cross-bars, cross the surface or acting face, then with concentric circles afterwards. Then we attached a tube on a handle, and put cork in it or any other substance. These were separate cancellers.

5. Q. Make a drawing of the canceller having the tube in which cork was put.

EXAMINER'S NOTE.—Witness makes drawing and presents it to the examiner, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 141; E. S. Zeverly, March 6, 1878; H. F., sp'l examiner.

6. Q. In this drawing you have made certain letters and numbers. State what they each designate.

(Objected to for two reasons: 1st, defendant's counsel told the witness to put letter C on to represent cork; 2d, defendant's counsel told witness to make a heavy line to represent cork. The exhibit having been manufactured under such instructions, is an incompetent and an improper paper to submit to the court for any purpose.)

A. Fig. 1 exhibits the whole stamp; fig. 2 represents the end view of it with cross-bars; and fig. 3 the concentric circles on the end; from A to A is the wooden handle; B is the brass tube driven over that handle; C is the cork in the brass tube; the word "cork" is also written; fig. 1 represents the shape of a canceller either with or without the brass tube.

(Defendant's counsel offers drawing in evidence, marked as above indicated.)

1881 (Complainant's counsel objects to it as incompetent, improper, and inadmissible, and objects to any and all questions concerning it for the same reasons.)

7. Q. What was the object of the brass tube?

A. To make it more durable, and to afford a receptacle for cork, if so used.

8. Q. Mention some other substance that was used beside cork, that was used with the brass tube.

(Same objections, and as leading, and also as assuming.)

A. Wood and solid gum were sometimes used.

9. Q. India rubber, you mean?

(Objected to for same reasons as last above, and on ground of "cramming" witness with an answer.)

A. Yes; I mean' India rubber when I said gum.

10. Q. State when a canceller of the shape exhibited in Defendant's Exhibit 141, having a brass tube containing wood for a canceller, was first made by you.

(Objected to as leading, improper, and inadmissible.)

A. As soon as the postage stamps were adopted by the department we commenced to make such things.

11. Q. Where were you at the time said canceller was made?

A. At Pleasant Grove, Allegheny County, Maryland, five miles from Cumberland.

12. Q. Did you have any connection with the post-office at that place; if so, what?

A. I was postmaster, and had a contract with the department for making stamps.

13. Q. When did you cease to be postmaster?

A. I think it was in 1853.

14. Q. What was done with the canceller that was made while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove?

1882 A. I don't exactly understand that question. If it is meant that particular canceller I used as postmaster, it was afterwards turned over with other rubbish when I resigned, to my son. I presume my son has it yet; but a similar stamp was exhibited in the department by me.

15. Q. Did you use a canceller like that represented by Exhibit 141 while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove?

(Objected to for the same reason as last above stated, and for the further reason the witness has made full answer above. It is therefore improper to continue to worry this witness into answers he would not give if proper questions were put to him.)

A. I did.

16. Q. Having cork in a brass tube?

(Same objections as last above.)

A. I did.

17. Q. Did you make any others of the sort while you were postmaster there?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

18. Q. What did you do with them?

A. Some were sold, some exhibited in the department, and others perhaps left in this mass of rubbish I spoke of before as turned over to my son.

19. Q. Did you make, while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove, postmarking stamps—I mean stamps for printing dates and the names of post-offices on envelopes?

(Objected to as not only leading, but as a monstrous proposition for a man who calls himself a lawyer to submit to a witness on his examination-in-chief.)

A. Yes; I made many of them, hundreds of thousands of them.

1883 (Answer objected to on the ground that it is not the evidence of the witness on the stand, as by reference to the question will fully appear.)

20. Q. Describe one of them, referring for illustration, if you please, to the models marked Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, J. H. Zevely, March 4, 1878, H. F., spl. examiner, now lying on the table.

(Objected to as being improper to put this question to this witness after examining counsel has himself not only described what he wants to show by a previous question, but improperly produced and put upon the table before the witness two models proven by the last witness to have been constructed recently, and which the witness never saw until now.)

A. I was the first to originate this sort and one or two other combination stamps.

Defendant's counsel interrupts witness, and states that his question did not refer to the models in order that the witness might testify about combination stamps, but in order that, by referring to the different parts of one of these models, he might describe intelligently to the court, who will inspect the model, the sort of postmarking stamps of which the witness has testified that he made many while he was postmaster at Pleasant Grove.

(Complainant's counsel objects to this interruption of a witness when giving an answer to the question, as being highly improper in conducting the examination of the witness.

Complainant's counsel suggests the propriety of excusing the further attendance of this witness from the stand and that de-1884 fendant's counsel be examined in his stead and place if this sort of illegal and improper mode of conducting the examination of a witness-in-chief is to continue.)

A. I meant I made many like this Exhibit 139, excepting the canceller was not on it, and mostly made of wood without the brass.

21. Q. Did you ever make these postmarking stamps in combination with any other sort of stamp while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel as being improper and leading.)

A. I did.

22. Q. With what other sort?

A. With cancellers attached, attachable or detachable at pleasure, with the words "free," "paid," and all that sort of thing.

23. Q. Describe one of these combinations in detail.

(Objected to as improper, for the following reasons: First, defendant's counsel, by previous questions, has described to the witness what he desires him to testify about on this subject; and, second, defendant's counsel has improperly and with impropriety produced two new models of a recent construction, and spread them out on the table before the witness, where they now are.)

A. Well, one of these stamps was made similar to this Exhibit 139, without the canceller attached, but with a solid fixture of wood glued and screwed to one side of it, having on the face of it, in a line with the face of the first stamp or principal stamp, the word "paid," or "free," or anything of the kind that might be wanted to mark on the letter at one blow with the post-marker.

24. Q. Was that combination used in your post-office?

1885 (Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, as no matter of that kind is involved in this suit.)

A. It was.

25. Q. Did you ever manufacture combined post-markers and cancellers?

A. I did.

26. Q. Describe the sort or sorts so manufactured.

A. Must I describe them fully, or can I refer to these models?

(Any further answer to the above question is objected to by complainant's counsel, for the reason that witness has already made his answer.)

Defendant's counsel says to the witness to go ahead in any way you please.

A. Well, then, the shortest way to say is I made them similar to these, Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140.

27. Q. When?

A. Commencing in the year 1850 onwards, and other years thereafter.

28. Q. Mention the earliest year you can in which you made a combined post-marker and canceller, constructed precisely like either Defendant's Exhibit 139 or Defendant's Exhibit 140.

(Objected to as leading, and as a monstrous proposition to submit to this witness in view of the questions and answers spread on the record already.)

A. I think it was not later than 1859.

29. Q. How many did you make, and what did you do with them?

A. I can't answer that exactly. What were made were sold.

30. Q. Did you make any in 1860?

A. Yes.

31. Q. Did you make any in 1861?

1886 A. Yes, and every year after that.

32. Q. Do you know John H. Zevely, the witness who preceded you in this case?

A. I do.

33-4-5-36-7-8-9-40-1-2 and 43. Q. Any relative of yours?

A. He is.

44. Q. What?

A. A son.

Cross-examination by Mr NORTON:

45. X Q. Where do you now reside, Mr. Zevely?

A. At Cairo, Ritchie County, West Virginia.

46. X Q. How far distant is that?

A. It depends on how you travel, whether by air line, cars or balloon; it is 175 miles by cars the way I came and have to travel.

47. X Q. How did you first come to become a witness in this cause?

A. I was first written to by Steward L. Woodford, of New York, and I was then telegraphed to by Mr. Clarke, now present.

48. X Q. Have you Mr. Woodford's letter with you?

A. I have.

49. X Q. Will you allow me to examine it?

A. I don't know that I have any objections.

(Witness produces paper.)

50. X Q. This letter which you have handed me contains an inclosure in print; will you here produce both the letter and that enclosure as a part of your cross-examination in this case?

A. I have nothing to do with it; I simply gave it to you because you asked me for it; I have no interest in it.

51. X Q. In view of your last answer are you willing that I should offer in evidence at this time and place both the letter and the two sheets of paper with the print thereon, and inclosed in the said letter.

1887 A. I don't think I am authorized without Mr. Woodford's consent; Mr. Clarke, for him, consents, and therefore it is offered.

Complainant's counsel requests the examiner to mark the letter referred to, dated New York, February 2, 1878, as Complainant's Exhibit CC, E. S. Zevely, March 6, 1878, and being so marked the same is now offered in evidence and for the purposes of evidence in this cause. The same is so received and marked.

Complainant's counsel also offers in evidence, and for the purposes of evidence, two sheets of printed paper inclosed in the above described letter, and requests the examiner to mark each sheet Complainant's Exhibit DD, E. S. Zevely, March 6, 1878. The same is so received and marked. The examiner is requested to note that the letter above described contains three sheets.

52. X Q. Have you any other letter or letters purporting to be from Stewart L. Woodford, of New York, about this matter?

A. One more.

53. X Q. Will you allow me to examine it?

A. I will.

Letter handed to complainant's counsel by the witness.

54. X Q. Will you allow me to put this letter in evidence, as I have the one above described?

A. With Mr. Clarke's consent I will.

Letter offered in evidence, and for the purposes of evidence, by complainant's counsel, and examiner requested to mark the same Complainant's Exhibit EE, E. S. Zevely, March 6, 1878; H. F., Sp'l Ex., and the same is so received and marked.

1888 55. X Q. In what year did you first commence to manufacture stamps, and where was it? I now refer to what you call "stamp business" in your answer to question No. 1 of your direct examination.

A. In 1850, at Pleasant Grove.

56. X Q. How many stamps did you make at Pleasant Grove in 1850, and what were they used for, if for anything?

A. I made a good many hundred; they were sold to the department and to private parties.

57. X Q. Do you mean, in your last answer, the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. I do.

58. X Q. What kind of stamps did you make for the Post Office Department in 1850?

A. They were what we call the office stamp, with dates.

59. X Q. During the year of 1857, did you make any stamps for the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. I did.

60. X Q. What kind of stamps were those, and what were they for?

A. They were office stamps and rating stamps used in post-offices.

61. X Q. What is a rating stamp?

A. A stamp to mark the rate or price of postage on the letter.

62. X Q. You mean the unpaid postage?

A. Yes.

63. X Q. What is an office stamp?

A. That's a stamp to mark the name of the office and date.

64. X Q. The name of the post-office where the letter was mailed, and the date showing the time at which it was mailed; is that it?

A. It is.

65. X Q. Did you in 1852 manufacture stamps for the Post Office Department?

A. I did.

66. X Q. What were they, and what were they for?

1889 A. The same kind above described, and for the same purpose.

67. X Q. Did you during the year 1853 make stamps for the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. I did.

68. X Q. What were they, and what were they for?

A. The same answer as the last.

69. X Q. Did you during the year 1854 manufacture stamps for the Post-Office Department at Washington, and if you did, what were they, and what were they for?

A. I did, and they were the same kind and for the same purposes as above mentioned.

70. X Q. Did you during the years 1855, 1856, 1857 and 1858 manufacture stamps for the Post-Office Department at Washington? and if you did, state what they were, and what they were for.

A. I did, and they were the same kind and for the same purposes as before stated.

71. X Q. Did you during the years 1859, 1860, 1861 and 1862 manufacture stamps for the Post Office Department at Washington? and if you did, what were they, and what were they for.

A. I did not; I failed to get the contract for those four years.

72. X Q. What business were you engaged in during those four years?

A. I don't care about answering the question.

73. X Q. Why do you refuse to answer the last questions?

A. Because it would occupy too much space, and it is irrelevant to the question. I would like to make one addition. I will say I made many stamps on private orders during those four years; I wasn't out of the business.

74. X Q. For whom did you make stamps during those four years on private orders?

A. I made them for my own benefit for hundreds of people in all parts of the United States, as I had been doing for years before. They were same kind of stamps as I had been making.

1890 75. X Q. Returning to the years when you say you made stamps for the Post-Office Department at Washington, did you have a contract in writing with that department under which you made and furnished to that department the stamps inquired about within each of those years?

A. Yes; I had regular written contracts in duplicate for four years at a time, except for the year 1850, I had only a trial order. Then after that I had the regular contracts in writing.

76 & 77. X Q. How many such written contracts did you have with the Post-Office Department?

A. I had four such contracts in all, with an interregnum of four years from April, 1859, to April, 1863.

78. X Q. Have you any of those contracts in your possession, or any duplicates of them?

A. I have not, for the reason that I sold out every thing at Cumberland, Md., and gave up my business to my son John. I don't know what became of the papers; they were all destroyed so far as I know.

79. X Q. Those contracts with the Post Office Department would specify the kind and quality of the stamp you were to make under them, would they not?

A. They would and did show.

80. X Q. You obtained these contracts in the usual way of bidding, or rather I may say by submitting a proposition in writing accompanied by a sample model of the kind of stamp you were to make, did you not?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

81. X Q. Of what material were such stamps generally made by you under those contracts?

A. Made of wood, a certain class being brass bound, and others of electrotype acting faces. The wooden ones had metal type for the dates, and the dates were held in by thumb-screw.

82. X Q. If you know will you state the reason why you did not obtain the contract from the Post-Office Department covering the time between April, 1859, and April, 1863?

1891 A. I was underbid—it was let out to the lowest bidder.

83. X Q. During the year commencing April 1st, 1863, and ending April 1st, 1867, did you have a contract with the Post-Office Department to furnish for it stamps; and if you did, what were they, and what were they used for?

A. I had such a contract—making all kinds of stamps used in post-offices.

84. X Q. Well, state whether that contract described in detail the kinds of stamps you were to make under it.

A. It did.

85. X Q. Under that contract, did you make for the department the combined postmarking and cancelling instrument then and now in use in the postal service, by direction of the Postmaster-General?

A. I think I did, for a certain class of offices; I made a stamp similar to defendant's "Exhibit 139," under that contract, I think, and I certainly did under the next contract.

86. X Q. How many combined stamps did you make for the Post-Office Department under that contract?

A. It is impossible to say; I made a good many of them—hundreds, and maybe thousands.

87. X Q. At the time of letting of that contract, and in your bidding or proposition to furnish that department with such combined stamp, did you furnish a sample model of the kind you were to make under that contract?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

88. X Q. How would that sample model campare with Defendant's Exhibit 139, now before you?

A. It would be almost precisely a copy of it exactly.

89. X Q. Previous to this contract under consideration, did you make for the Post-Office Department, for use in the postal service, postmarking and postage cancelling stamp such as your last answer to and the last question describes?

1892 A. I am not certain about that; I think I did; I know they ordered some few, but they did not order them largely till the last.

90. X Q. In your last answer you have said "they ordered them"; what do you mean by that, and who do you mean?

A. The post-office official gentlemen having charge of that particular business at Washington, the stamp agents, one of the officers, First Assistant Postmaster-General, under whom the stamp agent acts, and the Postmaster-General; I mean these gentlemen when I use the word "they."

91. X Q. Under what contract with the department were those combined stamps made, to which you have reference in your last two or three answers; state the month and year when it commenced, and the month and year when it terminated.

A. I think I have already answered that question in effect; they were made under those last several contracts; they all commenced in April and ended in April in the years already mentioned.

92. X Q. Is that the best answer you can give to that question?

A. I think it expresses all that is necessary; I could make it more extended, giving the years myself, but I thought the years had been already mentioned; those two contracts commenced in the years 1863 and 1867.

93. X Q. Those orders you received from the officers named by you in the Post-Office Department, were they for you to make those combined postmarking and cancelling devices under your contract ending in April, 1863?

A. I had no contract for those four years ending April, 1863.

94. X Q. Were those orders given you by that department, under your contract ending April, 1859, to make for the postal service such combined instrument?

A. If I understand the question, I think they were not; I don't 1893 think I made them at that time; that was before they were introduced; I had made and exhibited those instruments in that department before that time.

95. X Q. Before what time?

A. Before April, 1859, I exhibited that device in that department.

96. X Q. Now, that you may not be misunderstood, I ask you to state what kind of a combined stamp you exhibited in the Post-Office Department previous to April, 1859.

A. I had exhibited the two or three kinds already mentioned.

97. X Q. Describe one of those; state how they were combined, for what purpose they were combined, and for what purpose they were intended to be used.

A. One of them was made by screwing on a piece of wood to the side of an ordinary office stamp, so as to postmark the letter and cancel the stamp at the same motion.

98. X Q. In what year did you exhibit that in the Post-Office Department at Washington?

(EXAMINER'S NOTE.—Before answering question, witness requests to hear the previous question read.)

A. I think it was in the previous fall, just before that, when the advertisement wanting these things had just come out.

99. X Q. What advertisement have you reference to in the last answer?

A. The one inviting proposals for stamps.

100. X Q. Inviting proposals for what kind of stamps?

(Objected to as asking for the contents of a document of a secondary evidence.)

A. Proposals for post-office marking and rating stamps.

1894 101. X Q. Did that advertisement call for combined instruments of the kind you have been testifying about to-night?

(Same objection.)

A. I am not sure whether it did or not; I don't remember.

102. X Q. You are sure and you swear, do you not, that previous to April, 1859, you exhibited in the Post-Office Department a postmarking and postage-stamp cancelling instrument like or substantially like Defendant's Exhibit 139 which I now hand to you?

A. I didn't say that; I say this in addition to that, that the exhibiting a stamp in the Post-Office Department does not mean officially exhibiting it.

103. X Q. Did you in a clandestine manner, or in any other manner whatever, exhibit or show to any person or persons in the Post-Office Department at Washington, prior to April, 1859, a postmarking and postage-stamp cancelling instrument like, or substantially like, Defendant's Exhibit 139, which I now show you?

(Objected to as asking for the opinion of the witness on the subjects of equivalents.)

A. I say there was nothing said about that brass bound stamp at that early day; I spoke of the wooden stamp.

104. X Q. Did you in a clandestine manner, or in any manner whatever, exhibit or show to any person or persons in the Post-Office Department at Washington, prior to April, 1859, a postmarking and a postage-stamp cancelling instrument like or substantially like Defendant's Exhibit 140, which I now show you?

(Same objection.)

A. I had frequent talks with my brother, who was then in the department, and exhibited to him both models and drawings of various devices for this purpose.

1895 105. X Q. When was that?

A. Before 1859.

106. X Q. What did your brother say to you about it?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as asking for hearsay.)

A. He said a good many things; I don't remember what all.

107. X Q. What was the official capacity or relations of your brother in that department, at that time?

A. He was Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and interested in this matter because he had charge of the postage-stamp business, and was anxious to see some good device adopted for cancelling postage-stamps, some labor-saving machine, and therefore he was justifiable in interesting himself about marking-stamps, although those kind of stamps were not actually under his control.

108. X Q. Now, in what year was that?

A. In the same year you have already mentioned and have been talking about all the time.

109. X Q. Name the year referred to in your last answer.

A. It was the fall of 1858, after that advertisement appeared inviting proposals for marking and rating stamps.

110. X Q. Well, what steps, if any, did you take with reference to the matter after that clandestine interview with your brother of which you have just spoken?

A. I never had any clandestine interview with my brother, and took no steps in the matter, because I failed to get the contract that term.

111. X Q. To whom else besides your brother did you make the exhibition, showing description or disclosures, which you say you made to him at the time spoken of?

A. I don't remember to whom else I made it.

1896 112. X Q. Did you ever at any time show to any person in the Post-Office Department at Washington an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 139 which I now show you?

A. Yes, sir; I made hundreds of them, and exhibited these like that.

113. X Q. When and to whom did you exhibit hundreds of them like Defendant's Exhibit 139, as stated by you in your last answer, in the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. During those last years of my contract, as rapidly as they were ordered, I sent them to the blank and stamp agent in the Post-Office Department.

114. X Q. During what years was that?

A. From 1863 to 1870.

115. X Q. Did you ever have any there before 1863?

A. I have already said that I had wooden ones there before 1863.

116. X Q. Did you ever exhibit to any person or persons in the Post-Office Department an instrument like Defendant's Exhibit 140, which I now show you?

A. I did.

117. X Q. When was that?

A. It has already been answered; it was in the time between the issuing of the proposals by the department for marking and rating stamps and prior to the letting in the spring of 1859.

118. X Q. To whom did you show it?

A. I have already said to my brother, A. N. Zevely.

119. X Q. To whom else beside A. N. Zevely, your brother?

A. I have already said I don't remember to whom else I showed it.

120. X Q. Did you show it to any one else at that time, or at any other time, in that department?

A. I am pretty sure I did; either I or my brother did.

121. X Q. Name those persons or any one of them?

1897 A. I have already said I could not remember.

122. X Q. How many years ago was it that you showed it to your brother in that department, as you have stated you did show it to him?

A. It makes about nineteen years ago.

123. X Q. You are sure you are not mistaken about this matter, are you?

A. To the best of my recollection I am stating what I think to be the truth; it is a long time ago, you know.

124. X Q. Have you any doubt on the subject?

A. None at all.

By consent the further taking of this testimony is adjourned to tomorrow morning, March 7, 1878.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Special Examiner.

MARCH 7, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present as before.

125. X Q. From April 1st, 1867, to April 1st, 1871, did you have any contract with the Post-Office Department for the manufacture of marking stamps for use in the postal service?

A. I did.

126. X Q. By the terms and specifications of that contract, what kind of marking stamps were you to make for them in the postal service in the United States?

(Objected to as asking for secondary evidence.)

A. Same kind of stamps that were made under the other contracts, I think, were mentioned.

127. X Q What were those?

1898 A. Post-office stamps with dates, and separate cancelling stamps; those two kinds were mostly made, I believe.

128. X Q. Those were the kinds mostly made under all those contracts, were they?

A. I believe these mostly; there were other kinds, though.

129. X Q. Name and describe the other kinds referred to in the last answer.

A. "Missent," "Forwarded," "Dec. 3," "Due 6," "Advertised;" a great many things of that sort; I can't remember all of them.

130. X Q. You have now named so far as you can, as well as described according to your best recollections, the various kinds of stamps you were to make under those contracts for use in the postal service by the Post-Office Department, have you not?

(Objected, as asking for secondary evidence of the contents of those contracts.)

A. I think I have.

131. X Q. Have you had any contract or contracts with the Post-Office Department for the manufacture of any kinds of stamps for use in the postal service of the United States since April 1st, 1871?

(Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant, and improper on this cross-examination.)

A. I have not.

132. X Q. Since April 1st, 1870, have you submitted any bids, or any proposals of any kind, to the Post-Office Department for a contract to make any kind of stamps for use in the postal service?

(Objected to as last above.)

A. I have not.

133. X Q. Do you know whether your son, who has been a witness in this case, during the time inquired about in the last question, or during any other time since then, has submitted any bid or pro-
1899 posal for a contract of the kind specified in the last question?

(Same objection.)

A. I do not know that he has, but think he has. I don't know anything about his business.

134. X Q. After July 1, 1862, and before May 1, 1863, did you submit a bid or proposals to the Post-Office Department for a contract to manufacture for use in the postal service any kind of stamp?

(Same objection.)

A. Not that I know, as that was the time in which I had no contract; none that I remember.

135. X Q. Will you swear that during the time specified in the last question that you did not submit bids or proposals for a contract to manufacture each and every kind of stamp then in use in the postal service?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't remember that I did. There might have been some special bids, or some special kind of stamp wanted, and I don't remember anything about it.

136. X Q. Between April, 1863, and April, 1867, did you have a contract with the department for the manufacture of any kind of stamps for use in the postal service?

(Same objection.)

A. I had.

137. X Q. In what way did you obtain that contract?

A. In the usual way—by putting in proposals in compliance with the advertisement of the department inviting proposals.

138. X Q. At what time previous to the making of that con-
1900 tract would you be required, and when did you submit your proposals upon which you say that contract was obtained in the usual way?

(Same objection.)

A. The proposals were to be received up to a certain day. I put in my bid according to the tenor of the advertisement, which went through the usual form; that's all.

139. X Q. Would that be between the first of July, 1862, and the first of April, 1863?

(Same objection.)

A. It was either in the fall of 1862 or the spring of 1863; I don't remember.

140. X Q. In that bid or proposal of yours did you include a post-marking and postage-stamp cancelling instrument, so constructed as to give the post-mark on the envelope, and at the same time cancel the postage stamp in ink by one operation of the instrument?

(Objected as above, and on the ground of asking for hearsay.)

A. I think I did.

141. X Q. At that time did you submit a model for such instrument as a sample of the kind that you desired and offered to make for the department?

(Objected to as immaterial and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I expect I did.

142. X Q. Did you at any time previous to that time submit a bid or proposal, in writing or otherwise, to the Post-Office Department for a contract to make an instrument or a device for post-marking letters on the envelope, and at the same time cancel the postage stamp thereon at one operation of the instrument?

(Same objection.)

A. As far as I remember, I think I did.

1901 143. X Q. In what year was it?

A. In 1859.

144. X Q. In what year did the Post-Office Department adopt and put into use in the postal servicce an instrument or device for post-marking letters and for cancelling the postage stamps thereon in ink at one blow or operation of the instrument?

(Same objections.)

A. In 1863.

145. X Q. Commencing in April of that year, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

146. X Q. Was your brother A. N. Zevely at that time Third Assistant Postmaster General?

A. I think he was.

147. X Q. Do you know whether he was?

A. I am sure of it.

148. X Q. Did you have the contract for the Post-Office Department for making that instrument which you say was first adopted by the Post-Office Department and put into use in the postal service the month of April, 1863, for post-marking letters on envelope, and for cancelling the postage stamp thereon by one blow or operation of the instrument?

A. I had, for making a certain kind of stamp for that purpose for a certain class of offices.

149. X Q. Will you swear you had a contract with the Post-Office Department to manufacture for use in the postal service of a combined post-marking and cancelling stamp, so arranged as to post-mark the letters with the name of the post-office and the date, and at the same time cancel the postage stamp in ink by one blow or operation of the instrument; and before you answer this question I ask you whether you understand it or not?

A. I think I understand it, and they certainly ordered many such of me.

150. X Q. Who ordered such instruments of you?

A. The proper officers of the Post Office Department.

151. X Q. Well, who would they be?

1902 A. The orders were always signed by First Assistant Postmaster-General, and were made out by the blank and stamp agent.

152. X Q. Were those orders made in pursuance of any contract you then had with the department on that subject?

A. They must have been, or they would not have been ordered.

153. X Q. State the year or years in which those orders were made by the department and delivered to you.

A. From the year 1863 onward through each year to April, 1871, when my contracts with the department ceased.

154. X Q. All the contracts you had on that subject were in writing and signed in duplicate, were they not?

A. Yes, sir; as far as I remember.

155. X Q. What did you do with the combined post-marking and postage cancelling instruments which you say you made under contracts with the Post-Office Department between April 1, 1863, and April 1, 1871?

A. I delivered them to the stamp agent of the Post-Office Department, according to orders.

156. X Q. What was the name of that agent?

A. It changed several times; I think it was "Deacon" Grey most of the time; it changed several times, but he was there most of the time.

157. X Q. Of what material were those instruments made?

A. Wood, brass, type metal, and cork combined in the one stamp.

158. X Q. In what class of post-offices were they to be used?

A. In the second class, I think; they put them where they pleased; I had no control over what they did with them.

159. X Q. Between April 1, 1863, and April 1, 1871, about how many of that kind of instrument did you make for and deliver to the 1903 Post Office Department for use in the postal service of the government?

A. I have no means of knowing; can't remember; a great many, though.

160. X Q. About how many, as near as you can remember?

A. Hundreds, and I think thousands, during those eight years.

161. X. Q. I think I understood you to state during yesterday's examination that you had made yourself generally useful in advertising and showing throughout the Post-Office Department of the government an instrument or device of the kind about which you have given testimony this morning. I mean the combined post marking and postage-stamp cancelling device, by which the post-mark and the cancelling were done by one blow or operation of the device, and that that was done by you during the years of 1858 and 1859. State the name of every person or persons to whom you exhibited or showed such a contrivance.

A. You must have misunderstood me, as I stated no such thing.

162. X Q. Do you personally know, or have you other information, of a letter signed A. N. Zevely, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, addressed to Marcus P. Norton, attorney at law, Troy, N. Y., dated Post-Office Department, Finance Office, October 7, 1862, and in the following words and figures, to wit:

SIR: Your letter of the 2d instant to the Postmaster-General has been referred to me.

Your post-marking and cancelling stamp as originally presented seems to be approved at New York and other large offices where it has been tested.

The improvement which you now speak of evidently makes the instrument still more effective, and, indeed, fully attains the end 1904 desired by this department, namely, the destruction of the postage stamp.

The only doubt about it arises from the danger of cutting through the envelope and damaging letters and enclosures.

If you expect soon to visit Washington on other business, please call at this department.

The Postmaster-General is now absent, but I think he will view your invention favorably; and, while he might not be able to make you any direct allowance, he might possibly arrange with you to manufacture stamps for the larger post-offices.

Very respectfully,

(Objected to on the grounds: 1st, question assumes such a letter was written; 2d, that if written it is utterly irrelevant and immaterial to this suit, being impossible to bind either the defendant or this witness by the declarations of A. N. Zevely; 3d, because the supposed letter has nothing to do with the subject matter of this suit, since it plainly refers to a cutting device for cancellation; 4th, because the existence and genuineness of the letter should first be proved before any question can be properly based on it; 5th, because the letter or those parts of it concerning which counsel desires information should first be submitted to the witness before any question based on it can be asked; 6th, because the question does not directly or indirectly touch upon any matter raised by the direct examination nor by the cross-examination, being plainly consistent with all that the witness has testified to.)

A. I have no personal or other knowledge of such a letter.

163. X Q. Have you any personal knowledge or other informa-
1905 tion of a letter signed Abram Wakeman, postmaster, and dated post-office, New York, Jan. 3, 1863, and addressed to A. N. Zevely, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C., and in the following words, to wit:

SIR: Some time since you requested that I should test the utility of Norton's double postmarking and cancelling stamping iron, and report my opinion thereon. It was in use in this office when I first entered upon my duties. Since then the cancelling part has been changed in various forms. We have tried the cutter thoroughly. This is the most complete method of cancellation, but it is liable, even if used with the greatest care, to injure the contents of the envelope, especially if the enclosures are cards, photographs and the like. We have also used cork by inserting it in the cylinder of the canceller.

This has proved successful, and cancellation is now peformed in this way. I am confident no office in the country performs cancellation more thoroughly. The design of Mr. Norton is indispensable to us. Indeed, unless I should nearly double the stamping force, we could not dispense with its use. I am satisfied the interests of the department would be subserved by securing its general use.

We are now testing a stamp and canceller, on Norton's plan, made of boxwood. It promises well, and can be made at a very trifling expense. I am fearful, however, its liability to yield to the wear to which it will be subject may prevent its general adoption. Time will determine this.

Very respectfully, your obedient sevant.

(Same objection as to last question, and also the objection that counsel has no right to ask for anything but the personal knowledge of the witness.)

A. I have no knowledge of any kind whatever, personal or otherwise, of the letter.

1906 164. X Q. In answer to question 4 of your direct examination you use the following words: "With parallel cross-bars"; what did you mean by that?

A. In the face of the stamp are cut grooves so as to leave the cross-bar standing across the face of the stamp. They were across the stamp and not across each other.

165. X Q. In the same answer you use the following words, "Then we attached a tube on a handle and put cork in it or any other substance." That's a correct description of another kind of cancelling stamp, is it not?

A. It is intended so to be.

166. X Q. Do you know whether it is or not?

A. As well as I understand the English language, I say it is a correct description.

167. X Q. On your direct examination the following question was put to you: "What was the object of the brass tube," to which you made the following answer: "To make it more durable, and to afford a receptacle for cork, if so used." When did you first make a device of that description?

A. It was probably very soon after the cancelling stamps of any kind were first ordered.

168. X Q. Ordered by whom?

A. By the Post-Office Department.

169. X Q. When was that?

A. Just as soon as the Post-Office Department adopted cancelling stamp of any kind; just what year that was I don't remember.

170. X Q. Did you ever make, for the Post-Office Department, any postage-stamp cancelling device consisting of a wooden handle, inserted in one end of a brass tube, while in the opposite end of the same tube there was inserted a piece of cork by which to cancel postage stamps?

A. I did make a few such.

171. X Q. In what year did you make "a few such?"

A. It is very difficult to state the precise year, but I was experimenting with similar devices from 1869 to 1873.

1907 172. X Q. Do you remember the exact number of such cancelling instruments, or device made by you for the Post-Office Department to use in the postal service?

A. I do not.

173. X Q. Precisely the time when you made them, can you state that?

A. I cannot.

174. X Q. Were those postage-cancelling devices made for the Post-Office Department under the contracts about which you have testified, or either of them?

A. They were special trial orders.

175. X Q. Orders made by whom?

A. By the proper officers of the Post-Office Department.

176. X Q. Name one or more of such proper officers of the Post-Office Department.

A. The orders were alw ays signed by the First Assistant Postmaster-General.

177. X Q. Were those orders in writing?

A. They could not have been otherwise if signed.

178. X Q. Were those orders in writing, and were they signed by the First Assistant Postmaster-General?

A. They certainly were, of course.

179. X Q. Have you those orders or any of them in your possession at the present time?

A. I have not; I have moved away and quit the business years ago, and all these papers have been destroyed, so far as I know.

180. X Q. By what First Assistant Postmaster-General were those orders signed? State his name.

A. St. John B. L. Skinner was First Assistant most of the time, and in his absence Mr. Marr, his chief clerk, signed them.

181. X Q. From what room in the Post-Office Department did those orders originate?

A. From the blank and stamp room, I suppose; but I don't know.

1908 182. X Q. On your direct examination this question was put to you, to wit, "Mention some other substance that was used beside cork, that was used with the brass tube," and under objections you made the following answer, "Wood and solid gum were sometimes used," whereupon defendant's counsel put to you this question, "India rubber, you mean," and your answer was, "Yes, I mean India rubber when I said gum." State when you first made a postage-stamp cancelling device constructed of wooden handle inserted in one end of a brass tube, while in the other and opposite end of the same tube you inserted a piece of rubber for the purpose of cancelling the postage stamp.

A. It must have been about the same time that I said in a few answers back that I had been experimenting with all sorts of devices of this kind; the time was mentioned there.

183. X Q. You clearly and correctly mentioned that time in your former answer to which you refer, did you not?

A. I think I did.

184. X Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No doubt.

185. X Q. Did you ever make for the Post-Office Department any postage-stamp cancelling device of the kind now under consideration? I mean the one containing the rubber in the brass tube.

A. I don't know that I did; I exhibited such as samples.

186. X Q. The question is, whether you ever made a single device of the kind stated in the last question for the Post-Office Department or for use in the postal service of the United States?

A. It is partly answered in the last question; but I certainly made one or more.

187. X Q. How many more than one did you make for that purpose?

A. I don't know.

188. X Q. You state on your direct examination, in answer to question eight, in substance, that you made a postage-stamp cancelling de-
1909 vice, consisting of a wooden handle inserted in one end of a brass tube, while in the other and opposite end you inserted a piece of wood for the purpose of cancelling the postage stamp. When did you first make a device of that description?

(Objected to, because the counsel misstates the testimony, the witness having testified substantially that the end of the wooden handle projected through the tube, and having said nothing about a separate piece of wood stuck into the tube.)

A. That refers to the canceller attached to the office-stamp, and not to a separate canceller; because when the separate canceller was made in this way it was in effect a mere wooden handle with a brass ferule or tube.

189. X Q. What do you mean by a "brass tube," as stated by you in your last answer?

A. A brass tube is a hollow brass cylinder.

190. X Q. What do you mean by the word ferule, as used by you in your answer to question 188?

A. I mean that a ferule is the same thing as a tube, and a tube is a ferule.

191. X Q. You then never made a separate postage stamp cancelling device of the description stated in question 188 of your cross examination, did you?

A. I never did.

192. X Q. You are positive about that, are you not?

A. I am.

193. X Q. What has become of those postage stamp cancelling devices having a cork inserted in a cylinder, of which you say you made a "few" for the Post-Office Department for use in the postal service of the United States, under "special orders"?

A. I don't know what has become of them.

194. X Q. When did you last see them, or either of them, and where was it?

A. I don't know when it was or where it was.

1910 195. X Q. What has become of that kind of postage stamp cancelling device of which you say you made at least one, having inserted in the brass tube a piece of rubber to cancel the postage stamp with, and which you say you do not think any were ever used in the postal service of the United States?

(Objected to as misstating the evidence.)

A. I don't know what has become of it; I never said none were used in the service; they were used.

196. X Q. How many of that kind were used in the postal service, and made by you?

A. I don't know how many were made, but there were some made by others, with India rubber in the tube.

197. X Q. Give your best recollection about it, Mr. Zevely.

A. Well, these things were all used very soon after cancellers were first ordered by the Post-Office Department; many ingenious post-office officials contrived various things of this kind themselves.

198. X Q. Name a single post-office official who made any contrivance mentioned in your last answer, and state how you come to know anything about it.

(Objected to as going too far a field, unless counsel limits the scope of the question to some particular time, as for instance about the time when cancellers were first required.)

Complainant's counsel states that the question is a plain one, which any intelligent man can understand and correctly answer, but in view of the unwarranted and indecent remarks of defendant's counsel by way of objections, in the presence of this witness while under cross-examination, suggesting to the witness the kind of answer he desires him to give to the question, the question is withdrawn.

Defendant's counsel disclaims any intention such as imported 1911 by complainant's counsel, and insists that the objection is well taken.

199. X Q. Do you know where the single postage-stamp cancelling device, having rubber in one end, as you have stated, and which you say you made for the Post-Office Department under special orders from Post Office Department, now are?

(Objected to because the witness has not stated that he made cancellers having rubber in the tube under special orders.)

A. I don't know what has become of them.

200. X Q. To whom did you deliver those cancelling stamps, if to anybody?

A. Such a stamp was among the stamps I exhibited to the department.

201. X Q. Is that the very one you know anything about as having been made by you?

A. I must have made others; I don't know what I did with them now.

202. X Q. That one that was submitted to the department among your samples of which you testify was the first one made by you, was it not?

A. I suppose it was, and that might have been made on the suggestion of somebody, or post-office official.

203. X Q. On what occasion, and in what year was it that you submitted those samples among which was this separate postage-stamp cancelling device having rubber in one end of the brass tube?

A. I believe it was both in 1859 and 1863, and besides that, I was called upon at various times, in an informal way, to get up and exhibit certain things, or stamps, suggested by others in the Post-Office Department.

204. X Q. Name a single person who, in the Post-Office Department, ever requested you to do as you stated in your last answer you were frequently requested to do.

A. Mr. Guest was formerly stamp agent, also my brother A. N. Zevely.

1912 205. X Q. Anybody else?

A. Don't remember anybody else.

206. X Q. You have never seen, since then, and do not know what has become of the separate postage-stamp cancelling device, with rubber inserted in the tube, which you say you submitted to the Post-Office Department among other samples?

A. I have never seen them since then, and don't know where they now are.

207. X Q. Did you ever make any after that time?

A. I made several on private orders; postmasters sometimes preferred them, but I can't remember who they were for, I made stamps for so many people over the United States.

208. X Q. You mean in the last answer—do you not—that you made a few of this kind of cancelling device, and not that you made so many as to send them all over the United States, as stated in your last answer?

A. I stated in my last answer I made stamps, and sent them all over the United States, and among them were a few of this rubber kind of cancelling device.

209. X Q. What has become of the "few" separate cancelling stamps mentioned by you in your last answer?

A. I don't know; sent them through the mail, and haven't seen them since.

210. X Q. In what year did you make those "few" and send them through the mails, as stated in the last answer?

A. I don't remember; impossible to say.

211. X Q. Have you ever made any of that kind of separate cancelling stamp since the time referred to in the last few questions and answers?

A. I don't remember anything about what I have done.

Recess to 2 o'clock this p. m.

1913 2 O'CLOCK P. M.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel.

212. X Q. You have stated on your examination-in-chief that you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove, in the State of Maryland, five miles from Comberland, and in the year 1853. When were you appointed postmaster of that important post-office?

A. In 1850.

213. X Q. How long did you continue postmaster at that place?

A. For three years, with an interregnum for a little while.

214. X Q. When was that post-office established?

A. In 1850.

215. X Q. Was it by your ingenuity and assistance it was established in 1850?

A. I don't know that there was much ingenuity about it; we got up a petition in the usual form and had the post-office established.

216. X Q. How many persons signed that petition besides yourself?

A. I don't remember.

217. X Q. Well, give your best recollections about it.

A. That is the best I can do.

218. X Q. In whose handwriting was it?

A. I don't remember that either.

219. X Q. Did you sign it?

A. I don't know whether I did or not.

220. X. Did that post office have box delivery for mail matter?

A. I don't know what you mean by box delivery; it had one or two pigeon holes, I believe.

221. X Q. I mean by box delivery a case with one or more pigeon holes to contain the mail matter for the various persons doing business with the post office?

A. I had a regular desk with lock and key to it, and pigeon holes.

1914 222. X Q. Were the pigeon holes on the inside of the desk?

A. Yes, certainly; when the leaf of the desk was turned up against them they were closed in, under lock and key, and locked up.

223. X Q. When the leaf of that post-office was closed up against the pigeon holes, and the door locked, all was darkness within, was it not?

A. I didn't say the post-office had a leaf to it. I——

224. X Q. What did you say?

A. I said the desk I had in the post-office had a leaf to it.

225. X Q. When that leaf was closed up against those pigeon holes, was it light or dark inside?

A. I was never inside to see, but suppose it was dark.

226. X Q. How large was that desk?

A. About four feet long, twenty inches high, and ten inches deep, and on legs.

227. X Q. All the mail matter coming to that office was kept in that desk until it was delivered, was it not?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

228. X Q. That desk was also big enough to contain your private and public official papers, was it not?

A. Large enough.

229. X Q. Any spare room after the post-office, your private and public official papers were provided for?

A. No, sir; none.

230. X Q. What was the size of the building where that post-office was kept?

A. House 30 or 40 feet long and 16 feet wide, and one story high.

231. X Q. How many rooms in that building?

A. Four rooms.

232. X Q. Four rooms on the first floor?

A. Yes; only one floor to it.

233. X Q. What kind of business was carried on in those four rooms in 1852 and 1853, if any?

A. No business; it was a dwelling house. My business was carried on in a separate building a few feet off.

1915 234. X Q. The post-office, then, was kept by you in your dwelling house, was it not?

A. Yes, it was.

235. X Q. And in one of the front rooms?

A. Yes, sir; that's so.

236. X Q. About how far from this house was the building where you carried on your manufacturing business?

A. Five or six steps off—about that.

237. X Q. How many times a week did the United States mail come to that office, and from what directions?

A. Twice a week from east and west—twice from east and twice from the west.

238. X Q. And on what days of the week?

A. Wednesdays and Saturdays.

239. X Q. What would be a fair average of the number of the letters that came to that office during each of those days while you were postmaster there?

A. From 50 to 100, I expect—something like that.

240. X Q. How many letters did you send out from that office on each of those days while you were postmaster there?

A. About as many sent out as received, and I used to send out thousands of circulars and packages of all kinds.

241. X Q. What was your salary per year while postmaster at that office?

A. I got the usual commissions under the then existing laws; I cannot say what the amount was.

242. X Q. You cannot tell the yearly salary you received while postmaster at Pleasant Grove, Maryland?

A. No salaries paid; I received the usual compensation by commissions upon the business of the office.

243. X Q. How much was that per year? Give your best recollections about it.

A. I am entirely unable to remember what it was.

242½. X Q. How much of your time was occupied during each week you were postmaster there, in carrying on the business of that post-office?

1916 A. Several hours on each mail day, besides a little attention on other days.

243¼. X Q. About how many hours on each of the mail days were your services required as postmaster?

A. Three or four.

243½. X Q. The Pleasant Grove you refer to in your answer to question 11 of your direct examination was at that time a large and flourishing village, was it not? I mean in the years 1852 and 1853.

A. I never said it was a village.

244. X Q. I did not say in the question that you said it was a village; but I ask you to state whether at that time it was a village and in a flourishing condition.

A. It was no village at all.

245 X Q. That place, during 1852 and 1853, was a large manufacturing place, was it not?

A. Yes, it was a large manufacturing place. I did all the manufacturing excepting the blacksmith shop down near to it.

246 X Q. How many churches, schoolhouses, academies of learning, and academies of music did that place have while you were postmaster there?

A. It had one church and one schoolhouse, and no other higher institutions.

247 X Q. Was that a "Baptist" church?

A. It was not.

248 X Q. How many people would that church accommodate and comfortably seat?

A. About 200.

249 X Q. About how many would the schoolhouse accommodate and comfortably seat?

A. Forty or fifty.

250 X Q. How many miles would one have to travel from that post-office to reach a village of any size where a man could comfortably rest for the night and get something to drink?

A. Five miles.

251 X Q. What was the length of the postal route passing that post-office?

1917 A. About thirty miles—from Cumberland to Robinsonville, Pa., there were three post-offices on the route.

252. X Q. Were those three post-offices as large as the one at Pleasant Grove of which you had command?

A. I am unable to say what was the amount of their business.

253. X Q. Who was your successor as postmaster at Pleasant Grove post-office?

A. I had no successor.

254. X Q. What in the deuce became of that post-office after you terminated a career of three years as postmaster there?

A. It disappeared—went where the woodbine twineth, I guess.

255. X Q. You were present at the time when this post-office came into existence, were you?

A. I was.

256. X Q. And you were present when it disappeared, as you think, where the woodbine twineth, were you?

A. No; I was absent at that time.

257. X Q. Was it discontinued by the order of the Post-Office Department?

A. I resigned the place, and nobody else cared about taking it, and it was discontinued by the Post Office Department.

258. X Q. How came you to resign so important a trust?

A. Because I moved entirely to Cumberland.

259. X Q. You have stated on your direct examination, substantially, that you had a postage stamp canceller of various forms, sizes and descriptions, which you used in the post-office at Pleasant Grove while you were postmaster, which cancelling instrument you had described in previous and subsequent answers on that same examination; what became of that or those contrivances?

A. After laying around several years in Cumberland, all those old stamps were turned over to my son John, who has been a witness in this case.

1918 260. X Q. When did you discontinue the use of those contrivancies at Pleasant Grove?

A. At the time the post-office was discontinued.

261. X Q. What year was that?

A. In 1853.

262. X Q. At question 20 of your direct examination, defendant's counsel put to you this question, to wit: "Describe one of them, referring for illustration, if you please, to the models marked Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, J. H. Zevely, March 4, 1878, H. F., Spl. Examiner, now lying on the table." To which you made this answer, under objections of counsel: "I was the first to originate this sort, and one or two other combination stamps." State when, for the first time, and where, you saw the exhibits referred to in that question.

A. I never saw them till I saw them here, but I saw similar ones many years ago.

263. X Q. Now, did you understand that last question when you answered it?

A. I think I did.

264. X Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. None.

265. X Q. What did that question require you to state?

A. Whether I had ever seen those particular stamps, and I said "no, I hadn't," before that time.

266. X Q That is all you intended to answer?

A. That's all I did answer, except an explanatory remark.

267. X Q. Didn't you in answering the last question state, while answering, that you put in that explanatory note "whether or no," or in substance the same?

A. Oh, yes; I suppose there is no necessity to waste more time about it.

268. X Q. The time you first saw those exhibits was on the examiner's table, the other day, during your direct examination, was it?

A. Yes.

1919 269. X Q. Were they there when your examination first commenced?

A. I didn't notice; don't remember.

270. X Q. Did you see anybody put them there; for instance, the defendant's counsel, now present, and at the time he put to you question No. 20?

A. I saw them at the time he directed my attention to them.

271. X Q. When was that—was it just after he put question 20 to you?

A. I suppose it was; I don't remember what question it was, or moment of time it came in.

272. X Q. Immediately after seeing those exhibits on the table, after defendant's counsel drew your attention to them, as you have stated, did you proceed to make, and did you make, an answer to some question of his concerning them, or either of them?

A. So soon as I was allowed to proceed, I did, objections having been made by complainant's counsel.

273. X Q. Now, in your answer to that question, which is question No. 20 of your direct examination, you state, "I was the first to originate this sort and one or two other combination stamps." State what you mean by that answer, and to what you refer in it.

A. First, I mean that, so far as I know, I was the first to get up such a stamp as stated in the answer, and several others of similar style with a little variation.

274. X Q. How do you know, and what are your means of knowing, that you were the first to originate a stamp of the kind referred to in that answer?

A. I knew it just as I think I know anything, and I had had considerable experience in the stamp business, and thought I knew something about stamps.

275. X Q. You have now stated in your last answer all that you know and all the means you have for knowing, that which you stated in your answer to question No. 20 of your direct examination, have you?

1920 A. I have not stated all I know; I have referred to the matter simply; I hardly know what the question meant; it would take a tremendous long answer to state all I know.

276. X Q. From the appearance of Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, what in your opinion is the length of time they have been in existence? I now refer to the time, when you first saw them the other day; I do not now exhibit to you those models, I depend upon your memory and recollections, going back to yesterday when you for the first time saw them.

A. It is impossible for me to form an opinion of how long they have been in existence—those particular stamps.

277. X Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, referred to in your answer to question 20 of your direct examination, and state whether you claim ever to have invented those instruments, or either of them.

A. I do claim I invented, contrived and designed them, and concocted them, &c.

278. X Q. Where were you at that time?

A. I do not understand the question; do you mean in what particular house, room, field, or city, or place, I was at the time?

279. X Q. I mean in what place were you?

A. I was at Pleasant Grove, and while I was postmaster there.

280. X Q. You mean in that post-office at Pleasant Grove, which had a mail twice a week; post-office kept in a desk four feet long, about twenty inches high, and had one or more pigeon-holes and a cover to cover them up, and a lock to lock up the business, and also your private business that was expressed on papers, as heretofore testified to by you?

A. No; I was in my manufactory, five or six steps off.

281. X Q. In what year was that?

A. About the year 1853.

282. X Q. Do you know whether it was or not?

A. As near as I can remember.

1921 283. Did you ever make any stamp or device like Defendant's Exhibits 139 and 140, which I now show to you while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove?

A. I think I did.

284. X Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. As well as I can remember anything, I think I did that.

285. X Q. Will you and do you swear on your oath that while you were postmaster at Pleasant Grove you made a device like either of the exhibits last above referred to, and now before you?

A. I do so say, as well as I can say or remember to have done anything at any particular time.

286. X Q. I now call your attention particularly to each of those exhibits now before you, and I ask you to state when you for the first time on this green earth, or anywhere else, made a device like either of those exhibits, in form or in substance.

A. It is impossible, at this late time, to say at what particular date I first made this particular kind of stamps in form or substance.

287. X Q. When did you ever make any device of the kind or character specified in the last question?

A. I know I made them prior to 1859.

288. X Q. You are certain of that, are you?

A. I am.

289. X Q. You swear to that on your oath, do you?

A. I suppose I do.

290. X Q. Have you any doubt about that, whether you do or not?

A. No, sir.

291. X Q. How many of such devices did you make prior to 1859, as you have last above stated?

A. Impossible to remember.

292. X Q. For whom did you make them? Give the name of the person or persons.

A. I cannot answer that, because it is impossible to remember who for.

1922 293. X Q. What did you do with those stamps which you swear positively you made prior to the year 1859, how many you do not remember, and for whom you cannot and do not remember, as you have testified?

A. I exhibited them in the Post-Office Department at Washington City.

294. X Q. Where are those stamps now?

A. I don't know, for the same reasons heretofore given to the same questions; I have answered them a half dozen times.

295. X Q. When did you last see those stamps which you swear positively you made before 1859, how many you cannot tell, and who for you do not remember, and which you say you exhibited in the Post-Office Department at Washington?

A. Impossible to say when I last saw them, because I have been out of the business for years, and have had my mind on other subjects.

296. X Q. Did you ever use those stamps for any purpose in the postal service—I mean yourself personally?

A. I used similar stamps.

297. X Q. Describe the "similar stamps" which you say in your last answer you used in the postal service.

A. I largely used an office stamp with side attachments, used not only to cancel postage-stamps but to print the words "paid," "free," &c., at the same time with postmarking the letter; I mean by the same time, at one blow.

298. X Q. Where was it you used a device of the kind described in your last answer?

A. At Pleasant Grove post-office, for marking thousands of circulars and letters, and I sometimes sent out 30,000 of those circulars and letters at one time, and that was what put into my head the necessity of a combination stamp.

299. X Q. And this was while you were postmaster there?

A. It was.

300. X Q. Did you ever use any other kind at that post-office
1923 while you were postmaster there than the one you have last above described for that purpose?

A. No, I suppose I didn't, for that covers the whole. I used also separate stamps.

301. X Q. Now, Mr. Zevely, describe very minutely and in detail the material and the parts, and the arrangement of those parts which went to make up the postmarking stamp alone without the attachments?

A. It was made of boxwood similar to all ordinary postmarking stamps in use. It was in a circular form with letters cut around the edge inside of the ring, showing the name of the post-office, with a mortise in the centre of the stamp to hold type metal dates for the month and day of the month, which dates were in place by said thumbscrew.

302. X Q. Please describe the material and the construction of the piece which you say was attached to the side of the stamp described in your last answer, and the manner and means of securing it to that postmarking stamp; give it in detail and state what was engraved upon the acting face of it, if anything, stating at the same time its locality with reference to the engraved letters and letters on the type metal upon the acting face of the postmarking stamp last described by you?

A. I shaped a piece of boxwood to conform to the outer circumference of the post-marking stamp of such a length that its upper end was on the same plane with the face of the office stamp, and then cut on that face any words I wanted for any use, and attached the piece to the large stamp by an ordinary wood screw, the lower end of this piece, however, for further security, resting upon the projecting flange, which was always turned on to the handle of the post-marking stamp; if this attachment was intended to print the words "paid," "free," or "due 3," or anything of that kind, I put it at the top of the name and dates of the post-marking stamps; if intended for cancellation of postage-stamps I placed it at the side of the dates; this latter attachment ex-
1924 tended out further from the circumference of the post-marking stamp than did the other attachments for "paid" and "free."

303. X Q. Did you while postmaster at Pleasant Grove make a stamp for post-marking letters having a wooden or other kind of attachment fixed to the side of the dates of the postmarking stamp for the cancellation of the postage-stamp by the same blow of the instrument, and at the time marking out the postmark on the envelope?

A. I meant to make myself so understood in the last answer; this answer amounts to saying I did, I am sure.

304. X Q. Do you swear on your oath that at Pleasant Grove you made a stamp and used it in the post office at that place, while you were postmaster there, of the kind described in the last question?

A. Certainly I do.

305. X Q. How many such devices did you make and use at that place (I mean the particular one described in the last two questions), and used for postmarking letters and cancelling stamps thereon, at the same time or blow of the combined instrument?

A. I don't know that I made but one of that particular kind for that particular purpose at that particular time and that particular office; that's all.

306. X Q. What has become of that particular stamp constructed at that particular time, used for that particular purpose, and used in that particular office by your particular self?

A. It was turned over in a box with other stamps to my son John, who took the charge of the whole business after I quit in 1870.

307. X Q. At what time did you discontinue the use of that contrivance in the post-office at Pleasant Grove? I mean in the big post-office in the big village of Pleasant Grove.

A. When the office was discontinued, in 1853.

308. X Q. At what part of the year did the Post-Office Department discontinue that office at Pleasant Grove?

1925 A. I am not exactly sure.

309. X Q. State your best recollections on that subject.

A. It might have been in the spring, summer, or fall; somewhere between spring and fall; I say that as near as I can remember.

Recess until 7½ p. m.

7½ O'CLOCK, P. M.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

310. X Q. Of all the alleged combined stamps with which you have had to do from your cradle down to the present time, state the number of classes of such kind of instruments; I mean for postmarking letters and for cancelling stamps thereon by one blow or operation of such instrument.

A. I believe I made three kinds or classes.

311. X Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit 139, and state whether that represents one of the classes.

A. It does.

312. X Q. Look at Defendant's Exhibit 140, and state whether that represents one of the classes.

A. It does.

313. X Q. What represents the other class?

A. A stamp similar to Defendant's Exhibit 139 (to the body part of 139), made of wood, with a piece of wood attached to its side, which I have already described.

314. X Q. Which of the three is class one?

A. I never called them by classes, as one, two, or three, therefore I cannot say which is class one.

315. X Q. Did you ever in any way denominate them in classes?

A. Not to my recollection.

316. X Q. Now, I desire you to state whether at any time you have applied for a patent upon any of the instruments or contrivances 1926 spoken of and described by you during this examination, both on the direct and cross-examination?

A. I never did.

317. X Q. Why not?

A. Because I did not care about it, or did not see the use of it, or did not think of it, or some such reason.

318. X Q. Have you at any time prepared and filed a caveat in the United States Patent Office embracing or covering the several instruments or contrivances, or any one or more of them, which you have described in your direct and cross-examination in this case?

A. Not according to my present recollection.

319. X Q. Do you know whether you have or not?

A. Well, I am entirely ignorant of ever having done so; I don't think I ever did; I know I did not.

320. X Q. You never made an application for a patent, and you never filed a caveat upon any of these combined instruments, or any part or portion of them, described by you on this examination, have you?

A. Never did.

321. X Q. For whose special benefit was the post-office created at Pleasant Grove, in Maryland—I mean the one you kept in one or more pigeon-holes, in a table four feet long, on a desk four feet long, about two feet high, about ten inches deep, having a door with a lock on it, to close up the post-office from the light of day or the gaze of mortal man?

A. It was created for the public benefit.

322. X Q. After three years of unparalleled growth under your administration as postmaster, that office was discontinued for the public good, wasn't it?

A. I don't know that it ever had any unparalleled growth, neither do I know for whose good it was discontinued.

323. X Q. Who was the most distinguished patron of that post-office while you kept it as postmaster—I mean by that, who supplied it with the most letters and most circulars during that time?

1927 A. I don't like to commit myself by making invidious distinctions.

324. X Q. How many circulars did you supply that establishment with while you were postmaster during each year?

A. It is difficult to say the exact number, but I have frequently sent out as many as 30,000 at one time.

325. X Q. Were those circulars sealed?

A. They were not; some were put up in wrappers and others in envelopes with the laps tucked in.

326. X Q. And this was during the years 1850, 1851, 1852, and 1853, or to the summer of 1853, when you left that office, was it not?

A. It was.

327. X Q. How did you pay the postage on those circulars?

A. Prepayment at that time was not compulsory.

328. X Q. How much postage did you pay in that way, in each year, on each of those circulars?

A. I paid nothing, as the last answer intimates; I sent them out without any prepayment.

329. X Q. You sent those circulars during those years without the prepayment of postage, did you not?

A. I have already so said in my last answer, but most of those circulars, so called, were in the form of a small newspaper.

330. X Q. Did you send out those newspaper circulars during those years without prepayment of postage on the same?

(Objected to as irrelevant, immaterial, improper on the cross-examination, because not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I did.

331. X Q. Now, how many letters, during those eventful three years in your life's history—I mean when you were pleasantly situated and prospering as the postmaster at that important post-office, open 1928 for the public good, continuing for three years, and closed for the want of a responsible postmaster—were sent out with unpaid postage?

A. I do not remember.

332. X Q. A good many letters were sent out in that way during that time, were they not?

A. I suppose there were.

333. X Q. About how many letters each week with the postage prepaid by a postage-stamp were sent out from that office during those three years?

(Same objection.)

A. Don't remember; can't say.

334. X Q. Do you remember to ever have seen any letters in that office, or go out from that post-office, during those three years, while you were postmaster, with the postage prepaid by postage-stamp or stamps?

A. I have seen a good many go out in that way; can't remember more distinctly.

335. X Q. You have seen letters in that office and letters go out from it, some with the postage unpaid and some with the postage prepaid by stamps, have you not?

A. I have.

336. X Q. And was that during the three years you were postmaster there?

A. It was.

337. X Q. Have you ever been postmaster of the United States, or deputy postmaster, at any other place than at Pleasant Grove?

A. I was an assistant in an office.

338. X Q. When was that, and where was it?

A. Many years ago, in the State of North Carolina.

339. X Q. Was it previous to 1850?

A. It was.

340. X Q. Have you ever been postmaster or a deputy anywhere since 1853?

A. I have not.

1929 341. X Q. In answer to question 32 of your direct examination, and also in question 33, and also in question 44, you state that you know John H. Zevely, the witness preceding you in this case, and that he is a son of yours; how old was he at the time you were the distinguished postmaster at Pleasant Grove?

A. Six or eight years, I believe.

342. X Q. Did he assist you in and about the post-office there as occasion might require?

A. I don't know as he did exactly in the post-office.

343. X Q. Who did assist you to send off those 30,000 circulars, with unpaid postage, every time the mail went from the post-office at Pleasant Grove, when you were postmaster?

A. I am not aware that, and I certainly never said myself, that 30,000 were sent every mail.

344. X Q. You did say, did you not, that you frequently sent 30,000 circulars at a time from that post-office at Pleasant Grove?

A. I did say so, but that did not mean every mail day.

345. X Q. How many mail days did you have each year you presided over that post-office at Pleasant Grove as its head and front?

A. Mails twice a week make 104 in a year, I believe.

346. X Q. How many would that make during the time you were there as postmaster?

A. Impossible to say, because I don't know how long I was postmaster.

347. X Q. You were postmaster at Pleasant Grove, but you do not know when or how long you were postmaster there, do you?

A. I was appointed some time in '50; I don't know what month; I resigned in 1853, but don't remember what month, and within that time there was an interregnum, as I believe I have already mentioned; therefore I can't exactly say how many months I was postmaster.

348. X Q. The light of that post-office, and your light there as postmaster were both extinguished about the same time, were they not?

1930 A. Yes; but with my full knowledge and consent.

349. X Q. All the stamps of any kind you ever used in your life for postal service were used in that post-office at Pleasant Grove, were they not?

A. No, sir; they were not; that was not the only place.

350. X Q. Where else besides there?

A. In that post-office in North Carolina which I have already talked about.

351. X Q. What kind of stamp did you use in that office in North Carolina?

A. Various kinds—markings and rating stamps of all kinds then in use.

352. X Q. The last you used in the postal service of any kind or description were used in the post office at Pleasant Grove, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

353. X Q. How old was your son John H. Zevely in the fall of 1860 and fore part of 1861?

A. I think he was about 15 or 16, if I am not mistaken.

354. X Q. You and your family resided at Cumberland at that time, did you not?

A. We did.

355. X Q. Your son John H. resided there with you, did he not?

A. He did.

356. X Q. Did he assist you in and about your manufacturing business at that time and place?

A. He did.

357. X Q. Such stamps for use in postal service as you then and there made he assisted you about, did he not?

A. He did.

358. X Q. During the fall of 1860, and during the fore part of the year 1861, he had the full opportunity of knowing what kind of business was being conducted in your manufactory at Cumberland during that time, did he not?

A. He had.

1931 359. X Q. Whose recollections of events and things that took place in your manufactory at Cumberland during that time are the best and the better to be depended upon, yours or his?

(Objected to because the question is one for the court and not for the witness, and because it is plain that one may remember some things, and the other other things, and it is impossible for the witness to determine such a general proposition.)

A. I have no means of knowing whose recollection is best or the most to be depended on.

360. X Q. Your recollections of events and things which happened 25 and 26 years ago, without any memorandum in writing concerning those things, are to be entirely depended upon, are they not?

(Objected to as being plainly improper.)

A. Some things I remember perfeetly well, others not so well.

361. X Q. What kind of things do you best remember which happened so long ago as that, and without the aid of any memorandum in writing?

A. I do not know that I can classify the kind of things.

362. X Q. During your cross-examination you have heard each question read to you once or twice, and your answers thereto read to you once or twice by the special examiner, do you know of anything in that cross-examination that you desire to modify, alter, or amend at this time?

A. There is one point to which my attention has been called, of a mistake in dates, but I don't exactly know in which question or answer it was, where it was said, '69 to '73, instead of '59 to '63; that is all that I know of which I want to change.

363. X Q. Now is there any other matter or thing stated by you during that cross-examination which you desire to alter or modify, other than that you have stated in your answer to the last question, about the changing of the dates?

1932 A. Nothing that I know of.

364. X Q. In your answer to cross-question 362 you state that "there is one point to which my attention has been called of a mistake in dates," which you desired to correct, and which you did correct in that answer; who called your attention to that subject, as stated by you in that answer?

A. First I want to add that I am not aware that any mistake was made, but my attention was called to it by Mr. Clarke, the defendant's counsel, who thought there had been a mistake.

365. X Q. Did Mr. Clarke do that while you were on the stand and undergoing a cross examination?

A. He did not; and if such a mistake was made it will be self-evident on the face of the answer as compared with the other answers on the same subject.

366. X Q. Where were you at the time Mr. Clark called your attention to the matter now being inquired about?

A. On the street.

367. X Q. In this city?

A. Oh, yes; it was not in New York; I could not have got there today, I reckon.

368. X Q. When was it?

A. To day.

369. X Q. What time to-day?

A. I don't exactly know; I believe during the noon recess.

370. X Q. When did your cross-examination commence in this matter?

A. Yesterday some time; I don't know what time.

371. X Q. It is still in progress, is it not?

A. I am sorry to believe it is.

372. X Q. Now state what Mr. Clark said to you about changing those dates during his interview with you at the noon recess to day, and while you were under cross examination.

A. He certainly said no harm; he merely, in a few words, said that he thought such a mistake had been made inadvertently, and that I had better see to having it corrected.

1933 373. X Q. What, if anything, did Mr. Clarke say to you on that occasion about dates, and what dates did he tell you you should see to and have changed?

A. Just what I have said above there, 69 to 73 instead of 59 to 63, with the understanding of 18 before each of those dates.

By consent the further taking of this examination is adjourned to tomorrow, March 8, 1878, at 8 o'clock a. m.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Special Examiner.

MARCH 8, 1878, 8 o'clock a. m.
Met pursuant to adjournment.
Present, same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of the witness resumed:

374. X Q. On page 31, at folios 120, 121, 122, and 123 of the printed amended bill in this cause, I show to you printed drawings or engravings of the postmarking and postage stamp cancelling instrument, patented to Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, New York, April 14, 1863, No. 38175, by an application to the Commissioner of Patents, founded upon said Norton's caveat filed in the Patent Office in the year 1853, and amended by an additional description, dated August 7, 1854, and reissued October 4, 1870, "Division A," and I desire you to state when you first saw or heard of the letters patent referred to in this question.

(Objected to as assuming that said patent is founded on alleged caveat of 1853, and alleged amendment thereof in 1854, and assum-1934 ing that there ever was an amendment of said caveat.)

A. I can't say exactly when I heard of it; it was a long time after I commenced the business—some years after; then I never saw the stamp itself till 1855 or 1859; I don't remember seeing it in 1855; I might have seen it in 1859, but I never had my attention directed to it particularly until the spring of 1863, when I met Mr. Norton in Washington.

375. X Q. You may state, Mr. Zevely, if you please, whether you have ever made for the Post-Office Department newspaper postage-stamp-cancelling instrument entirely of wood, and in one piece, with circular bars upon the acting surface, or other form of configuration upon the acting face, to show the cancellation of such postage-stamp.

A. I don't know any such thing as a newspaper stamp-canceller separate from any other canceller.

376. X Q. Did you ever make any postage-stamp cancelling instruments of the description contained in the last question for the Post-Office Department at Washington, and for any use whatever in the postal service?

A. I made thousands of cancellers; I don't know what kind that is.

377. X Q. That you may not be misunderstood about this matter, I again ask you whether you ever made postage-stamp-cancelling instruments of wood, and wholly in one piece, with a handle belonging to the same piece of wood, and the entire instrument turned by means of a turning lathe, in the ordinary manner of turning wood in a lathe, and having on the lower end, or acting face, some kind of a configuration to denote the cancellation of the postage stamp?

A. I have made it.

378. X Q. Have you made such instruments for the Post-Office Department to use in the postal service?

A. I have.

1935 379. X Q. In what year did you first commence that business; through what years did you continue it, and when did you cease to furnish the Post-Office Department with postage-cancelling instruments of that description or kind?

A. I don't remember the exact year or time I commenced making that particular kind, but I made them under the contract from 1855 to 1859; also, between 1863 and 1871—through all those years.

380. X Q. State about how many of that kind of cancelling instruments you manufactured for the Post-Office Department for use in the postal service during each of the years stated by you in your last answer.

A. I have no possible way to tell that; I can't remember.

381. X Q. You made them in very large quantities during those years, did you not, for the Post-Office Department?

A. I don't know what you mean by large quantities.

382. X Q. I mean several hundreds or thousands of them during each year, and I mean further, whether you did not send that sort of contrivance to the blank and stamp agency division of the Post-Office Department in boxes about the size of your post-office at Pleasant Grove—I mean that part of your post-office containing one or more pigeon holes.

A. I made them by hundreds or thousands, as asked in the question, and sent them to Washington in boxes, according to orders from said department.

383. X Q. And you continued so to manufacture those kind of cancelling stamps and send them to the Post-Office Department until you went out of business, or gave up your contract to your son during the year 1870, did you not?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Redirect examination by Mr. C. CLARKE:

1936 Re-D. Q. 384. In letter of Gov. Woodford to you, put in evidence by complainant's counsel as his Exhibit "E E," dated Feb'y 11, '78, it is stated, "I am not authorized to pay you for the testimony that is within your knowledge;" if that phrase conveys any meaning in your mind, state what it refers to.

(Objected to because the letter is the higher and better evidence, and it is for the court to determine from the letter itself, and not what the witness may say about it.)

A. I hardly know how to answer, unless I make a long statement.

(Defendant's counsel says "That is what I want.")

A few days or a week before that letter was received by me I received the other letter which is also in testimony as Complainant's Exhibit "C C," and enclosures marked "D D," March 6, 1878, which letter is dated February 2, 1878, signed by Stewart L. Woodford, wanting me to make an affidavit and return it to him concerning this suit about the existence of which I knew nothing till that moment, and as he did not either offer to pay anything for it, or even enclose a postage-stamp to prepay answer, and I was very busy, time fully occupied, I answered by saying as politely as I could that I could not comply unless I was paid for it.

385. X Q. You thought you ought to be paid for the time taken from your business in order to conform to the request contained in Gov. Woodford's first letter; is that it?

(Objected to for following reasons: 1st, as leading; 2d, it is utterly too late at this stage of the proceedings to apologize or explain about any matter contained in that correspondence between the witness and Gov. Woodford; and, 3d, the correspondence is the higher and better evidence, needing no oral declaration to explain it, it being in writing.)

1937 On this defendant's counsel suspends question, and asks the following:

Re-D. Q. 386. Where are the letter or letters you wrote to Gov. Woodford in reply to his letters?

A. I don't know; I kept no copy; I mailed them to New York.

Re-D. Q. 387. Question 385 Re-D. Q. read.

(Same objections to it as to last question, with the further objection that the letters of the witness not having been proved to have been lost, nor in any manner accounted for by the person now holding the same, and the witness not having preserved a copy of those letters, no parol evidence can be given by him of their contents at this time.)

A. Yes, I thought I ought to be paid; I told him I was not able to spend time for nothing; I told him further, that I had, as I thought, lost thousands of dollars by the bad faith of the Post-Office Department toward me, and I was sick, tired, and disgusted with the whole concern.

Re-D. Q. 388. In your answer to cross-question 171, you say you were experimenting with similar devices from 1869 to 1873; is that correct?

A. This is the place spoken of by me yesterday, and is not correct. It was explained yesterday, and should read 1859 to 1863.

Deposition having been read over to witness, he states he desires to make no further corrections.

E. S. ZEVELY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this eighth day of March, 1878.

HANNIBAL FORBES,
Special Examiner.

I, Hannibal Forbes, the special examiner appointed by the circuit court of the southern district of New York, by an order, of which a 1938 certified copy is hereto annexed, do hereby certify that John H. Zevely and Edmund S. Zevely, witnesses, called for and on behalf the defendant, whose depositions are above set forth, were by me several' sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; that they respectively subscribed the said depositions, and that each of said depositions is authenticated by my signature, and that the said depositions were reduced to writing by T. J. Hayns, esq., who is not interested in the suit, in the presence of the witnesses respectively, and in the presence of counsel for the complainant and defendant in this suit. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand as special examiner this eighth day of March, A. D. 1878.

vs.
JAMES.

E. S. ZEVELY, Esq., Cairo, W. Va.:

DEAR SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th inst. in reference to your familiarity with the facts of the above case, and to say in reply that your testimony will be of great service to Mr. James, the postmaster in this city, who is personally liable in this action. The affidavit which I asked for in my former letter certainly cannot take a great deal of your time, and will be very gratefully received by 1939 me as the representative of Mr. James. I am not authorized to pay you for the testimony which is within your knowledge, but I will pay for the procuring of the same the necessary expenses. That is to say, I will agree to pay the amount which can reasonably be charged for drafting and swearing to the statement referred to in my last letter. I trust that you will reconsider the conclusion expressed in your letter and consent to give me the benefit of your knowledge.

Very respectfully,

STEWART L. WOODFORD,
U. S. Att'y. J. D. J.

Complainant's Exhibit D D, E. S. Zevely, March 6, 1878.—H. F., Sp'l Examiner.

Will you oblige me by taking the affidavit in the following manner: Entitle the affidavit as follows:

United States circuit court, southern district of New York.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA,
County of Ritchie, ss:

E. S. ZEVELY, being duly sworn, testifies as follows, to wit: I am, &c.

(Answer the questions contained in the annexed paper, in writing, in narrative form, repeating the substance of the question in the 1940 answer. Go before a notary public, who will administer the oath and attach his official seal.)

(Endorsed:) Complainant's Exhibit D D, E. S. Zevely, March 6, 1878; H. F., Sp'l examiner.

1. Have you ever been employed in any post-office? If so, state in what office, and at what time, as accurately as you can.

2. Have you ever known of the use in any post office of a hand instrument by which the letter was postmarked wholly on the envelope, and apart from the postage-stamp, and the postage-stamp was canceled at one blow? If so, state what office, when it was first used, who made it, and how it was constructed; specifying particularly the manner in which the postmarker and the canceller were attached to each other, and to the handle, and the material of which they were each made.

3. Was the instrument referred to in Question 2 used in the year 1860, or earlier? Speak to the best of your recollection.

4. Who invented or contrived the instrument above referred to? Did you ever know of the inventor using the same? If so, where, and in what year?

5. Did you yourself ever make or partially make such an instrument? If to, state when, and how it was constructed; give the date according to your best recollection.

E. S. ZEVELY, Esq.,
Cairo, Ritchie Co., W. V.:

SIR: There is a suit in equity pending here against Mr. James, U. S. postmaster at this city, which is based on a patent granted to Marcus P. Norton in 1863, for an improvement in post-office stamps.

I am informed by Mr. J. H. Zevely of Wheeling, W. V., that prior to the year 1860 you made of boxwood a combined postmarking and postage-stamp canceller, so constructed that the postmark would appear wholly on the envelope and apart from the postage-stamp, and would be made by the same blow which put the cancellation mark on the postage mark.

Will you do me the great favor to examine the enclosed papers and write out your answers in the manner indicated and take them before a notary public and swear to them? I will see that the fees of the notary are paid.

I request this as the facts as stated by Mr. J. H. Zevely seem to me to have a very important bearing upon the suit.

I request also that you give as early attention to the matter as you conveniently can.

Very respectfully, yours,

STEWART L. WOODFORD,
U. S. Att'y.

J. D. J.,

1942 United States circuit court for the southern district of New York.
In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL
v.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Present, pursuant to notice, Marcus P. Norton, solicitor, for complainant, and Samuel B. Clarke, assistant U. S. attorney, for the defendant.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant before A. J. Falls, esq., a special examiner appointed for the purpose, at his office, in the city of Washington, D. C., on the 18th day of March, 1878, and following days.

MARCH 18, 1878.

On motion by defendant's counsel, objected to by counsel for complainant, hearing was adjourned until March 19, 1878, at two o'clock p. m.

MARCH 19, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, Marcus P. Norton, solicitor, and Geo. H. Williams, of counsel for complainant, and Assistant U. S. District Attorney Samuel B. Clarke, for defendant.

JOHN J. WEED, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows, viz:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is John J. Weed; I am forty-four years of age to-day; I reside at No. 1321 K street northwest, Washington, D. C.; I am a lawyer.

1943 2. Q. Did you ever have anything to do with a case in the Court of Claims in which Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse were petitioners?

(Objected to by counsel for complainant, as being immaterial, incompetent, and improper.)

A. I represented the United States in the Court of Claims, as assistant solicitor, in a suit which was brought into that court by Shavor and Corse, during part of the time that I was assistant solicitor for the United States in that court.

3. Q. What time was that?

A. My impression is that it was some time in the year 1867, and part of the year 1868; my official connection with the Court of Claims closed on the 1st day of July, 1868; I think the case was argued and decided by the Court of Claims previous to the time that my connection with the court ceased, but I am unable to give the dates, as I have none of the papers with me.

4. Q. What was the nature of that suit?

(Objected to by counsel for complainant, because it is not the best evidence.)

A. I can only state generally what the object of that suit was, and as I now remember it; it was brought to recover from the United States compensation for the use of the postmarking and canceling stamp, which it was alleged had been used by the United States in the different post-offices, and was also alleged to have been invented by Mr. Marcus P. Norton, and also claimed to have been patented by him; and it was also claimed in that suit that Shavor and Corse were entitled to compensation for the use of that invention by reason of their being the assignees of that patent from M. Norton.

5. Q. What period of time did the alleged use of the invention for which compensation had been asked occur?

(Objected to as not being of the best evidence by counsel for complainant.)

1944 A. It is impossible for me to answer that question, but it must have been for the use of the invention prior to the institution of the suit in the Court of Claims.

6. Q. Can you identify the alleged patentee, Marcus P. Norton, any more particularly than you have done?

A. I have never known but one Marcus P. Norton, and I believe that person is the solicitor for the complainant in this case, and I have known him for ten or eleven years, I think, and he is now present at this examination.

7. Q. Is he the one who is alleged to be the inventor?

A. He is the same man that said he was the inventor.

8. Q. Did he have anything to do with that case of Shavor and Corse against the United States?

(Same objection as above.)

A. I think he was originally the attorney for the claimants in that cause, and that at some stage of the prosecution of the suit A. L. Merriman, esq., of this city, became associated with him in its prosecution; I am not now certain whether Mr. Norton appeared at the taking of any ented invention, and the claimants to relieve themselves from the effect of those decisions sought to establish the existence of a special contract made by the United States, to make compensation for the use of this patent, but the Court of Claims found, as I remember now, that the evidence did not establish the existence of any contract. That is the substance of one of the facts found by the court, but I cannot remember specifically what other facts they did find.

(Complainant's counsel objects to all the foregoing evidence after the word "detail," as irresponsive to the question.)

23. Q. Do you remember whether or not the court found in that case that Mr. Norton was the first and original inventor of the post-marking and canceling stamp in question?

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as not within the scope of the direct examination, and because it is immaterial whether the court 1949 did or did not find that fact, it not having jurisdiction thereon.)

A. I do not remember what the Court of Claims did find on that question as to whether Mr. Norton, nor whether the question of Mr. Norton's being the first and orignal inventor of that patent, was directly put in issue in the trial of that cause; I have an indistinct recollection that, as a representative of the government, I had some correspondence with some persons as to the originality of that invention, and took, or attempted to take, some evidence on that question, but my recollection is indistinct; I have not examined the record upon that question since that time.

(Objected to by counsel for complainant as above.)

24. Q. Referring to the conversations you say you had with Mr. Norton during the pendency of the suit in the Court of Claims, did Mr. Norton go into details, in his business transactions with Shavor and Corse, or did he simply speak of them as the owners of the patent?

A. He never gave me any of the details of his arrangement with Shavor and Corse; his conversations were upon that subject general rather than as specific.

25. Q. You have stated, I believe, that in the conversations to which you have referred Mr. Norton said that he was the inventor of the post-marking and stamp canceling device in question; is that so?

A. I always understood him to claim that.

JOHN I. WEED.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of March, 1878.

A. J. FALLS,
Special Examiner.

1950 MARCH 20TH, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, Marcus P. Norton, solicitor, and Geo. H. Williams, of counsel for complainant, and Assistant U. S. District Attorney Samuel B. Clarke, for defendant.

BENJAMIN CHAMBERS, a witness called for the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows, viz:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Benjamin Chambers; I am thirty-six years of age; residence, Washington City; am a manufacturer of post-office stamps.

2. Q. How long have you been a manufacturer of post-office stamps?

A. Twelve years.

3. Q. What did you do before you became a manufacturer of post-office stamps?

A. I was an officer in the U. S. Army immediately before.

4. Q. Well, what did you do before that, if anything?

A. When I did anything I worked at the business of manufacturing stamps with my father, who was the contractor at that time.

5. Q. How long was your father in the business of manufacturing post-office stamps, and what was his name?

A. My father's name was Benjamin Chambers; he began the business in the year 1835; continued at intervals until about 1857; I am not sure about that; I think that was about the time that he stopped; the date could be established by reference to the records of the Post-Office Department.

6. Q. Did he make any stamps after about 1857?

A. I don't recollect the dates; better refer to his contracts on file in the Post-Office Department.

7. Q. Did he ever make any postage stamp canceling instruments to your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

1951 8. Q. Describe the earliest sort or sorts that you remember.

A. They consisted of an iron stamp about three-quarters of an inch in diameter, with bars across the face affixed to a wooden handle.

9. Q. About how large is the handle?

A. About four inches long and one and a quarter in diameter.

10. Q. When was this sort of cancelling stamp first made, according to your recollection?

A. I could only guess at the date; the date could could be established by reference to the contract for making them.

11. Q. Give the earliest date you recollect.

A. Without being certain, I think it was before 1858.

12. Q. Did your father make any other canceling stamp?

A. I think he made wooden, also.

13. Q. Describe one of them.

A. They were a piece of hard wood turned in the form of a handle, having upon one end rings turned on or bars sawed across.

14. Q. Give the earliest date when this sort was made, that you recollect.

A. They were all made under one order or contract; my recollection may not extend to the making of the first ones, as I was not always at work.

15. Q. What I want is not absolutely the first date, but the first date you recollect.

A. I have given that—about 1857.

16. Q. Did your father ever make a combined canceling and post-marking instrument?

A. He did.

17. Q. Describe the first one that you recollect.

A. It was almost exactly like the one in present use, except that the canceler was of solid metal; it consisted of a post-marking stamp and a solid metal canceler having bars on its face, both set upon a base piece which was affixed to a handle.

18. Q. Give the dimensions of the several parts.

1952 A. The post-marking stamp was about one inch and an eighth in diameter. The canceler about three quarters of an inch in diameter, and the base about two inches and a quarter long; the handle about four inches long. The handle was fixed to the center of the base piece on the side opposite to that occupied by thestamp and canceler.

19. Q. Give the other dimensions of the base piece, and the height of the stamp and canceler.

A. The stamp and canceler was one inch in height. The base was one inch and one-eighth wide. It was one-eighth of an inch thick.

20. Q. When was this instrument made, and why was it made, and what was done with it?

A. I first saw it on being home from the army on leave, I think, in the early part of 1862. I am not perfectly sure as to the date. My father showed it to me, and told me he had made it; thought it was a good thing. He asked me to take it to the Patent Office with me and look among the stamps and see if I could find anything like it. I took it there and found something in the case of models which I thought would prevent him from getting it patented. There were two stamps in the case of models which I thought would prevent him. I took it back to him and told him so; he put it in the drawer; took no further action with it. It remained there several years, and I lost sight of it. It was made because of a desire on his part to make improvements on every line in which he was connected. He was confined to the house. Was not able to get out, and passed his time working upon his inventions, which were many.

(Complainant's counsel objects to all this answer as to what was told to the witness by his father.)

21. Q. Describe those stamps that you saw in the Patent Office?

1953 A. One of them was made of brass, and had a canceler screwed on to the side of it. That was the one that I thought would stop his patent. The other one was more similar to the one he had made still, but I didn't notice it so particularly, having first got hold of the one first above mentioned, but I distinctly recollect that there was two which I thought would interfere.

22. Q. Describe in detail that first one.

A. It had wheels in it for dating, and the canceler was a small piece of brass screwed on its side. I could not now give any of its dimensions, but it was larger than the second one named; the handle was larger. The second one was made of iron; that is my recollection. I cannot more fully describe it; would recognize them if I saw them.

23. Q. Describe that brass canceler that you speak of.

A. I do not know whether I can or not. I remember that it had fine bars on it, much finer than those on my father's model.

24. Q. Did these stamps in the Patent Office have labels on them?

A. Yes, sir.

25. Q. Do you recollect what the writing on the labels was?

(Objected to as not the best evidence.)

A. I only remember the man's name, that is all, and that was Marcus P. Norton, on both of them.

26. Q. Was there anything to indicate the date which either of them belonged?

A. I took no notice of the dates. Their presence there was sufficient for me.

27. Q. Were you then familiar with the business of making post-office stamps?

A. I cannot say that I was entirely familiar with it. Had worked at it as a boy in my father's shop.

28. Q. Was it then your opinion that the instrument having the brass canceler screwed on the side of the postmarker, and having the name of Marcus P. Norton on the label, was substantially the same thing 1954 which you have stated your father made, and which you have described?

(Objected to because witness is not an expert.)

A. It was my opinion that the stamp having the brass canceler screwed on to it would prevent my father from geting a patent for the instrument he had made, and I so told him; and, also, I was further satisfied that he could not get a patent by the presence of the other one.

29. Q. State fully the grounds of that opinion.

(Objected to as above.)

A. The usefulness of my father's model consisted in marking and canceling at one operation; and it was obvious to my mind that either of the instruments in the case would accomplish that end; I therefore considered that sufficient ground for what I said to my father.

30. Q. Is your opinion the same now as it was then?

(Objected to as above.)

A. It is.

31. Q. Supposing an instrument to consist of an ordinary postmarking stamp, with an ordinary handle and a metal canceler screwed on to the side, having sharp edges on its acting face, so that the postage stamp might be cut as well as inked, would that instrument differ substantially, in your opinion, from the combined postmarker and canceler made by your father and described by you?

(Objected to as above.)

A. It would differ only as to the additional function of cutting; the principle contained, that of postmarking and canceling at one operation, would be contained in both; a claim could be maintained for the cutting improvement only in such a case.

1955 32. Q. Supposing that such an instrument as I have described, having a cutting canceler, were to be used, and it was found that the envelope and contents were injured by cutting, can you think of any merely mechanical alteration of the canceler which would leave the instrument still capable of postmarking and canceling at one operation? By merely mechanical alteration I mean such an alteration as would suggest itself naturally to any mechanic.

(Objected to as above.)

A. I would proceed to grind off the cutters smooth with the surface, leaving the instrument only capable of inking and not cutting.

33. Q. That alteration, as I understand you, would be a merely mechanical change; am I right?

(Objected to as above.)

A. That alteration, though a mere mechanical one, would leave the instrument substantially the same.

34. Q. Do you recollect whether the second instrument, which you refer to as having been found by you in the Patent Office, and which you state was more nearly like the one made by your father, had a tube with a cork in it for the canceler?

A. Now, in my examination that day I confined myself entirely to the principle of postmarking and canceling at one operation; having found that my father's instrument was not the first one which would effect that, I withdrew and took no notice of any difference in the construction or material of the canceler, as it was a secondary consideration with me. I, therefore, do not recollect whether it had or not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

35. Q. What office in the army did you hold?

A. I was a captain of cavalry.

36. Q. What was the date of your commission?

1956 A. It was in October or November, 1861; I am not clear.

37. Q. Where did you go after you were appointed captain?

A. I went to Virginia, in the immediate vicinity of Washington; removed for a while, afterwards, about the first part of '62, winter; went to Philadelphia; afterwards I returned to Virginia.

38. Q. When did you take your first leave of absence after you were appointed?

A. I couldn't give the date for the reason that I frequently would get one or two days, and ride into town, stay at home over night, and return to my company the day following. I lived in Washington; hence the frequency of my visits.

39. Q. How long did you remain in the army in Virginia?

A. I commanded my company until the end of 1864. I then left the army; my service was all in the State of Virginia.

40. Q. Do you think it is possible that your visit to the Patent Office, with the instrument that your father made, might have been in the early part of 1863, as you state you are not confident of the date?

A. I think it is possible I might have been mistaken for one whole year; since answering the above question as to the date of my commission and my whereabouts, I do think it was possible that it was in 1863 and not 1862.

41. Q. You have stated that you discovered two instruments in the Patent Office when you went there with your father's instrument, one of which you have particularly described, and the other you say was more like the instrument that your father made. Please state, if you can, in what respect the latter was more like your father's instrument.

A. Well, sir, it had the base piece, while the other one had not; in the one the canceler was screwed on to the side, in the other it occupied the place on the base piece.

1957 42. Q. Was the post-marker in that instrument attached to one end of the base-piece or cross-bar, and the canceler to the other end, with the handle in the middle of the cross-bar?

A. It was.

43. Q. Is it not necessary, in your judgment, to make a perfect combined post-marker and post canceler that the acting faces should be exactly parallel with each other, so that they will both strike the paper in the same way and at the same time?

A. If the canceler be made of cork, as at present, the surface of the cork canceler should be slightly raised above that of the postmarking stamp to insure the most perfect result and effectual canceling of the three-cent stamp, because the cork will strike the paper a little in advance of the postmarking stamp, and squeeze out a little larger amount of ink than would be deposited if both were exactly level; it is now my practice to cut the cork in that manner.

44. Q. Suppose the postmarker and the canceler both to be made of iron or steel, what would then be your opinion as to the necessity of their faces being equal?

A. It would be eminently necessary to have them both square and level.

45. Q. Suppose a combined instrument is taken, the canceler having blades or knives on it, and those knives or blades should be filed off so as to make the surface of the canceler smooth, would not that smooth surface of the canceler be somewhat above the surface of the post-marker, so that when the instrument is used it would tip a little, and not make a full face impression of the canceler?

A. In such cutting cancels as I have seen, the knives or cutters always projected slightly above the face of the canceler; and if they were ground off, it would leave the face of the canceler where it was before in respect to the surface of the marking stamp; if the canceler 1958 and stamp were of one height, removing the knives would not effect their relative position on the base piece.

46. Q. Do you know whether or not the canceler projected below the postmarker the entire width of the knives, or only part of the width of the knives?

A. There has been invented a great variety of cutting cancelers; some have knives, others have knives with broad guards to prevent their entrance through an envelope; others fine teeth as a file and made to revolve with the blow, so as to tear the three-cent stamp; each and all of these devices have been declared mischievous and their use prohibited by the Post-Office Department; I cannot tell to which of these you refer.

(So much of the answer as states trials of cutting devices and the action of the department about them objected to by defendant's counsel as irresponsive.)

47. Q. You say that several kinds of instruments have been made for the purpose of postmarking letters and canceling stamps; is it not necessary to determine their relative value, or whether they have any value at all, that they should be experimented with for that purpose?

(Objected to as not within the scope of the direct examination, and is plainly improper.)

A. To determine the usefulness and value of any mechanical device it is necessary to make an experiment with it.

48. Q. Can you say that in the construction of instruments or machines that the substitution of knives to do cutting is substantially the same as materials for printing or making impressions with ink on articles or paper?

A. Separately considered, cutting devices stand apart and distinct from printing devices.

1959 49. Q. Have the combined stamps which you have manufactured for the government been generally the same in form and in substance?

(Objected to as immaterial and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. Since my entrance into the business they have never been changed either in form or material.

50. Q. State, briefly, how and what they are made of.

(Same objection.)

A. They are made usually of steel in the postmarking stamp itself; of cast-iron in the base piece, and of brass in the tube holding the cork canceler, the handle being of walnut wood.

51. Q. You have been familiar with post-office stamps for a long time, as you say; I will ask you if you have not always understood that Marcus P. Norton was the inventor of the combined postmarking and post canceling stamp?

(Same objection.)

A. I have always been aware that he was the patentee, and so regarded him as the inventor.

52. Q. Referring to the instrument that you saw in the Patent Office with the brass canceler screwed on to the postmarker, do you know whether or not there were knives or bars on the surface of that brass canceler?

A. If you will refer to the question propounded to me as to whether there was a tube with a cork on it on one of the two instruments, you will find in my answer that I did not regard the material of the canceler, or its construction, carefully enough to describe it.

53. Q. Where did your father reside while you were in the army?

A. In Washington City.

B. CHAMBERS.

Subscribed to and sworn to before me this 20th day of March, 1878.

A. J. FALLS,
Special Examiner.

1960 Adjourned by consent of counsel until Thursday, March 20th, 1878, at 10 o'clock a. m.

MARCH 21ST, 1878.

Present pursuant to adjournment—Marcus P. Norton, solicitor for complainant, and Geo. H. Williams, of counsel for complainant, and Assistant U. S. District Attorney Samuel B. Clarke, for defendant.

AMOS L. MERRIMAN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows, viz:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Amos L. Merriman; age, fifty-four years; residence, Washington, D. C.; am a lawyer.

2. Q. Did you ever have anything to do with a case in the Court of Claims in which Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of Troy, New York, were petitioners, and which was based upon a claim for compensation for the use by the Post-Office Department of a combined postmarker and stamp canceling instrument, claimed to have been patented to Marcus P. Norton?

A. I was employed as counsel in that case by Shavor and Corse, shortly after the suit had been instituted.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton, complainant's solicitor in this suit, and now present?

A. I do.

4. Q. Did he ever have anything to do with that suit?

A. His name was signed to the original petition filed in the case as solicitor.

5. Q. What else, if anything, did he have to do with the case?

A. He retired from any active management of the case for the 1961 reason that I supposed the claimants desired to use his testimony. He did not want to act in the double capacity of attorney and witness.

6. Q. Was he a witness in that case?

A. He was.

7. Q. Did you have any conversation with him before his examination in reference to any of the matters about which he was likely to be examined?

A. I presume I did in a general way.

8. Q. Did you have any in regard to the general interrogatory as to whether or no he had any interest in the claim?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel, because it is not competent to give the statement of Mr. Norton as evidence in this case.)

A. I think I did; at least I recollect that either shortly before, or at the time of examination, Mr. Norton, in response to the general interrogatory whether he had any interest, direct or indirect, in the subject matter of the claim, stated in general terms that he could testify that he had no direct interest in it, but wouldn't say that he had no indirect interest in it, and I think he testified in that manner.

9. Q. Did he say anything else; give any reason?

A. I don't recollect that he stated the reason why, but he may have done so; I do recollect the impression left upon my mind, but whether from his statements or Mr. Corse as to the interest he had in the patent I can't say; I had very little conversation with Mr. Norton in regard to that matter.

10. Q. Did Mr. Norton at any other time while the suit was pending make any other statements bearing upon the ownership of the patent, or of the claim, or of any interest in either?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't recollect whether he did.

1962 11. Q. Did he ever claim to own the patent, or that Shavor and Corse had reassigned it to him?

A. Not that I recollect of while I had any connection with that suit.

12. Q. How long were you connected with the suit?

A. Until the suit was tried; I think the suit was tried in 1868, but I am not certain.

13. Q. Did Mr. Norton ever state that Shavor and Corse were entitled to the compensation claimed?

(Same objection.)

A. I think he stated that; I think he swore to it; he never disputed their right to what was claimed in that suit.

Cross examination by Mr. WILLIAMS:

14. Q. Did Mr. Norton claim in the conversation with you, to which you have referred, to be the first and original inventor of this combined marker and stamp?

A. Yes; he always spoke of the invention as being his own originally.

15. Q. Did Shavor and Corse pay you for your professional services in that case?

(Objected to as immaterial, and not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. They never paid anything for my services in that case, and a part only of the expenses that I incurred.

A. L. MERRIMAN.

Sworn to and subscribed the 21st day of March, 1878, before me.

A. J. FALLS,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned sine die.

1963 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Columbia, ss:

I, A. J. Falls, notary public within and for said District, appointed by special order of court, a certified copy of which is herewith annexed, to act as special examiner, under the 67th rule in equity, as amended, in the cause of Christopher C. Campell v. Thomas L. James, pending in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, do hereby certify that the foregoing examination was held at my office, No. 613 Fifteenth street, Washington, D. C., on the 18th, 19th, 20th, and 21st of March, 1878, the adjournments being made at the times in said depositions stated.

I further certify that at the said time and place I was attended by John J. Weed, Benjamin Chambers, and Amos L. Merriman, witnesses produced on behalf of the defendant; that the said witnesses were, previous to the commencement of their respective depositions, by me severally examined, cautioned and solemnly sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and the said depositions hereinbefore appearing were reduced to writing by James D. Ryan, a disinterested party, in the presence of counsel for both parties, who assented thereto, and read over to said witnesses respectively, and were thereupon by them respectively subscribed, and were at the same time severally authenticated by my signature. I further certify that I am not of counsel nor attorney, nor relative of either of the parties to this cause, nor in any manner interested in the result of the same.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my notarial seal this 22d day of March, 1868.

[SEAL.] A. J. FALLS,
Special Examiner.

1964 At a stated term of the U. S. circuit court for the southern district of New York, held at the city of New York, on the 2d day of February, 1878.

Present, Hon. Hoyt H. Wheeler, Judge.

v.
THOMAS L. JAMES. } In equity.

On reading and filing the subjoined consent, and on motion of Stewart L. Woodford, U. S. attorney, and of counsel for the defendant, it is ordered that Nelson K. Hopkins, esq., of Buffalo, New York, be and he is hereby appointed a special examiner of this court, to take the testimony at Buffalo, New York, under the 67th equity rule, as amended, of John Powers, and of such other competent witnesses as may be brought before him on the part of the defendant; and it is further ordered that A. J. Falls, esq., of Washington, D. C., be and he is hereby appointed a special examiner of this court, to take the testimony at Washington, D. C., under the 67th equity rule, as amended, of such competent witnesses as may be brought before him on the part of the defendant herein, or on the part of the complainant herein.

(Signed) HOYT H. WHEELER.

A copy.
[SEAL.] JOHN I. DAVENPORT, Clerk.

1965 Circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York in second circuit. In equity.

vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Depositions of sundry witnesses taken before me, J. G. Pomerene, a special examiner under the sixty-seventh equity rule as amended, appointed by the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York by an order dated the 11th day of February, A. D. 1878, at my office in the city of Cleveland in the State of Ohio, on the 31st day of May, A. D. 1878, and following days on behalf of the defendant in a suit pending in said court in which Christopher C. Campbell is complainant and Thomas L. James is defendant, in the presence of counsel for both complainant and defendant.

Circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York.
In equity.

CHRISTOHER C. CAMPBELL
vs.
THOMAS L. JAMES.

Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendants herein at the city of Cleveland, Ohio, before J. G. Pomerene, esq., a special examiner duly appointed for the purpose.

1966 Present pursuant to notice, Marcus P. Norton, esq., of counsel and solicitor for complainant, and Samuel B. Clarke, assistant U. S. district attorney, for the defendant.

W. J. WARNER, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. State your name, age, residence, and occupation.

A. W. J. Warner; age, seventy years old last January; residence, Cleveland, Ohio, and by occupation a builder.

2. Q. State, if you know, who had charge of the construction of the government building on the public square which is used for post-office, custom-house, and for court purposes?

A. I had the entire contract, no partner with me, for all the various kinds of work about the building.

3. Q. State, if you know, when the post-office was moved into that building and from what place it was moved.

A. The post-office was opened on the 29th day of December, 1858; they had begun to move on Christmas day of that year, 1858; it was moved from Water street.

4. Q. State how you fix that date.

A. I distinctly remember it, and also have it on record and the record with me.

5. Q. Just read the entry in your record and state when it was made.

A. "December 29th, 1858; post-office opened at 4 o'clock p. m. in new building; all mud." "December 28th, 1858; post-office folks moving into the new building on the square." These entries were made by me on the day of their date and in the book I read them from.

1967 Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

6. Q. How long have you lived in Cleveland, Ohio?

A. I came here in 1831 to make it my home, but was off and on until 1835, and have kept house here ever since then.

7. Q. You say on your direct examination that you were a builder; have you been extensively engaged in that business in Cleveland?

A. I have; I am the oldest builder and contractor, and the heaviest, and employed a large number of men from 1835 until 1868, when I retired from the business.

8. Q. Who furnished the plans for the government building about which you have testified?

A. The government did.

9. Q. Will you state the plan for the first floor of that building now used as a post-office?

A. There were three rooms used for post-office purposes, and there were side and end halls to accommodate the public.

10. Q. State for what purpose the second floor of that building was used.

A. In the second floor there was the custom-house officer; he occupied two rooms, one large and one small; the U. S. judge occupied one room, the marshall and his clerk two rooms, and the middle room was vacant.

11. Q. For what purpose was the third story occupied?

A. United States court-room and jury rooms connected with the court.

12. Q. When you first came to Cleveland to reside how many inhabitants were there?

A. I think there was about twelve hundred in 1831.

13. Q. About how many inhabitants were there in this city in the years 1849 and '50?

A. According to the best of my recollection, about forty-five thousand.

14. Q. About how many inhabitants were there in 1853?

1968 A. I should judge about fifty thousand.

15. Q. About how much room was occupied for the post-office in this city in 1858 previous to the occupying of the new post-office building during the last part of December of that year?

A. About one-third of that occupied by the present post-office floor; I know the office on Water street from which they moved into the new building was very small.

16. Q. About how much room was occupied by the post office in this city in 1853?

A. The same as in my last answer, and it was the same post-office and in the same place at that time.

17. Q. Where was the post-office in this city before it was removed to Water street, the place referred to in your last answer?

A. On Superior street.

18. Q. For how many years was that post-office on Superior street, in this city?

A. I think it was on Superior street when I first came here to live, and remained there until it was removed to Water street, and it remained on Water street until it was removed into the new post office building in December, 1858.

19. Q. If you remember, please state how much room was occupied by the post-office while it remained on Superior street.

A. One or two very small rooms.

20. Q. Describe, as near as you remember, the construction of the post-office while it was on Water street, and give the approximate size of each room, if it had more than one room.

A. My opinion is it was 20x60 feet, and perhaps one-third or one-quarter of it was occupied by an entrance to the front part of the office, and the balance was occupied by the post-office and distributing-room for post-office use.

21. Q. How many windows or openings were there in that office for the purpose of delivering letters or other mail matter to the public?

1969 A. Three openings, two windows and a door, and these were in the front wall of the building to light the room, and the mail matter was delivered through two openings, one for gentlemen and one for ladies, in a partition back from the front wall, which separated the post-office from the front room.

22. Q. The two windows and door which you refer to in the front wall of the building were of the ordinary kind containing sash and glass, were they not?

A. Yes.

23. Q. The door in that wall was for the purpose of admitting people to the front of the post-office to receive their mail, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

24. Q. Do you remember about the size of each of those two openings through which mail matter was delivered through the partition separating the post-office from the front or entrance room?

A. About twelve inches square; a little glass door swung on hinges and fastened on the inside, and could not be opened from the outside.

25. Q. Those doors were usually kept closed excepting during the actual delivery of mail matter, were they not?

A. Yes; that was the custom.

26. Q. You, yourself, received mail matter through one or both of those windows, did you not?

A. Yes.

27. Q. Frequently?

A. Yes, sir.

28. Q. About how high from the floor to the underside of those openings was it?

A. About three feet, the ordinary heighth of such places; it might have been three feet and a half, and to the top of the opening it would be about four feet and a half.

29. Q. Do you remember the time when the office was removed from Superior street to Water street, the place about which I have just been inquiring of you?

A. I could not tell exactly; probably about 1850; somewhere along there.

1970 30. Q. It remained there until it was removed into the new post-office building, in December, 1858, did it not?

A. Yes.

31. Q. Do you personally know Mr. Charles E. Wheeler, in this city?

A. I do; he was a clerk in the post-office in this city.

32. Q. When did you last see Mr. Wheeler?

A. I have seen him last within a month.

33. Q. Did he make any inquiries of you about the time the post office was moved into the new building?

A. No; he did not; I have not been asked about that until Mr. Clarke, the defendant's counsel, asked me to day.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

34. Q. How many times during the last 28 years has your attention been called to the post-office as it was on Water street and on Superior street in respect to the matters about which you have been cross-examined?

A. A great many times, for I have been employed in making repairs and alterations about the post-office buildings while they were on Superior street and Water street, and also upon the new building since I built it.

35. Q. Do you recollect whether the post-office was ever in the Herald building on Bank street?

A. It seems to me it was, and it seems to me it was not; it might have been.

36. Q. Was not the post-office removed from Superior street to Bank street, in the Herald building in 1850, and did it not continue there for about three years until J. W. Gray was appointed postmaster by President Pierce, and did not Gray remove the post-office to his own building on Water street?

A. I think it was in the Herald building for a short time, and 1971 that it was removed by Gray into his own building when he was appointed postmaster; it was for so short a time I had forgotten it.

Recross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

37. Q. On your redirect examination you have spoken of a post-office in the Herald building on Bank street, what sort of a post-office was that?

A. It was rented by the government for post-offices purposes, and was about twenty to twenty-five feet front by fifty to sixty feet deep, three stories high.

38. Q. On which floor of that building was the post-office?

A. First floor above the basement.

39. Q. How much room of that floor was occupied for post-office purposes?

A. It was about twelve to fifteen feet from the front wall to the partition separating the post-office from the front entrance.

40. Re X Q. How many openings for the delivery of mail matter to the public were there in that partition which separated the public room from the post-office room?

A. Two; one for ladies and one for gentlemen, and they were about the same as those on Water street.

41. Re X Q. Were those openings about the size of those on Water street?

A. Yes.

42. Re X Q. Did those delivery openings have glass doors like, or substantially like, those you described on Water street?

A. I can't say; I incline to think they were of wood, and hung by hinges and fastened on the inside.

43. Re X Q. About how high from the floor were those delivery openings?

A. About three feet and a half; about the same as the others on Water street.

1972 44. Re X Q. Did you receive through either of those windows mail matter for yourself, personally?

A. Yes, sir.

45. Re X Q. Do you remember of having seen the table used for stamping letters anywhere near those delivery openings, while the post-office was either at Bank street or Water street?

A. I never noticed those.

46. Re X Q. Had there been a table for stamping letters and mail matter in either of the post-offices on Water or Bank street, and within from six to twelve feet of those delivery windows, or either of them, you would have been very apt to have seen it, would you not?

A. No; you could not see anything there, I will tell you why; there was a case just behind the boxes containing miscellaneous mail matters, and that shut off all view of the room in the rear.

47. Re X Q. About how far from those delivery windows was this extra case for containing miscellaneous letters and other postal matter?

A. Three to four feet—just to turn around.

48. Re X Q. About how wide was the post-office at the point where the partition, containing the delivery windows, separated it from the front or public room in the post-office on Bank street?

A. About twenty-one or twenty-two feet; it occupied the whole room, including the door which was in this partition to allow entrance to the post-office from the front room.

49. Re X Q. Did that separating partition, including the door, occupy the whole width of the post-office and of the public room?

A. Yes; it did.

By Mr. CLARKE:

50. Q. How do you recollect about the facts connected with the Herald building? How do you distinguish that building from the Water street building?

1973 A. On account of its being a narrow building; I don't think there was any hall there at all, because they put a stairway on the outside to get to the second and third floors, and it remains there yet.

51. Q. Do you remember when they put that stairway there?

A. It was a good many years ago.

52. Q. You think there could not have been a side hall because it would have made the post-office too small?

A. Yes; that is my opinion about it.

53. Q. You may be mistaken, may you not?

A. Yes; I may be.

By Mr. NORTON:

54. Q. Have you any doubt in your own mind about there being no side hall in the Herald building on Bank street, while occupied as a post-office on the first floor, or about the partition extending from outer wall to outer wall on the inside?

A. There might have been a hall there before the post-office went in, but when the post-office went in there was no hall, from the fact that they built a stairway on the outside to get to the second and third stories; I have no doubt about it.

55. Q. By Mr. CLARKE: Do you recollect positively and distinctly, without making any inferences, that there was no side hall when the post-office was in the Herald building on Bank street?

A. I should say when the post-office occupied it there was no hall there at all, and the partition ran across the entire room inside.

56. Q. Do you recollect that?

A. That is my best recollection.

W. J. WARNER.

Sworn to before me, and subscribed in my presence, this 31st day of May, A. D. 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned by consent to June first, 10 o'clock a. m.

1974 Met pursuant to adjournment of the 31st of May. Same counsel present as before.

JOHN ALBINGER, a witness called for and on behalf of the defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. John Albinger; forty-four years old the 20th of May last; residence, Cleveland, Ohio; and a clerk in the post-office.

2. Q. Were you a clerk in the post-office in this city when it was located on Water street, in Postmaster Gray's building?

A. I was.

3. Q. State when you were first employed there, and how long you continued a clerk in the post-office at that place.

A. I cannot state the exact date, but my best recollection is I went in the fall of 1854, October, and continued there until they moved the office into the present building, which was in 1858.

4. Q. State whether Charles E. Wheeler was a clerk in the office on Water street when you went there; and, if he was, how long he continued to be a clerk in the office at that place.

A. He was there when I came in the office, and moved up in the new building; how long he staid in the new building I could not state.

5. Q. You mean that Mr. Wheeler was employed in the Water street office all the time that you were?

A. I do.

6. Q. What sort of an instrument was used for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps while the office was on Water street, if you know?

(Objected to, as the defendant has already closed his case on that subject.)

1975 To the best of my recollection it was simply a cancelling stamp, with the dates and "Cleveland" on it; afterwards there was a bar attached—a small round bar.

7. Q. Make an outline drawing of the latter instrument.

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know that I can; I am no draughtsman.

8. Q. What was the bar for, and how was it attached?

(Same objection.)

A. The bar was for cancelling the stamps, and attached with solder.

9. Q. Attached whereabouts on the dating stamp?

(Same objection, and as leading, and as an improper manner of examining the witness on the subject of the inquiry.)

A. At the side of the dating stamp.

10. Q. About how long was the bar?

(Same objections as to last question.)

A. About an inch long, I should think, and about a half an inch in diameter.

11. Q. Look at the drawing which I have just made, and state whether that represents a sectional outline of that stamp.

(Same objections, and the further objection that it is not proper for the counsel to undertake to "tail up" the witness, and thus force testimony out of him which the witness expresses unwillingness to give in answer to question 7.)

A. It does.

The drawing offered in evidence and marked Defendant's Exhibit 175, John Albinger, Cleveland, Ohio, June 1, 1878, J. G. P., special examiner.

Here follows diagram marked page 1976.

1978 mail dispatcher; the balance of the time I have been a distributer, distributing mail matter for the country at large.

18. X Q. Your first employment by the United States in the Cleveland post-office commenced some time in the fall of 1854, did it not?

A. It did.

19. X Q. Your duties for two successive years thereafter were those of a porter in that post-office, were they not?

A. They were.

20. X Q. Please explain what your duties were as a porter at that time and during those two years?

A. Unlocking and assorting mails, and sweeping and doing work usually done by porters.

21. X Q. During those two years, did you do any postmarking of letters in that office?

A. I was not employed for that business, but did some occasionally on my own account.

22. X Q. How frequently did you do that during those two years?

A. I would not like to answer that; I could not say.

23. X Q. How many years ago since you were employed as a porter in the post-office in Cleveland?

A. It would be 24 years the way I make it.

24. X Q. Give the names of the persons employed in that office during the two years you were porter there?

A. Charles Wheeler, Mr. Wright, Jas. Stacey, Sebastian Everett, Stafford Lynch, Lyman Bennett, James Worley, Gustavus Blausman, James Welsh, E. S. Beardsley; that is all I remember.

25. X Q. What were Wheeler's duties at that time?

A. He was a D. P. O. room clerk, and distributed letters in that room.

26 X Q. How many persons at that time were engaged postmarking letters?

A. I could not answer that.

1979 27. X Q. Do you know anything about a company or anybody having a lottery office in this city in 1854 and 1855?

A. I did at that time.

28. X Q. Where was the office of that lottery concern located?

(Objected to as not germane to the direct examination.)

A. I did not know at that time; I don't know now, and never did know.

29. X Q. Do you know the length of time that lottery office continued to carry on its business in this city?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know which one you mean.

30. X Q. How many of those kind of concerns were in the city at that time?

A. There were three that I distributed papers for or helped.

31. X Q. Do you remember the name under which either of those lotteries went at that time?

(Same objection.)

A. I do.

32. X Q. Name them.

A. Bangs was one, Norton another, and Kendig another.

33. X Q. Do you remember the time when the Post-Office Department stopped the circulation in the mails of the advertisements and other infamous printing of those lotteries?

(Same objection, and as being immaterial.)

A. I do, but not the year and date.

34. X Q. Give your best recollection as to that time.

A. It must have been between the years of 1856 and 1858.

1980 35. X Q. Do you remember the time when those kind of things first began to circulate through the mails at this post-office by each of those parties?

(Same objection.)

A. I do not.

35½. X Q. When do you remember first to have seen any circulars, papers, or other printed matter in the Cleveland post-office for transportation for those lottery concerns or either of them?

(Same objection.)

A. I could not fix an exact date, but saw some go through the mails all the time I was in the office, from the time I first went in up to the time I told you they stopped.

36. X Q. Did those documents contain postage-stamps for payment of postage?

(Same objection.)

A. They did not; they were paid for in bulk by the companies—a part of them.

36½. X Q. How was the other part paid that was not paid in the "bulk"?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know how the rest were paid.

37. X Q. Were those circulars, papers, or other documents from those concerns postmarked by the Cleveland post-office?

(Same objection.)

A. Those that were paid in bulk were not.

38. X Q. Those that were otherwise paid, were they postmarked by the Cleveland post-office?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't remember.

39. X Q. About what proportion were paid in bulk and about what proportion were not paid in bulk?

(Same objection.)

1981 A. I don't remember.

40. X Q. Since you have been in the Cleveland post-office, have you ever seen any postage-stamps on letters canceled by the use of the postmarking or dating stamp; I mean by that a stamp having the word "Cleveland, O.," engraved by raised letters within a circle and type with raised letters in the centre that circle for printing the month and day of the month?

A. I have seen so many different ones I could not answer that question.

41. X Q. Did you at any time previous to the first of January, 1861, in the Cleveland post office, make any special or particular examination of any of the various or different contrivances referred to by you in your last answer?

A. No, sir; I did not.

42. X Q. How came you, if you know, to be called as a witness at this time and on this occasion?

(Objected to as immaterial and not germane to this examination.)

A. I was subpœnaed by Mr. Clarke, the defendant's counsel.

43. X Q. Previous to your being subpœnaed, as stated in your last answer, with whom did you have conversation about the subject matter of your direct examination?

(Same objection.)

A. Mr. Wheeler was looking for an old stamp of some kind in the new post office; this gentleman, Mr. Clarke, was with him; Mr. Wheeler told him he had better have me as a witness as I was in the office when the stamp first came out.

44. X Q. When was that that Wheeler and Clark were up at the new post-office looking after a stamp?

(Same objection.)

A. Some time last winter.

1982 45. X Q. Now, when did you last have conversation with Mr. Wheeler with reference to the matter of your direct examination by Mr. Clarke?

(Same objection.)

A. I haven't had any conversation with Mr. Wheeler since that time about the stamp.

46. X Q. Had you had any conversation with him about it before that time?

A. I had not.

47. X Q. Wheeler never said a word to you at any time as to whether you did or did not know anything about the subject matter of your direct examination, did he?

(Same objection.)

A. No; never did.

48. X Q. You are sure of that.

(Same objection.)

A. I am.

49. X Q. You swear to it positively, do you not?

A. I do.

50. X Q. Did Mr. Wheeler ever have any conversation with you about the stamp which counsel for defendant was pleased to make out on a sheet of paper for the purpose of helping you testify in this case, and which I show you as the so-called "Defendant's Exhibit 175"?

(Same objection.)

A. Mr. Wheeler never said a word to me about the stamp since he left the office, but once before I met him with Mr. Clarke.

51. X Q. When was that time to which you refer in your last answer when Mr. Clarke was not present?

(Same objection.)

A. I think it was at the time he was superintendent of railway service.

1983 52. X Q. In what year or years was that?

(Same objection.)

A. Between the years 1863 and 1866, as near as I remember it.

53. X Q. Where was that conversation had?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't remember.

54. X Q. Who were present, if anybody?

(Same objection.)

A. I can't say as to that.

55. X Q. What did Wheeler say to you about it at that time?

(Same objection.)

A. I can't give you the exact words; he carried the idea that he was the inventor of that stamp.

56. X Q. Is that all?

A. That is all I remember.

57. X Q. What was the occasion which led Mr. Wheeler to make that statement to you at that time?

A. I don't remember of anything in particular; we were talking over matters and things in the office in days gone by.

58. X Q. Did you ever hear or know of any person claiming that Mr. Wheeler was not the inventor of that stamp?

A. Yes, I do.

59. X Q. When was that?

A. Mr. Bassett claimed he was the inventor.

60. X Q. Who is Mr. Bassett and where does he reside?

A. He is a hatter in the city and was a clerk at that time, the time the stamp came out, having a canceler attached to it.

Recess until 4 o'clock p. m.

1984 4 O'CLOCK P. M.

61. X Q. How long was the post-office on Bank street?

A. I don't know anything about that.

62. X Q. Where was the post-office taken to from Bank street?

A. That I know nothing about.

63. X Q. While the post office was on Bank street, were you employed there by the government?

A. I told you I don't know anything about that office.

64. X Q. You were never in that office in your life, were you?

A. I never was.

65. X Q. When was the post-office moved from Bank street to Water street?

A. I don't know.

66. X Q. When was the post-office moved from Water street to its present location in the new building?

A. 1858, about Christmas.

67. X Q. How long had you been in the employ of the government at that time?

A. Between three and four years.

68. X Q. You first went into the employ of the government in the Water street post-office?

A. Yes, sir.

69. X Q. In what year was that?

A. In the fall of 1854.

70. X Q. You were two years porter in that office, and you then entered upon what duty or duties?

A. As mail dispatcher.

71. X Q. What do you mean by mail dispatcher?

A. Locking and dispatching mails, sending them away on trains.

72. X Q. How long did you continue that business?

A. Well, I could not tell exactly; it might have been for three years.

1985 73. X Q. You were porter for two years and mail dispatcher for about three years; that would make five years from the fall of 1854, which would bring you down to the fall of the year 1859, would it not?

A. Not the way I intended it, sir.

74. X Q. What is the way you intended it?

A. In all the time I dispatched mails and was porter until I quit in the new post-office.

75. X Q. You discontinued the functions of a mail dispatcher in the new post-office, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

76. X Q. In what year was that?

A. As I said before, I could not give the exact date.

77. X Q. How long after you moved into the new post-office did you continue to dispatch mails as your principal business?

A. It might have been a year, it might have been more, and it might have been less.

78. X Q. To return to the Water street post-office, what particular part of that office did you occupy as the porter of the institution?

A. The back part.

79. X Q. Did you have a separate room there for that business?

A. I did not.

80. X Q. From what part of that post-office were the mails delivered for transportation?

A. The back part.

81. X Q. Give the names of the clerks that were employed in the Water street post-office during all the time you were at work there.

A. Charles Wheeler, Mr. Wright, James Stacey, Sebastian Everett, James McGough, Stafford Lynch, James Worley, Gustave Blausman, Lyman Bennett, James Welsh, E. S. Beardsley, Pete Phillips, Jacob Hoyt, George Lester, James Hill; that is all I think of now; there might have been some more.

82. X Q. Are your recollections pretty good as to these things you have detailed in your last answer?

A. They are fair.

83. X Q. Which of those persons named in your last answer
1986 but one, was the stamping clerk in the Water street post-office during all the time you were there?

A. Mr. Wright was the general stamping clerk; I don't know his first name.

84. X Q. Anybody else?

A. I guess he did stamping.

85. X Q. (Question repeated.)

A. Not in the Water street office.

86. X Q. You are sure of that?

A. No; I made a little mistake there; I can't tell you who took the stamping after Mr. Wright left, and he left a little while before we left Water street.

87. X Q. How long before you left Water street did he leave?

A. I could not tell you that; it was out of my department and I paid very little attention to it.

88. X Q. While you were in the Water street post office, and during all the time you were there, did you see any letters or other mail matter having postage-stamps thereon for the payment of postage, with such postage-stamps cancelled by the use of the dating or Cleveland post-marking stamp?

A. Oh, yes; I used to see them every day.

89 X Q. Do you know Mr. A. L. Bassett, a merchant on Water street in this city?

A. I know him.

90. X Q. About how long have you known him?

A. About twenty or twenty-two years—somewhere along there.

91. X Q. Was Mr. A. L. Bassett employed in the post-office while it was located on Water street in this city?

A. He was.

92. X Q. In what year or years was that, if you remember?

A. To my best recollection I should say it was in 1855.

93. X Q. About how long was he there during that term of employment as near as you remember?

1987 A. Some time in 1860 he left and went in business on Water street.

94. X Q. Was Mr. A. L. Bassett employed in the post-office where it is now located, in the new post-office building?

A. He was.

95. X Q. What time did he commence that employment?

A. To the best of my recollection it was 1855, on Water street.

86. X Q. And he continued during each year until 1860, when, as you say, he went into business on Water street. Is that what you mean to be understood?

A. He might have been there later than 1860; I would not say as to that; I can't fix the date.

97. X Q. Did he not leave the service in that post-office some time in February, 1863?

A. I know no different from what I have already stated.

98. X Q. You are sure of that, are you not?

A. I am.

99. X Q. You swear to it positively, do you not?

A. I do.

100. X Q. What were Mr. Bassett's duties in the post-office while on Water street?

(Objected to as not germane to the direct examination.)

A. He was what we call a D. P. O. room clerk—distributing clerk, and worked all around the office in the D. P. O. room, and this makes me think that after Mr. Wright left he was stamping clerk.

101. X Q. About how adept was Mr. Bassett in the business of stamping or post-marking letters?

(Same objection.)

A. He was good.

102. X Q. Do you know of anybody that was better than he in that business?

1988 A. No; I do not.

103. X Q. Now, while Mr. Bassett was in the new post-office, was he the stamping clerk there, and known as such at that time?

(Objected to as immaterial and because complainant's counsel has made the witness his own, and it is improper to put leading questions.)

A. Yes; he was.

104. X Q. Whatever Mr. Bassett might say concerning this combined postmarking and postage cancelling instrument could be depended upon as being correct, could it not?

(Same objections, and also because the question is for the court, and not for the witness, and also because it is not proper in this way, and at this time, to bolster up Mr. Bassett.)

A. Mr. Bassett is a man of truth, and I have never had any occasion to disbelieve him in anything.

105. X Q. Would not Mr. Bassett from his experience as a stamping clerk in that post-office be fully as apt to know the kind or character of the instrument used there for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps as you would be, since you have stated already the duties performed by you in the same post-office?

(Same objections.)

A. He would.

106. X Q. And whatever he might say on that subject could be depended upon, could it not, from your long acquaintance with him?

(Same objections.)

A. I have never had any reason to disbelieve him.

1989 107. X Q. That is not my question as you have made your answer. I do not ask you to state whether you have ever had any reasons to disbelieve Mr. Bassett. My question does not touch the truth or veracity of Mr. Bassett, but it does refer to his opportunity and experience as a stamping clerk in that office as compared with your own duties and experiences there, and thus contrasted, my question is, whether what he might state on that subject could be depended upon as against anybody else in that office who did not perform the duties which he performed as a stamping clerk.

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, sir; I should believe Mr. Bassett.

108. X Q. In whatever he might say on that subject?

A. I have no reason to doubt his word at all.

109. X Q. On anything that he might say on that subject?

A. That or any other subject.

110 X Q. Look at a paper I now show you marked "Defendant Exhibit 175 (John Albinger), Cleveland, O., June 1, 1878; J. G. P., special examiner," and state when, for the first time, you ever saw that drawing or any drawing substantially like that?

A. I saw this, here, for the first time to-day; and I saw one similar to it within the last week that was drawn by Mr. Clarke at the time he subpœnaed me; these are the only drawings I have ever seen of this kind as far as I remember.

111. X Q. Do you remember to have ever seen any other drawings than those referred to in your last answer on this subject?

A. I do not.

112. X Q. Who prepared that exhibit?

A. Mr. Clarke.

113. X Q. What Clarke have you reference to in your last answer—is it the Clarke now present as defendant's counsel and who examined you on your direct examination?

A. It is.

1990 114. X Q. Did he prepare that drawing and submit it to you while you were under his direct examination to-day?

A. He did.

115. X Q. And was it after you had said in answer to a question that you could not make one, or words to that effect? I now refer to question 7.

A. It was.

116. X Q. To return to the new post-office building—what were Wheeler's duties in that office previous to the first of January, 1862?

A. He was what we call a D. P. O. clerk; he was engaged in distributing letters principally.

117. X Q. In what room did Bassett do the stamping of letters and other mail matter?

A. In the same room—the D. P. O. room.

118. X Q. And was Wheeler in that room distributing letters while Bassett was there stamping letters and other mail matter?

A. He was.

119. X Q. Do you remember that some time in summer or fall of the year 1860 an order was issued by the Postmaster-General to the Cleveland and other post-offices in the country, prohibiting the use of the post-dating or post-office stamp upon the postage-stamp on letters and other mail matter, and requiring a separate stamp to be used for cancellation purposes?

(Objected to as not germane, as leading, and as assuming a fact.)

A. I remember there was such an order, but I thought it was earlier than 1860.

120. X Q. It was issued while you were in the new post-office building, was it not?

A. Yes, sir; I think that is correct.

121. X Q. Who is postmaster at the Cleveland post-office now?

A. M. B. Sherwin.

122. X Q. Who is the assistant postmaster, if any?

A. Robert Harding.

1991 123. X Q. Did either of those gentlemen say anything to you about coming here as a witness, either to-day or any other time?

A. They did not.

124. X Q. During the recess to-day, happening in your examination, did you have any conversation with anybody about this case or the testimony you had given or was to give during this examination?

A. Only to the boys at my table; my mails were put back while I was here, and I explained to them where I had been.

125. X Q. Any conversation with anybody else about this matter?

A. No.

JOHN ALBINGER.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 1st day of June, 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

JUNE 3D, 1878—4 o'clock p. m.

Present, same counsel as before.

C. CLIFFORD NOTT, a witness called for and on behalf of defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is Chauncey Clifford Nott; my age, 52 years; residence, Cleveland, and occupation, a manufacturer of pickles and vinegar.

2. Q. Were you ever employed in the post-office in Cleveland?

A. Yes, sir.

3. Q. When?

A. From about October, 1852, until some time in March, 1853.

1992 4. Q. How do you fix the latter date?

A. From circumstances—my leaving the post office and going to Washington in the month of March, soon after the inauguration of President Pierce. I was in Washington, to the best of my recollection, on the 20th of March. I went to Washington for an appointment as a route agent on the Lake Shore Railroad. I went there to see Mr. Gray as an aspirant for postmaster at Cleveland; that is why I fixed the date of my leaving the office; probably left Cleveland post-office about the 15th of March, 1853. I went to Washington by the advice of Mr. Haskell, who was then postmaster here at Cleveland, under whom I had been serving as clerk in Cleveland post-office; he advised me to go to Washington to see Mr. Gray, he being a personal friend of mine he thought I might get the position I had formerly applied for under Mr. Haskell.

5. Q. Since about the 15th of March, 1853, have you ever been employed in any post-office?

A. No, sir.

6. Q. About when was Mr. Gray appointed postmaster?

A. I should think first of April; I have no means of knowing.

7. Q. Where was the post-office situated at the time you were employed in it?

A. On Bank street, in what is called the Herald building.

8. Q. Was Mr. Charles E. Wheeler a clerk there at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

9. Q. What part of the work of the office did he do?

A. He was a general clerk in delivering letters, papers, and so forth, whatever mail matter was in the post office.

10. Q. Who did the stamping?

(Objected to on the ground that the defendant has long since closed his case on that subject, and all matters relating thereto, and has 1993 no right at this time to make this inquiry, or any other touching that subject. 2d. Defendant, by counsel, was present in this city before Mr. J. G. Pomerene, as special examiner, about three or four months ago, when the case was with the defendant, and after examining several witnesses, among whom was Wheeler, he thereupon closed his case sine die, upon the matter involved in the question, and all such matter as would tend to make a direct case; this is, therefore, an improper inquiry at this time and place.)

A. Mr. Wheeler done the most of it.

11. Q. In what room was the stamping done?

(Objected to as above.)

A. It was done in the same room that the mail matter, papers, and letters were delivered to the public. I suppose in the same room where the boxes that we delivered the letters from were situated, and they were taken from the boxes as they were delivered there by the public to be taken away; it was the room behind these boxes that we delivered the letters from to the public.

12. Q. You say you suppose; don't you know?

(Objected to, as the defendant's counsel has no right to cross-examine his own witness, nor to suggest to him any different statement than that made by the witness in answer to the question.)

A. I do say that I know it was done in that room on the table. I should judge, to the best of my recollection, on this table, about twelve feet in the rear of one of the delivery windows in this room. I am speaking of the delivery—what we call the box delivery.

13. Q. Was it on the same floor of the distributing department?

1994 A. Well, I don't fully understand that question; the distributing department, as we termed it in the post-office, was on the next floor above; I didn't know that there was ever any stamping done in that room; to the best of my knowledge the stamping was all done in the same room that we delivered the letters and received the letters from the public; the letters came to the office, were taken out of the boxes, taken to this table, there stamped, then were taken to the distributing clerks, then I don't know what was done with them.

14. Q. In what room was your work?

A. It was in the room that I speak of, in the general delivery behind the boxes; my principal work was in the alphabet termed "General Delivery."

15. Q. How many windows for delivering mail matter to the public were there?

(Objected to: 1st, as having been proven by defendant's own witness, W. J. Warner, who swears that he is one of the oldest and most extensive builders in this city; that he was familiar with that post-office and that there were but two general delivery windows, having a wooden door covering their opening, hinged upon the inside; 2d, if defendant's counsel intends to antagonize this witness with the witness he has previously called, Mr. Warner, it is objected to that he has not the right either to impeach his own witness or to raise a conflict of testimony among his own witnesses; 3d, if counsel intends to establish the same facts proven by Mr. Warner, the question is not objected to.)

A. There were three; two from the boxes, and one from the alphabet; two from the boxes were located toward the north side of the building, about ten to twelve feet apart; the alphabet window was located near the front, or Bank street front, near the middle of the front of the office.

1995 (Complainant's counsel objects to the answer and moves the court to strike it out, for the reasons assigned as objections to the question, it being in direct conflict with the testimony of the defendant's witness, Warner, on the same subject matter.)

16 Q. Towards what point of the compass did the front of the office look?

A. About west, fronting west.

17. Q. I infer, then, that there was a side hall looking to the north, and front hall looking to the west for the accommodation of the public, is that right?

(Same objections as to the last question, and the further objection as not only being leading in form, but instructing the witness as to the answer he has to give.)

A. Yes, sir; there was a hall extending along the north side of the building in front of the boxes to the extreme rear of the boxes, of about —I should judge this hall was eight feet wide—running from front to near the rear of the building, for the benefit of the public to get to the boxes and windows, see and get their letters and mails; also on the Bank street front a hall or space of about eight feet from the front of the building to the window of the alphabet; leaving a hall about the same width in front that there was on the north side of the box delivery.

18. Q. What sort of an instrument was used for post-marking letters and cancelling postage-stamps while you were in that office, if you know?

(Complainant's counsel takes the same objections to this question that were taken by him to question No. 10 of the examination of this witness.)

A. We used two; afterwards used a combined stamp; a cancelling stamp was tied along side of a dating stamp, to form one stamp instead of two; they were bound together with a cord or twine, something of that material.

1996 19. Q. Did you see that combined instrument in use while you were employed in the Bank street post-office?

(Same objection as to the last question.)

A. Yes, sir.

20. Q. Whom did you see use it?

(Same objections as to last question.)

A. Mr. Wheeler; I used it very little myself.

21. Q. Whose idea was it, making the combination?

(Same objection as to the last question.)

A. Mr. Wheeler; so he told me.

22. Q. Told you at that time?

(Objected to for all the reasons above, and as leading.)

A. Yes, told me at that time—told me that he put them together.

(Answer objected to as hearsay, in connection with the objections to the question.)

Witness cross-examined by complainant's counsel de bene esse.

(Defendant's counsel objects to any conditional cross-examination.)

23. X Q. How old were you in March, 1853?

A. Twenty seven years.

24. X Q. How many years have elapsed since March, 1853, to the present time?

A. About twenty-four years; over twenty-five years; about twenty-five years and three months it would be to this time.

25. X Q. Since March, 1853, when you say you left the service in the post-office in Cleveland, where have you resided each year, and in what business have you been engaged during each year to the present time?

1997 A. In 1853, soon after I came back from Washington, I went in the employ of the New York and Erie Railroad, at Cleveland; in 1854 I was in the employ of Coe & Spangle; in 1855 I was employed in fitting out vessels, and spar manufacturing from that time until 1869; since I have been employed in the manufacture of pickles and vinegar up to the present time.

26. X Q. About how frequently during each year since March, 1853, have you seen and had conversation with Mr. Wheeler, the person you named in your direct examination?

(Objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.)

A. During the year 1853 I had sometimes every day; he remained in the post-office for a number of years, I couldn't state how many; I have been more or less intimate with him ever since I was in the post-office, both with him and his whole family. I lived neighbor to him during 1857 and 1858.

27. X Q. How far do you reside from Mr. Wheeler at the present time?

(Same objections.)

A. I should think about a mile.

28. X Q. Do you and Wheeler attend the same church?

(Same objections.)

A. No, sir; not at present.

29. X Q. When, if ever, did you attend the same church?

(Same objections.)

A. I never have been an attendant of his particular church; he might have been in the same church that I had attended, but we were not in the habit of attending the same church.

30. X Q. What church do you attend?

(Same objections.)

1998 A. As a general thing, Second Presbyterian.

31. X Q. When did you last see and have conversation with Mr. Wheeler, the person named in your direct examination?

(Same objections.)

A. This morning about 10 o'clock, on Superior street, down near Water.

32. X Q. Who was with Wheeler, if anybody, at that time?

(Same objections.)

A. No one; he was alone.

33. X Q. What was that conversation about that you had this morning with Wheeler? Go on and state the same as near as you remember—what he said to you and what you said to him.

(Objected to as immaterial and irrelevant, and as asking for hearsay.)

A. He asked me if I had been here to give testimony; I said I was to come this afternoon; that's all.

34. X Q. How did Wheeler know that you were to give testimony in this case?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me some time ago in regard to the time that I was in the post-office, and I told him about the same time that I have stated here. He asked me would I come here and state what I had told him?

35. X Q. What did you tell Wheeler at that time? I refer to that part of your last answer, in which Wheeler asked you to come here and testify to that which you had told him, Wheeler.

(Same objections.)

A. I told him I would do so.

1999 36. X Q. I did not ask you that, although I have no doubt it is true, but I did ask you what you told Wheeler you would swear to in this case, and I refer to that part of your answer to cross-question 34 which reads as follows: "He asked me, would I come here and state what I had told him"?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me would I come here and state what I had told him in regard to the time that I was employed in the post-office.

37. X Q. All Wheeler wanted you to testify to here to-day was solely and only with reference to the time you were employed in the Cleveland post-office—is that it?

(Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, and because the counsel, having made the witness his own on this point, cannot ask a leading question.)

A. He asked me if I was confident as to the time that I was in the office. I told him I was, and cited circumstances that made me confident of the time that I was employed in the office.

38. X Q. I desire to treat you fairly as a witness under cross-examination, and I again ask you for the third or fourth time what Wheeler stated to you that he desired you to come here and testify to in this case? And I ask you to state all that he said to you about it.

(Objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.)

A. That was all said at that time.

39. X Q. When you came upon the witness stand to-day and was sworn as a witness, you did not know what you were to testify to or about, did you?

(Same objections.)

A. I was to testify in regard to the time that I was employed

2000 in the post-office; in regard to the location of the office, the duties of the clerks, myself, Mr. Wheeler, and the use of the stamps in the performing of our duties as clerks in the post-office.

40. X Q. Who requested you to testify to those things named in your last answer?

(Same objections.)

A. Mr. Wheeler asked me would I come here and testify in regard to these statements.

41. X Q. What did you tell him?

(Same objections.)

A. I told him I would come and testify in regard to the time that I were in the office, in regard to the use of those stamps.

42. X Q. When did Wheeler make this request of you, and where was it, and who was present, if anybody?

(Same objections.)

A. I have forgotten as regards the time; well, I should think now it was about this last March; I wouldn't be confident; wouldn't swear to that time, whether it was March or April, but I should judge it was about that time; the conversation took place at my place of business, in Sheriff street; I I think in the afternoon; there was no one present but Mr. Wheeler and myself.

43. X Q. Did you understand at that time that there was an examination going on here in this case?

(Same objections.)

A. Not until we had had this conversation in regard to my previous testimony.

44. X Q. What "previous testimony" have you reference to in your last answer?

(Same objections.)

2001 A. To the testimony in regard to my being employed in the post-office, and the duties we performed there.

45. X Q. Where and on what occasion, previous to to-day, did your ever render any testimony on the matter stated in the last answer?

(Same objections.)

A. I never have rendered any until to-day.

46. X Q. At the time Wheeler made that request of you about your coming here to testify, and as to what you would testify about, did he say anything to you about combined instruments for post-marking letters and cancelling postage stamps thereon by one blow of the instruments combined for that purpose?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me did I remember what kind of a stamp was used in the office for marking or stamping; I don't know whether he used the expression stamping, but I think he asked me if I remembered what kind of stamp was used for stamping and cancelling letters.

47. X Q. Is that all he said to you on that subject?

(Same objections.)

A. I think it is.

48. X Q. Are you positive whether it is or not?

(Same objections.)

A. I am not now.

49. X Q. Well, go on and state all that he said to you on that subject at that time that you have not already stated.

(Same objections.)

A. I have nothing more to state.

50. X Q. Why not?

(Same objections.)

2002 A. I have stated all the conversation that Mr. Wheeler and I had in regard to my testimony, or our conversation at that time.

51. X Q. You swear positively, do you not, that on that occasion Wheeler did not say a word to you with reference to the subject of combined instruments for post-marking letters and cancelling postage-stamps upon them at the same time, and by a single blow of the instruments so combined?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me did I remember what we used for post-marking and cancelling letters; I think he used that expression, but I would not swear positive that it was used—the expression of post-marking and cancelling—it might have been used stamping and cancelling; I am not positive of the expression Mr. Wheeler used.

(Objected to as immaterial and irrelevant, and as asking for hearsay.)

A. He asked me if I had been here to give testimony; I said I was to come this afternoon; that's all.

34. X Q. How did Wheeler know that you were to give testimony in this case?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me some time ago in regard to the time that I was in the post-office, and I told him about the same time that I have stated here. He asked me would I come here and state what I had told him?

35. X Q. What did you tell Wheeler at that time? I refer to that part of your last answer, in which Wheeler asked you to come here and testify to that which you had told him, Wheeler.

(Same objections.)

A. I told him I would do so.

1999 36. X Q. I did not ask you that, although I have no doubt it is true, but I did ask you what you told Wheeler you would swear to in this case, and I refer to that part of your answer to cross-question 34 which reads as follows: "He asked me, would I come here and state what I had told him"?

37. X Q. All Wheeler wanted you to testify to here to-day was solely and only with reference to the time you were employed in the Cleveland post-office—is that it?

A. He asked me did I remember what we used for post-marking and cancelling letters; I think he used that expression, but I would not swear positive that it was used—the expression of post-marking and cancelling—it might have been used stamping and cancelling; I am not positive of the expression Mr. Wheeler used.

52. X Q. The last question is repeated, and the witness is requested to state whether he understands that question or not.

(Same objections.)

A. I don't know that I fully understand that question; I wouldn't be positive whether he did or not.

Adjourned to June 4th, at 2 o'clock p. m.

JUNE 4th, 2 p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel, and the witness, Mr. NOTT, present as before.

Mr. Nott states that he was taken sick last night, and that he is not able to stay here for an examination this afternoon, and that he 2003 desires to be excused for to-day, and the defendant's counsel moves that he be so excused.

Motion granted, and the witness excused until June 5th, 9 a. m.

JUNE 5th, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel present as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. NOTT resumed:

53. X Q. I understand you to have testified on your cross-examination the other day, that you came here as a witness in this case at the request of Mr. Wheeler; do I understand you correctly about that?

(Objected to, as irrelevant and immaterial.)

A. Mr. Wheeler asked me would I come here and testify in this case.

54. X Q. Did you make any reply to that?

(Same objections.)

A. I told him I would.

55. X Q. Did he ask you anything concerning a combined postmarking and cancelling stamp at the time he requested you to come here to be examined as a witness?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me if I remembered what was used; might have said did I know what kind of stamp was used in stamping or postmarking letters when I was in the post-office.

56. X Q. Did he at that time say anything to you or you to him about a cancelling stamp that you have testified about on your direct examination?

(Same objections.)

2004 A. I think at that time he asked me what kind of a stamp was used for cancelling letters with, the postmarking; I think that was the question asked me.

57. X Q. In your answer to cross-question 34 you used these words: "He asked me would I come here and state what I had told him;" and in your answer to cross-question 35 you say: "I told him I would do so." During your examination-in-chief by Mr. Clarke, did you in answer to his questions carry out your promise that you made Wheeler on that occasion?

(Same objections.)

A. To the best of my knowledge I did.

58. X Q. Previous to the conversation which you have stated on your cross-examination you had with Wheeler, had you had any other conversation with him concerning the matters testified to by you on your direct examination—I mean previous to the conversation of Monday last?

(Same objections.)

A. Only the conversation we had that I testified to, some time ago—in March or April. I have reference to the conversation mentioned of March or April last.

59. X Q. That conversation in March or April last was substantially the same conversation that you had with Mr. Wheeler about this matter—that you had on Monday morning last, just previous to your coming upon the stand on Monday last, was it not?

(Same objections.)

A. No, sir.

60. X Q. State what the conversation was in the month of March or April last you had with Wheeler, as near as you remember it.

(Same objections.)

2005 A. Mr. Wheeler asked me if I was in the post-office at Cleveland; when I was in the post-office on Bank street; if I remembered what year it was in. I told him I thought it was from October, 1852, until some time in March, 1853. He asked me how I could locate the time. I recited the instance of my going to Washington to see about an appointment as a route-agent on the Lake Shore Railroad.

61. X Q. Is that all that was said by and between you and Wheeler on that occasion?

(Same objections.)

A. He asked me at that time if I remembered what kind—I think that was the expression, I won't be confident—of a stamp—I think that was the expression, called stamp—it might have been; what did we use for stamping—he might have said stamping and cancelling. I do not remember, but think that was the expression used.

62. X Q. In your last answer you have detailed the conversation and all of the conversation had between you and Wheeler on that occasion, have you not?

(Same objections.)

A. To the best of my knowledge, I have.

63. X Q. Did Mr. Wheeler on that occasion state to you his object in making that inquiry of you?

(Same objections.)

A. I think I asked Mr. Wheeler what it was for; he said to establish the time of the use of a combined stamp for stamping and cancelling letters.

64. X Q. What did he say to you, if anything, as to the motive he had in view for establishing any such matter as stated by you in your last answer?

(Same objections.)

A. That there was a suit—I think that was the expression—pending as to the—I think the expression was used—of the patenting of 2006 this stamp, a combined stamp and cancellor, or cancelling stamp—I won't say how the expression was used, but I think that was the expression; the object of his inquiry was to establish date.

65. X Q. Did he say anything to you as to the necessity of establishing a certain date in order to defeat that patent mentioned by you in your last answer?

(Same objections.)

A. I think he said to me that their patent did not claim until the latter part of 1853; that they wished to establish that it was used in this office—Cleveland post-office—previous to July, 1853. I think that was the conversation.

66. X Q. Did Wheeler on that occasion express to you in words, or in any other manner, that that sort of evidence would be sufficient to destroy that patent, in case that fact could be established?

(Same objections.)

A. I think that he did.

67. X Q. Did he on that occasion tell you the name of the person or persons who claimed to have a patent on the invention you have briefly described during this examination?

A. I think he did tell me the name, but I could not now say what that name was, for I paid so little attention; besides it is difficult for me to remember names.

68. X Q. Should you hear that name pronounced at this time, would you be likely to recall it to your recollection?

A. No, sir; I should not.

69. X Q. Did he on that occasion say to you, in words or in substance, that that invention was his, and that the government ought to pay him for it?

(Same objections.)

2007 A. I think he said at that time that he claimed it was his, and that we used it in the office previous to the claim of the patentee, but I do not think that he said to me the government should have paid him for it.

70. X Q. What did you understand from him to be the date of the claim of the patentee of this invention?

(Same objections.)

A. I think he said they claimed the patent some time about July, 1853, to the best of my recollection.

71. X Q. Did he use the word "patent" on that occasion, or "invention," as being claimed by the patentee as far back as July, 1853?

A. I think he used both expressions; I would not be confident, but think he said parties claimed a patent or invention on that stamp. I think that was the expression.

72. X Q. As far back as July, 1853; is that it?

A. I think that is it.

73. X Q. Did you on that occasion understand from Mr. Wheeler the name of the party against whom the suit was brought, which you say he spoke to you about?

A. I do not think I did.

74. X Q. That conversation was since this present suit was commenced (which was the first Monday in June, 1877), was it not?

A. This conversation was during the month of March or April, 1878.

75. X Q. How many times between October, 1852, or March, 1853, the time stated in your answer to question 3 of your direct examination, and the month of March or April, 1878, have you had conversation with Mr. Charles E. Wheeler about the invention or instrument referred to by you on your direct examination, and also referred to in your cross-examination?

(Same objections.)

2008 A. I never have had any conversation with Mr. Wheeler in regard to this invention or patent, or instrument, spoken of heretofore, between March, 1853, and March or April, 1878, at the time of our conversation.

76. X Q. How many times during that time have you meditated upon, contemplated, or thought of the matter referred to in your last answer? I mean "invention or patent, or instrument spoken of."

(Same objections.)

A. I haven't had it in mind; no occasion to previous to March or April, 1878, when Wheeler first came to me.

77. X Q. This suit has furnished for you an "occasion" to think of a matter which you say you have never thought of between March, 1853, and March or April, 1878, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

78. X Q. Had not Wheeler called on you to become a witness in this case, or had not you and Wheeler had the conversation you have detailed as having taken place in March or April, 1878, would you have thought anything or said anything on the subject at the present time and since March or April last?

A. No, sir; for I knew nothing of any such case or controversy until he came to me.

79. X Q. Have you had any conversation with anybody other than with Mr. Wheeler since March, 1853, and the commencement of your present examination (excepting the defendant's counsel) upon the subject-matter about which you have testified on both your direct and cross examinations?

A. No, sir; I have not.

80. X Q. Did you ever make any memorandum in writing between October, 1852, and March, 1853, concerning what you did or what you saw during that time in Cleveland post-office?

A. Not that I remember of.

81. X Q. The only thing, then, that refreshes your recollection as to what took place in that office between those dates was your hungering and thirsting for official place soon after the inauguration of 2009 President Pierce, which seems to be clearly stated in your answer to direct question No. 4?

A. I had not claimed any hunger, dryness, thirst, or contempt for counsel in my answer; but I did not use the expression hunger nor thirst for official position, merely citing this instance of going to Washington to refresh my memory in regard to dates I have given in this testimony.

82. X Q. About what length of time, all told, have you had employment in the post-office at Cleveland?

A. About six months, to the best of my recollection.

83. X Q. Have you had any such employment since March, 1853, to the present time?

A. I have never been employed in the post-office since some time in March, 1853, to the best of my memory and knowledge.

84. X Q. In your answer to direct question 18 you state, "We used two." What do you mean by the word "we," there?

A. I mean the clerks; speaking of the clerks in the post-office.

85. X Q. Do you include yourself in that?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Wheeler, Duncan Beebe and myself.

86. X Q. You state in answer to question No. 21 of your direct examination, that Mr. Wheeler told you that the idea of making a combination stamp was his idea; when did he tell you that?

A. To the best of my recollection, in February, 1853; somewhere near that.

87. X Q. How do you know that?

A. From seeing it used in the office; I have no other means of knowing.

88. X Q. What has become of that contrivance which you swear you saw and touched a "very little myself" in the Cleveland post-office, between October, 1852, and March, 1853?

A. I do not know.

89. X Q. When did you last see it?

2010 A. To the best of my recollection, in February or March, 1853; could not fix the exact date.

90. X Q. Who were present, if anybody, at the time you took your farewell view of that little instrument, over twenty-five years ago, of which you made no memorandum in writing, and which you swear you never thought of previous to the time when Wheeler first came to you to be a witness in this case, March or April, 1878?

A. I presume Mr. Wheeler; he was a clerk in the post office at the time that I left the post-office.

91. X Q. On that memorable occasion, and over that little instrument, did you and Wheeler drop a tear and bid the thing good-by?

A. To the best of my memory, neither of us, myself personally, never lost any water over the instrument.

92. X Q. Who was postmaster here at that time in Cleveland?

A. D. M. Haskell, I think his name was.

93. X Q. How far from the D. P. O. room was the distributing table on which the stamping of letters was done?

(Objected to as assuming the fact that letters were stamped on the distributing table.)

A. If I remember, the distributing room was up stairs; the next floor above. It was not in the same room where we done the stamping.

94. X Q. In what part of the room was the stamping table to which you refer on your direct examination?

A. In the south or back side of the room, about twelve feet, I should judge—my recollection—from the what we called rear window to the box delivery. It was partially between the two box delivery windows—probably nearer the rear one than what would be called the front box window.

95. X Q. What was the size of the top of that table?

2011 A. About three feet wide, and it might have been six feet long, to the best of my recollection.

96. X Q. What was the height of that table from the floor to the top or stamping surface?

A. I should judge it was two foot and a half to three feet; by bare possibility it might have been three feet, but I should judge about two feet and a half.

97. X Q. What other business was done on that table besides stamping?

A. I think we sometimes assorted letters there.

98. X Q. What was the means of communication between the stamping-room and the D. P. O. room up stairs?

A. I think there was a pair of stairs; I don't know. I would not swear certain that I was ever in the D. P. O. room, but I think I was once.

99. X Q. By what means were letters and other mail matter conveyed to the D. P. O. room?

A. Boxes, bags, I think, and baskets.

100. X Q. Hauled up by rope?

A. I would not state as to that, for my duties did not call me there; had nothing to do outside or away, in any other room but the delivery.

101. X Q. Was that box, bag, and basket business carried on in another room separate from the box-delivery room?

A. All letters that were stamped, I think, were carried into an adjoining room from the stamping table, to be carried to the D. P. O. room distributing.

102. X Q. How large a post-office was the Cleveland post-office at that time, Mr. Nott? I mean the business part, as compared with the present business in the same office.

A. I should not think there was over one quarter of the business done then that there is now.

103. X Q. How much time was required each day at that time—I mean between October, 1852, and March, 1853—to post-mark letters that were put into that office for transportation in the mails?

2012 A. From my recollection, I should think it would take three hours each day.

104. X Q. And in that length of time the postage stamps could be canceled, could they not?

A. I don't fully understand the question.

Redirect examination:

105. Re D. Q. Were the clerks who were employed in the same room with you and Mr. Wheeler, including you two, much driven with work at the time you were there, or did they have an easy time of it?

A. They were driven, I considered, hardworked, from seven o'clock in the morning, most of the time on our feet, until twelve o'clock at midday—one hour for dinner, from one o'clock till six in the evening, and from seven until eight to ten in the evening.

Recross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

106. Re X Q. What was the occasion of your having such tremendous work to do in that office at that time, and what was it?

A. Confinement and fatigue—standing on our feet—waiting on the public in putting up letters and distributing them to the public.

C. C. NOTT.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 5th day of June, 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned for recess until 2 o'clock p. m.

2013 JUNE 4TH—4 p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, same counsel as before.

ERY S. BEARDSLEY, a witness called for and on behalf of defendant, being by me first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Ery S. Beardsley; age, fifty-two years; occupation, express messenger; and residence, Cleveland.

2. Q. Were you ever employed in the post-office in Cleveland?

A. I was.

3. Q. State when and where the office was then situated.

A. From 1854 to 1867 the office was situated on Water street, when I first went into it; and was removed to the public square, I think, about Christmas, 1858.

4. Q. During all the time that the office was on Water street, and you were a clerk in it, was Mr. Charles E. Wheeler also a clerk in that office?

A. He was.

5. Q. While the office was on Water street did you postmark any letters and cancel any postage stamps?

A. I did.

6. Q. State when and how long.

A. Well, I can't say certain whether it was 1854 or 1855; for about three weeks I done the stamping while another man was sick.

7. Q. What sort of an instrument did you use for the purpose?

(Objected to by complainant's counsel on the ground that the evidence asked for is of that kind, if of any importance whatever, which belongs to the direct case of the defendant, which case has long since been closed, and the complainant has for some time been taking his rebuttal proofs; to attempt to take this class of evidence now is improper and in violation of the rules for taking testimony.

The defendant has neither asked the court nor the complainant, nor the complainant's counsel, to reopen this case to allow this class of testimony to be given; and no authority has either been given by court or complainant's counsel for any such purpose. Objections are therefore taken to any further examination of this witness on that subject, or of any other witness on the same subject.)

A. We used a combined stamp, for cancelling and postmarking at the same time.

8. Q. Describe it?

(Same objections.)

A. The same was the usual postmarking stamp; round stamp, with the cancelling stamp attached to the side of the postmarking stamp with solder; that's the description of the stamp.

9. Q. What was the configuration of the acting face of the canceller?

(Same objections.)

A. It was a ring on the outside, with cross-bars.

Complainant's counsel cross-examines this witness, de bene esse:

(Defendent's counsel objects to any conditional cross-examination.)

10. X Q. You know Mr. Wheeler?

A. Yes; I do.

11. X Q. How long have you known him?

2015

A. Since about 1850.

12. X Q. About how well have you known him?

A. Well, about as well as we generally know people in our every-day intercourse.

13. X Q. You could not know him more thoroughly than you now know him, and have for a number of years, could you?

(Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.)

A. I don't know that I could; for the last ten or twelve years my intercourse hasn't been near as frequent with him as it was before; when I was in the post-office I used to see him every day; since leaving the post office my intercourse or meeting with him has been not very frequent.

14. X Q. When did you last see Mr. Wheeler?

A. I saw him last Sunday.

15. X Q. Of this present month?

A. June 2d.

16. X Q. Where did you see him?

A. At my house.

17. X Q. He came there to see you, did he, on that day?

A. I suppose so.

18. X Q. Did you have any conversation with him on that day about any matter?

(Same objections.)

A. I did not.

18½. X Q. Did he have any conversation with you about any matter on that day?

(Same objections.)

A. He did not.

19. X Q. How long did he remain in your house on that occasion?

(Same objections.)

A. It might have been ten minutes—not to exceed fifteen.

2016 20. X Q. He came to your house to see you last Sunday, looked at you for ten or fifteen minutes, and then went away without speaking a word to you, did he?

(Same objections.)

A. He said good afternoon when he came in, gave me an introduction to a gentleman accompanying him, bade me good afternoon when he left the house; that is all the conversation that passed between Mr. Wheeler and myself on Sunday, June 2d, 1878.

21. X Q. You are positive of that, are you?

A. I am.

22. X Q. To whom did Mr. Wheeler introduce you at your house last Sunday?

(Same objections.)

A. A gentleman by the name of Clarke.

23. X Q. The one who examined you on your direct examination to-day?

A. I believe him to be the same.

24. X Q. Have you any doubt about it in your own mind?

A. I have not.

25. X Q. Was Mr. Wheeler there while Mr. Clarke remained at your house last Sunday?

A. He was.

26. X Q. What was the business upon which those gentlemen came to your house last Sunday, if any?

A. To ascertain what time I would probably be in Cleveland on Tuesday, and to see if my business was such that I could come to the office of Mr. Pomerene, I think it is—I couldn't swear to that, but I think that is the name—to give evidence in this case.

27. X Q. Is that all that took place between you three on that Sunday, with reference to this case.

A. Mr. Clarke asked me some questions relative to the time I was in the post-office.

2017 28. X Q. Did Mr. Clarke tell you there on that Sunday, in the presence of Mr. Wheeler, what he desired you to testify to on this occasion?

A. He did not.

29. X Q. Did he, at any other time or place, state to you what he desired you to testify to in this case to-day, or at any other time that you might be examined?

A. He did not.

30. X Q. Did he ever show you, at any time, any model or drawing of a combined stamp for postmarking letters and cancelling postage-stamps?

A. I think he did, when I was up here before; the date I don't remember.

31. X Q. Did Mr. Wheeler ever show you any such instrument or drawing?

(Same objections.)

A. He did not.

32. X Q. You are positive of that?

A. I swear positively to that.

33. X Q. About how many months ago since you were here to be examined as a witness by Mr. Clarke, if you were here for that purpose?

(Same objections.)

A. I can't tell.

34. X Q. Was it cold weather and snow on the ground?

(Same objections.)

A. I don't remember whether there was or not.

35. X Q. You came here for that purpose, did you not?

(Same objections.)

A. I didn't know for what purpose I was asked to come here; was told that a gentleman by the name of Clarke wished to see me about something in connection with a suit in regard to a postmarking
2018 stamp, and nothing said to me about being used as a witness; but Mr. Clarke wished to ask me a few questions.

36. X Q. Who told you all that?

(Same objections.)

A. Charles E. Wheeler.

37. X Q. When?

A. I think it was two days before I came up here.

38. X Q. You came, but do not remember when you came or whether there was cold weather and there was snow on the ground; is that it?

A. I don't remember the month or day of the month; I think, however, the weather was cold.

39. X Q. Do you remember whether you came clothed in winter or in summer clothing?

(Same objections.)

A. Well, it wasn't summer clothing; I think perhaps I had on an overcoat.

40. X Q. What induces you to think you had on an overcoat at that time?

(Same objections.)

A. I don't know certainly that I did have on an overcoat.

41. X Q. Your memory serves you better with reference to matters and things that may or may not have happened twenty or more years ago than it does with reference to matters and things that may or may not have happened during the present year down to within three months of the present time, does it not?

A. Perhaps.

42. X Q. What do you mean by the use of the word perhaps in your last answer?

A. Have you got a Webster's Dictionary here?

43. X Q. At the time you say Mr. Clarke showed you a model and drawings of combined instruments for postmarking letters and 2019 at the same time cancelling postage-stamps thereon, was Charles E. Wheeler present?

(Same objections.)

A. He was not.

44. X Q. What did Clarke tell you he was going to do with those things, if anything?

A. He didn't tell me that he was going to do anything with them, that I know of; I don't remember of his telling me anything, that I remember.

45. X Q. Did Mr. Clarke tell you anything at that time or have any conversation with you about those devices?

A. He did not, that I remember; he simply showed me the stamp.

46. X Q. Did you see a drawing at that time of anything?

A. I don't remember that I did.

47. X Q. Why can't you remember about that?

A. Well, I don't know, without it is because he didn't show me any drawing.

48. X Q. About how long ago was that?

(Same objections.)

A. I can't give the date.

49. X Q. How came you to meet Mr. Clarke on that occasion?

(Same objections, and also as having been answered.)

A. I answered that question before.

50. X Q. You will please here answer it again.

(Same objections.)

A. By Mr. Wheeler asking me to come here.

51. X Q. Where was Mr. Clarke when you had that interview with him?

A. In the front corner room in this building.

52. X Q. Who introduced you to Mr. Clarke on that occasion?

2020 A. Not anybody.

53. X Q. But Mr. Wheeler did introduce him to you at your house last Sunday?

(Same objections.)

A. He did.

54. X Q. You didn't know Mr. Clarke when you first saw him at your house last Sunday previous to the introduction by Mr. Wheeler, did you?

A. I didn't recognize him as being the gentleman I had met before till his name was mentioned.

55. X Q. If Mr. Clarke had been a combined postmarking instrument for postmarking letters and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon at one blow, you would have recognized him at once as something you had seen before, would you not?

(Same objections.)

A. Undoubtedly.

56. X Q. And you would have then remembered that you had seen him in that condition as early as 1854, would you not?

A. Undoubtedly.

57. X Q. You have a very fine and accurate memory with reference to things that may or may not have taken place in the years 1854 and 1855, have you not?

A. May be.

58. X Q. Have you any doubt on that subject?

A. I have not.

59. X Q. During either of those years did you make a memorandum in writing of any event or thing that came under your observation?

A. I might have.

60. X Q. Do you know whether you did or not during either of those years?

A. I can't call anything to mind now.

61. X Q. You have no doubt on that subject, have you, at the present time?

A. I don't call anything to mind now.

2021 62. X Q. (Last question repeated and a categorical answer desired from the witness; either yes or no.)

A. I said I didn't call anything to mind; I have no doubt that I have made memorandums of some things that transpired during that time.

63. X Q. Name such things as you have no doubt you made memorandums of during either of those years.

A. I can't call anything to mind just now.

64. X Q. You say you saw Wheeler last Sunday at your house, in company with Mr. Clarke. When before that time did you last see Mr. Wheeler?

(Same objections.)

A. I don't think I had seen Mr. Wheeler within two months—may be two months, may be a month and a half; not any later than that—until last Sunday.

65. X Q. Where was that?

A. I think it was on Superior street.

66. X Q. Was anything said between you on that occasion?

(Same objections.)

A. He was in company with Isaac Snook, and was speaking in regard to the McGill murder case, Mr. Snook having been one of the jurors in the aforesaid case.

67. X Q. Is that all that was said between you?

A. All that passed between us.

68. X Q. Have you and Wheeler ever had any conversation about this suit or the invention involved in it?

(Same objections.)

A. We have not.

69. X Q. Never a word at any time or place?

(Same objections.)

A. We have not any special conversation in regard to it.

2022 70. X Q. Not even one word?

(Same objections.)

A. We have not.

71. X Q. You are sure of that?

A. I am.

72. X Q. And do you swear to it positively?

A. I am under oath already.

73. X Q. I did not ask you that, or anything about your oath; but I ask you to state positively about a matter of which you said you were sure. I did that in order that there should be no mistake on your part as to what you are testifying to, and I now and again repeat that question, and simply ask of you a fair and non-evasive answer to it.

A. I do.

74. X Q. You do swear to it positively, is that it?

A. I do.

75. X Q. Has Mr. Wheeler ever written you a letter or postal card with reference to this suit, or any matter connected with it?

(Same objections.)

A. He has not.

76. X Q. Not even one letter?

A. Not one single letter.

77. X Q. Nor even one postal card?

A. Not one postal card.

78. X Q. Has Mr. Wheeler ever presented to you any certificate or other paper for you to sign about the invention involved in this suit or any part of it?

(Same objections, and also because counsel does not make it clear to witness what he means by the invention involved in this suit.)

A. He has not.

79. X Q. You are sure of that?

A. I am.

80. X Q. And you are positive about it, are you?

2023 A. I am.

81. X Q. Where were you when you first received information from Mr. Wheeler that your services were wanted in this case for the defendant?

(Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, and as assuming that the witness has received such information from Mr. Wheeler.)

A. I didn't receive any such information from Mr. Wheeler that I was to appear as a witness; he simply asked me to call at Mr. Pomerene's office; that there was a gentleman by the name of Clarke there who wished to see me; this was in the American Express Office, 103 Bank street, I think it is.

82. X Q. On receiving that kind and polite invitation from Mr. Wheeler to come and see Clarke, you came right up to see him without asking Wheeler what Clarke wanted, did you not?

A. I did not come at that time; but two days after I saw Mr. Wheeler.

83. X Q. Did Mr. Wheeler, while in that express office, state to you what Mr. Clarke desired to see you about?

(Same objections.)

A. He said it was something in regard to a suit about a postmarking stamp; I suppose that's what you call it.

84. X Q. Is that all he said to you on that subject?

A. It is.

85. X Q. Every word?

A. Every word.

86. X Q. Now you swear to that positively, do you not?

A. I do.

87. X Q. When you first met Clarke, at the invitation of Mr. Wheeler, as you have stated, what did you first say to him?

A. Well, I can't remember; the gentleman in this room—fine looking gentleman, with gold specs on, resting on his nose, says, when 2024 Mr. Clarke came into the room, "Mr. Clarke, here is your man that you are looking for;" how he knew it, I don't know; Mr. Clarke invited me into the front corner room in this building, where we had what talk we did have.

88. X Q. Do you remember the first word or words you said to Mr. Clarke after you and he were alone in the front room named by you in your last answer?

A. I do not.

89. X Q. Do you remember what Mr. Clarke first said to you on entering that room?

A. I do not; he might have asked me if my name was Beardsley; that I am not positive about.

90. X Q. When did you first know that you were to be a witness in this case?

A. Last Sunday, June 2d.

91. X Q. From whom did you learn that?

A. Mr. Clarke asked me to come here to-day.

92. X Q. At the time you were sworn as a witness in this case to-day, did you know what you were to testify to or about?

A. I supposed it was in regard to this combined stamp.

93. X Q. How came you to "suppose" that?

A. From what Mr. Clarke said to me.

94. X Q. You knew, then, just what Mr. Clarke wanted of you on this occasion, did you, from what he said to you?

A. Well, I don't know that I knew just what he wanted of me; I knew that he wanted me to come here as a witness, for he so stated.

95. X Q. Previous to your rendering your testimony in your direct examination here to-day, about how much thought, study, or time did you spend in consideration of the matters which you testified about on that examination?

A. Well, I can't say exactly.

96. X Q. Why can't you?

A. I haven't taken an account of the time.

2025 97. X Q. About how much would you judge from what information you now have on the subject?

A. I can't give any specified time.

98. X Q. Well, please approximate to the time as near as you can, either in months, weeks, days, hours, minutes, seconds, or parts of seconds.

A. I can give no stated time.

99. X Q. Well, have you spent any in that direction, or on those matters?

A. I have thought the matter over some; can give no specified time.

100. X Q. When and where did you think the "matter over some?"

A. No particular time or particular place.

101. X Q. Who, if anybody, was present on that occasion?

A. I have had no conversation with any one in regard to it since Mr. Clarke asked me to come here, or before either.

102. X Q. And you were entirely ignorant what you were to testify to when you came here this morning, were you?

(Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.)

A. I had no idea of the questions which would be asked me.

103. X Q. Or of the subject-matter you were to testify about?

(Same objections.)

A. I supposed it was in regard to the stamp.

104. X Q. What led you to suppose that?

(Same objections.)

A. From having been told that there was a suit in regard to the stamp pending.

105. X Q. Do you ever visit Wheeler at his house, or do any of your family visit there?

(Same objections.)

2026 A. I do not, and they do not.

106. X Q. How far do you live from Wheeler's?

A. That I can't tell.

107. X Q. You say in your direct examination that you have been employed in the post-office in Cleveland, Ohio. When was that, and for what term of time?

A. From 1854 to 1867, with a short intermission during that time.

108. X Q. What special duties, if any, were assigned to you in that office?

A. For the first year and a half or two years—I can't remember exactly—I was attending to the bagging and sending out of mails; after that time I worked at what is known as the round table, distributing mail matter in what is known as the general distribution.

109. X Q. In 1854 or 1855 or 1856, did you know of a clerk employed in that office by the name of A. L. Bassett?

(Objected to irrelevant and immaterial.)

A. I did.

110. X Q. Did you know, during those years, of a clerk employed in that office by the name of James McGough?

(Same objections.)

A. I did.

111. X Q. What were Mr. Bassett's duties in that office during that time?

(Same objections.)

A. Well, he was known as a D. P. O. room clerk, we called him.

112. X Q. Where was the D. P. O. room situated in that office—on Water street?

A. In the rear of the building.

113. X Q. For what purpose was that room used, and about how large was it?

2027 A. Perhaps twenty or twenty-five feet square, and used for putting up letters for the mails.

114. X Q. Were the mails made up in that room for transportation?

A. The letters were assorted for the different routes, put up in packages for the different routes, brought from there out to the general distributing table, distributed in the case preparatory to bagging.

115. X Q. Letters were tied up in small packages in the D. P. O. room, were they not?

A. At that time they were some tied up in packages, some wrapped and tucked without being tied.

116. X Q. Did each of those packages contain a printed or written way-bill?

(Same objections.)

A. They did.

117. X Q. Were those packages first put in wrapping-paper before being tied up?

A. They were.

118. X Q. Did those way-bills contain a postmark made by the dating stamp?

A. My impressson is that they did not; they had a printed heading; the month stamp for the month was usually stamped in, I think; I am not so positive about that, for my duties were not in that room.

119. X Q. At that time, who furnished that office with the postmarking stamp with the words "Cleveland, O.," and the dates in it?

A. I don't know; my impression is they were sent here from Washington.

120. X Q. A stamp of that kind was used in that office during those years, was it not?

A. It was.

121. X Q. Did you ever see any letters in that office during each of those years that had the postage stamp cancelled by means of a postmarking stamp, giving the impression upon or partly upon the 2028 surface of the postage-stamp of the word "Clevland" within a circle, and the month and day of the month at or near the centre of that circle?

A. There used to be such a stamp used; there was a cancelling stamp used; I can't swear that I did, wit out using a cancelling stamp.

122. X Q. You swear, then, do you, that there were no letters in that office postmarked upon the postage-stamp, and thereby cancelling it in the manner or substantially in the manner stated by me in the last question; and during the time stated in the last question—I mean during the years 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1860—during each year down to the first day of August, 1860?

A. There might have been during the first year or two; I couldn't say positively.

123. X Q. You have stated in your last answer all you know about it, have you?

A. I have not for all those years.

124. X Q. Well, what years do you refer to in your last answer?

A. 1856; from that down to 1860, or somewhere between that and 1860.

125. X Q. Why did you not answer as to those years when I put to you Cross-Q. 122 on that subject?

A. Well, I didn't understand it; there was a stamp used during a part of those years with a cancelling stamp attached.

126. X Q. Did I ask you in the last question anything about a cancelling stamp being attached to a postmarking stamp, or to anything else?

A. I don't know that you did.

127. X Q. You made that answer, then, knowing that I had not made any such inquiry of you, did you not? I want your answer to this question, yes or no, without any attempt at smartness or any attempt at pettifogging, as you seem to have done in your answer to cross-question 125.

(Defendant's counsel objects to complainant's counsel using abusive language to the witness.)

2029 A. I didn't answer the question only as I understood it; I should have stated in the answer above there to that long question that, a portion of those years, there was a postmarking stamp used with a cancelling stamp attached.

128. X Q. Have I asked you a single question on your cross-examination to-day that inquires of you to state anything about a postmarking stamp having a cancelling stamp attached to it, and use in the Cleveland post-office, or anywhere else, or by anybody?

A. As I understand it, you have.

129. X Q. State the number of the question.

A. I can't give the number of the question.

130. X Q. Examine the record of your cross-examination; read the question, and give the number of the question where any such inquiry was made of you, either directly or indirectly.

A. It is 122: "You swear then, do you, that there were no letters in that office postmarked upon the postage-stamp, and thereby cancelling it in the manner or substantially in the manner stated by me in the last question; and during the time stated in the last question—I mean during the years 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1860—during each year down to the first day of August, 1860?" As I understand this question, there is an implied inquiry there as to whether there was any other stamp used there during those years; that's as I understood it.

131. X Q. Read from that question the exact word or words where there is an "implied inquiry" of the kind stated by you in the last part of your last answer.

A. You say, "during the time stated in the last question—I mean during the years 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, and 1860," as I understand the question, whether during all that time the single postmarking stamp was used, or whether there might a part of the time have been something else used; that's as I understand it.

2030 132. X Q. In that question there is not a single inquiry as to any kind of stamp, either postmarking or postage cancelling, and no kind of stamp mentioned excepting a "postage-stamp;" the inquiry was based upon cross question 121; you may read that question, if you will, and if you want to make any further explanation make it.

A. Yes; I would add to that that I had also seen a stamp used during a part of those years (a postmarking stamp it should be, I suppose), with a cancelling stamp attached.

133. X Q. Your understanding of cross-questions 121 to 132 inclusive is about as clear and as correct as any questions that were put to you on your direct examination, is it not?

(Objected to on the ground that the question is for the court, not for the witness.)

A. Not as I understand them.

134. X Q. Did you understand those questions, or either of them, at the time you made answer to them?

A. I supposed I did; but there seems to be a difference of opinion between me and the counsel for the prosecution.

135. X Q. Do you know whether you understood them or not at the time you answered them?

A. I answered them as I understood them.

136. X Q. And that is all you know about it, is it?

A. I know that I answered them as I understood them.

137. X Q. And that is all you know about it, is it?

A. All that I know about what?

138. X Q. About your answers to questions named; 121 to 132 inclusive of your cross-examination?

A. All that I know about it is that I answered them as I understood them.

139 X Q. After I explained to you, in cross-question 132, that I had reference to no kind of stamp excepting a postage-stamp in that question, 121, did you not state these words: "Yes; I would add to 2031 that I had also seen a stamp used during a part of those years (a postmarking stamp it should be, I suppose), with a cancelling stamp attached"?

(Objected to on the ground that counsel does not correctly state what he himself calls his explanation in question 132.)

A. I did.

140. X Q. And you did that after I had explained the question to you, did you?

A. I did.

141. X Q. Were you employed in the post-office in the government building where it now is in the years 1859, 1860, 1861, 1862, and 1863?

A. I was.

142. X Q. In July, August, or September, of the year 1860, did you see or know anything about an order being received at that post-office, made by the Postmaster-General, prohibiting the use of the post-dating stamp for the cancellation of postage-stamps on letters, by striking such post-dating stamp upon the upper surface of the postage-stamp, and requiring the postmark to be upon the letter envelope, and that the postage-stamp be cancelled by a separate instrument from the post-dating stamp?

(Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.)

A. I did not.

143. X Q. You never heard or knew or saw anything about any such order, did you?

A. Not at that time.

144. X Q. Did you at any other time?

A. I know there was an order of that kind come from the Post-Office Department; the date of it I can't give.

145. X Q. In what year was that order issued?

A. I couldn't tell.

146. X Q. Where was the Cleveland post-office located at that time?

A. My impression is that when the order was received that the office was on Water street.

2032 147. X Q. And it was in consequence of that order that you used the stamp you named in your answer to question 7 of your direct examination, which reads, "We used a combined stamp for cancelling and post-marking at the same time," was it not?

A. It was.

148. X Q. Where was the combined stamp which you refer to in your answer to question 7 of your direct examination made?

A. I don't know who attached it to the other. It was put on by some tinner—soldered to it.

149. X Q. Who had that done?

A. Mr. Charles E. Wheeler, I think that's his name—I am not positive about the E—suggested the idea, I think.

150. X Q. To whom did he suggest the idea named in your last answer?

A. To those whose duties it was to use the stamps.

151. X Q. Who were they? Name them.

A. Well, I think that a man by the name of Wright—his first name I cannot give.

152. X Q. Well, anybody else?

A. I couldn't say that he suggested it to any one in particular; but it was a general suggestion, perhaps.

153. X Q. All these suggestions were made soon after the making that order by the Postmaster General, were they not, of which you have testified?

A. I presume they were in consequence of that order.

154. X Q. There was no necessity for the use of the combined stamp in Cleveland post-office, and referred to in your answers to questions 7 and 8 of your direct examination, until after the making of that order by the Postmaster-General, was there?

A. I suppose that that order was what led them to combine the two.

155. X Q. Have you any doubt about that?

A. I don't know that I have.

2033 155½. X Q. You are as positive about that as any part of your testimony that you have given to-day, are you not?

A. I don't know that I am; I suppose that that was in consequence of the order.

156. X Q. What led you to "suppose" any such thing?

A. The order of the Postmaster-General requiring the cancelling stamp for defacing postage stamps, independent of the post-marking stamp.

157. X Q. Immediately after receiving that order at Cleveland post-office, do you mean to say that Charles E. Wheeler had made the combined stamp referred to in your answers to questions 7 and 8 of your direct examination; and that the same was thereupon used in the Cleveland post-office, as stated by you on your direct examination?

A. I do.

158. X Q. Where is that combined stamp now, if you know?

A. I don't know.

159. X Q. You do not know where it is?

A. I do not.

160. X Q. Did Wheeler have any more than that one made that you know of?

A. I am not positive, but I think there is two.

161. X Q. Who was stamping clerk in the Cleveland post-office in the year 1859?

A. I couldn't tell.

162. X Q. Who was stamping clerk in the Cleveland post-office in the year 1860?

A. That I don't know positively.

163. X Q. Who was stamping clerk in the Cleveland post-office in the years 1861 and 1862?

A. I couldn't tell.

164. X Q. Were you employed in that post-office during those four years stated in my last previous questions?

A. I was.

165. X Q. What were your duties there during those years?

2034 A. I was distributing clerk at a round table or a general distributing case.

166. X Q. Was Wheeler there during those years?

A. I think he was.

167. X Q. Was A. L. Bassett there during those years?

A. I think so—I wouldn't be positive as to his being there all the time.

168. X Q. Was Mr. Albinger there during those years?

A. He was.

169. X Q. Who was postmaster at Cleveland during the administration of President Buchanan?

A. Benjamin Harrington.

170. X Q. And who was postmaster here during the first administration of President Lincoln?

A. Edwin Cowles.

171. X Q. In what year did you permanently leave employment at the Cleveland post-office?

A. In 1867.

172. X Q. If you know, in what year did the Postmaster-General commence to furnish the Cleveland post-office with an instrument for post-marking letters separate from the postage stamp while by the same blow and operation of post-marking the postage stamp was cancelled or defaced, independent from the post-marking; or in other words a double and combined post-marking and postage cancelling instrument?

A. I couldn't tell.

174. X Q. Do you know that any such instrument ever was furnished by the Post Office Department to the Cleveland post office?

A. I think I do remember of their furnishing such things.

174. X Q. About how long ago was that? Give your best recollections of it.

A. Well, I couldn't tell; there used to stamps come—they were different kinds of stamps, they were stamps for letters "forwarded"
2035 and post-marking stamps and various stamps they used to use at different times; I couldn't give the dates.

175. X Q. I am only asking you about one kind and that is fully and fairly stated in my previous questions. Fixing your mind upon that kind, I again repeat the last question.

A. I couldn't state what time.

176. X Q. It was some time during the last twenty years, was it not?

A. Probably it was.

Sworn and subscribed before me this 4th day of June, 1878.

J. G. POMERENE,
Special Examiner.

I, J. G. Pomerene, special examiner, do hereby certify that W. J. Warner, John Albinger, C. C. Nott, and E. S. Beardsley were by me first severally sworn to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that the foregoing depositions by them respectively subscribed and severally authenticated by my signature, as above set forth, were reduced to writing in part by myself, and in part by H. W. Bill, who is not interested in the suit, in the presesce of the witnesses respectively, and in the presence of counsel for complainant and defendant, as is within indicated, and were respectively subscribed by the said witnesses in my presence, and were taken at my office in the city of Cleveland and State of Ohio, on the 31st day of May, 1878, and on the following days, as is within indicated; that I am not counsel, attorney, or relative of either party, or otherwise interested in the event of this suit.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 7th day of June, A. D. 1878, at city of Cleveland, Ohio.

Solicitor for Compl't.

TROY, N. Y.

In the circuit court of the United States, southern district of New York.
In equity.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN TRUST, against
THOMAS L. JAMES, U. S. POSTMASTER, NEW YORK.

2039 Proofs for final hearing taken for and on behalf of the defendant, at the city of Troy, on the 5th of day of July, 1878, and following days, 1878, before Irving Browne, duly appointed special examiner for that purpose.

Present, pursuant to notice, Marcus P. Norton, esq., complainant's solicitor, and Samuel B. Clarke, esq., assistant United States district attorney, for the defendant.

MARCUS BALL, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Marcus Ball. My age is 52; by profession, a lawyer, and somewhat engaged in other business. I reside in the town of Brunswick, Rens. Co., N. Y.

2. Q. Where do you carry on your business?

A. In the city of Troy.

3. Q. How long have you been in business in the city of Troy?

A. Since about 1849, with the exception of a few years, when I was not actively engaged in my profession here.

4. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

5. Q. How long have you known him, and in what business was he engaged when you knew him, and where?

A. I think I have known Mr. Norton somewhat twenty years or more. He was engaged most of that time, so far as I was acquainted with his business, as a patent lawyer, or engaged in the business of patents at Troy. I have known nothing of his business elsewhere except from report.

6. Q. Do you know his reputation in respect to truth in this community? Is it good or bad? If you do know, state how you know.

2040 A. I don't think I know Mr. Norton's reputation in this community, at the present time, for truth and veracity. For a period of several years past—until within a period of two years past—I have been withdrawn from the society here pretty generally, and at times for quite a considerable period of time, and I don't think I have heard his character for truth and veracity discussed for a few years past. That is the best answer I can give to that question.

7. Q. Did you ever know, and, if yea, when?

(Complainant's counsel objects to the last question for the following reasons:

1st. The last answer of the witness is a bar to any further legitimate inquiry into the subject matter involved in the last question so far as the issues involved in this suit are concerned.

2d. What the witness may or may not have known about the subject matter of the last inquiry is so far remote from any issue in this cause as to render any further inquiry on that subject immaterial and unimportant.)

A. Perhaps ten to fifteen years ago I was acquainted somewhat with the reputation of Mr. Norton in this community.

(Complainant's counsel objects to the last answer and assigns the same reasons as were assigned to the question for objections, to wit:)

8. Q. Have you been acquainted with Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity within ten or fifteen years? If yea, how recently?

(Same objections, and, further, as having been already twice answered by the witness.)

A. It is difficult for me to fix, within the periods of time mentioned, an acquaintance with his reputation for truth and veracity with-2041 out reference to papers, but I think, perhaps, within fifteen years I have been acquainted with his reputation for truth and veracity.

(Answer objected to for reasons already assigned as objections to both questions and answers.)

9. Q. State what that reputation was at the time you knew it; whether it was good or bad.

(Same objection.)

A. I considered it bad at that time.

10. Q. State how you knew it.

(Same objections.)

A. I knew it from the speech of people in this community concerning it.

(Same objections to answer.)

11. Q. From the speech of people concerning Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity, would you believe him on oath?

(Same objections.)

A. At that time in a matter in which he was interested or his feelings were enlisted, I should not.

(Same objections to this answer as to the last.)

12. Q. Have you had any reason to change your mind on the point since the time to which you refer in your last answer?

(Same objections.)

A. I don't know that I have, except that for the period of time before mentioned, 10 or 15 years, I have seen and known very little of Mr. Norton, and do not remember in that time to have heard his char-2042 acter discussed perhaps within that time; perhaps I may also add, that a man may have so deported himself since the occasion before referred to, as to sustain, at the present time, a fair reputation.

(Defendant's counsel objects to last sentence as irresponsive.

Complainant's counsel objects to last objection on the ground that defendant's counsel has no right to undertake to throw mud at his own witness, and therefore moves the court to strike out the objection.)

13. Q. In point of fact, do you know whether Mr. Norton has so deported himself the last 10 or 15 years as to sustain now a fair reputation?

A. I do not.

(Complainant's counsel, in view of the objections taken to questions and answers on the direct examination of this witness, proceeds with the cross-examination of the witness de bene esse.

Defendant's counsel objects to any conditional cross-examination.)

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

14. Q. In your answer to the first question you state that you reside in the town of Brunswick, in this county; for how many consecutive years have you so resided there?

A. Some 12 or 14 years, with the exception of perhaps a year's absence, 6 months' absence occasionally during that term.

15. Q. How far is your present residence from the city of Troy?

A. Perhaps 100 rods from the easterly boundary of the city.

16. Q. That part of the city pretty well settled in your immediate vicinity?

A. It is rather sparsely settled.

2043 17. Q. The house in which you now live has been owned and occupied by you during the time stated in your last answer, has it not?

A. No, sir; I think I erected the present house about 3 or 4 years ago.

solicitor, and Samuel B. Clarke, esq., assistant United States district attorney, for the defendant.

MARCUS BALL, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

2040 munity, at the present time, for truth and veracity. For a period of several years past—until within a period of two years past—I have been withdrawn from the society here pretty generally, and at times for quite a considerable period of time, and I don't think I have heard his character for truth and veracity discussed for a few years past. A. I do not.

(Complainant's counsel, in view of the objections taken to questions and answers on the direct examination of this witness, proceeds with the cross-examination of the witness de bene esse.

Defendant's counsel objects to any conditional cross-examination.)

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

14. Q. In your answer to the first question you state that you reside in the town of Brunswick, in this county; for how many consecutive years have you so resided there?

A. Some 12 or 14 years, with the exception of perhaps a year's absence, 6 months' absence occasionally during that term.

15. Q. How far is your present residence from the city of Troy?

A. Perhaps 100 rods from the easterly boundary of the city.

16. Q. That part of the city pretty well settled in your immediate vicinity?

A. It is rather sparsely settled.

2043 17. Q. The house in which you now live has been owned and occupied by you during the time stated in your last answer, has it not?

A. No, sir; I think I erected the present house about 3 or 4 years ago.

18. Q. The house you now reside in is about how far from the one you occupied 12 or 14 years ago?

A. It's on the very spot and covers considerable more ground than the original house; I have owned the property and resided there, with the exceptions and absences already stated, 12 or 14 years, and perhaps longer.

19. Q. You speak, on your direct examination, with reference to a time about 15 years ago when you considered Norton's reputation bad for truth; do you remember the occasions that led you to those conclusions at that time?

A. I remember no special occasions.

20. Q. Do you remember an interference case in the United States Patent Office, in which William E. Hagan was plaintiff, and against Jacob Shavor and Louis Potter, defendants, and in the early winter and spring of 1863?

A. I do not.

21. Q. Were you in that case and during the time named in the last question, examined as a witness against Marcus P. Norton, and upon the same or substantially the same subject-matter, about which you have been examined to-day, on your direct examination?

A. Several years ago I was examined as a witness in some case or matter, the title of which I do not remember, concerning the reputation of Mr. Norton for truth and veracity; the hearing occurred in this city and before a United States commissioner from Utica, whose name, I think, was Boyce; I understood he was a commissioner.

22. Q. Who conducted your examination on that occasion?

A. I am not positive, but I believe Mr. W. A. Beach appeared on one side, and I think Mr. Norton on the other.

2044 23. Q. Was the law firm of Beach & Smith, then practicing in this city, engaged at that enterprise at impeachment, as attorneys?

A. The law-firm of Beach & Smith were engaged in practicing in this city, at that time, and my recollection is that Mr. W. A. Beach conducted the examination referred to, on one side of the matter or case.

24. Q. Did you ever know or hear, from any source whatever, how those proceedings terminated, as to the question about which you were then and there examined?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I don't think I ever knew, and have no recollection of having heard how they terminated.

25. Q. I will read, for your information, from a certified copy of the decision in that case and on that question, and will then make an inquiry of you: "It has been argued on behalf of Mr. Norton, that it is due to him that this attack should receive judicial reproof and rebuke at our hands."

"So far as the attempt to destroy his testimony by impeaching his character for truth is concerned, we have no hesitation in saying that, in view of the large number of sustaining witnesses, it must be regarded as an unsuccessful one."

After an inquiry by a court consisting of three persons, upon evidence submitted to that court both for and against Norton, do you not think that he was at that time entitled, in this community, to a certificate of good character?

(Objected to for its many assumptions of facts not in evidence.)

A. If that was the opinion of that court, and it was the practice and custom of the court to issue such certificates, it would seem that Mr.

Norton was entitled, from the opinion of the court, to such certificate as the opinion would seem to indicate.

2045 26. Q. About fifteen years ago, or so, you brought several suits against Norton, on several notes, did you not, given to a man named Clark, said to be in the ischuretic business in this city?

A. I brought several suits as attorney, and I believe upon notes of the character indicated by the question; I think they were prosecuted to judgment in every instance.

27. Q. Norton resisted the payment of these notes on the ground that they were obtained without consideration, and in a fraudulent manner, or substantially so, did he not?

A. He defended those suits, and I think substantially upon the grounds suggested, but I cannot on account of the lapse of time state definitely what the defences were.

28. Q. Were not the judgments obtained on those notes subsequently paid and satisfied to your entire satisfaction at that time?

A. They were not paid but were satisfactorily settled, but whether discharged or not, of record, I cannot say, by a satisfaction piece, but they were ended at that time.

29. Q. Norton resisted strenuously for a long time the payment of those notes or those judgments, and you made it correspondingly as hot and heavy for him until they were adjusted with you to your satisfaction, did you not?

A. Norton resisted for a considerable length of time, and I prosecuted the several claims and suits, perhaps as well as I could, until the actions and demands were finally settled, as I have before stated.

30. Q. Since that time to the present time have you in any way, shape, or manner had any difficulty or trouble with Norton, or any occasion for any?

A. Not that I am aware of.

31. Q. He has treated you since that time kindly and politely, has he not, on all occasions?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I don't think he ever treated me otherwise that kindly and politely.

2046 32. Q. Do you now remember any person or persons whom, fifteen years or so ago, you heard speak unkindly or unfavorably of Mr. Norton, or of his character as to truth?

A. I think I do.

33. Q. Please name such as you remember.

A. Judge George Gould, William A. Beach, John L. Flagg, P. W. Bishop; I don't at present remember any others or recall any others, unless it be this man Clark to whom the notes were given.

34. Q. Do you remember that Norton and W. A. Beach had personal difficulties growing out of patent matters concerning Henry Burden, then a client of Mr. Beach?

(Same objection)

A. I remember you had a pretty severe personal difficulty in the hearing or presence of the court at that time, which nearly culminated in blows, but what the original inspiration of it was I do not know.

35. Q. Norton at that time was counsel for the firm of Corning, Winslow & Co., then doing business in this city, was he not?

A. That I do not know.

36. Q. Did you ever hear from anybody or understand that he was counsel for that company?

A. I think I have so heard, or had so heard or understood.

37. Q. Was it not at that time generally known in this city that the firm of Corning, Winslow & Co., Mr. Henry Burden, and the Troy Iron and Nail Factory, were engaged in a severe and bitter litigation upon machinery for the manufacture of railway and other spike, and also upon the machinery for the manufacture of horse and mule shoes? I mean litigation upon letters-patent on such machinery or parts thereof.

A. I had heard of such a litigation between some, if not all the parties named, but how generally it was known I am not able to state.

2047 38. Q. You have been a member of the bar of Rensselaer County for how many consecutive years?

A. Since 1849, I believe.

39. Q. During that time to the present time you have done a considerable business in your profession, have you not?

A. Yes; I have done a considerable business.

40. Q. During all those years you have been well acquainted with the members of the bar in this county, as a general thing, have you not?

A. Not during all of those years, but until within perhaps four or five years; within the last four or five years the bar has received accessions to its numbers, to a considerable extent, of young or youngerly men with whom I am not so well acquainted, and some perhaps with whom I am not at all acquainted.

M. BALL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned till 3 p. m.

FREDERICK G. RANSFORD, a witness called on behalf of defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is F. G. Ransford; my age in December next, 64 years; I have not done any business for a number of years; my residence is 51 Grand Division street, Troy, N. Y.

2. Q. How long have you lived in Troy?

A. I came here in the year 1831, and have lived here, with the exception of one year, parts of '62 and '63, ever since.

2048 3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him, and what business has he carried on while you knew him, and where?

A. I first saw Mr. Norton, to know him, in the year of 1857, latter part, I think; he was a solicitor of patents and had some inventions of his own; the first place I saw him was in the Union House at Troy.

5. Q. How long did he continue to be a solicitor of patents?

A. I couldn't tell you the exact time; it is not a great many years; I didn't understand the question.

6. Q. How long did Mr. Norton carry on the business of solicitor of patents after you first knew him?

A. The last time I knew anything about his patent, it was in connection with the Stewart patent; I couldn't tell the year it was in; I couldn't say what year; it was in Stewart's patent.

7. Where did Mr. Norton carry on the business of solicitor of patents?

A In First street, and on the corner of First and Congress.

8. Q. In the city of Troy?

A. Yes; in the city of Troy.

9. Q. Do you know Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity in this community; is it good or bad?

A. Bad.

10. Q. State how you know it.

A. I know it from general conversation and dealings with the man.

11 Q. Do you know it from the speech of men in this community concerning it?

A. Yes, sir.

2049 12. Q. On the basis of Mr. Norton's general reputation for truth and veracity in this community, which you say is bad, state whether you would believe him on oath?

A. I would not.

Cross examination by Mr. NORTON:

13. Q. Where were you born?

A. New York.

14. Q. How long have you been in Troy?

A. I came here in 1831.

15. Q. You say you know Marcus P. Norton, and have known him for about 20 years, and that you have had dealings with him; when did you last have any dealings with Norton of any kind whatever?

A. Well, sir; I gave John L. Flagg a note, indorsed paper, to pay for some carpets, and a note to pay for some furniture and pay his house rent for a year, to keep him from being turned out, and I let him have some money on a draft from his wife, to enable him to get home from the West, and a number of other times I could not tell.

16. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. What was the question?

17. Q. Did you understand the last question but one, at the time you made answer to it?

A. Which question did you say; the last one?

18. Q. I again repeat the last two questions and require of you an answer, yes or no; and the examiner will read for your information those two questions?

A. I did.

19. Q. If you did, state what that question asked of you to state?

A. It asked if I had any dealings with Mr. Norton.

20. Q. Anything else?

A. He asked me my age.

21. Q. Anything more?

A. He asked me where I was born.

22. Q. Anything more?

A. I told him I was born in New York.

2050 23. Q. Anything more in that question that you solemnly swear you understood at the time you made answer to it?

A. I don't recollect.

24. Q. You swear on your oath, do you not, that you have now stated in your last several answers the subject-matter, and only the subject-matter, contained in the question which you solemnly swear you understood at the time you made answer to it?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

25. Q. Is that the only answer you can and will give to the last question?

A. It is.

26. Q. The examiner will now read to you the question which you solemnly swear you understood at the time you made answer to it, and you are requested to make a proper answer to that question. The question is number 15 of your cross-examination.

(Examiner reads question.)

A. I couldn't state the exact time.

27. Q. Why can't you state the exact time?

A. Because I cannot.

28. Q. About how many years ago was it?

A. I could not tell unless I referred to some papers.

29. Q. Have you had any dealings with him since the year 1863?

A. I could not tell without referring.

30. Q. Without referring to what?

A. Papers.

31. Q. Look at the papers you mentioned in your last answer and state when you had any business dealings with Norton whatever?

A. I have not the papers with me.

32. Q. Be kind enough to go where those papers are, examine them, and then answer the question so frequently put to you on this examination, namely, when did you last have any business dealings with Norton of any kind whatever?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

2051 A. Want me to go immediately.

33. Q. Immediately.

(Objected to.)

A. It will take some time to look over the papers.

34. Q. When did you last see those papers and examine them?

A. I could not tell.

35. Q. Do you know where they are at this time?

A. No, sir.

36. Q. Do you at this time refuse to go and examine your papers, which you have sworn were necessary to enable you to correctly answer cross question No. 15, and several subsequent questions substantially the same?

A. I want time.

37. Q. How much time do you want?

A. I can't tell.

38. Q. Why can you not tell?

A. I can't tell exactly the reason why; some accounts I paid to E. W. Johnson; I don't know where to look for his books till I inquire.

39. Q. Give your best present recollections of the time when you last had any business transactions of any kind whatever with Norton.

A. I couldn't tell.

40. Q. Why can you not give your best present recollections in answer to last question?

A. I can't tell you.

41. Q. Is that the only answer you can or will give to the last two questions?

A. That is as near as I can give—all I can give.

42. Q. Have you at any time since the year 1863, in the city of Troy or elsewhere, and to anybody, spoken of Norton in language unfavorable to him, and in terms derogatory to him or his character for truth?

A. I have.

43. Q. To whom and when?

A. I will look at this little document from Washington.

2052 A. 1871, then he put in a paper, called it an assignment from Ransford and Lowe, reported to be made in the year 1859: Ransford & Lowe made to him, which was a forgery, to the best of my knowledge from this paper and copy.

44. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I did.

45. Q. What did that question inquire of you to state?

A. It wanted me state if I had any conversation about Marcus P. Norton's character.

46. Q. You are sure of that, are you?

A. Yes.

47. Q. You swear to it on your oath, do you?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

48. Q. The last question is repeated to you, and you are requested to state yes or no as your answer.

A. The best of my knowledge.

49. Q. The examiner will now please read to you question 43, and you will please make a proper answer to that question, having sworn you understand it.

A. I swore in 1871.

50. Q. Question No. 43 is now repeated to you, and if you understand it, as you swear you do, you will please give to that question a proper answer, after it and the one immediately preceding it shall have been read to you by the examiner.

Both questions being read by the examiner, witness makes the following answer:

A. I have answered that once.

51. Q. Answer it again.

A. I have answered it once.

52. Q. Do you decline now and here to state the name or names of any person or persons to whom you have spoken, as you swear you have spoken, of Norton's character in terms derogatory to it since the year 1863?

2053 A. What I have spoken is concerning the conduct of Norton trying to rob me of my interest in the patent of 1859.

53. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. That's the last one I made here.

54. Q. Did you understand the last two questions at the time you made answer to those questions?

A. I have answered them.

55. Q. Do you decline on your oath to state whether or not you understood cross-question No. 52 of this examination?

A. I have answered it.

56. Q. You have answered what?

A. The question as it was put to me.

57. Q. What question was that which you swear you answered?

A. A number of them.

58. Q. Please refer to those questions by giving their number, and especially to that one you swear you have answered.

A. I never heard no number.

59. Q. You are sure no number was stated?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

59½. Q. Cross-question No. 52 of your examination reads as follows: "Do you decline now and here to state the name or names of any person or persons to whom you have spoken of Norton's character in terms derogatory to it since the year 1863?" Having sworn you understand this question, you are requested to give the name of any person or persons to whom you have spoken of Norton in a derogatory manner since the year 1863.

A. When you say derogatory, what do you mean by that?

60. Q. Don't you know what derogatory means?

A. I have asked the question.

61. Q. The last question is repeated.

A. No.

62. Q. Haven't you already testified that you have "spoken of 2054 Norton in language unfavorable to him, and in terms derogatory to him" and his character for truth since 1863?

A. I have testified so before.

63. Q. Have you testified to any matter in this case that you didn't know anything about when you testified to it?

A. Not to my knowledge.

64. Q. You are positive about that, are you not?

A. Not to my knowledge.

65. Q. What do you mean to be understood by your last answer?

A. I answered.

66. Q. What do you mean the court to understand by your last two answers?

A. I have answered.

67. Q. You have now given all the information to this court about the subject matter of the last two or three questions, have you not?

A. No, sir; the reason why, I want to see some parties concerning a certain check or checks the Troy City Bank held, and some other persons.

68. Q. Do you know a person in this city by the name of Jeremiah D. Green?

A. I do.

69. Q. For what length of time and how intimately have you known him?

A. I have known Jeremiah D. Green down in the years eighteen hundred and fifties; I don't know whether '51, '2, '3, or '5, and from that time to the present; well, I have knowed Jeremiah D. Green and have had more or less business transactions with him; I think it is '68 or '69, from that time up to the present.

70. Q. Did you ever employ him to act as your agent and attorney in any matter whatever?

A. I did.

71. Q. When was that?

A. I couldn't say.

71½. Q. How long did he continue to act as your agent and attorney?

2055 A. I suppose he will act as long as Mr. Norton is trying to rob me of my interest in the patent of 1859.

72. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I did.

73. Q. What did that question inquire of you to state which has just been read to you by the examiner?

A. He is acting now, but I can't tell how long he has been acting.
74. Q. Is that the best answer you can give?
A. Unless referring to a memorandum book.

Adjourned till July 6th, 1878, at 8.45 a. m.

JULY 6TH, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment.
Same counsel present as before.

75. Q. Did you know Jacob Shavor, of the city of Troy?
A. I did.
76. Q. Mr. Shavor is dead, is he not?
A. He is.
77. Q. When and where did he die?
A. I think it was the 28th of December, 1877, 51 Grand Division street, Troy, Rens. Co., State of N. Y.
78. Q. Who owns the property, No. 51 Grand Division st.?
A. Charity A. Ransford.
79. Q. Who is Charity A. Ransford?
A. My wife.
80. Q. Did you and your family live in that house at the time Mr. Shavor died?
A. Me and my wife did, in a part of it.
81. Q. You lived in the first story, Shavor and his family in the second, did you not?
A. Yes.
2056 82. Q. How long had Mr. Shavor resided in that house previous to the time of his death?
A. He has lived there twice.
83. Q. Go on and state the time—the length of time—each time.
A. I couldn't tell without referring to some papers and memorandum book.
84. Q. Give your present best recollections as to the length of time he occupied that house with you as tenant of yours, or of your wife.
A. I couldn't tell without referring to papers.
85. Q. Was he there one year?
A. Yes.
86. Q. Was he there two years?
A. Yes.
87. Q. Was he there three years?
A. Yes.
88. Q. Was he there four years?
A. Yes.
89. Q. Was he there five years?
A. Yes, sir.
90. Q. Was he there six years?
A. I could not tell without referring.
91. Q. Did you answer the last six questions with or without the aid of a memorandum book?
A. I did to the best of my knowledge.
92. Q. You did what to the best of your knowledge?
A. Answered.
93. Q. Answered what?
A. The question as it was put.
94. Q. The intelligence displayed by you on your cross examination, and your understanding of questions put to you on your cross-examination, is of the same kind and character as that possessed by you during your direct examination in this case; is it not?

A. No, sir.

95. Q. Now please explain to the court the difference?

2057 A. I referred to a document in the Commissioner of Patents as to dates.

96. Q. Did you refer to that mysterious document on your direct examination in this case?

A. I don't think I did.

97. Q. Have you that document with you?

A. I have.

98. Q. How long have you had it in your possession?

A. The one I have got now, I have not had it long.

99. Q. Of whom did you get it?

A. Jeremiah D. Green.

100. Q. When and where?

A. During the last year.

101. Q. Did you ever show that document to anybody?

A. I did.

102. Q. Give the name or names of persons to whom you showed it.

A. It would be impossible to give them all.

103. Q. Did those persons to whom you showed that document reside in the city of Troy?

A. Yes, sir.

104. Q. To how many hundred persons did you show that within the last few years, in the city of Troy or elsewhere?

A. No hundreds.

105. Q. About how many?

A. Can't tell.

106. Q. To a good many persons you showed it, did you not?

A. I couldn't tell.

107. Q. Name one or more persons to whom you showed it.

A. I showed it to Albert C. Corse, Jacob Shavor, and a small number of other persons; I can't give their names unless I have time to think it over.

108. Q. You have carried that document about your person since it was furnished you by Jeremiah D. Green, have you not?

2058 A. No, sir.

109. Q. Where has it been?

A. In my house where I live.

110. Q. You had it with you at the time of your direct examination, did you not?

A. I did.

111. Q. How came you to have it with you on that occasion, and for what purpose did you bring it?

A. I didn't know but I might want to use it as a reference for dates.

112. Q. During your direct examination you more than once took that document from your pocket, did you not?

A. I could not tell.

113. Q. I require you to produce that document and put it in evidence in your answer to this question, and to have it marked Exhibit A (Ransford).

(Witness produces the paper, which is marked Exhibit A (Ransford), I. B., Exr., July 6th, 1878.)

114. Q. Have you ever had any other document of that kind than the one you just presented?

A. I have had.
115. Q. How many and when?
A. I had one from the department.
116. Q. What department?
A. Some person in the Patent Office, I think.
117. Q. Give the name of that person?
A. I can't do it.
118. Q. What did you do with that document after you received it?
A. I can't tell.
119. Q. You can't tell?
A. I said I couldn't tell.
120. Q. Did you ever show that to anybody in this city?
A. Yes; I think I did.
121. Q. To whom?
A. To Jake Shavor, Albert C. Corse, and others.
2059 122. Q. I observe on the back of Exhibit A (Ransford) figures in pencil mark. Do you know how they came there?
A. I put them there.
123. Q. Did you make and file in the United States Patent Office an affidavit which was used on the occasion referred to in that exhibit?
A. I did.
124. Q. At whose request did you make that affidavit?
A. Well, sir, we had or I had a copy purporting to be an assignment by myself and Peter Lowe, Marcus P. Norton put in as a genuine assignment of a patent of 1859 concerning a patent on post-office stamps.
125. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?
A. To the best of my knowledge.
126. Q. Did or did you not understand the question referred to in the last question at the time you answered it?
A. Same answer.
127. Q. Do you refuse to give any other answer than that you have just given?
A. Give me the question above.
128. Q. I now repeat to you that question, which is as follows: "At whose request did you make that affidavit?"
A. We had or I had a copy from the department to see or know whether I ever signed a document purporting to be an assignment of the patent of August, 1859; I made an affidavit that I never did.
129. Q. At whose request did you make that affidavit?
A. I could not tell now.
130. Q. In whose handwriting was it?
A. I couldn't tell at present without referring, looking, inquiring.
131. Q. Was it in your handwriting?
A. No.
2060 132. Q. Who aided you in the preparation of that affidavit?
A. To the best of my recollection, Jeremiah D. Green.
133. Q. Was not that affidavit in the handwriting of Jeremiah D. Green at the time you made oath to it?
A. I could not tell; the document will show for itself; it's on record.
134. Q. At that time did not you and Jeremiah D. Green go to other persons in this city and procure from them an affidavit or affidavits to be used on that occasion?
A. I say person.
135. Q. Who sent those affidavits to the Patent Office after you and Green obtained them?

A. I could not tell.

136. Q. They were sent to the Patent Office, were they not?

A. I think they were to the best of my knowledge; the District Attorney had them the last I heard of them; I was so informed.

137. Q. Who so informed you?

A. Jeremiah D. Green.

138. Q. Was Norton present at the time you made that affidavit?

A. I don't recollect what one.

139. Q. Have you been examined about any affidavit but one affidavit this morning, or in this case?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

140. Q. I refer to that one, and you ought to know I refer to no other but that one.

A. When I made my answer I did not know whether it was that one concerning the forgery or not.

141. Q. Were you cross-examined at the time you made that affidavit by anybody?

A. Not to my knowledge.

142. Q. Don't you know whether you were or not?

2061 A. I have no recollection of it.

143. Q. Was the person or persons from whom you and Jeremiah D. Green procured other affidavits to be used on that occasion cross-examined?

A. I have no recollection at present; they may have been.

144. Q. You have spoken several times on this cross-examination, and without being inquired of, about having received from the Patent-Office a copy of a paper purporting to be an assignment; have you that paper with you?

A. No, sir.

145. Q. Where is it?

A. I don't know, sir.

146. Q. Have you and Jeremiah D. Green and Jacob Shavor, in the city of Troy, together discussed Norton's character for truth?

A. We might have spoken of it.

147. Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. I presume we did.

148. Q. About how frequently?

A. I could not tell.

149. Q. At what place in this city did those discussions take place?

A. I could not tell—a number of places.

150. Q. Do you know Mr. A. C. Daniels, the person now present?

A. I know him.

151. Q. Have you recently or during the last year spoken to Mr. Daniels about Norton, and about his truth or his character?

A. Yes.

152. Q. What did you say to him on that occasion?

A. Mr. Daniels spoke to me something about Norton; I don't recollect whether he was in town or not; Mr. Daniels spoke of a claim he had against him; I said there was quite a number of them around town; that is all I said to the best of my knowledge; I might have said more.

2062 153. Q. Did you, on that occasion, say anything to Mr. Daniels about the fair prospect of Norton's ending his days in prison, either in words or substance that?

A. Well, I had no knowledge what I did say.

154. Q. Did you, on that occasion, speak to Mr. Daniels in an unfriendly manner of Norton or about Norton?

A. I did.

155. Q. Did you, on that occasion, speak to Mr. Daniels in a manner that, if Daniels had believed a single word you said to him, it would have disgraced and dishonored Norton?

A. I forget what I said to him; I don't know whether I showed him that paper or not; I don't know whether I told him that Norton was trying to rob me out of the rights that I hold in a patent for post-office stamps.

156. Q. What is the date of that patent?

A. 1859.

157. Q. What month and what day of the month of that year?

A. To the best of my knowledge the date of the patent was August 9th, 1859; I think it was.

158. Q. In your answer to question 155 you say you don't know but that you showed Mr. Daniels that paper; what paper had you reference to?

A. Exhibit A (Ransford), I. B., Ex'r, July 6th, 1878.

159. Q. In words or in substance did you say to Mr. Daniels, on that occasion, that Norton would never get a cent out of the claim pending in this suit?

A. No; nor I don't think any one else.

160. Q. Do you mean to say that you did not state so to Mr. Daniels as inquired of you in the last question?

A. I say, if I did say so, I meant all of us that pretend to be interested.

161. Q. You have stated on this examination that Jeremiah D. Green was, and is now, your agent and attorney; what business did you
2063 employ him to do, and what business has he done for you since he became your agent and attorney?

A. He made an agreement with me, for a certain portion, to transact the business of the post-office stamp, which I agreed to give him, which he has attended to as far as I know; that's all I know about it.

162. Q. What post office stamp is that?

A. The one they are using now; that is, 1859 patent.

163. Q. Is that the patent you have referred to as being dated August 9th, 1859?

A. Yes, sir.

164. Q. How much of that patent were you to give to Jeremiah D. Green for his valuable services?

A. If there was anything to be got out of it he was to have one-half of my fortune.

165. Q. What did you say to Mr. Charles Eddy as he was about leaving this room?

A. I told him he would have to come down here to sweat it.

166. Q. What did you mean by that expression?

(Objected to; the remark speaks for itself.)

A. I meant that if he was down here on the stand he would sweat; I never heard anybody say he was coming.

167. Q. I have taken down your words as you spoke them to him. I will read them to you; they are as follows: "We will have you down here;" to which Mr. Eddy replied, "No; you won't;" and in an emphatic manner you replied, "Yes; we will." Did those words pass between you and Mr. Eddy, or words in substance the same?

(Objected to for its assumptions as immaterial.)

A. I think it was I instead of we, for I had no information of his coming here.

168. Q. For what purpose did you want Mr. Eddy here?

2064 A. I don't know of any.

169. Q. What motive had you in making such remark to Mr. Eddy while you were under cross-examination as a witness in this case?

A. I thought it would do him good to come down here and sweat.

170. Q. That is all the motive you had?

A. All I know of.

171. Q. After getting Mr. Eddy here how do you expect to make him "sweat"?

A. Set him by the stove.

172. Q. During the recent war of the rebellion, in what business were you engaged in this city or elsewhere?

A. What time of the war?

173. Q. I mean that time when it was generally known you were a bounty jumper, fraudulently enlisting men, and taking money from the government that did not belong to you; I mean that time.

(Objected to for its assumptions and as a deliberate insult to the witness.)

A. I won't answer the whole; I will a part.

174. Q. During the enlistment of soldiers in this city to suppress that rebellion, did you take any part in enlisting soldiers or filling up what is known as a quota for this city or county?

A. We took a contract of Mayor Thorne, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, and State of New York; I took, or we took, another contract of a portion of Brunswick; I never enlisted, nor I never jumped the bounty, nor I never paid debts with other people's money.

175. Q. How many men did you enlist under the contracts?

A. I couldn't tell; it wasn't limited: so much a a man, which every man got.

176. Q. Did you make any money on those contracts?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

2065 A. Not a great deal.

177. Q. That is not my question; my question is, did you make any money on those contracts?

A. Not much.

Q. 178. How long were you enggaged in that business.

A. I could not tell.

179. Q. Who, if any body, were your partners in that business?

A. Quite a number.

180. Q. Name some of them.

A. Landrigan Brothers; I was concerned once with John Akins, of Valley Falls, Pittstown, somewhere out there; P. J. Marsh & Co.; that's all I know anything of now.

181. Q. Returning to the subject matter of Jeremiah D. Green being your agent and attorney, at what place has he conducted your business about the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. He has conducted my business, some in Washington, some in New York, some in Troy; part of it was connected with Mr. Norton, acting as his agent and mine, and others, getting the patent of 1859 extended seven years.

182. Q. About what portion of his time has he spent in Washington on that business as your agent and attorney during the last seven or eight years?

A. I never kept any time.

183. Q. Has he as your agent and attorney transacted business for you in the U. S. Patent Office during the last seven or eight years?

A. I think he has.

184. Q. Do you know whether he has or not?

A. I think he has.

185. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I think I was interested in the patent of 1859, which he had extended.

186. Q. Is that all the business he done for you in the Patent Office?

A. I don't remember.

187. Q. Why do you not remember?

2066 A. The reason why I do not remember is that considerable business is said to be done there in Washington; some of it was done in Congress, some was done in the Post-Office, so I have been informed.

188. Q. Has Jeremiah D. Green ever appeared for you, as your agent or attorney, under the patent of August 9th, 1859, in the Post-Office Department or before any committees of Congress?

A. I have been informed so.

189. Q. Who gave you that information?

A. Jeremiah D. Green.

190. Q. What was Jeremiah D. Green trying to do in the Post-Office Department, or before any committees of Congress, about the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. Marcus P. Norton knows more about that than I do. I was so informed that Norton and Green were acting together.

191. Q. Who gave you that information?

A. Jacob Shavor had letters from Jeremiah D. Green to that effect.

192. Q. Jeremiah D. Green, acting for you in Washington, transacted business for you of which you knew nothing; is that it?

A. All I knew was from what information I could get of Shavor, for he was acting for Shavor at the same time, and Green, when he came back, I got information from him. Shavor done the correspondence with Green.

193. Q. Who else did Green act for besides you and Jacob Shavor, on those occasions?

A. In the case of Mr. Wheeler, in New York, Mr. Corse was associated with us.

194. Q. Albert C. Corse?

A. Yes, sir.

195. Q. Will you swear that Mr. Green was ever the agent or attorney of Albert C. Corse in any business whatsoever?

A. He was, to the best of my knowledge.

2067 196. Q. Who was the agent or attorney for Peter Low in the Patent Office, in the Post-Office Department, and before committees of Congress, with reference to the patent of August 9th, 1859, at the time when Jeremiah D. Green was acting for you about the same patent?

A. I was always informed that Jeremiah D. Green was his agent?

197. Q. Who gave you that information?

A. Peter Low and Jeremiah D. Green.

198. Q. Who were the owners of the patent of August 9th, 1859, during the time that Jeremiah D. Green acted as your agent?

A. They were said to be very numerous; the patent before it was extended belonged to Charles Eddy & Co., Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse forming the company; Peter Low, W. B. Hatch of New York, and F. G. Ransford. Now, on the extension, to the best of my knowledge, Charles Eddy, Jacob Shavor, Albert C. Corse, Peter Low, Jeremiah D. Green, and F. G. Ransford, and Marcus Norton.

199. Q. Of whom did you and the persons you name obtain the ownership of that extended patent?

A. I suppose we got it from Norton.

200. Q. What Norton have you reference to in your last answer?

A. Marcus.

201. Q. Who is Marcus?

A. Marcus Norton, that's all I know.

202. Q. Is that the only answer and the best answer you can give to that question?

A. No, sir; I have got some of Norton's notes up in my house and I can go to the Central Bank and inquire.

203. Q. How much money did you pay to "Marcus" for an assignment of an interest in the extended term of the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. I understood from Mr. Norton, that if Mr. Green, and myself, that we was to have, for getting the patent extended, furnishing the 2068 means, an interest, which interest he assigned to us, and as for the amount I can't tell at present.

204. Q. Did you pay a single cent or any other sum to Norton for an assignment of an interest in that term of that patent?

A. Only according to contract to Patent Office with Norton.

205. Q. How much was that?

A. I can't tell.

206. Q. How much did the other persons you named pay for an assignment of an interest in the extended term of that patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. I could not tell.

207. Q. Was there anything paid by them—say a cent or any other sum?

A. I suppose there was.

208. Q. What leads you to suppose there was anything paid?

A. Norton is the man who always wanted money.

209. Q. Is that your answer?

A. That's my answer.

210. Q. How much money have you, Jeremiah D. Green, Peter Low, William B. Hatch, Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor realized on the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. I never realized a cent. Is Marcus P. Norton's name in there?

211. Q. Have any of the other parties realized anything on that patent up to now?

A. Marcus P. Norton has, to the number of thousands, according to what Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse say, according to their testimony in the other suit in this case.

212. Q. What do you mean by the other suit in this case?

A. When they were on the stand, if it is another suit, in the case of assignment.

213. Q. You were present and heard their testimony, on that occasion, were you?

A. I did, part of it.

214. Q. And you heard them, and each of them, testify on that 2069 occasion that they had paid Norton thousands of dollars on the patent of August 9th, 1859? Did you?

A. I heard one of them.

215. How much money do you expect to make out of the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. According to what Mr. Norton used to tell, I thought I was going to be rich.

216. Q. How much do you now expect to make?

A. I never calculate what I make till I have it in my pocket-book; things are very unsartin.

Adjourned till 2 p. m., July 6th, 1878.

(Complainant's counsel moves an adjournment of these proceedings from 3½ p. m. to-day to Thursday, July 11, 1878, at 10 a. m., on account of a matter pending before Judge Cadman, as referee, at Chatham Village, at the office of McClellan & Browne, in the State court, which has been by his order set down for Monday next, at 9 a. m., with the distinct understanding that no adjournment would be granted to either party on that day, which order was made a long time before the notice for these proceedings here was served.

Defendant's counsel opposes the application.

On the overt stipulation in open court of the complainant's solicitor, that the time for taking of testimony herein shall be extended till the first Monday of August next, the examiner decides to grant the application.)

216½. Q. Have you the patent of Aug. 9, 1859, in your pocket-book?

A. My pocket-book wouldn't hold it.

217. Q. Is your pocket-book large enough to hold the money that you expect to get out of the patent of August 9th, 1859?

A. I haven't figured it up.

2070 218. Q. Figured up what—yourself or your pocket-book?

A. It depends altogether on what company I am in.

219. Q. Being now under the care and keeping of the assistant district attorney, who is known to be a first rate fellow, for a moment consider yourself in his company and then answer the last question.

A. I don't think I have sold myself out to anybody.

220. Q. Should you sell yourself out to anybody, what price do you think you ought to bring, having in view, always, your last answer?

A. That's a question aint in my mind; I never was guilty of selling myself out.

221. Q. Do you know a person of the name of Thomas J. W. Robertson, formerly residing in New York City, but now of the city of Washington?

A. I never have met the gentleman, to my recollection.

222. Q. Did you have any interest in a patent assigned to you by him or by any other person upon revolving dates, and dated Sept. 22d, 1857?

A. I did; I don't know whether it was assigned by him or not.

223. Q. How much interest did you have in that patent, and when did you obtain it?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I owned one quarter by assignment.

224. Q. Who owned the other three-quarters of that patent?

A. Charles Eddy & Co., I think, William B. Hatch, and Peter Low.

225. Q. One quarter each did they own?

A. Charles Eddy & Co. owned one-quarter, William B Hatch owned one-quarter, Peter Low owned one quarter, F. G. Ransford owned the other quarter.

226. Q. Was that patent ever extended by the Commissioner of Patents for the term of seven years?

2071 A. I think it was.

227. Q. Did you take any part in the proceedings to extend it before the Commissioner of Patents?

A. Not before the Commissioner individually.

228. Q. Did you anywhere?

A. I was subpœnaed by a man by the name of Betts, in the city of Troy.

229. Q. For what purpose were you subpœnaed by Mr. Betts?

A. One thing was as to the reputation of Marcus P. Norton.

230. Q. How did Mr. Betts know you knew anything about that reputation?

A. Mr. Betts was in Troy making inquiries as to Marcus P. Norton; I gave him what information I knew about it.

231. Q. After Mr. Betts had diligently searched the city of Troy after the reputation of Norton, for the purpose of obtaining testimony as to that reputation, how many men like yourself did he discover, who were willing to go on the witness stand and swear under oath as to that matter?

A. I could not tell.

232. Q. Was Jeremiah D. Green examined as a witness on that occasion?

A. I couldn't say whether he was or was not.

233. Q. Was Jacob Shavor examined as a witness on that occasion?

A. I think he was, to the best of my knowledge.

234. Q. When Mr. Betts came to you to make the inquiries you have stated, what reply did you make to him?

A. I can't tell.

235. Q. Why can't you tell?

A. I have no means of telling.

236. Q. Were you examined as a witness in that case by Mr. Betts?

A. I was examined by somebody—I couldn't tell who.

237. Q. What did you testify on that occasion about Norton and as to his truth?

2072 A. Bad.

238. Q. Do you mean that the question was bad, or that you yourself were bad in your last answer?

A. Marcus P. Norton bad.

239. Q. How much money was paid to you on that occasion for testifying to that, by Mr. Betts, or anybody else?

A. Not a dollar; never sell out.

240. Q. On that occasion you went like a lamb to the slaughter, did you, not willing to testify?

A. I always made up my mind when the wolf was around the lambs and sheep had to be taken care of.

241. Q. Mr. Betts being around the city then, hunting evidence, did you consider him a wolf?

A. Mr. Norton.

242. Q. Was Norton in the city at that time?

A. He is in and out so often I don't know whether he was or not.

243. Q. How came you to be so alarmed on that occasion as to flee from the presence of a wolf you did not know was or was not in the city?

A. I took Mr. Betts to be an honorable sort of a man, and he must look out for the wolf.

244. Q. Did you tell him that on that occasion?

A. I couldn't tell you.

245. Q. What's your habit when you see wolves in the city of Troy; do you undertake to kill them, or do you flee from them, or do you cage them?

A. Not what we call a two legged wolf; I generally get out of the way.

246. Q. Did you get out of the way of a two-legged wolf when you swore on that occasion you would not believe Norton under oath?

A. I had no object in getting out of the way then.

247. Q. When on that occasion you swore to that infamous mess of stuff, was there a two-legged wolf there to bite you on your cross-examination?

A. I don't have any recollection of any cross-examination.

2073 248. Q. In whose office were you examined on that occasion?

A. I couldn't tell.

249. Q. Were you examined at No. 37 Congress street, Troy, N. Y., on that occasion?

A. I have no recollection; I think it was on First street, and I wouldn't be positive; but I think so.

250. Q. Were you examined at No. 47 First street on that occasion?

A. I couldn't tell what the number was, if it was there.

251. Q. I now show you a certified copy from the United States Patent Office of a deposition said to have been made by you on the occasion to which I refer. Take it, examine it, and then state whether you testified. or not, to that, on that occasion?

A. (Witness takes paper, examines it, and testifies as follows): I don't know whether I testified to all or part of what is in there; it is so long ago I can't recollect. There is a part there in which my name is not spelled right.

(Complainant's counsel here offers in evidence the certified copy examined by the witness, and referred to in the last question and answer, and signed F. G. Ransford.

He also offers in evidence two other papers certified to in the same package, one being signed Jacob Shavor, and the other signed J. D. Green, together with the certificate of one Levi Philips, a commissioner of deeds.

All these papers being under one certificate and seal of the United States Patent Office, dated the 15th day of November, 1872, and signed James N. Thatcher, Acting Commissioner of Patents.

The said package of papers is here marked Complainant's Exhibit (Ransford), No. 5, I. B., ex'r, July 6th, 1878.)

(Objected to by defendant's counsel as not evidence.)

2074 Adjourned till Thursday, July 11th, at 10 a. m., pursuant to foregoing order.

THURSDAY, July 11, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of witness F. G. RANSFORD by Mr. NORTON:

252. Q. Who came to see you to be a witness in that case? I mean the case referred to in the exhibit last above mentioned.

A. think it was Mr. Betts, to the best of my knowledge.

253. Q. What did you tell Mr. Betts in this interview about Norton? (Objected as immaterial.)

A. I do not recollect.

254. Q. Did you say anything to him about Norton?

A. I think not at that time; he inquired about the Robertson patent.

255. Q. When did you have a conversation with Mr. Betts about Norton?

(Objected as immaterial.)

A. I couldn't tell how long it was that Mr. Betts called on me after I first saw him.

256. Q. At that interview with Betts did you speak to him of Norton in a favorable or unfavorable manner?

(Objected as immaterial.)

A. I told Mr. Betts that Mr. Norton hadn't done square for me.

257. Is that all you told him?

A. At that time; yes; to the best of my knowledge.

2075 258. Q. When, after that, did you next see Betts?

A. I cannot tell exactly.

259. Q. Did he ask you if you would testify you wouldn't believe Norton under oath?

A. I couldn't tell.

260. Q. Why can't you tell?

A. I saw him a number of times.

261. Q. I ask you why cannot you tell?

A. I saw Mr. Betts; I couldn't tell when, whether in New York or Troy; I couldn't take Mr. Norton's word.

262. Q. Did you and Jeremiah D. Greene and Jacob Shavor go to that examination together, and were you there together during that examination?

A. I couldn't tell.

263. Q. Why can't you tell?

A. It was some time ago, and I had no interest in it; I could not tell.

264. Q. Were you subpœnaed there as a witness?

A. I think I was; I don't think I would have been there unless I was. That is the best knowledge I have of it at this present time.

265. Q. Who subpœnaed you?

A. I don't know.

266. Q. Did anybody?

A. I think there must, or I should not have gone.

267. Q. Do you know whether you were subpœnaed, or not?

A. I think I was, to the best of my knowledge.

268. Q. (Question repeated and witness asked if he understood the last question when he answered.)

(Objected to as immaterial, and as having no answer.)

A. I think I did understand it.

269. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No, sir.

270. Q. Was that examination held at the place to which you were subpœnaed by Mr. Betts?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

2076 A. I could not tell; it was some time ago.

271. Q. Was that examination held at the place named in the notice for the taking of that testimony?

A. I suppose it must have been, but I could not tell.

272. Q. On your direct examination this question was put to you; it is number eleven, and reads as follows: "Do you know it from the speech of men in this community concerning it?" You answered, "Yes, sir." With whom did you have conversation at any time concerning Norton's character for truth or anything else?

A. I could not tell.

273. Q. Name one person with whom you had such conversation, and when it was?

A. I could not tell when it was—Wm. B. Hatch, Jacob Shavor, and others.

274. Q. Name the others you refer to in your last answer.

A. Captain L. H. Tupper.

275. Q. Go on, give us all the names?

A. Mr. Wm. W. Secombe, of New York, Mr. Peter Low.

276. Q. You have now given the names of all the persons with whom you had any conversation concerning Norton's character for truth, have you?

A. No, sir.

277. Q. Then, when you are several times asked to give those names, why do you not give them?

A. I didn't think of them at the time the question was asked.

278. Q. Go on and give them now, and all of them?

A. James Morrison, Ackley, Robert Green; that is all I can think of at present.

279. Q. With whom do you associate in this community? Name all the persons with whom you have social relations in this community.

A. Very limited since the death of my daughter.

2077 280. Q. Jeremiah D. Green and also Jacob Shavor, in his lifetime, were associates of yours, were they not, in social society?

A. They were.

281. Q. Do you know Mr. Wm. Eddy, of this city?

A. I do.

282. Q. Did you ever have any conversation with him about Norton's character for truth?

A. I think I have.

283. Q. What did you tell him about it?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Well, I think I told him that Mr. Norton's word was not to be depended upon.

284. Q. Since January, 1870, to the present time, did you tell Mr. Wm. Eddy, of this city, that you intended to have Norton put into state's prison, or words substantially the same?

A. I told Mr. Eddy that Norton had forged my name and swore to it, and if that was the case he ought to be in prison for it.

285. Q. You told him that, did you?

A. I did, I think, to the best of my knowledge.

286. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I could not say.

287. Q. What is it that you cannot say?

A. As to the conversation.

288. Q. Have you not just sworn that you told Mr. Eddy that Norton had forged your name, and is not that a part of your answer to question 284?

A. I swore I think I did.

289. Q. Do you desire to change your answer to question 284 in any respect?

(Answer to Q. 284 read to witness.)

290. Q. Why do you so long hesitate in making your answer to this question?

(Objected to as assuming the fact.)

A. The reason why, I am trying to inform myself as to the answer, and I don't think I can alter it.

291. Q. (Question 289 repeated, read to witness by the examiner, and witness requested to answer it.)

2078 A. "Same as I answered."

292. Q. Is that the only answer you give to this last question?

A. That is all.

293. Q. Do you know Lemuel H. Tupper, of this city?

A. I do.

294. Q. Have you had any conversation with him about Norton's character for truth within the last ten years?

A. I couldn't tell at present.

295. Q. Is that the best and only answer you will give to that question?

A. Till I have time to think it over.

296. Q. How much time do you want for that purpose?

A. I could not tell.

297. Q. Did you ever tell him that Norton ought to be in state's prison and you intended to have him there, or words substantially the same?

A. I have no knowledge of it.

298. Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. I have no knowledge of it.

299. Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

(Objected to as having been twice answered categorically.)

A. I have no knowledge.

300. Q. You have no knowledge about what?

A. About the question put to me last before that.

301. Q. For about how many years have you, Peter Low, Jeremiah D. Green, and Wm. B. Hatch, labored to prevent Norton or his assignees from receiving compensation from the Government of the United States, under his patent of April 14, 1863, and its several reissues?

(Objected to as assuming that the witness has so labored.)

A. Marcus P. Norton has been trying to keep the parties that 2079 was interested in the patent, and the patent that the government is using in the post-office—that patent is dated 9th August, 1859—from getting their pay.

302. Q. Will you now please answer my question, which is 301, and which the examiner will read to you?

(Q. 301 read to witness.)

A. Same answer.

303. Q. Do you refuse to answer my question in a proper manner?

A. I think my answer is proper.

304. Q. Do you refuse to make any other answer?

A. That is all I can make.

305. Q. You speak about a patent dated August 9, 1859; did you or anybody else ever have a suit on that patent against anybody?

A. I think Marcus P. Norton, and Wheeler, of Cleveland, had some trouble or something concerning the patent of 1863; Mr. Wheeler claimed to have a patent; don't know whether it was ever applied for; I understand Mr. Wheeler on priority was in 1860, and Mr. Norton took the August 9th, 1859, and beat him on time.

306. Q. Did you, Peter Low, Wm. B. Hatch, Jeremiah D. Green, Charles Eddy & Co., or anybody else, ever bring suit in the United States court anywhere or against anybody on the patent dated August 9, 1859, No. 25036?

A. I could not tell what has been done since Jeremiah D. Green has had my interest to look after.

307. Q. Do you own any interest in that patent at this time?

A. I suppose I do.

308. Q. How much, and when did you get that interest?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I think I own an eighth; I think it came from Mr. Marcus P. Norton.
309. Q. How much did you own in it August 9th, 1859?
(Same objection.)
2080 A. Peter Low and myself owned the patent with the understanding that we were to assign one-third of the patent to Marcus P. Norton's wife.
310. Q. You say the government is using that patent; is that true?
A. I think they are; the same patent or for the same purpose that I put in there in 1860 or 1861.
311. Q. Is that the best answer you can give to the last question?
A. I think it is.
312. Q. Did you or any of your co-assignees ever apply to the government for pay for the use of the patent of August 9th, 1859?
A. I think they have, to the best of my knowledge.
313. Q. When and by whom was that application made?
A. I could not tell at present.
314. Q. Has the government ever paid you or your co-assignees anything for the use of the patent of August 9th, 1859?
A. Not to my knowledge.
315. Q. You don't know, do you, whether the government has ever paid you anything or not for the use of that patent?
A. I have no recollection of ever receiving a dollar.
316. Q. Is that patent in use in the New York post-office?
A. I think it is.
317. Q. Do you know whether it is or not?
A. I think it is.
318. Q. Do you know whether it is or not?
A. I think it is.
319. Q. You think it is; what reason have you to think that?
A. By the envelopes that come from New York City.
320. Q. That came from New York City when?
A. I couldn't give the date.
2081 321. Q. If you think so why don't you have a suit brought against Postmaster James on that patent?
A. There is a suit against him now on that patent.
322. Q. Where, in the city of Troy, does Wm. B. Hatch reside?
A. I never knew him to live in Troy.
323. Q. Now if it be true that the government are using the patent of August 9th, 1859, why don't you, Peter Low, Jeremiah D. Green, Wm. B. Hatch, and the entire family of "Tichborne claimants" to that patent call upon the Government of the United States for compensation for that use?
A. For my part, I haven't got money to do it.
324. Q. Have not you within the last three years furnished money to Jeremiah D. Green to use in Washington, D. C., to prevent the government from paying for the use—the very extensive use—of Norton's patent of April 14, 1863, and of its several reissues?
A. I made a contract with Jeremiah D. Green that he was to furnish the means to see to my interest in the post-office stamp of August 9th, 1859.
325. Q. Did you not, in the year 1876, send money or cheque or draft to Jeremiah D. Green, then in Washington?

A. I lent Mr. Green, through the hands of Shavor, forty odd; I could not tell.

326. Q. How much money did Mr. Shavor furnish Green on the same occasion?

A. I couldn't tell exact.

327. Q. Give your present best recollection about it.

A. I recollect once seeing a draft of $100 that Mr. Shavor told me that he loaned to Green.

328. Q. Was that draft sent to Washington?

A. No, sir; I believe not.

329. Q. Where was it sent?

A. I don't know; from Washington to Troy to the best of my knowledge.

2082 330. Q. Has Jeremiah D. Green had anything to do with conducting the defense to this suit for you or anybody else?

A. I couldn't tell you.

331. Q. Have you heard Jeremiah D. Green say anything about the defense in this suit?

A. I have no recollection but I have had; not for some time; merely spoke of it.

332. Q. Do you know whether Jeremiah D. Green has been to Washington and also to the district attorney's office in New York with reference to the defense in this suit?

A. I couldn't tell.

333. Q. Why not?

A. The reason why I have taken no interest in it?

334. Q. You have no interest in the defense of this suit, have you, of any kind, name, nature or description?

A. I'll be able to tell by and by—some time hereafter.

335. Q. How will you be able to tell "by and by—some time hereafter?"

A. I can't tell.

336. Q. You do not know whether you have any interest in the defense to this suit, do you?

A. I don't know anything about it at present.

337. Q. Do you know that the fate of the patent of August 9th, 1859, is involved in the answer and also in the proofs in this cause?

(Objected as assuming that it is so involved.)

A. I don't so understand it.

338. Q. Have you ever heard from any source whatever that the patent of August 9th, 1859, is involved in the pleadings and proofs in this cause and as a part of the defendant's defense in this cause?

A. Have no recollection.

339. Q. No recollection of what?

A. Of the question as it was put to me.

340. Q. Have you ever seen the answer in this cause, or a copy of it?

2083 A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

341. Q. At whose request did you become a witness in this cause?

A. First I knew about it I got a subpœna.

342. Q. When was that?

A. I can't tell the day.

343. Q. State month and year.

A. July, 1878.

344. Q. You had never said a word to anybody before that time concerning Norton's character for truth, and since the beginning of this suit, had you?

A. I could not tell.

345. Q. You were subpœnaed in the cause without knowing what you were to testify to, were you?

A. I was.

346. Q. How many times during the last winter and spring did you and Jeremiah D. Green, in this city, meet the assistant district attorney, Mr. Clarke, at the house of Mr. Albert C. Corse?

A. I couldn't say for anybody but myself; to the best of my knowledge, twice.

347. Q. Was anything said then about the suit?

A. I think there was.

348. Q. Was anything said there about Norton's character for truth?

A. I have no knowledge about it at present.

349. Q. Did you ever have any?

A. I couldn't say.

350. Q. Jeremiah D. Green, your agent and attorney, being then and there present, made no observations in your hearing with reference to this suit, did he?

A. Something was spoken about some letters same as Charles Eddy handed in—if I had any; I told him I had some letters from Marcus P. Norton, and I did not know what they amounted to; that's all that I know of.

351. Q. What letters did Charles Eddy "hand in"?

2084 A. Letters sent to Mr. Shavor, he, Eddy, got from his, Shavor's, wife—from Marcus P. Norton to Jacob Shavor.

352. Q. Mr. Eddy furnished those, did he?

A. He came and got them from Mrs. Shavor.

353. Q. Did he produce them on that night and hand them to Mr. Clarke in your presence?

A. I don't think he did.

354. Q. Did you see any letters lying around there that night said to have been written by Norton?

A. I think I did.

355. Q. Who brought them there?

A. I could not tell.

356. Q. Who produced those letters there for Mr. Clarke's inspection?

A. I couldn't tell who the person was.

357. Q. Did you and Jeremiah D. Green call at the Troy House in company, on the 4th day of July (present month), and inquire of Mr. Lansing, a clerk in that hotel, whether Mr. Clarke, the asst. district attorney, who conducted your direct examination, had arrived from New York?

A. I could not tell whether I did or did not.

358. Q. Why can't you tell?

A. I don't know whether I saw Jeremiah D. Green.

359. Q. Were you and Green together at that hotel on that day?

A. I could not tell whether I was or was not.

Recess until 2 o'clock p. m.

360. Q. Were you ever together there at that hotel since the commencement of this suit?

A. I could not tell whether I was or not.

361. Q. About how good is your memory at the present time?

A. I don't think it is as good now as it was before my trouble in my family by death of my daughter.

362. Q. When did that take place?

A. Last September.

2085 363. Q. You have had no trouble in your family of any kind since your direct examination in this case, have you?

A. No.

364. Q. On your direct examination in this matter you had a very fine, clear and comprehensive memory as to things you were inquired about then, didn't you?

A. I answered to the best of my knowledge.

365. Q. You did not swear on your direct examination to anything as being positive about it, did you?

A. I don't know but I did.

366. Q. Did your memory trouble you on your direct examination as it seems to have troubled you on your cross-examination?

A. I was more familiar with the subject.

367. Q. Why have you not been as familiar with with the subject on your cross-examination?

(Objected to as assuming that the witness has shown unfamiliarity, on the cross examination, with the things which he testified about on the direct.)

A. One part of my direct examination as to the reputation of Mr. Norton and the matter of an instrument drawn up by the Patent Office, which is here in evidence.

368. Q. You testified on your direct examintion about the paper drawn up by the Patent Office aud referred to in your last answer, did you not?

A. It was said to be a copy of a trial or part of a trial of Marcus P. Norton.

369. Q. Did you testify about that paper on your direct examination?

A. I cannot tell.

370. Q. If you cannot tell, why have you just sworn that you have testified to it on your direct examination?

A. Answer the same as the last.

371. Q. What answer is that?

A. Cannot tell.

2086 372. Q. You testified to things under oath, and you can give no reason why you testified to them; is that it?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

373. Q. How extensive is your knowledge about anything or anybody?

A. It depends on circumstances.

374. Q. Where were you educated?

A. I have had but very little of it, and what I have came from New York and the city of Troy.

375. Q. About how many days during the term of your natural life, so far as completed, have you tended school of any kind?

A. Cannot tell.

376. Q. Have you ever been five days to a school of any kind?

A. Yes.

377. Q. Where and when and what school?

A. New York.

378. Q. When?

A. It must have been somewhere in the neighborhood of 1818—from that time to 1828.

379. Q. What school did you attend then?

A. Public school.

380. Q. How long did you attend that public school?

A. I could not answer that question; it was some part of the years I spoke of on my last answer.

381. Q. How old were you at that time?

A. In the year 1818 I was four years old.

382. Q. Is it your habit, in writing letters, when speaking of yourself, using the pronoun "I" to make a small letter "i" having a dot over it?

A. I do.

383. Q. Do you own a store on the corner of River and Federal street?

A. I do—part of it; it is not paid for.

384. Q. For what purpose do you rent that store?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

2087 A. I rent it to Mr. McLaughlin for a cigar and liquor store and lager beer and ale.

385. Q. Liquors of various kinds are sold over his counter, are they not, daily and nightly?

A. I suppose they be; that is what he hires it for, I suppose.

386. Q. Did you ever use any profane language in your life?

(Same objection as above.)

A. I don't know what you call profane language.

387. Q. You don't know what profane language is?

A. The reason why—some people call one thing profane, and others call other things profane.

388. Q. When Moses was on Mt. Sinai, among other laws he brought out one something like this: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." Have you ever violated that commandment?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know.

389. Q. You don't know whether you have or not?

A. No.

390. Q. In that same code of laws there was another law something like this: "Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy." Have you ever done any labor on Sunday?

A. Yes, sir; a number of years ago.

391. Q. How many times in the last fifty years have you been in a church or place of public worship on Sunday?

(Objected to as above.)

A. I can't tell; I pay my pew rent, and pay for it, too.

392. Q. Give your best recollections,

A. I couldn't tell; fifty years is a good while.

393. Q. About how many times within the last fifty years?

2088 A. I could not tell.

394. Q. Once within that time?

A. Was there the other day.

395. Q. What day was that?

(Same objection.)

A. I think it was on last Monday.

396. Q. You have now given your best recollections on the subject under inquiry, in the last previous questions, have you not?

A. I have.

397. Q. At the time Jacob Shavor died how much house rent was due to you or your wife from him?

(Same objection.)

A. Could not exactly tell.

398. Q. Was there as much as six or eight hundred dollars?

A. I can't tell, because I can see no way of getting my pay and I don't bother myself figuring it up.

399. Q. If a man comes upon a witness stand for the purpose of striking a blow at his fellow-man by undertaking to destroy his reputation, do you not think that that man should himself be above suspicion as well as an honest, moral, unrevengeful, and with a heart void of maliciousness?

A. I think that the man who tried to wrong his fellow-man, he has a right to show it before the public, I mean the man that is the witness.

400. Q. And it is under your opinion stated in your last answer that you have appeared here as a witness on this examination, is it not?

A. I should not have appeared without a subpœna.

401. Q. I now ask you to answer my question.

A. The same as before.

402. Q. Do you understand the question enquired about?

A. I answer to the best of my knowledge.

2089 403. Q. Did you at the time of your answer understand the question referred to in your last question?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

404. Q. What is the best of your knowledge?

A. What is the question?

405. Q. Have you in the last 15 years had any trouble or difficulty with Norton at any time?

A. Not farther than I have stated.

406. Q. Did you ever apply to any court for the adjustment of those difficulties, such as they were or whatever they might be?

A. I don't know but Mr. Green, my agent, did.

407. Q. What was the result of his application to the courts for the adjustment of your troubles with Norton?

A. Couldn't tell at present.

408. Q. Have you any case pending in any court against Norton for the adjustment of any grievances against him?

A. I was so informed by Jeremiah D. Green, that he had been indicted before the grand jury for forgery or perjury, or both.

409. Q. Mr. Green acted as your agent in those proceedings, did he?

A. I don't know as he did.

410. Q. Who did he act for if not for you?

A. I don't know.

411. Q. J. D. Green was a witness in that matter, wasn't he?

A. I don't know.

412. Q. You never heard Green say anything about it, did you?

A. I heard him say that Mr. Norton was indicted.

413. Q. When was that?

A. Can't tell.

414. Q. About how many years ago was it?

A. Could not tell.

415. Q. Was it as long as six or seven years ago?

A. It might be longer and it might be shorter; couldn't tell.

2090 416. Q. Did you make an affidavit that was used on that occasion?

(Objected to because the witness's answers show that he has no personal knowledge of what was used or what was done on that occasion.)

A. I don't know.

417. Q. Is your memory again failing you?

Witness here states that he had not finished his answer to question 416.

The examiner permits witness to finish his answer to question 416, which he does as follows:

I don't know; I made an affidavit to the Patent Office, the only one I know of; that is all I know.

418. Q. In 1864, did you know anything about a suit of Shavor & Corse against Mr. Hoole in the U. S. circuit court, northern district of N. Y.?

A. I heard Mr. Shavor speak of it.

419. Q. Is that all you ever knew of it?

A. I don't know but I have heard others, but I can't tell who they are.

420. Q. Did you attend the trial of that case?

(Objected to as not within the scope of the direct examination.)

A. I could not tell.

421. Q. That suit was brought on a reissue of Norton's patent of April 14, 1863, was it not?

A. I have no recollection about it at present.

422. Q. Your recollections and your memory shown by you during your cross-examination will fairly compare with your memory and recollections during your examination-in-chief, will they not?

(Objected to as being for the court.)

A. Don't know.

2091 Redirect by Mr. CLARKE:

423. Q. Why haven't any suits been brought against Mr. Norton for the forgeries and robberies to which you have frequently referred on your cross-examination?

A. I could not tell.

424. Q. Was it because you had not sufficient money to prosecute them?

A. Couldn't tell.

Recross by Mr. NORTON:

425. Q. Will you please state wherein Norton has ever robbed you of a single thing or a single dollar since you have known him?

A. Money I have loaned Mr. Norton at different times to pay, and my name endorsements, and he has never paid them; that I consider wrongful.

F. G. RANSFORD.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWN,
Special Examiner.

FRIDAY, July 12.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

NELSON PRAMER, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, says:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, occupation?

A. Nelson Pramer; age, 44; residence, Troy, N. Y.; occupation, foundryman.

2. Q. What is the occupation of a foundryman in your case?

2092 A. I do general jobbing of all casting of heavy and light machine work.

3. Q. Are you in business for yourself?

A. I am.

4. Q. Where is your family?

A. In Green Island, Albany County.

5. Q. How long have you resided in Troy?

A. In the city of Troy four years; in West Troy, opposite, about eleven years.

6. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

7. Q. How long have you known him?

A. I have known Mr. Norton—I have known who he was fifteen years.

8. Q. What has been Mr. Norton's business, and where carried on, since you knew him?

A. Attorney at law and solicitor of patents in the city of Troy.

9. Q. Do you know Mr. Norton's general reputation as regards truth and veracity in this community; if you do, state whether it is good or bad?

A. His general reputation is bad.

10. Q. State how you have learned that his general reputation is bad?

A. From the general expression of the business community.

11. Q. From the speech of men in this community in regard to Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity, state whether you would believe him on oath.

A. Would that require a direct answer, or would it admit of an explanation?

12. Q. Make such answer as you think the question calls for.

A. Well, from the personal experience and from opinions expressed by parties in the same business of myself, I could not.

Cross-examination by MARCUS P. NORTON, solicitor for complainant:

13. Q. Have you ever discussed Norton's character 'or truth with anybody in this city?

2093 A. I might have spoken of it in general conversation with Hicks & Wolfe; I don't remember any other parties.

14. Q. You have never had any conversation with anybody concerning Norton's character for truth, have you?

A. Not until recently.

15. Q. How recently?

A. Well, within thirty days.

16. Q. With whom did you have that conversation?

A. Mr. Ransford; I don't know his given name.

17. Q. Where does Mr. Ransford reside?

A. I don't know whether he resides in Troy, positively.

18. Q. Who is he, and what is he, and where is his business, and what does he do for a living?

A. I am unable to answer.

19. Q. What did he say to you about Norton's character for truth?

A. It was bad.

20. Q. What did you say to him about Norton's character for truth?

A. The same answer that I have given before.

21. Q. Did Mr. Ransford ask you to become a witness in the case?

A. No, sir.

22. Q. Did he say anything to you about this suit?

A. He did.

23. Q. What did he say to you about this suit?

A. He asked me if I had done any business with Mr. Norton, and I said yes.

24. Q. Did you understand the last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I think I did.

25. Q. If you did, will you be kind enough to make the proper answer to it, which the examiner will please read for your information?

A. Do you want a general explanation of what was said?

2094 26. Q. Did Mr. Ransford on that occasion say anything to you about an effort to impeach Norton in this case?

A. No, sir.

27. Q. What did he say to you about this case?

A. He did not recite the particulars of the case.

28. Q. Did I ask you that?

A. That is my conception of the question.

29. Q. Your conception of this question is of the same kind or character as your conception of all other questions that have been put to you on this examination, is it not?

(Objected to as being for the court.)

A. I think so.

30. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No doubt.

31. Q. Where was it you and Mr. Ransford had this conversation?

A. In my office, Green Island.

32. Q. Who was present?

A. No persons present except ourselves.

33. Q. What other business had Ransford then with you at that time?

A. I hardly know how to answer that question.

34. Q. Do you decline to answer it in a proper manner?

A. No.

35. Q. Then why did you not answer it when it was first submitted to you for that purpose?

A. I can answer it by a general explanation.

36. Q. How long have you been in business in Green Island for yourself?

A. Since May the 1st, 1878.

37. Q. Have you any business partner?

A. Yes.

38. Q. Who?

A. John Miller.

39. Q. How much capital is required to carry on your business in Green Island?

A. That depends on circumstances.

2095 40. Q. How much money have you in that capital of your own?

A. ($1,000) One thousand dollars.

41. Q. How much money has your partner in that capital of his own?

A. Not any.

42. Q. What do you manufacture in that concern?

A. We do general jobbing.

43. Q. With what families in the city of Troy do you associate socially? I mean yourself and your family.

A. Do you wish names?

44. Q. That is my question.

A. George H. Perry, cashier of the United National Bank; R. D. Starkweather, Henry Thomas, Rev. James P. Caird, George Chamberlin, R. D. McClelian, a lawyer here; George Sliter, John P. Albertson, and numerous others.

45. Q. How long have you been on terms of social intercourse with those families?

A. From four to ten years.

46. Q. That is as near as you can answer the question, is it?

A. I cannot give definite dates.

47. Q. In what part of the city of Troy do you now reside?

A. Maple avenue.

48. Q. Where is that avenue situated?

A. Fifth ward.

49. Q. Well, where is the fifth ward?

A. It is the extreme east ward of the city.

50. Q. Is that a thickly settled part of the city?

A. No.

51. Q. At whose request did you become a witness in this case and on this occasion?

A. I can't give the person's name that subpœnaed me; the gentleman was here.

52. Q. When were you subpœnaed?

A. Last evening.

53. Q. In what manner were you subpœnaed, and by what process?

2096 A. In legal form.

54. Q. Explain that legal form.

A. I was served with a copy of a subpœna to appear here at nine o'clock at this date, accompanied with a fee of one dollar and a half.

55. Q. Will you produce a copy of that subpœna?

A. I left it at my house.

56. Was the person who subpœnaed you a stranger to you?

A. Yes.

57. Q. Had you ever seen him before that time?

A. But once.

58. Q. When and where was that?

A. In the afternoon of July the 11th, at my office.

59. Q. What business had he there at that time; I mean the first time you saw him before being subpœnaed?

A. He presented himself and asked if my name was Nelson Pramer, and if I had had any business transactions with Marcus P. Norton.

60. Q. Was that all he said to you?

A. No.

61. Q. Go on and state what he said to you and all he said after he had made that inquiry of you.

A. He asked the nature of the business and what the result was; I stated that I had made, through Mr. Norton, an application for a patent on an improvement in water-heating attachment to a parlor stove; I stated that the patent had never been obtained; that I had paid Mr. Norton fifty dollars fees, and government charges, I supposed they would be termed, from which I had no returns; that I had written to the Patent-Office Commissioner to have the fees refunded, and received notice that no application had been made; he, the man who subpœnaed me, presented a letter to the Commissioner of Patents purporting to come from me, and asked if I had written that letter; I replied that I had; I stated that the answer to a previous letter and from a 2097 personal call on the Commissioner of Patents I ascertained that no model or fees was on file or had been recorded in the department; that I showed the Commissioner's letter to Mr. Norton, and wrote the Commissioner Mr. Norton's reply, but never received the Patent-

Office fee in return; I didn't expect to get the whole of the fifty dollars, the Patent-Office fee; I stated that the Commissioner refused to refund, stating that the records did not show that any fee had been received; this embodies the general subject of our remarks.

62. Q. In what year was it you paid the fifty dollars?

A. Can't state positively without reference.

63. Q. Well, without reference to what?

A. Without reference to the receipt for this fifty dollars.

64. Q. Well, what receipt was that?

A. Receipt from Mr. Norton.

65. Q. You can't tell the date without that?

A. Not positive.

66. Q. Give your best recollections of it?

A. I should think 1868 or 1869.

67. Q. That is the only business he ever undertook for you?

A. Yes.

68. Q. You speak about calling Norton's attention to a letter from the Commissioner of Patents about your matter; when and where was that?

A. It was subsequent to the application in the office of Hicks & Wolfe, or subsequent to the payment of the fifty dollars.

69. Q. What did Norton say to you on that occasion about that matter?

A. He said that if he could not show that the fee and model had not been receipted for at the Patent Office he would refund the fifty dollars, and if I did not wish to continue the application the Patent Office would refund the fee.

70. Q. Did not Norton afterward exhibit to you in the counting room of Hicks & Wolfe a receipt for fifteen dollars from the Patent Office?

2098 A. I can't say that I ever saw the receipt.

71. Q. Will you swear that you did not see it?

A. I cannot swear positive.

72. Did you not state to Norton, on the occasion referred to, that you were satisfied that the Patent Office had made the mistake, and that you did not blame Norton about it, or words substantially the same?

A. Can't swear positively without an explanation.

73. Q. Do you swear that you did not so state or in substance state that to Norton?

A. No.

74. Q. Did you ever call Norton's attention to that matter after the time when you say you showed him the letter of the Commissioner of Patents?

A. We had conversation about it; I don't know whether I called attention to it or Mr. Norton did.

75. Q. About how long was it after you had this last conversation with Norton about it?

A. Well, I am unable to give definite date.

76. Q. About how many years ago was it?

A. I don't think anything has been said within four or five years; can't say.

77. Q. Did you ever ask Norton to refund the fifty dollars?

A. Yes.

78. Q. When was that?

A. About the time I received the letter from the Commissioner of Patents.

79. Q. Ever after that?

A. I don't think I made a formal demand after that.

80. Q. Now, Mr. Pramer, didn't Norton take his letter-press book to you and show you a copy of the letter enclosing a fee to the Commissioner of Patents for the application you speak of?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I think he did.

81. Q. And about how long was that after your correspondence with the Commissioner of Patents?

2099 A. I can't state how long.

82. Q. About how long was it after you showed Norton the letter you received from the Commissioner of Patents?

A. Can't state.

83. Q. Now, did you not, on having shown to you copy of the letter above referred to and a Patent Office receipt for fifteen dollars, undertake to recover the fifteen-dollar fee from the Commissioner of Patents?

A. Nothing more than my letter to the Commissioner.

84. Q. Did you not apply to him in person for that fee?

A. No, sir.

85. Q. You never did?

A. I never made application but once, and that was previous to the time at which Mr. Norton showed a copy of the letter to the department.

86. Q. Is that all the business transaction you ever had with Norton?

A. Yes, personally or individual business.

87. Q. What other business have you had with him beside this?

A. No business except as messenger for Hicks & Wolfe.

88. Q. Was Norton doing much business in Troy in his profession at that time?

A. I am unable to say.

89. Q. You don't know anything about it?

A. No.

90. Q. Were you so situated that you had the opportunity to know the extent of the business carried on by Norton in his profession at that time?

A. No.

91. Q. You wan't so situated as to have the opportunity to know much if anything about Norton at that time, were you?

A. Nothing only what I heard in the office of Hicks & Wolfe.

2100 92. Q. And that was in the year 1869, was it not?

A. It was about that time, I presume.

93. Q. Have you ever been on unfriendly terms with Norton?

A. No.

94. Q. Do you see the person now present who subpœnaed you, and with whom you had a conversation about being a witness in this case?

A. The person is now present who subpœnaed me, but no conversation was had about my being a witness; that is, definite conversation.

95. Q. Will you be so kind as to inquire of this person his name and residence in answer to this question, he being now present?

A. I will.

96. Q. You may do so in compliance with your last answer.

A. The person reports his name as being James L. Robinson; residence, Flatbush, Kings County, Long Island, New York.

97. Q. You say that person has seen you twice with reference to this case?

A. Yes.

98. Q. On the first occasion he learned from you that you would make a first-class or A 1 witness in this case, did he not?

A. Can't say what his opinion was.

99. Q. How long after the first interview was it he subpœnaed you?

A. About twenty-eight hours.

100. Q. You say that at the first interview he showed you a letter written by you to the Commissioner of Patents. That he asked you if you wrote it and you told him you did. Do you know where or of whom he obtained that letter?

A. I do not.

101. Q. Was that letter in your own handwriting?

A. It was.

102. Q. What was the date of it?

A. Can't say.

103. Q. When did you last see it?

2101 A. When shown to me on that occasion.

104. Q. About forty-eight hours ago?

A. About twenty-eight hours ago. It would be more than twenty-eight hours up to the present time.

105. Q. Did you ask him how he obtained that letter or how it came into his possession?

A. I did not.

106. Q. Was it the very letter that you sent by mail to the Commissioner of Patents at the time you have spoken about?

A. I think it was.

107. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No doubt.

108. Q. In your opinion could he have obtained if anywhere except from the files in the Patent Office, personally, or by or through some accomplices of his?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I have no idea how he obtained it.

109. Q. You never wrote but that one on that subject, did you?

A. Yes.

110. Q. How many?

A. Can't say; two or three.

111. Q. Those letters were precisely alike, were they?

A. No.

112. Q. Did you ever write any other letter like the one shown to you by the person which you have above stated, than that letter?

A. I don't think I ever did.

113. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No doubt.

114. Q. Did you ever in your life make any mistake or commit any error of any kind?

A. I have

115. Q. About how many?

A. I am unable to say.

2102 116. Q. Well, don't you think that when a person attempts to sit in judgment on the character of his fellow man that he ought at least to have clean hands, clean linen upon his back, and a cleanly shaven face?

(Objected to as scandel and impertinence on the record, and also as immaterial.)

A. I don't consider the requirements of the question necessary.

117. Q. What do you consider as being necessary to render a person competent as a witness to sit, or attempt to sit, in judgment on the character of his fellow man?

A. Intelligence and good standing in society.

Redirect by Mr. CLARKE:

118. Q. About how many men are employed in your foundry?

A. Sixteen at present. We have just organized.

119. Q. Have you any feeling, whatever, of personal hostility to Mr. Norton?

A. No.

120. Q. In answer to question 10, you state substantially that you have learned that Mr. Norton's general reputation is bad from the general expression of the business community. That was on your direct examination. On your cross-examination, in answer to questions fourteen, fifteen, and sixteen, you state substantially that you have never had any conversation with anybody concerning Norton's character for truth, until within thirty days, when you had such conversation with Mr. Ransford. I read those questions and answers to you. Explain what you wish the court to understand by those answers of yours, taken in connection with each other.

(Complainant's counsel, without objecting to the question, calls the especial attention of the court to the nature and kind of the inquiry, and that defendant's counsel has no right to impute misstatement or 2103 falsehood to his own witness. It is for the court to construe the language used by the witness, both on the cross and direct examination.)

A. I wish to be understood that my first answer, or answer to number ten, was based on the general expression of business men, and from myself participating. That I never expressed any opinion beyond my own business transactions.

121. Q. I understand you to mean that you yourself never expressed any opinion on the point except in that conversation with Mr. Ransford, and except in regard to your personal dealings with Mr. Norton, but that you have heard other men in the community, business men, express opinions on the point. Is that correct?

(Complainant's counsel, without taking especial objection, calls the attention of the court to the kind and character of the inquiry, as being improper at this stage of the proceedings and also requests the especial attention of the court to the efforts and labors of counsel to "bring forth a mouse.")

A. Yes.

Recross:

122. Q. Do you desire to change, to modify, or to alter the testimony given by you on your cross-examination?

A. I think not.

123. Q. Have you any doubt about that?

A. No doubt.

124. Q. You regard, do you not, the evidence delivered by you on your cross-examination as being sufficiently clear and certain as to enable the court to understand your answers and their meaning, do you not?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I am unable to give any directions as to how my evidence shall be construed.

2104 125. Q. By the Court?

A. Yes.

126. Q. Of your own personal knowledge and without reference to anybody else, do you know of an untruth told by Norton?

(Objected to as immaterial, this inquiry relating to reputation and not to particular facts.)

A. No.

127. Q. Whatever you may have heard said by anybody concerning Norton, do you know personally or of your own knowledge that there was any truth in what you may have heard?

(Same objection.)

A. No.

128. Q. Is the city of Troy considered a city entirely free from gossip?

A. Never have heard any definite remarks on the subject.

129. Q. Did you ever hear any remarks against Hayes, the President of the United States, by anybody?

(Same objection.)

A. I have heard personal opinions expressed against him.

130. Q. Did you ever hear anybody make any remarks against General Butler, member of Congress from Massachusetts?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes.

131. Q. Did you ever hear anybody make any remarks against General Grant, late President of the United States?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes.

2105 132. Q. Did you ever hear anybody make any remarks against John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States?

A. I have heard his policy discussed in the affirmative and negative.

133. Q. You speak about "business community;" what do you mean by that?

A. I mean business men with whom I come in contact.

134. Q. What kind of business have you reference to when you speak of "business community"?

A. I might say manufacturing business.

135. Q. What kind of manufacturing business do you refer to?

A. I might say the iron interest.

136. Q. What part of the iron business do you refer to; digging it from the mountains?

A. No.

137. Q. And what then?

A. That branch with which I am acquainted.

138. Q. What branch of the iron business is that?

A. General foundry and stove business.

139. Q. What do you mean by "general foundry?"

A. I mean a foundry where castings of great variety are made.

140. Q. How many such foundries are there in Troy?

A. I am unable to say; eight or ten I should judge.

141. Q. Give the names of persons who own and operate those general foundries?

A. Link & Mahoney; Sevett, Quimby & Perry; Nemis & Co.; Hislop & Co.; Harrison & Kellogg; Skinner, Gould & Co.; Ludlow Valve Co.; and I think there are stove foundries who also do general casting; that is my impression.

142. Q. You have given in the last answer the names of several persons; have you had conversations with those persons concerning the character of Norton for truth?

2106 (Objected to on the ground that it is immaterial whether the witness has had conversations on the point with those persons or not.)

A. No particular conversation on that question.

143. Q. Did you ever hear those persons speak of Norton in a derogatory manner, in the city of Troy?

A. Only in general conversation with other parties in my presence.

144. Q. When was there a conversation of those persons in your presence when you heard them speaking to other persons about Norton?

A. I am unable to answer that question.

145. Q. Name a person whom you ever heard speak of Norton in terms derogatory to his character.

A. G. G. Wolfe.

146. Q. Name other persons, if you know of others.

A. Samuel Perry, James Morrison, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Corse, William E. Hagen, William Lough, and several others.

147. Q. Now, where was this?

A. At different times and different places.

148. Q. How long since?

A. Within the last ten years.

149. Q. Can you be any more definite than you have been in your last answer?

A. Yes.

150. Q. Go on.

A. Within thirty days.

151. Q. Now, where was it?

A. In my office.

152. Q. On Green Island?

A. On Green Island.

153. Q. Were they then in a body or separate?

A. Who?

154. Q. The persons you have named.

A. No.

155. Q. You heard them make those remarks, and you took no part in the conversation, did you?

2107 A. Well, I am unable to answer that question.

NELSON PRAMER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

JULY 12, 1878—2½ p. m.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

HENRY A. MERRITT, a witness called on behalf of defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is Henry A. Merritt; I reside in Troy; my age is forty-one, and my occupation an attorney.

2. Q. How long have you lived in Troy?

A. From thirty-nine to forty years.

3. Q. How long have you been an attorney here?

A. About twenty years.

4. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I cannot state; I think, though, ten years and upwards.

6. Q. Do you know Mr. Norton's reputation in this community as regards truth and veracity? And if you do, state whether it is good or bad.

A. I do not know that I know anything respecting Mr. Norton's character in this community for the past four or five years, and do not think that he has lived in this vicinity within that period, and cannot 2108 state anything about his character since he has left Troy, except what I have heard from other sources and from the newspapers.

7. Q. Does what you have heard from other sources and from the newspapers give you any knowledge of what Mr. Norton's character or reputation is?

A. I have an opinion of his character, formed from what I knew of and concerning him in Troy and what I have learned of him since he left the city.

8. Q. State what Mr. Norton's reputation is, as you know it, in respect to truth and veracity in this community.

A. It is so long ago and my recollection is so indistinct that I cannot now say that I recollect of any person discussing or commenting upon his character for truth and veracity; I have, however, a general recollection that when he was residing in Troy it was not good, and, from what I learned, that it was not improved after his departure. Most all of the matters in which I heard his character impugned for truth and veracity grew out of financial embarrassments with which Mr. Norton was connected, and patent matters.

9. Q. Are you a willing witness in this matter?

A. I was subpœnaed upon the part of the defendant; I have been spoken to by no one except by the party who subpœnaed me, and to say to him that I would not testify that I would not believe Mr. Norton under oath; I am not an unwilling witness nor a willing one.

10. Q. State whether, from your knowledge of Mr. Norton's reputation and from the speech of men concerning him in this community, you would at the time you had knowledge of that reputation believe him on oath.

A. I cannot of my present recollection of what I knew concerning him state whether I would or would not; but think the facts, if any, which could impugn his credit have arisen since he left Troy, and in respect to which I know nothing except the reports from the newspapers and statements of parties since his departure, and I do not 2109 feel myself competent to give any opinion upon the speech of people respecting his character for truth and veracity.

11. Q. Did you know what his reputation for truth and veracity was before the time you say he left Troy?

A. I undoubtedly did at the time, but have no present recollection of it as to particulars.

12. Q. State what your present best recollection as to it generally is.

A. It was not good—bad.

13. Q. On the basis of the speech of people concerning him, state whether you would then believe him on oath according to your present recollection.

A. I cannot say that I would not. The speech of people concerning Mr. Norton arose out of financial and patent matters, and I cannot say that in my opinion that his character for truth and veracity under oath would necessarily be impugned thereby, and I cannot say that I would not believe him under oath.

A. Can say no more than I have said, that if I know no reason to impeach a man's character I have no reason to discredit him.

15. Q. Knowing what was said about Mr. Norton in regard to financial and patent matters, can you state that you would then believe him on oath, or that you would not believe him on oath either?

A. If everything that I heard was true and I was fully satisfied in respect to the same, I think I would not believe him under oath; but I know nothing as to whether the stories are true or false, and I do not desire to express an opinion as to his veracity upon statements most of which emanated from parties hostile to Mr. Norton.

16. Q. Have you any conscientious or other objection to stating whether you would or would not believe a man on oath from the speech 2110 of men concerning him, when you have no personal knowledge that such speech is true?

A. No, except that a person may be badly talked of by interested parties, and that I consider that I have got to regard a man as a most finished and consummate scoundrel before the speech of people will so far influence me to testify that on their statements I would not believe him under oath.

17. Q. You have stated that you do not think Mr. Norton resides in Troy; where does he reside?

A. I do not know, but I have heard him state on this examination that he resides here.

In view of the direct examination of the witness by defendant's counsel, complainant's counsel waives the cross-examination of the witness.

HENRY A. MERRITT.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

FRANKLIN J. PARMENTER, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Franklin J. Parmenter; my age is 45 and upwards; I reside in Troy; my occupation is attorney and counsellor.

2. Q. How long have you been an attorney and counsellor?

A. About twenty-five years.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him?

A. About fifteen years, I should judge.

2111 5. Q. Do you know what Mr. Norton's reputation as regards truth and veracity in this community is? And if you do, state whether it is good or bad.

A. I don't know that I know what it is; I don't know that I ever heard it called in question.

6. Q. Do you state that you do not know?

A. I cannot now recall an instance where I heard his character for truth and veracity called in question.

7. Q. Do you know Mr. Norton's general reputation and his estimation socially in this community?

A. I don't think I do know of his general reputation.

In view of the direct examination by defendant's counsel, complainant's counsel waives any cross-examination of the witness.

F. J. PARMENTER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned by consent of counsel until July 13th at 9 o'oclock.

SATURDAY, July 13, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

PHILETUS W. BISHOP, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Philetus W. Bishop; my age, 62; my residence is Troy; my occupation, a lawer.

2112 2. Q. How long have you been a lawyer in Troy?

A. Most of the time since 1856.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. State, if you know, what Mr. Norton's reputation is in this community in regard to truth and veracity—whether it is good or bad.

A. Well, from what I have heard of him in the community, I should say it was bad.

5. Q. State whether on reputation, and from the speech of men concerning him, you would believe him on oath.

A. Well, I have never yet sworn I would not believe a man under oath. It is a pretty hard thing to say of a man, but, from what I know of his general reputation, I must say that I would not believe him under oath.

6. Q. How long have you known Mr. Norton?

A. I have known him over twenty years.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

7. Q. How came you to become a witness in this matter?

A. I was subpœnaed last evening.

8. Q. Who subpœnaed you last evening?

A. This gentleman present subpœnaed me. I don't know his name.

9. Q. Will you inquire of that gentleman his name and residence, and what his business is in this city?

A. His name is James L. Robinson, so he reports. His residence is Flatbush, Long Island, and he is here on government business.

10. Q. Previous to your subpœna last evening, had the person named in your last answer been to see you about this matter?

A. He had.

11. Q. How many times?

A. I had seen him but once. I understood that he had been to my house yesterday twice in my absence.

12. Q. What did he state to you that he desired to prove by you in this case?

2113 A. I cannot say that he stated that he desired to prove anything by me, but he desired to know what Mr. Norton's reputation was?

13. Q. What did you say to him?

A. I told him that I did not desire to be a witness in this case, and if possible to let the cup pass; that I had never been a witness against a man.

14. Q. You say you have heard something against Norton's character for truth. Did you ever hear anybody speak of him in terms derogatory to him?

A. I have.

15. Q. In terms defamatory to him and his character?

A. I have.

16. Q. Who did you hear make such declarations?

A. I can name probably but a very few men. I will name Frederick G. Ransford, Marcus Ball, Edward Chamberlin, Mr. Clark—I think his name is John Clark. I think Captain Tupper, although I cannot positively state all that Captain Tupper said, since it was rather by innuendo than by direct statement. From Columbia County I have heard Daniel D. Barnes and Hugh W. McClellan speak unfavorably of him. I presume I have heard a good many others, but I don't remember them now.

17. Q. Whatever you may have heard from any of the persons named by you in the last answer, had you any knowledge that the statements made by them to you were true?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I think I had.

18. Q. You had personal knowledge of the truth of their statements, had you?

A. I think I had.

19. Q. Now give the names of those persons as to whom you had personal knowledge of the truthfulness of their statements made to you?

A. I would name Marcus Ball as the only one of whose statements I had personal knowledge.

2114 20. Q. Now what did Mr. Ball say to you, Mr. Bishop?

A. He said Norton had sworn false.

21. Q. What did he say to you that Norton had sworn false about?

A. In a suit in which Ball was attorney. It was in swearing to an answer in that suit.

22. Q. What suit was that?

A. It was in a suit upon some notes and a check which Mr. Norton had given me.

23. Q. Now, when was that?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I think it was in 1857.

24. Q. Who was the plaintiff in this suit?

A. I do not remember, but I think it was a man by the name of Sims; George F. Sims, I think.

(Same objections.)

25. Q. What became of the suit?

A. Judgment was obtained against you.

(Same objections.)

26. Q. What became of that judgment?

A. It was compromised afterward.

27. Q. It was settled and paid to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, wasn't it?

A. It was compromised, and judgment was satisfied.

28. Q. Have you yourself ever spoken of Norton to anybody in a manner unfriendly to him?

A. I have.

29. A. To whom, and when?

A. Well, I have spoken to Frederick G. Ransford, Marcus Ball, to Mr. Norton himself, and to others whom I don't now recollect.

30. Q. When did you last have conversation with Frederick G. Ransford, and he with you, where each of you spoke in terms derogatory to Norton's character, and in language unfriendly to him?

2115 A. Well, I don't understand that speaking in terms derogatory of a man is speaking unfriendly of him. Within the last two weeks I have spoken with Mr. Ransford in terms which might be considered derogatory to Mr. Norton.

31. Q. Where was that?

A. At my office in this city.

32. Q. Who were present?

A. No one; we were alone.

33. Q. Who first brought up the subject of Norton's character at that time?

A. Mr. Ransford.

34. Q. What did Mr. Ransford say to you about it?

A. He told that there was some impeaching testimony to be taken before Irving Browne against you, and that he would like to have me a witness to tell what I knew about you.

35. Q. When did you last have any conversation with Marcus Ball, wherein you spoke of Norton in terms derogatory to his character?

A. I cannot state the last time.

36. Q. State your present best recollection.

A. I should say within the last year.

37. Q. Have you and Mr. Ball frequently discussed Norton's character for truth?

A. We have frequently spoken of him.

38. Q. Who else besides Mr. Ball and Mr. Ransford have you discussed Mr. Norton's character for truth with?

A. Edwin Chamberlain and John Clark, and a good many others whose names I can't now remember.

39. Q. How frequently have you had those discussions referred to in your last answer?

A. I cannot state, but very frequently.

49. Q. You say you are a practicing lawyer in the city of Troy?

A. I am.

41. Q. And that you have been such for about 20 years?

2116 A. Yes, sir.

42. Q. During that time have you carried on any other business in Troy?

A. I have.

43. Q. What business was that?

A. Hotel business.

44. Q. During what years?

A. Well, during 1856 and 1857, 11 months of the two years; I was in the Union House, running that; I have kept the International Hotel about 6 months, in 1873 or 1874.

45. Q. What other business beside from the hotel and law business have you carried on in the city of Troy within the last twenty years?

A. I carried on a restaurant and billiard room.

46. Q. Where was that located in this city?

A. On Third street, in the Theatre Bulding.

47. Q. What was sold at that restaurant other than the food?

A. Liquors were sold, cigars, meals furnished, and there were nine billiard tables running; I did not keep this restaurant and saloon from choice; my son was running it, and was making bad use of it, and I went there to protect myself, I being responsible for the property.

48. Q. How long did you run that establishment?

A. I think I run it first six months alone; then I sold a half interest to James B. Thomas; I, at the end of, I should think, three or four months, sold him out my interest, when he run it alone for a time; he then sold out to Walter Best, and took a mortgage back for five thousand dollars, which Thomas subsequently assigned to me in part payment of what he owed me; subsequently I had to foreclose the mortgage, and became possessed of the restaurant and billiard room again; I think then I run it for ten months, when it burned up; that wound up the billiard room on Third street.

49. Q. What other business have you carried on in that time, except what you have stated?

2117 A. No other kind of business except what I have stated.

50. Q. How many billiard rooms have you run and occupied in this city within that time?

A. Two others; I had a mortgage upon a billiard room, which I foreclosed, and run it as a billiard room for a short time; my son had a billiard room on Fourth street running, which I subsequently run for a few months, being responsible for the rent; I had to do it to protect myself; at that time I run the billiard room on Third street I had a boarding house, which I run in connection with the billiard room and restaurant, situated on Fourth street, nearly in the rear of the billiard room; I also bought out a small hotel near the depot, some three or four years ago; I run that some three or four months, and when I found I was losing money I sold out, having lost about five or six hundred dollars.

51. Q. Were you ever engaged in the car-wheel business in Troy?

A. I was engaged in the car-wheel business, but I think our office all the time was in New York; I don't think we had any here.

52. Q. Who were your associates in that enterprise?

A. Edward Chamberlin, this John Clark I have spoken of, Daniel W. Ford, and some others I don't recollect; we gave some of the stock away.

53. Q. What became of that corporation?

A. It is in existence yet, as far as I know; it has never been dissolved that I know of, 54. Q. In full operation, is it?

A. There has been nothing done, that I am aware of, for the past three or four years; we received once a royalty of forty dollars, but since that time we have never heard from the parties.

55. Q. Why havn't you enforced the payment of these royalties against this person?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Well, I didn't feel disposed to have a lawsuit over the royalties.

2118 56. Q. Did they refuse to pay the royalties, Bishop?

A. Never to my knowledge.

57. Q. Do you consider the patent a good and valid patent in that case?

(Same objection.)

A. I do not know enough about it to form an opinion; there never has been any suit in regard to it, to my knowledge.

58. Q. Of whom did you obtain your interest in that patent?

A. From Marcus P. Norton, I believe; I bought it at the earnest solicitation of Edward Chamberlin and Mr. Clark.

59. Q. Have you now stated all the various kinds of business in which you have been engaged in the city of Troy within the last twenty years?

A. All that I now recollect.

60. Q. Have you been engaged in any business elsewhere within that time?

A. I have; in the city of New York; I have been interested in business at the State line in Massachusetts.

61. Q. State what that business was or is.

A. Was the manufacture and sale of a preparation for removing scales from steam.boilers.

62. Q. How did that enterprise turn out?

A. I sold out my interest in it, and then there was a new company formed; F. F. Bomel, and Jacob Johnson, owned nearly all the stock in the company; I understood they were doing very well until Bomel was obliged to leave the country for committing a forgery.

63. Q. At what time was it that you sold out, as stated in the last answer?

A. I think it was in 1869.

64. Q. What other business, out of Troy, have you been engaged in for the last twenty years?

A. I have been engaged in farming.

65. Q. How long have you carried it on?

2119 A. About seventeen years.

66. Q. Have you ever had, in the course of your life, any difficulty with any man?

A. I have.

67. Q. Have you, in the course of your life, ever made any mistakes, errors, or committed any sin?

A. I have made mistakes, committed errors, and committed sins, and also joined the Sons of Malta.

68. Q. What business dealings have you had with Norton within the last fifteen years, say since the year 1860?

A. I cannot very well say; except my dealings with him in regard to car-wheels. I remember nothing else.

69. Q. Has Norton's dealings with you since 1860 been fair and honorable?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It has, so far as I know.

70. Q. You knew Norton had some business trouble in 1857 or 1858 in reference to some notes or checks?

A. Yes; there were business troubles with two notes and one check.

71. Q. Did you have anything to do, previous to 1860, about some notes held by Marcus Ball, which were given to a person by the name of Clark, by Norton, in a patent-medicine case, known by the name of "Ischuretic," and which Ball was trying to enforce collection from Norton, and amounting to fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars?

A. I cannot answer; I don't remember, and I don't think I did; and still I may have brought a suit or suits.

72. Q. You knew about those notes and suits at the time, did you not?

A. Only by hearsay.

73. Q. What did you hear about them, and who was it from?

A. The most I heard about those matters was from Mr. Norton.

2120 74. Q. Now, what did Norton say to you about those notes, as near as you remember?

A. As near as I can remember, Norton said he had bought an interest or the patent in the "Ischuretic," and had given his notes for it, and they were trying to collect the notes, and he claimed that he had been deceived and defrauded in the transaction.

75. Q. State what Mr. Ransford said to you at the time he applied to you to become a witness in this case, that was defamatory to the character of Norton?

A. I think he said, amongst other things, that you were indicted in Washington, and that you had papers which you were endeavoring to make out as originals which were not so, and which were nothing but copies; I think he said also that some of the parties you said had signed the papers were dead now; he said, you know what you and I have said about Norton, and I want you to go and testify to what you have said about him; and he said they were impeaching of him here before Irving Browne.

76. Q. What else have you heard Ransford say derogatory to Norton's character?

A. I have heard him say that he would not believe him under oath; that he was a cheat and a fraud, and give him a pretty good rating; I have heard him say pretty hard things about you in regard to some business transactions, in different places and at different times.

77. Q. Of the truth of those things stated to you by Ransford, had you any personal knowledge?

A. No.

78. Q. Have you a partner in the last business?

A. No.

79. Q. How extensive are your social relations in the city of Troy, I mean as relates to your knowledge of society, and into what society do you go aside from your business as a lawyer?

2121 A. There are very few families I have intercourse with in the city of Troy; I scarcely ever go visiting or calling; so far as the lawyers or business men of the city are concerned, I am always treated respectfully; so far as I know I am treated with consideration by Judge Ingalls, Judge Strait, Mayor Murphy, Postmaster Robertson, Honorable Martin I. Townsend, and all men with whom I am intimately acquainted.

80. Q. You are intimately acquainted with the persons named in the last answer?

A. Yes; I have known them for years.

Redirect by Mr. CLARKE:

81. Q. Have you any feeling of personal hostility to Mr. Norton?

A. I have not.

Recross by Mr. NORTON:

82. Q. Do you wish to change, modify, or alter or in any manner disturb the testimony given by you on your cross-examination?

A. I am not aware that I do.

83. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I have not.

P. W. BISHOP.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned by consent until July 15, 10 a. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment at 2.30 p. m.
Same counsel as before.

EDWIN CHAMBERLIN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

2122 Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. Edwin Chamberlin; age, sixty; residence, Troy; occupation, maker of carriages.

2. Q. How long have you been in business in Troy?

A. About twenty five years.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him?

A. About twelve years.

5. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community in respect to truth and veracity—whether it is good or bad.

A. It isn't very good, I must say; rather bad, if anything, for truth and veracity.

6. Q. On the basis of that reputation, and from the speech of men concerning him, state whether you would believe him on oath.

A. I can't swear that I would not believe Mr. Norton under oath.

7. Q. Explain why you can't.

(Objected to on the ground that the question smells strongly of "bulldozing," as the witness has already given a full and fair answer on the subject, and one which the court cannot fail to understand. It therefore needs no explanation from anybody.)

A. Well, I can't give any particular reason as I know of; my dealing with him so far would not warrant me to swear positively to that fact.

8. Q. Without reference to your personal dealing with him. have you give' any conscientious or other objection to swearing that you would not believe him on oath, on the basis of his general reputation, and what people currently say of him?

(Same objection as last above, and as improper to examine a 2123 witness in this manner on a question of this character, the witness already having answered fully on the subject.)

A. I could not swear that I would not believe him under oath, not conscientiously, although his reputation may be bad for truth and veracity.

9. Q. Suppose that Mr. Norton's testimony were in conflict with that of another man who stands fair in the community, would you believe him in preference to the other man?

(Same objection, and also that the supposition contained in the question does not exist in this case; and further, that it is improper to endeavor to make an expert out of this witness, he having twice fully answered as touching the only question involved in the attempt by defendant to impeach Norton.)

A. No, I would not. I would believe the other man first.

10 Q. What is the name of your firm?

A. E. Chamberlin & Sons.

11. Q. Have you any objection to swearing that you would not believe a man on oath unless from dealings with him you personally know that he is untruthful?

A. I should want to know personally before I should want to swear that I would not believe him under oath.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON in person:

12. Q. Previous to 1870 you were familiar with Norton's law offices, and knew something of his business, did you not?

A. I was familiar with his office, and with his business somewhat.

13. Q. What was his reputation as a lawyer in his profession, and as to the amount of business done by him, so far as you had any opportunity to know?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

2124 A. At that time (1870) his business reputation stood, as near as I can recollect, fair as a lawyer—a patent lawyer; so far as I can recollect at that time, he had the reputation of doing a large amount of patent business.

14. Q. You were frequently in his office prior to April, 1870; can you state of a single instance in the city of Troy where a lawyer, or a firm of lawyers, had larger, better furnished offices, or a larger or better law library, than had Norton; and also the firm of Norton & Cowen?

A. Well, they had a large office and a large library; I don't think that there was any other in the city that compared with it in size or furniture, as far as I was acquainted.

15. Q. Suppose that two large and wealthy manufacturing firms in the city of Troy, and I will name them for your information—H. Burden & Sons, and Corning, Winslow & Company—were engaged in expensive litigation on some patent, and suppose that Marcus P. Norton was counsel for Corning, Winslow & Company, and while acting as their counsel in defending their interests in such a suit the following letter should be sent to him, to wit:

WOODSIDE, June 24th, 1861.

DEAR SIR: Since you were last here, I have accidentally been made acquainted with your friend's views in relation to your obligations professionally to the writer and his family, and am therefore now prepared for a friendly interview, and, if agreeable, propose the place my house. I perceive there is a 4 p. m. train, can you come by it?

Yours, truly,

H. BURDEN.

M. P. NORTON, Esq.

P. S.—Come straight to my house—say nothing to any one.

H. B.

2125 What would be your opinion of a letter of that kind, should you receive it, while you were acting as attorney on the other side?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I should think that he wanted to see me on business.

16. Q. What sort of business should you judge that a letter of that kind called for, you not owing that man a dollar, and never having had any previous business transaction with him?

A. I should think it was a professional call.

17. Q. Suppose you should go, in answer to that letter at the time and the place named in it, and you were offered a large sum of money to desert your client, do you think that you ought after that to be called a liar and a scoundrel?

(Same objection.)

A. Not unless you deserted your former employer and accepted the bribe.

18. Q. Suppose that two days after that you should receive a letter like this:

JUNE 26, 1861.

DEAR SIR: Presuming I misunderstood your views and wishes of the subject matter of which I wrote you on Monday last, will thank you to enclose that letter together with this note in a sealed envelope addressed to me, and leave it with Mr. Levi Smith to be called for, and oblige,

Yours truly,

H. BURDEN.

M. P. NORTON, Esq., present.

Would it be your opinion that the person thus addressed was in the professional employment of the person writing such a letter?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't know that I can answer that, or give you any opinion.

2126 19. Q. Did you ever hear or do you know of a single instance where Norton was ever charged with deserting a client of his in court, or otherwise, in his profession?

(Same objection.)

A. I never heard of his deserting his clients. Not to my knowledge.

E. CHAMBERLIN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 15th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

MONDAY, July 15th, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

LEVI SMITH, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence and occupation?

A. My name is Levi Smith; my residence the city of Troy; I am 56 years of age, and law is my occupation.

2. Q. How long have you been a lawyer in Troy?

A. 31 years last October.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him, and what has been his occupation?

A. I have known him since March or April, 1860; his occupation during that time has been that of a lawyer.

2127 5. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community, in respect to truth or veracity; whether it is good or bad.

A. I think I do know, and it is bad.

6. Q. State how you know.

A. I know it from the speech of people.

7. Q. From the speech of people in this community, in respect to Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity, state whether you would believe him on oath.

A. I would not; I will qualify that by saying that I would not believe him on oath when he was interested in feelings or otherwise.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

8. Q. You have, on a previous occasion, been engaged in the same business as a witness that you are now in, namely testifying against Norton and his character for truth, have you not?

A. Not to my present recollection.

9. Q. Were you ever a partner in the law firm of Beach & Smith, in this city?

A. Yes. I was.

10. Q. When did that firm commence its business, and when did it end as a firm?

A. It commenced in April, 1851, and ended in December, 1870; the firm originally was composed of William A. Beach and Job Pierson and myself, and the firm name was originally Pierson, Beach & Smith; that firm was dissolved in 1853, and the firm of Beach & Smith continued from that time until December, 1870.

11. Q. Did you know Henry Burden in his lifetime?

A. I did.

12. Q. Was the firm of Beach & Smith ever counsel for Mr. Burden in any business?

A. It was.

13. Q. During what term of time?

A. Well, for a good many years; I think we did business for Henry Burden from the time the firm was formed until it dissolved.

2128 14. Q. What was the business of Mr. Burden, and how extensive was that business?

A. Well, the Burdens were a firm—H. Burden & Sons; they were in the iron business, and it was very extensive.

15. Q. Did that firm, during the time you were counsel for it, or for Mr. Henry Burden, manufacture a railway and other spike, horse and mule shoes, nails and such like?

A. I don't know as they manufactured nails; the other articles they did manufacture.

16. Q. Did they manufacture by machinery and under certain letters-patent claimed by Henry Burden?

A. Yes; or claimed by the firm. I believe their patents were common to the firm, and were taken out in Henry Burden's name.

17. Q. Did Mr. Henry Burden, or that firm, ever have any suits with anybody upon any of those patents?

A. Not to my knowledge; they had an interference in reference to a patent, with the manufacturer of horse shoes—some party in New England, I do not now remember his name; that is the only litigation which I now remember with reference to any of their patents.

18. Q. Was not the name of the person referred to in your last answer M. C. Lewis, of Boston, Massachusetts?

A. It may have been; I do not now remember.

19. Q. Who were counsel for Mr. Burden in that case?

A. It started off with William A. Beach, Marcus P. Norton, and myself; when we came to take testimony Marcus P. Norton appeared and acted on the other side.

20. Q. Now answer my question, if you please; who were of counsel in that case for Burden of record in the Patent Office?

A. I do not now remember. I presume it was Beach & Smith.

2129 21. Q. Did you know the firm of Corning, Winslow & Co. when they did business in this city, or any member of it?

A. I knew them all.

22. Q. What was their business, and was it extensive or otherwise?

A. They were in the iron business, and it was extensive.

23. Q. Did Marcus P. Norton ever act as attorney and counsellor for that firm?

A. I so understood, and I understood that he was acting for them in this interference question.

24. Q. Norton acted for that firm as attorney or counsel for a number of years, did he not?

A. I have no knowledge on that subject, except as to this interference question.

25. Q. Have you forgotten the hook-headed spike case between Corning, Winslow & Co. and the Troy Iron and Nail Factory, who manufactured under Mr. Burden's patent for making a hook-headed spike?

A. I have not.

26. Q. Was there any suit on that patent by anybody; and if so, by whom was it brought?

A. There was a suit brought by the Troy Iron and Nail Factory against Corning, Winslow & Horner for the violation of such a patent.

27. Q. Was the firm of Beach & Smith ever counsel in that case?

A. It was counsel on several motions in the case, but not in the case generally.

28. Q. Was Beach & Smith ever counsel in that case while it was pending before the master, under an interlocutory decree by the court?

A. We never appeared before a master, but while the case was pending before him we had several motions before the court.

29. Q. Who was the master in that case?

A. Chancellor Walworth.

30. Q. Who conducted the proceedings before him on the part of the complainant?

2130 A. Judge Foote and Mr. Sackett.

31. Q. Do you swear that Mr. Sackett took any part in those proceedings whatever on the part of the complainant?

A. It is possible that I am mistaken in regard to Sackett's appearance on the other side. I was never present. Judge Foote represented the complainant.

32. Q. Did Mr. Foote ever consult with the firm of Beach & Smith about that case?

A. Yes, frequently; but I don't remember of his consulting with us until after the report of the master.

33. Q. About how many years was that case pending before the master?

A. I don't know; it was pending when I first came to Troy, which was in 1845, and the report was made between the years 1865 and 1867, I should think.

34. Q. State in substance the result of the findings of the master in that case?

A. Well, he reported a small amount of damages in favor of the complainant. I won't be certain about that. I can't remember. I am inclined to think that the report was against the complainant, and that exceptions were filed to the report; upon the hearing of the exceptions by the court the court modified the report and allowed a small amount of damages to the complainant.

35. Q. As counsel in that case, were you satisfied with the result of it before the master, and the final result before the court?

A. We were not.

36. Q. Who was the Troy Iron and Nail Factory in that case?

A. A corporation under the law of this State.

37. Q. State the names of the persons forming that corporation?

A. I don't know as I know them. I understood that the Burdens were large stockholders in it, and there were some Albany stockholders—Townsends and others.

2131 38. Q. Did Henry Burden have anything to do with it?

A. While the corporation continued Henry Burden acted as the agent of the concern.

39. Q. About when did that corporation cease to exist?

A. I should think from fifteen to twenty years ago.

40. Q. Who were counsel for Corning, Winslow & Hornor in that suit?

A. David L. Seymour and, I think, Sackett.

41. Q. Was Samuel Blatchford of New York ever counsel in that case for defendants?

A. I don't know whether he was or not.

42. Q. Was William H. Seward ever counsel for defendants in that case?

A. That I don't know.

43. Q. Who else beside Seymour & Sackett, that you knew, were counsel for defendants in that suit?

A. I don't know of any one.

44. Q. Was Marcus P. Norton counsel in that case for the defendants at any time?

A. I don't know whether he was or not.

45. Q. Will you swear that he was not?

A. Of course I will not.

46. Q. You have spoken about an interference case between Henry Burden and some party in the Eastern States; what was that interference about?

A. Well, it was some feature connected with Burden's horse-shoes machine, but what particular feature I do not now remember.

47. Q. Did you at the time understand that Corning, Winslow & Co. furnished the means to defend that case, and were substantially the defendants?

A. I did.

48. Q. You also understood that Norton was acting for that firm as one of their counsel, did you not?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I did, finally; in the first instance I understood that he was 3132 acting as counsel for Burden; the notice for the taking of testimony in Troy was served on Burder, and Mr. Beach, Mr. Norton, and myself, and Mr. Henry Burden, had a consultation together at our office in regard to the case; our circuit court was then in session, and it was doubtful whether Mr. Beach could get away from it so as to attend the examination, and it was then arranged that Beach, Norton and myself should go down to Burden's works, see the machine in operation, so as to understand the nature of the patented principle involved, and that if Mr. Beach could not get out of court so as to attend the examination, Norton and myself should conduct the examination on the part of the Burdens. We three did go over together to Burden's works, saw the machine operated, and prepared ourselves in that manner for the examination. When the examination came on Norton appeared on the other side.

49. Q. Whose testimony have you reference to in your last answer, that on the part of Burden or on the part of defendant?

A. Well, I don't now remember. I think on the part of the defendant, or the party opposing the Burdens.

50. Q. Mr. Burden being the moving party in that case, who appeared for him, and who conducted the examination for him?

A. I was not present at the examinations. I understood Mr. Beach did.

51. Q. Was Norton there?

A. I understood of Mr. Beach and from Mr. Norton himself that he was there. Norton at that time had a seat in our office. Mr. Beach was so disgusted at his conduct that he turned him out of the office.

52. Q. Did you take any part with Beach in turning Norton out of your office in the manner stated in the last answer?

(Same objection.)

A. I did.

2133 53. Q. Should it appear from the Patent Office records in that case that neither Norton nor any other living person appeared for Lewis or anybody else at the time the testimony was taken in your office for Burden, what answer would you make to that condition of things?

(Same objection.)

A. I should say I was mistaken about there being an actual appearance, but that Mr. Norton acted for Corning & Winslow in that matter I know from his own admissions, and from all the circumstances which then impressed themselves upon my mind.

54. Q. Now, at what stage in those proceedings did Norton act for the persons named by you in your last answer?

(Same objection.)

A. Right away after our going down to Burden's works to examine the machine I was called to Clinton County, and was gone three or four days, and was there at the time fixed by the notice for taking testimony here; when I returned I was informed by Mr. Beach that Norton had turned up on the other side. Then it was that Beach and I had the consultation which resulted in removing him from our office. He never acted for the Burdens after that, and from that time he acted for Corning & Company in the matter, as I understood.

55. Q. Now, will you please to detail all the business done by Norton for the Burdens; state what it consisted in.

A. I don't now recollect any of it.

56. Q. State how much money you know of your own knowledge or hearsay was ever paid to Norton by the Burdens for any kind of service, and who paid it?

A. I don't know as they ever paid him a penny.

57. Q. How large was the retaining fee paid by Burdens, or by you, as their agent, to secure his services in that or any other matter?

(Same objection.)

2134 A. I have no present memory on that subject; I don't know as he ever had a retainer.

58. Q. Did not Norton tell you and Beach, on the return from Burden's, that he could not act with you for the Burdens if it should appear that Corning, Winslow & Company were interested against the Burdens, or words in substance that, as he had been previous to that time duly and regularly retained by that firm?

A. He never told me so in words or substance. I never heard you say so. I was perfectly astonished when I heard he was on the other side.

59. Q. In what year was that interference suit?

A. I should think it was about the year 1867 or 1868; along there somewhere.

60. Q. You are positive that it was either in 1867 or 1868, are you not?

A. I am not positive.

61. Q. What are your present best recollections about it?

A. Well, I can't come any nearer to it than that it was in the neighborhood of 1867 or 1868. I may be considerably out of the way. I could tell, probably, if I was at my office and could consult my register.

62. Q. Will you be kind enough to go to your office and consult your register in regard to the date referred to in your last answer, so as to be positive about it?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I regard the question as entirely frivolous, and I therefore decline to do it.

63. Q. How far is your office from the place of this examination?

A. The front door is about two hundred feet.

64. Q. Was there ever any other interference than the one you have referred to between those parties?

A. Not to my present recollection.

65. Q. What was the final result in that case?

A. I do not now remember.

2135 66. Q. Was not Mr. Burden defeated, and a patent refused to him by the United States circuit court for the District of Columbia, or by one of its judges?

A. I do not now remember.

67. Q. Do you know what judge decided that case?

A. No.

68. Q. Did you ever know or hear that Burden had received a patent in that case, as the result of the interference?

A. I don't remember.

69. Q. You have spoken without any inquiry on that subject about Norton's having a seat in your office, or in the office of Beach & Smith, from which, on consultation together, you and Beach ejected him. Whereabouts in your office was that seat located?

(Same objection.)

A. At that time what is now our north room was two rooms connecting by a door. Norton had the east room.

70. Q. Did Beach & Smith have a lease of that room?

A. We did.

71. Q. At the time Norton occupied it?

A. Yes, sir. I won't be certain whether we had a lease at that time for that room; I think we had. We leased it from John P. Albertson.

72. Q. In what year did you first take a lease from Albertson for that office?

A. We went into the main office somewhere about the year 1857. At that time Albertson used this east room as his own private office, and two or three years after this we leased this room from him. I think if we had not the lease at the time with Albertson we had the arrangement that Norton was to occupy that office and to use our library, and to use our rooms in passing through to the room.

73. Q. With whom did you have the arrangement spoken of in your last answer?

2136 A. We arranged for the room with Albertson, and with Norton that he was to have the privileges there then mentioned.

74. Q. Will you swear that in the year 1860 Beach & Smith, or anybody else beside Norton, had the lease of that room from Albertson?

(Same objection.)

A. I will not. I know that Norton was to pay the rent to Albertson.

75. Q. Apply the same question to the year 1861 and then make answer to it?

(Same objection.)

A. I say, no.

76. Q. Now, did Norton ever in the world have a key to the office of Beach & Smith?

A. I don't remember.

77. Q. Was not then the entrance to Norton's office separate and distinct from that to your office, and through a hall now occupied by you for the purposes of a water-closet?

A. I think so.

78. Q. Well, have you any doubt about it?

A. No.

79. Q. Was not the business carried on by Norton separate and distinct from that carried on by Beach & Smith?

A. It was, in the main; though it was expected by the arrangement that Mr. Beach was to be counsel for Mr. Norton in the trial of his patent cases.

80. Q. Do you know William E. Hagen, of this city?

A. I do.

81. Q. Did you know him in the years 1863 and '4?

A. I did.

82. Q. Were Beach & Smith counsel for him in those years in any matter?

A. They were.

2137 83. Q. Do you remember the interference case in the Patent Office of William E. Hagen against Jacob Shavor and Lewis Potter of this city?

A. I do.

84. Q. Do you remember what that was about?

A. I think it was converting water into superheated steam to aid in the combustion of fuel.

85. Q. Well, did Beach & Smith take any part in that suit for Hagen?

A. Yes.

86. Q. What part and in what capacity did they act for Hagen?

A. They acted in the capacity of counsel in the examination of witnesses tending to impeach the testimony of Marcus P. Norton, who had been a witness for Shavor and Potter.

87. Q. Your firm took an active part in that enterprise, did they not?

A. Yes.

88. Q. You used all the means at your command to make successful his impeachment, did you not?

A. We examined such witnesses as were furnished us, and did it to the best of our ability; and used all honorable means necessary to make the impeachment complete.

89. Q. Did you take any part in furnishing witnesses for that occasion?

A. I did not personally.

90. Q. Did anybody in your office?

A. Not to my knowledge.

91. Q. Were you examined as a witness in that case on the part and in behalf of Hagen?

A. I have no present recollection of being examined, and don't think I was.

92. Q, Do you swear that you were not?

A. I do not swear that I was not; it would be strangely against my custom in such cases if I was sworn.

93. Q. Should it appear from the records of the Patent Office that you did testify on that occasion, would you have any further answer to make than that made to the last question?

2138 A. I certainly should. I should desire to admit it if I was examined.

94. Q. Was Mr. Beach examined on that occasion on the part and on behalf of Mr. Hagen?

A. Not to my knowledge. He never was when I was present.

95. Q. You do not know that Beach was examined on that occasion?

A. I do not.

96. Q. What witnesses were examined by Mr. Beach on that occasion?

A. George Gould, then a justice of our supreme court, General George R. Davis, Henry Burden (who are all dead now), Marcus Ball, and some others perhaps.

97. Q. Did you give advice to Mr. Hagen as to the course he should pursue in obtaining witnesses for that occasion?

A. I did.

98. Q. Did you frequently advise him about it?

A. Yes.

99. Q. On the question of impeaching Norton for truth and veracity in that case, what was the result, and the final result, of that undertaking?

(Same objection.)

A. On the question of impeachment the witnesses Mr. Beach examined here swore that they would not believe Mr. Norton under oath in a case where he was interested in feelings or otherwise. We went to Rutland, Vermont, where Mr. Norton had previously resided, and examined a half a dozen or more witnesses there, lawyers and merchants, reputed to be men of the best standing in the village. They all testified that they knew Mr. Norton, and had known him for a considerable period, and as to his reputation for truth and veracity, they testified substantially the same as the Troy witnesses testified.

100. Q. Being yourself a lawyer, as you state on your direct
2139 examination you are, I ask you if you understood my last question at the time you made answer to it?

A. I think I did.

101. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I have not.

102. Q. You have stated in your answer to question number 99 the "final result" on the question of the undertaking to impeach Norton for truth and veracity in that case, have you?

A. I have stated the results of our efforts—the testimony we obtained. Whether the whole testimony of both sides resulted in impeachment, I am unable to state.

103. Q. Being Hagen's counsel in that case, and had impeachment been successful, do you think that your office would have known nothing about it?

(Same objection.)

A. I presume we should. I presume we did; but I don't remember what the result was.

104. Q. Was not the impeachment in that case undertaken decidedly and emphatically an unsuccessful one, and did not Hagen and Shavor and Potter settle their matter of differences, consolidate their interests, and form a joint stock company in the city of New York upon Hagen and Groom patents?

A. As to the first branch of the question, if left to my judgment, I should say it was entirely successful. As to the last branch of the question, I know nothing upon that subject; as I recollect, we had nothing to do with the merits of that case, as I had before intended to state.

105. Q. I apply this question to the fore part of your last answer, and ask you if you ever have in any manner regretted that that impeachment testimony had not been submitted to you for your judgment, which, unasked for, you attempt to give in your last answer?

(Same objection.)

2140 A. I have never regretted in the slightest degree; I have never thought of the subject.

106. Q. Since the interference case of which you have spoken, have you ever felt yourself friendly toward Norton to the present time?

A. I have never been unfriendly toward Mr. Norton; I have never had any trouble with him to my recollection, though I have not the same feeling toward him that I have toward men whom I esteem to be good and worthy citizens.

107. Q. Have you ever spoken of Norton to any one in terms unfriendly to him?

A. I don't know as I have; his name has been a matter of frequent conversation between others and myself, and I have spoken of him in the same manner as in my testimony, and others have spoken to me of him in the same manner.

108. Q. With whom have you called in question the character of Norton as to truth and veracity, and discussed that question with?

A. I cannot undertake to give names to any great extent; these conversations have been going on for a good many years, and it seems that the opinion which I have expressed here has been almost the universal one among Mr. Norton's acquaintances.

109. Q. Give the names of such as you now remember?

A. Well, I can give you the names of all the members of my firm: Mr. Fursman, Mr. Cowen, and Mr. Kellum; I remember another, distinctly, David L. Seymour; I do not now remember any particular circumstance that leads my mind to any particular individual; these conversations have been going on so long that the whole thing is blended into one common whole.

110. Q. Who compose the present members of your firm?

A. Mr. Fursman, Mr. Cowen, Mr. Kellum, and myself.

111. Q. Did you know John L. Flagg in the year 1870?

2141 A. Yes.

112. Q. Did you do any business for him against Marcus P. Norton in that year?

A. I think I did, long about that time.

113. Q. What was it?

A. I think John L. Flagg sued Norton on some promissory notes which he had; Norton put in a defence; we were counsel in the case for Flagg; and there were some chattel mortgages which Flagg owned on Norton's library which we advised in regard to and assisted in foreclosing.

114. Q. Did you attend the sale of that property, or any part of it?

A. Yes; the principal part of it.

115. Q. About how large was the library that was sold on that occasion?

A. I cannot say; it was a large library—very large—both the private and law library.

116. Q. Do you know how much that library sold for?

A. I do not; none of the money came into my hands.

117. Q. Do you know what became of the proceeds of that property?

A. I do not, personally.

118. Q. Do you know in any way?

A. That is all I know about it.

119. Q. What kind of business did Norton carry on up to that time?

A. While he lived here in Troy he practised law.

120. Q. Were you ever in his office previous to that time?

A. Quite frequently.

121. Q. What kind of an office did you find then?

A. He had fine rooms and well furnished.

122. Q. Did not Norton carry on also patent business in the Patent Office and in the courts?

A. He did carry on the patent business, but what he did at or in the Patent Office I am unable to state.

2142 123. Q. Since 1869, has any of that patent business found its way into your office?

A. Mr. Conner does quite a large patent business, and he is assisted somewhat by Mr. Kellum.

124. Q. Since the organization of your present firm, have you had for a client any person or persons who, previous to 1870, were clients of Norton?

A. Yes; we have.

125. Q. You have found them good clients and good pay, haven't you?

A. I should think so.

126. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. I have no doubt about it.

LEVI SMITH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

(The complainant's counsel objects to each and every answer given by witness to questions put to him on cross-examination, and to all parts thereof not responsive to the question to which the answer is given; to all such answers not responsive to the question, and showing evasiveness and the voluntary evidence of the witness at the time of the answer; complainant's counsel under this objection will call the attention of the court at the hearing, and there move the court to suppress the same for the reasons stated in this objection.)

JOSEPH C. HENDERSON, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

2143 A. My name is Joseph C. Henderson; my age is 53; my residence Troy, and my occupation a manufacturer.

2. Q. How long have you been in business in Troy?

A. About nine years.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him?

A. Twenty years.

5. Q. Have you lived in Troy during that time?

A. No; when I first became acquainted with him I lived in Albany.

6. Q. State, if you know, what Mr. Norton's reputation is in this community in respect to truth and veracity—whether it is good or bad.

A. Well, I would say that there have been reports that he wasn't reliable; I should say bad.

7. Q. On the basis of that reputation, and from the speech of men concerning him, state whether you would believe him on oath?

A. Well, I should believe Mr. Norton under oath if he hadn't any interest at stake in it.

8. Q. Suppose that he was interested in the matter, how then?

A. I think that he would be governed in his oath by his own interest in the matter.

9. Q. Would you believe him in such a case?

A. Well, I think there are cases when I would not.

10. Q. In your answer to question 6 you say that there are reports that he is not reliable; how extensive are those reports?

A. So far as my knowledge is concerned they are not very extensive; well, what I mean to say is that the feeling is not universal; it is only with those that have had business with him.

11. Q. State in what business you have been engaged since you have been in Troy, and with whom.

A. I have been in the same business that I am now in—making stoves and furnaces; when I first came here I was with Charles Eddy & Company, and after that I was associated with Jacob Shavor, and after 2144 that with Sheldon, Greene & Company, and was with them for three years: after that time I again joined Mr. Shavor, and the firm then was Shavor & Henderson; I am now in business alone.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

12. Q. Did Norton ever do any business for you professionally?

A. Yes, sir.

13. Q. When was it and what was it?

A. Well, in 1866, I think, he done some patent business for me while I was with Charles Eddy & Company.

14. Q. Did he do that business for you to your satisfaction?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes.

15. Q. Did Fuller, Warren & Company, of this city, sue you for an alleged infringement on a stove patent held by them, known as the curved oven plate patent, invented and patented by Samuel Pierce?

A. They did.

16. Q. Who was their solicitor and counsel in that case?

A. Marcus P. Norton, I think.

17. Q. Have you any doubt about it?

A. No, sir.

18. Q. What became of that suit?

A. Well, as I understood, you and John Rathbone and Sam. Pierce concocted some sort of an arrangement about it, whereby judgment was to be entered against me, and they were to have certain rights of manufacture; that is, they, Rathbone & Company, of Albany, were to have the rights.

19. Q. Was not a decree made in that case by the court against you for a perpetual injunction for a statement of an account of profits, and were not you and your books examined on that subject before A.

2145 A. Boyce, one of the standing examiners of the court?
(Same objection.)
A. No, sir.
20. Q. You swear to that positively, do you?
A. I do; I do not swear that judgment was not entered up, but do swear that there was no examination.
21. Q. You swear positively that there was no examination of your books or of yourself under a decree of the court in that case, do you?
(Same objection.)
A. Not to my knowledge.
22. Q. What do you mean by your answer "not to my knowledge"?
A. That I had no remembrance of it.
23. Q. You know that a judgment was entered in the case against you?
A. Yes, sir.
24. Q. Has that judgment ever been paid?
(Same objection.)
A. No, sir.
25. Q. You knew Jacob Shavor very well, did you not, in his lifetime?
A. Yes, sir.
26. Q. At the time of his decease was he a partner of yours?
A. No, sir.
27. Q. And had not been for some time previous?
A. He had not.
28. Q. Do you know Frederick G. Ransford of this city?
A. I do.
29. Q. How long have you known him?
A. I have known him for the last twelve or fifteen years.
30. Q. Do you know Jeremiah D. Green of this city?
2146 A. I do.
31. Q. How long have you known him?
A. For ten years, I guess.
32. Q. While you were in business with Shavor did Ransford and Green ever call there to see Shavor to your knowledge?
A. They did.
33. Q. Quite frequently?
A. Not particularly so.
34. Q. While they were there at your place of business did you ever hear them discussing Norton's character for truth and veracity; I mean separately or collectively?
A. I have.
35. Q. Did you take any part in that discussion with them or either of them?
A. Not that I remember of.
36. Q. Name any person or persons whom you have heard speak of Norton or of his character for truth in a derogatory or defamatory manner.
A. Parties may not like to have their names used in that way.
37. Q. Do you decline to state the names of those parties?
A. No, sir.
38. Q. If you have no objection to doing so, please do so.
A. My objection is that without their consent it may not be agreeable to them.

39. Q. Do you know whether those persons or any of them were friends or enemies to Norton?

A. I don't know that any of them were enemies.

40. Q. Did you understand the last question when you made answer to it?

A. Yes, sir.

41. Q. Now, what did that question ask you to state?

A. Whether these men were friends or enemies to Mr. Norton.

42. Q. Did you give a full answer to it?

A. I did; yes.

2147 43. Q. And you understood and answered that question as fully and as fairly as any other question that has been put to you and answered by you on this examination?

A. Well, I will say no, for the reason that I don't know who Mr. Norton's friends and enemies are; I don't assume to know.

44. Q. Had Frederick G. Ransford any conversation with you about your being a witness in this case?

A. No, sir.

45. Q. Who has?

A. This gentleman present, Mr. Clarke, is the only one.

46. Q. Had you ever seen Mr. Clarke before that time?

A. No, sir.

47. Q. How did Mr. Clarke know that you knew anything about Norton?

A. I don't know.

48. Q. Who introduced Mr. Clarke to you?

A. Mr. Chauncey O. Green.

49. Q. Where was that?

A. In the office; we have an office together.

50. Q. When was that?

A. Saturday, I think.

51. Q. Who are your attorneys in your patent business in this city?

A. Esek Cowen is one of them.

52. Q. Who are the others?

A. The firm of Smith, Fursman & Cowen.

53. Q. Now, whatever you may have heard said by anybody against the character or integrity of Norton, had you any personal knowledge of the truth of any statement or statements so made?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Well, on one occasion Mr. Jacob Shavor made statements to me in regard to Mr. Norton's character, stating that he had wronged him

2148 and had forged or changed papers in regard to business which he had done for him, and showed me letters of Mr. Norton's and exhibits which Mr. Norton had taken from the Patent Office at Washington to prevent other parties from getting copies of them, and Mr. Norton stated in his letter that he wanted him to destroy the letter so that it would not be found out, and the only personal knowledge which I have of the matter is from these exhibits and letters and from their statements.

54. Q. You call that personal knowledge, do you?

A. I call what I saw in your letters, I should think, personal.

55. Q. You saw me write these letters, did you?

A. No, sir; but there is no question but what you did.

56. Q. I state to you that I never wrote such a letter to Shavor, and never before heard of such a letter, and I want you to state how you know I ever wrote such a letter.

A. I know it by your handwriting.

57. Q. And that is all you know about it, is it?

A. I didn't see you write it, of course.

58. Q. Who, if anybody, told you I wrote such a letter?

A. Mr. Shavor informed me that he had received such a letter from you, and I examined it and found it to be in your handwriting.

59. Q. Now, when was that?

A. Eight or nine years ago; I should think at least eight years; I guess it was nine.

60. Q. Where were you at that time?

A. At his house—Shavor's house.

61. Q. In what business were you engaged, and with whom?

A. In the same business as I am now, and with Shavor.

62. Q. What was the date of that letter?

A. That I cannot remember.

63. Q. You cannot remember?

A. I say I cannot.

2149 64. Q. When did you last see that letter?

A. Well, I don't remember whether I have seen it since that time or not; I think not.

65. Q. And that was nine years ago?

A. Yes.

66. Q. You have a clear and distinct recollection of the contents of that letter at this time, have you?

A. I have, yes, of some parts of it.

67. Q. You can state the exact contents of that letter, can you? (Same objection.)

A. I cannot; I can't give a verbatim account of it; I can state the facts of it.

68. Q. Did you ever say anything to anybody about that letter?

A. Yes; I think I have.

69. Q. To whom and when?

A. I don't remember, it was so long ago; I was mostly interested with those exhibits.

70. Q. What exhibits?

A. They were exhibits filed in the Patent Office by Anson Atwood or Stewart and Peterson, of Philadelphia; I am not positive which filed them.

71. Q. In what case in the Patent Office were those exhibits filed?

A. I don't know.

72. Q. Were you a witness in that case in which you say those exhibits were filed in the Patent Office?

A. I was not; I don't know anything about it.

73. Q. I ask you to state in what case those exhibits were filed in the Patent Office.

A. They were filed by Anson Atwood or Stewart and Peterson in some case of which I have no knowledge.

74. Q. Have you not stated that you were most interested in those exhibits?

A. Yes.

75. Now, what were the exhibits about?

2150 A. They described the admission of air over the fire for the purpose of burning the gases.

76. Q. What file marks were on those exhibits?

A. Well, I don't remember; the names of Anson Atwood and Stewart and Peterson were on them; I remember nothing so far as the wording of the file-marks was concerned.

77. Q. Were then any other file marks on those exhibits beside those you have mentioned?

A. I don't remember.

78. Q. When did you last see those exhibits?

A. I can't remember.

79. Q. Where are those exhibits now?

A. Among Mr. Shavor's papers I should think; they were the last time I saw them.

80. Q. When was that?

A. I don't remember.

81. Q. Will you get them and produce them here?

(Same objection.)

A. They are not in my possession; I have no control over them.

82. Q. Will you make an effort to get them and bring them here tomorrow morning?

(Objected to as improper to ask the witness to do such a thing.)

A. Yes; I will.

83. Q. When did you ever see Norton write, and where was it?

A. I have seen you write several times in your own office.

84. Q. When?

A. In 1866 and 1867.

85. Q. You saw me write, and what was it about?

A. I had business with you and had drawn papers from you several times, and I was in your office waiting for you several times when you were writing.

2151 86. Q. Now, you state in your direct examination that you are in the manufacturing or foundry business. What do you manufacture?

A. I didn't say I was in the foundry business; my business is to manufacture stoves, furnaces and ranges.

87. Q. Have you a partner in that business?

A. No, sir.

88. Q. How much capital have you invested in that business?

A. Well, I don't know how much.

89. Q. How many men do you employ?

A. I have my manufacturing done, and don't do the work myself.

90. Q. You do not own a manufactory or a foundry, do you?

A. No, sir.

91. Q. How many clerks do you employ in your business?

A. Well, sometimes one to three; it varies.

92. Q. How much real estate do you own in this city or anywhere else?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I own a house and lot, costing me $10,000, in this city.

93. Q. You own it in fee simple, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

94. Q. When did you buy that house and lot?

A. Seven years ago.

95. Q. Any mortgage on it?

A. Yes, sir.

96. Q. How many and for how much?

A. There is one mortgage on it for $4,180; there is another mortgage for $5,000, as collateral security against it.

97. Q. Has that property depreciated in value any since you purchased it?

A. I don't know.

98. Q. With what bank in this city do you transact business or have an account?

(Same objection.)

2152 A. Manufacturers' National, principally.

99. Q. Do you keep a regular account in that bank?

A. I do not now; no, sir.

100. Q. Did you and Shavor fail in business as partners?

A. Mr. Shavor and I made an assignment of our business for the purpose of settling it up.

101. Q. How much did that firm pay on the dollar in settlement?

A. It hasn't been settled; it will pay 100 cents; I hope to.

102. Q. What are the assigned assets of that firm?

A. I don't know the amount.

103. Q. What kind of property did that concern assign?

A. It assigned the manufactured goods on hand and the book accounts.

104. Q. How many manufactured goods did you have on hand, in value?

A. I don't know; there has been no inventory taken.

105. Q. Where are those goods at the present time?

A. Some of them are in my store.

106. Q. Where are the rest?

A. Some of them have been sold, and some are at the Co-Operative Foundry.

107. Q. When did you make that assignment?

A. November 30, 1876.

108. Q. Who was the assignee?

A. Charles Eddy.

109. Q. Any of your creditors ever found any fault with that assignment?

(Same objection.)

A. I never heard of any.

110. Q. How much personal property have you unencumbered?

A. I don't know.

111. Q. Any of your creditors ever sued you?

2153 A. Yes, sir.

112. Q. Any judgments obtained by them against you?

A. Yes.

113. Q. Your personal property, is it covered by a chattel mortgage?

A. No, sir.

114. Q. At the time you left the firm of Charles Eddy & Company was Jacob Shavor a member of that firm?

A. He was previous to my leaving. He left before I did.

115. Q. How much money did Charles Eddy or Charles Eddy & Company claim to have lost in their operations with you in the stove business? I now refer to the bituminous coal burning stoves that were made and sold in the west.

A. I don't know.

116. Q. Has not Mr. Eddy claimed to have lost $40,000 by you and your operations in the West and other things?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

117. Q. What sum do you know him to have claimed to have lost in that direction?

A. I don't know of any.

118. Q. What is your financial standing and credit in this city at this time?

A. Well, I should judge not very strong at the present time.

119. Q. Is it not in bad repute?

A. I don't know that it is.

Adjourned until July 16, 9 a. m.

JULY 16TH.

Met pursuant to adjournment. Same counsel.

Cross-examination of witness HENDERSON resumed by complainant's counsel:

2154 120. Q. Have you since the adjournment yesterday obtained those exhibits mentioned by you on your cross-examination yesterday?

A. I applied to the administrator of Mr. Shavor last evening, and he said he had a large quantity of Mr. Shavor's papers in bundles; never examined them, but would look them over, and if they were in his papers let me have them, take them. It would require more time; we had not time to go over those papers in so short a time.

121. Q. Name the administrator.

A. Jonathan Richardson.

122. Q. You spoke yesterday about a letter in which you say those exhibits were contained; have you since the close of the examination yesterday obtained that letter?

A. I have not for the reasons I have just stated.

123. Q. During your cross-examination on yesterday you stated in substance that the letter and exhibits just referred to related to a case in which Atwood, Stewart & Peterson of Philadelphia had to do; are you positive in that statement?

A. No, I didn't state it. I stated that the exhibits I referred to was in regard to Atwood, Stewart and Peterson, one of them, and the other I don't remember about; there was two of them. They weren't on the same subject, I don't think.

124. Q. Who were or are Stewart & Peterson?

A. Stewart and Peterson is a foundry concern of Philadelphia.

125. Q. To what Atwood do you refer, and where was or is his residence?

A. I refer to Anson Atwood, who formerly lived in Troy. I don't know where he lives now.

126. Q. Who was Mr. Atwood's attorney in that case?

A. I don't know.

127. Q. Who was the attorney of Stewart & Peterson in that case?

A. That I don't know.

128. Q. Will you and do you swear that there ever was a case of 2155 the kind, or of any other kind, between those parties in regard to a gas-burning stove, or anything else, in the Patent Office, or at Philadelphia, or anywhere else?

A. The only evidence I have is Norton's letters and the exhibits.

129. Q. You swear positively that Norton in a letter of that kind mentioned the names of those persons, do you?

A. I don't swear to anything of that kind. What I want to say is that the filing on the exhibit is of those names, and Norton's reference to these exhibits was not to the names on the exhibits, but to the device itself.

130. Q. Now what was the device referred to?

A. One was in reference to taking air in over the fire for the purpose of burning the gasses as full; the other, I don't remember just what the description of it was. Neither do I remember that it was their exhibit, the exhibit of Atwood, or of Stewart & Peterson; I am inclined to think that it was not.

131. Q. Explain to the court how it is that you seem to have so clear and vivid recollections of the alleged letter and of one exhibit, and have no recollections at all about the other exhibit, as to what it contained.

A. First I will explain that Mr. Shavor submitted these letters to me with reference to Mr. Norton, threatening that he was going to prosecute him for fraud; in regard to the exhibits, the one in the case of Atwood, Mr. Shavor wanted to know whether it would not affect a patent I held; being more interested in that particular device, I took more pains to investigate it; the other, being one in which I did not take the pains to investigate it, and it did not impress itself so firmly upon my mind.

132. Q. Shavor submitted to you several letters and at the same time threatened to prosecute Norton for fraud; is that it?

A. He submitted the letters to me to read, and asked me what I thought of them.

2156 133. Q. You will please now answer my question, which the examiner will read for your information.

A. He did threaten to prosecute him for fraud.

134. Q. Now, when was that?

A. In 1869.

135. Q. Where was it?

A. At his house, in the city of Troy.

136. Q. He submitted those letters to you for your examination and opinion, did he?

A. Yes, sir.

137. Q. You examined them and gave your opinion, did you?

A. I did.

138. Q. Will you now be so condescending as to give that opinion?

A. As I remember it, in substance, I told him that if the authorities in Washington knew that he had taken papers from their files, that they no doubt would prosecute him, Norton.

139. Q. What did Shavor say to that?

A. That he would notify them of the facts, if he concluded to prosecute him.

140. Q. You have already stated that he concluded to prosecute him, for he threatened it?

A. Yes.

141. Q. Did Shavor ever prosecute that or any other matter against Norton?

A. I don't know.

142. Q. Did you ever hear anything about that matter after that time?

A. I have.

143. Q. From whom?

A. Shavor.

144. Q. When and where was it?

A. On several occasions, and as late as 1875 or '76.

145. Q. As late as 1875 or '6, Shavor was in full war paint and on the war path, still harping about this stupendous fraud, was he not?

A. He was.

146. Q. From his appearance at that time, did you apprehend
2157 any danger to Norton, or that there would be much of a shower in consequence of that gigantic fraud, of which you know nothing except what you heard from Shavor?

A. That is a very funny question, and I do not know that I comprehend it.

147. Q. What is there about this question that you do not comprehend?

A. I do not know what is meant to be conveyed by the question; a shower of what?

148. Q. We will leave out the shower, and then answer the question.

A. I would simply say that Mr. Shavor's appearance was very earnest, and I thought he meant just what he said.

149. Q. When did you last have any conversation with Shavor about Norton?

A. I don't remember when; I haven't seen Shavor much for the last two years.

150. Q. Anybody present when you had these conversations with Shavor?

A. I don't remember now.

151. Q. With who else have you ever had any conversation about Norton, or about his character for truth, other than Shavor?

A. I don't remember now all the parties with whom I had conversations.

152. Q. Name at least one person?

A. I should name Charles Eddy, A. C. Corse.

153. Q. Name others.

A. Fredrick G. Ransford.

154. Q. Who else?

A. Oh, I don't remember.

155. Q. Do you know Franklin J. Parmenter, of this city?

A. I know him by reputation; I am not acquainted with him; he is a lawyer.

156. Q. Do you know James A. Burden, of this city, of the firm of H. Burden & Sons, who are largely engaged in the iron business?

A. I know him.

2158 157. Q. Do you not think Mr. Parmenter and also Mr. Burden have as full and as fair an opportunity to know Norton's character for truth and veracity as you yourself, in this city?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I have no knowledge on the subject.

158. Q. On your own knowledge, what do you know of Norton's character for truth and veracity, in this city or anywhere else?

A. Well, from my experience, I haven't formed a very elegant opinion of his character for truth and veracity.

159. Q. What experience have you had on that subject, and with whom have you had it?

A. I have had some experience with Mr. Norton himself; my first business experience with him was in 1860, when he undertook to prevent the extension of Samuel Pierson's patent for a curved plate; Mr. Norton came to Albany and took testimony for a combination of manufacturers in connection with Charles Eddy and others; he went to Washington for this interest, and stated that he defeated, before the commissioner, the extension of the patent; the next day, after the time when the limited time expired, he entered into an arrangement with Mr.

Pierce by Pierce's giving Charles Eddy & Company such papers as would exempt them from the force of the patent, and he then waived his objection to the patent, and allow' the patent to be extended; then when Marcus P. Norton returned back to Troy he wrote me a letter back to Albany stating that Pierce's patent had been extended, that it wasn't legal, and before we done anything about it to submit the matter to him; General Rathbone and myself came to Troy to see Mr. Norton in regard to it, and he pledged his reputation as a lawyer that the thing wasn't worth anything, and could be defeated; we did not retain Mr. Norton as a lawyer to defeat it; Mr. Rathbone expressed himself as very unfavorably impressed with Mr. Norton for having anything 2159 to do with it; I will say further that Mr. Norton stated to me personally that he had defeated this thing, and that it wasn't worth a rush; I asked Mr. Norton why he didn't protect the rest of his clients as well as Charles Eddy & Company; his answer was that he was doing their business, and in their interests, and didn't care for the others; and such transactions as that I think very dishonorable for any lawyer to do.

160. Q. You became considerably enraged and maddened over that matter, did you?

A. I did not, but I felt very much annoyed at being treated that way.

161. Q. You have been annoyed for eighteen or twenty years in that way, haven't you?

A. No, sir; I have not; for I have never met any other lawyer that would do that kind of business.

162. Q. Now, Mr. Henderson, how much money did you put in that enterprise of trying to defeat the extension of the Pierce patent on the curved oven plate?

A. I paid all the expenses of taking testimony in Albany.

163. Q. What testimony did you take in Albany, and what lawyer took it for you?

A. We took testimony in regard to the validity of the Pierce patent, and the testimony was taken by James B. Sanders, and at his office in Albany.

164. Q. Was Norton there?

A. If I remember right he was, on one occasion.

165. Q. What occasion was that?

A. When taking testimony.

166. Q. Did you pay Norton any money for any services he rendered

A. I did not on this occasion.

167. Q. Did Norton ever make you any bill for any expenses in that extension matter?

A. No, he did not.

168. Q. Did you ever ask him for any such bill?

A. I did not.

169. Q. Did you ever offer to pay me any money for any such matter?

2160 A. No; not after he explained to us how he deceived us.

170. Q. Did you before he explained to you how he deceived you?

A. No.

171. Q. Norton went down to you and told you how he had decived you, did he?

A. No; he told me so up in Troy.

172. Q. At what time did he tell you that up in Troy?

A. In 1866, when he thought he could do so with safety.

173. Q. That was the first you ever knew about it, was it?

A. No; Mr. Shavor told me all about it.

174. Q. When did Shavor tell you?

A. I don't remember; it was, however, previous to 1866.

175. Q. Who, if anybody, made any arrangement with you to join in the opposition to Mr. Pierce's patent?

A. Mr. Shavor, of the firm of Charles Eddy & Company, went to Albany and called on me first; explained the fact that Mr. Pierce's patent was about to expire; that all the stove manufacturers would be interested in it; requested me to go with him to all the stove manufacturers in Albany.

176. Q. Did Norton take any part in that arrangement?

A. No; he didn't.

177. Q. Did you ever communicate to Norton any arrangement that was made with Shavor?

A. No.

178. Q. For whom did Norton enter his appearance in that case, as of record?

A. I do not know.

179. Q. Did he do it for you?

A. He did not.

180. Q. Did he enter it for Rathbone & Company, of Albany?

A. Not to my knowledge.

2161 181. Q. Didn't he appear solely and entirely for Charles Eddy & Company?

A. I don't know; he ought not to have done so.

182. Q. How do you know that? You say that you never employed him, paid him a dollar, or communicated with him about that case while it was pending.

A. We made our arrangements with Charles Eddy & Co., and they employed Norton.

183. Q. The patent was extended; you were sued upon it, routed, defeated, captured bag and baggage, were you not?

A. I think this an impertinent question, and unworthy of the counsel who asked it.

184. Q. In what does the impertinence consist?

A. In the language.

185. Q. How much of that question is true in point of fact?

A. They got a judgment against me after suit.

186. Q. Did you ever have a license to manufacture under the extended term of that patent?

A. I never did, nor ever manufactured stoves under that patent before the suit or after.

187. Q. Would you have liked to have had a license under that extended term at that time?

A. No; for the reason that I did not manufacture stoves.

188. Q. Explain why you wanted the extension defeated, then, and why you blamed Norton because he did not work for you for nothing in a case in which he did not know you had anything to do?

A. Rathbone & Company were manufacturing stoves that had a patented device of mine in them; they requested me to take charge of this testimony and do what I could for them in connection with Charles Eddy & Co. and others.

189. Q. In the suit of Fuller, Warren & Co. w h you on the extended Pierce patent with curved oven plate, the court held that your stove, made by Rathbone & Co., was a direct and positive infringement of the Pierce patent, did it not?

2162 A. I did not have anything to do with the defense; Mr. Rathbone defended it, and an arrangement was entered into between Mr. Rathbone and Mr. Pierce in which a judgment should be entered up against me in default, he arranging with Pierce as to the manufacture of the stoves.

190. Q. How many royalties on your stoves did you receive from Rathbone & Co. after the final decree in that suit?

A. They paid me a royalty of a dollar apiece on all the stoves they made after that.

191. Q. Was that the original agreed price?

A. Yes, sir.

192. Q. Did you sell any after that suit?

A. I did not.

193. Q. Did you lose any money in consequence of that suit?

A. I did

194. Q. How much money did you lose in consequence of that suit?

A. I couldn't say.

195. Q. Well, approximate it.

A. I cannot.

196. Q. Did you ever find any fault with Pierce and Rathbone for their conduct in that matter?

A. I did.

197. Q. Did you have a serious conflict with those gentlemen on that subject?

A. Well, I protested against their arrangement.

198. Q. Taking their conduct in that matter for a basis, would you believe those gentlemen under oath, or either of them?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Mr. Pierce is dead; Mr. Rathbone I would.

199. Q. What is your religious belief, Mr. Henderson?

(Same objection.)

A. My denomination is the Baptist.

200. Q. Whose and what church do you belong to?

2163 A. I don't belong to any.

201. Q. You are a Baptist without faith and without any religion, are you?

A. I refuse to answer that, as it is entirely outside your province.

202. Q. When the question was put to you did you not make this reply: "What the devil is the use of asking such a question"?

A. That was not my answer.

203. Q. What did you say about the devil or in connection with him?

(Objected to.)

A. I object to making any such record.

204. Q. What did you just remark about compromising with the examining counsel?

A. I refuse to answer.

205. Q. The last question is repeated and you are respectfully invited to make a proper answer to it.

A. My answer to that is that the whole thing is a burlesque; we were talking in conversation ou side of the testimony.

206. Q. Will you now answer my question?

A. No, sir.

207. Q. I understand you to say that you are a conditional Baptist; was Mr. Shavor a Baptist also in his lifetime?

A. I believe that in the latter part of his lifetime he was a Presbyterian.

208. Q. Was he a Baptist before he was a Presbyterian?

A. I believe he was.

209. Q. Now, Mr. Henderson, won't you please state to the court your individual opinion of Norton?

A. First, my opinion is that he is a great bore, making great pretentions to piety and high living; had the reputation of never paying many bills; buying all that he could get trusted for; socially, a very clever fellow, an American version of that word.

210. Q. Now, on what occasion did you ever see Norton when he made pretentions to piety?

2164 A. When he wanted to get trusted.

211. Q. Where and when was that, and of whom?

A. I think it was kind of promiscuous.

212. Q. Did you understand the last question when you answered it?

A. Yes, I did.

213. Q. State a single occasion, when you have been present, when Norton applied for credit to any one?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I have been present on several occasions when he applied for credit.

214. Q. Where and when?

A. Principally in 1866, at Charles Eddy & Co.'s?

215. Q. In 1866, at Charles Eddy & Co.'s, you were present and Norton applied for credit on a religious platform, were you?

A. I was.

216. Q. Was that credit ever refused?

A. Not to my knowledge.

217. Q. Do you know of any other time or place?

A. No; I do not.

218. Q. On what occasion have you ever been present when credit was refused to Norton by anybody?

A. Not any.

219. Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of any such occasion?

A. I do not.

220. Q. Have you any bills against Norton that are unpaid?

A. I have none.

221. Q. Did you ever have any that he didn't pay?

A. No.

222. Q. You are one of those kind of men who take to gossip as easily and as readily as a duck to water, are you not?

A. I say, no.

223. Q. What makes you think so?

A. Because I had such a good opinion of you for so long.

2165 224. Q. You are familiar with the subject of gossip, are you not?

A. I am.

Re-direct by Mr. CLARKE:

225. Q. Did you ever know of Ransford & Green's sitting together at the office of Shavor, in conspiracy against the reputation of Norton?

A. No.

Re-cross by Mr. NORTON:

226. Q. About how much time did you occupy in the office when Shavor was there, and you and Shavor was in partnership?

A. About half the time.

J. C. HENDERSON.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

TUESDAY, July 16, 1878.

Met pursuant to adjournment at 9 o'clock a. m.

Same counsel as before.

Defendant's counsel offers in evidence a letter from Marcus P. Norton to Hon. Abram Wakeman, P. M., New York, dated Troy, N. Y., February 6, 1864, the same being under the seal of the Post-Office Department and the certificate of the Postmaster-General, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 180, Troy, July 16, 1878, I. B., Ex'r.

Defendant's counsel also offers in evidence a copy of the letter from Marcus P. Norton to Hon. William Dennison, dated Washington, D. C., March 4, 1866, the same being under the seal of the Post-Office Department and the certificate of the Postmaster-General, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 181, Troy, July 16, 1878, I. B., Ex'r.

2166 Defendant's counsel also offers in evidence a copy of a receipt for fifty dollars for services in the Cleveland post-office, from February 2 to March 9, 1853, signed by C. C. Nott, the same being under the seal of the auditor's office of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department, and under the certificate of the auditor, and it is marked Defendant's Exhibit 182, Troy, July 16, 1878, I. B. Ex'r.

JAMES A. BURDEN, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name, James A. Burden; residence, Troy; occupation, iron manufacturer; age, 45; firm name, H. Burden & Sons.

2. Q. How long have you been in the iron business in Troy?

A. About twenty-five years; as a partner, for about fourteen years.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I am not personally acquainted with him.

4. Q. Do you know him by reputation?

A. I don't know exactly what you mean by "reputation;" I don't understand the question; I ask for explanation.

5. Q. By "reputation," as used in my last question, I mean common report as to whether such a person as Marcus P. Norton exists.

A. Yes, I know of such a person by reputation.

6. Q. What have you understood his business to be?

A. I have been told that he was a lawyer.

7. Q. A lawyer of Troy?

A. So I have understood.

8. Q. For how many years have you heard of Mr. Norton as a lawyer of Troy—about?

A. About ten or fifteen years; I have no way of fixing the 2167 time; I can't recollect; if I had access to papers, I could tell pretty nearly how long I have known him to be in Troy, but I have not the papers with me.

9. Q. During the time that you have heard of him as a lawyer of Troy, state whether you have heard him spoken of frequently or otherwise.

A. I have heard him spoken of frequently.

10. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community as regards truth and veracity, whether it is good or bad.

A. I should say I believe it is not very good.

11. Q. State whether on the basis of that reputation, and from the speech of people concerning Mr. Norton, you would believe him on oath.

A. I don't think I should.

12. Q. How long has the firm of H. Burden & Sons been in existence —about?

A. It is very difficult to answer that question; the works were established about 1813; it was first a corporation, and then it became a firm.

13. Q. You do a large business in iron, do you?

A. Yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

14. Q. What was your father's name?

A. Henry Burden.

15. Q. Is he dead?

A. He is dead.

16. Q. Been dead how long?

A. Seven years.

17. Q. Did you ever have any conversation with him in reference to Norton?

A. Yes.

18. Q. Did you ever hear him speak of Norton in an unfriendly manner?

A. I have heard him speak with surprise of Mr. Norton's actions, from disappointment.

19. Of his disappointment?

A. His disappointment.

20. Q. In what did he appear to have been disappointed concerning Mr. Norton?

(Ojected to as immaterial.)

2168 A. In giving evidence to the other party after having employed him as counsel as he supposed, or something to that effect.

21. Q. Did your firm, or your father, ever employ Norton to transact any business for you of any kind whatever?

A. I was told that they employed a firm with which Norton was connected.

22. Q. Who told you that, and when was it?

A. My father told me that; I can't recollect the date.

23. Q. What firm did he state to you that he had employed, with which Norton was connected?

(Same objection.)

A. He stated to me that he had employed Beach & Smith, and that Norton was engaged with them and had access to his papers.

24. Q. Was Levi Smith a member of that firm?

A. I think he was.

25. Q. Have you any doubt of it?

A. No; I haven't any doubt about it.

26. Q. Levi Smith is a lawyer in this city, is he not?

A. Yes, I believe so.

27. Q. You know him personally and intimately well, do you not?

A. Yes.

A. About half the time.

28. Q. Did you ever hear him speak of Norton, or of Norton's character for truth?

A. I don't remember whether I have or not.

29. Q. Is he at the present time one of your attorneys?

A. Yes.

30. Q. Is the firm to which he belongs your attorneys or counsellors?

A. Yes.

31. Q. State what business, if any, Norton ever transacted for you, your father, or your firm, and the price you paid for those services.

2169 A. I don't remember of Norton personally ever having done anything for us.

32. Q. Did you, your father, or your firm ever retain Norton in his profession to transact any business for you?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no knowledge that they did ever retain him individually.

33. Q. Was Norton ever a member of the firm of Beach & Smith, your attorneys and counsellors?

A. I don't know from my own knowledge.

34. Q. Was Norton ever in your office, or about your works for any purpose?

A. I don't remember to have ever seen him there.

35. Q. Was Norton ever employed as an attorney or of counsel against you, or your firm, or your father during his lifetime?

A. I don't remember that he was.

36. Q. Have you forgotten the suit known as the hook-head spike suit, in which your father and your firm took an active part?

A. I have not forgotten it.

37. Q. Do you think you will ever forget it?

A. No, sir.

38. Q. Have you forgotton the interference suit in the United States Patent Office of Henry Burden (your father) against N. C. Lewis, of Boston, upon improvements in machinery for the manufacture of horse and mule shoes?

A. I have not forgotten it.

39. Q. Do you think you will ever forget that suit?

A. No, sir.

40. Q. Have you forgotten the suit of Henry Burden against Corning, Winslow & Company for an alleged infringement of a patent granted to your father upon a machine for the manufacture of horse and mule shoes, argued at Winsor in 1864 by William M. Evarts, Samuel Blatchford and others, before Judge Nelson?

A. I have not forgotten that suit, but I don't remember those counsel or the date.

2170 41. Q. Was the firm of Beach & Smith engaged for your firm or for your father in the several litigations mentioned in the several last preceding questions?

A. Beach & Smith were not our patent attorneys in all cases; I can't remember now whether they were in any case but the spike suit.

42. Q. Did not Beach & Smith appear as solicitors in the suit referred to as having had its final hearing at Winsor, Vermont?

A. I can't remember; I don't recollect.

43. Q. Will you swear that they did not?

A. No, I can't.

44. Q. Did not Beach & Smith appear for your father in his interference suit with Lewis?

A. I am not quite sure; I think they did.

45. Q. They were in the hook-headed spike suit, among other counsel for your firm or your father, were they not?

A. Yes, they were.

46. Q. That firm continued to transact business for your firm until it was dissolved, did it not?

A. Yes.

47. Q. And it has been succeeded in your business by the firm of Smith, Fursman & Cowen, has it not?

A. Yes, it has.

48. Q. Did you know anything about the firm of Corning, Winslow & Company while it transacted business in this city?

A. I did.

49. Q. Was it a responsible firm, and did it do a large business in the manufacture of iron, and of iron for market purposes?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, it did.

50. Q. When did that firm cease to transact business in Troy, and who succeeded it in that business?

A. I can't recall the date when they ceased to transact business.

Erastus Corning.

2171 51. Q. Of Albany?

A. Yes.

52. Q. Was Norton one of the attorneys or one of the counsellors of the firm of Corning, Winslow & Company?

A. I am not aware that he was, but I understood that he acted as expert for their counsel, or in some such capacity.

53. Q. From whom did you understand that?

A. I can't remember now.

54. Q. Do you know of Norton's ever conducting any suit, or taking part in any suit against you, your firm, or your father, as attorney or counsellor for the firm of Corning, Winslow & Company, with reference to any of the patents that have been mentioned during this cross-examination?

A. I don't remember that he conducted any suits; I think he was connected with the counsel for Corning, Winslow & Company, in some of these cases in some way.

55. Q. Did he not act as one of the counsel in every one of those cases?

A. I am not aware that he did.

56. Q. Do you know whether he did or not?

A. No; I have no means of knowing now, positively.

57. Q. Who defended Lewis in the interference case, and furnished the means for that defence?

A. I don't know of my own knowledge.

58. Q. Do you in any other way know?

(Objected to as immaterial, and as asking for hearsay.)

A. No; I have no means of knowing.

59. Q. Did you ever hear it from anybody?

(Same objection.)

A. I have never heard anybody state that they knew it positively.

60. Q. Did you ever hear anybody speak of Norton in terms derogatory to his character for truth?

2172 A. Yes, I have heard Norton's reputation called in question.

61. Q. By whom?

A. I can't specify persons; I can only speak in a general way of his reputation.

62. Q. You will please now answer my question, and give the name of at least one person.

A. I think I have heard members of the firm of Beach & Smith.

63. Q. Have you any doubt about that?

A. I have no doubt, to the best of my recollection.

64. Q. My question is, have you any doubt about it, not what your recollections are?

A. I think I have no doubt about it.

65. Q. Do you know whether you have any doubt about it? for when you use the words "I think," you imply a doubt, and I desire your testimony on this point to be plain and positive.

A. I feel as sure about it as I can about anything from memory.

66. Q. Is your memory good?

A. Fair—pretty good.

67. Q. Now, name some other person beside some person that was in the firm of Beach & Smith?

A. I think I have heard Elisha Foote, late United States Commissioner of Patents, speak about Mr. Norton in the same manner.

68. Q. When was that?

A. I can't recollect when.

69. Q. Give your present best recollections of it?

A. About the time he was United States Commissioner of Patents.

70. Q. Now, when was that?

A. I think that it was during President Grant's last term.

71. Q. You are just as sure about that as you are about anything that you have stated on this examination, are you not?

A. Yes.

2173 (The witness here wishes to make an explanation of his former answers as part of the last answers, to which the complainant's counsel objects, because the witness has already fully answered the last question.) The witness further says: All my answers since number 60 have been based on the answers to that question, "Yes, I have heard Norton's reputation called in question." I do not wish to confine my answers to Norton's reputation for truth alone; I supposed I was speaking of his general reputation.

72. Q. Without any reference to Norton's "general reputation," have you ever heard anybody speak in terms defamatory or derogatory to his character for truth and veracity?

A. No, not for truth and veracity alone.

73. Q. Now, without any reference to anything but truth and veracity, I put the last question, and wish you to confine your answer solely and entirely to "truth and veracity."

A. I don't remember that I have ever heard any one speak of his truth and veracity.

Redirect by Mr. CLARKE:

74. Q. Did you ever hear of Norton's credibility being questioned, at any of the times when you say you have heard his reputation in general questioned?

(Objected to, as the witness has already fully answered the subject in the last answer given by him.)

A. I never heard anybody question that at all. I confine myself to the statements he has made, and not as to what he has done. Not being personally acquainted with Mr. Norton, I am not able to speak of his truth and veracity.

75. Q. In question 10 you were asked substantially: "What is Mr.

Norton's reputation in this community for truth and veracity?" you answer: "I should say I believe it is not very good"; explain to the court just how you wish that understood?

2174 (Complainant's counsel objects to the question for the following reasons: First. The defendant's counsel has no right to cross-examine his own witness. Second. The witness has already be*ing* cross-examined on the matter inquired about. Third. The witness, by his cross-examination, has already fully explained to the court precisely how he desires the court to understand it.)

A. In answer to that, I desire to say that I was speaking of his general reputation, and was not confining myself to his reputation for truth and veracity alone.

76. Q. Do you mean to be understood that the unfavorable statements that you have heard concerning Mr. Norton include his character as regards truth and veracity?

A. I don't wish to divide my last answer; I wish to speak of his general reputation.

JAS. A. BURDEN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 16th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

JOHN H. COLBY, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. John H. Colby; Troy, N. Y.; lawyer; 42.

2. Q. How long have you been a lawyer in Troy?

A. Since I was 21 years old.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do.

4. Q. How long have you known him?

2175 A. From eighteen to twenty years.

5. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community in respect to truth and veracity, whether it is good or bad?

A. So far as my knowledge extends it is both good and bad.

6. Q. Please explain how you wish that understood?

A. My explanation is, that I have heard his reputation for truth and veracity canvassed; I have heard some persons assert it to be good, and others assert it to be bad.

7. Q. What, on the whole, is your judgment of what his reputation is in that respect?

A. Well, the question is so much in doubt that I can't say that I have any judgment on that subject; I should not like to discriminate; I have heard it asserted to be bad, and equally strongly asserted to be good, by persons entitled to equal credit.

8. Q. From the speech of people concerning Mr. Norton, state whether you would believe him on oath?

A. Using the speech of people, forming an opinion of what I have heard other people say on the subject, both for and against his veracity, I have no positive opinion on the subject.

9. Q. Suppose that Mr. Norton's testimony were in conflict with that of another man who stands perfectly fair in the community, and judging from the speech of people concerning Mr. Norton, state which of the two witnesses you would believe?

(Objected to as assuming a case that does not and cannot exist, considering the testimony already given by the witness. It is also assuming, in an unfair manner, that Norton is not to be believed on oath, while the witness states that he has no opinion on the subject.)

A. I do not see how I can answer that question but as I have already stated it; from the speech of people as being so conflicting I cannot form any definite opinion.

2176 10. Q. Have you an opinion as to whether you would believe a witness who stands perfectly fair in the community, or a witness in regard to whom the speech of people is conflicting in regard to truth and veracity?

A. That depends upon what they testified to.

11. Q. You have been prosecuting officer of this county, have you?

A. I have been district attorney.

Cross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

12. Q. Are you willing to give the names of one or more persons whom you have heard speak of Norton in terms derogatory to his character for truth?

A. The only person whose name I can now recall to mind is Judge Olin, of Washington, and the circumstance under which I heard him speak of Mr. Norton's reputation for truth and veracity was a conversation which I had with Judge Olin upon one occasion in regard to Mr. Olin's having been a witness on that subject at Washington City; and cannot now remember any other individuals, although I have heard it spoken of by others whose names I do not now remember; I think, but am not positive, that William E. Hagen was one of those parties; these things all happened some years ago.

13. Q. Norton was a witness in the trial of persons charged with complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln, was he not?

A. I do not know.

14. Q. Was it not during that trial that Judge Olin was examined on the matter referred to in your last answer but one?

A. I do not know; if I ever knew I have now forgotten.

15. Q. Do you remember that some time in 1863, in some case in which William E. Hagen was a party, he assailed and undertook to impeach the character of Norton for truth in this city?

A. I remember generally that an attempt was made to impeach
2177 Norton's veracity at the city of Troy, at or about that time, but have no knowledge as to who the parties were in the suit, or by whom it was undertaken, but remember that Hagen had some connection with it.

16. Q. Have you ever heard an opinion expressed in this community by any one as to the injustice or wrongfulness of that undertaking?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No; I do not know that I have, especially as regards that particular undertaking.

17. Q. Have you with reference to any other?

(Same objection.)

A. No; not as to any particular attempt to impeach Norton; only generally.

18. Q. And what was that?

(Same objection.)

A. No; I don't remember the particulars of anything that I heard, only the general statement.

19. Q And what was that general statement, if you remember?

(Same objection.)

A. I have heard the question of his reputation for trust and veracity spoken of in a general manner without entering into details; I have heard it in a general manner most positively asserted to be good, and in the same general manner most positively asserted to be bad; these assertions on each side have been made by people of equal credit and standing, and from this speech of people used as a basis to form an opinion from, I have never formed an opinion on the subject.

20. Q. Had you reason to believe at the time that those who spoke against Norton were unfriendly toward him?

A. It was so long ago that I do not now distinctly remember who those persons were that spoke against him other than Olin and Hagen
2178 above referred to; Hagen was or had been, I understood, in litigation with him, and I never had any reason to believe that Olin was unfriendly toward him, from any*any*thing that I know.

21. Q. Have you ever heard it said in Troy that the impeachment of Norton, undertaken some years ago, was a persecution of him, or in substance that?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes; I have heard so; but I am unable to state definitely whether it was an impeachment in this Hagen suit, or in some other matter.

22. Q. Have you ever known of any other attempted impeachment of Norton other than that of Hagen?

A. The only attempts at impeachment that I have heard of was a Washington matter, in which Judge Olin was sworn as a witness, and an attempt in the city of Troy, but whether Hagen was a party to that suit or not I do not know.

JOHN H. COLBY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 16th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Adjourned to July 17th, at 9 o'clock a. m.

WEDNESDAY, July 17th, 1878.

Present, pursuant to adjournment, same counsel as before.

RICHARD M. HERMANCE, a witness called on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?
2179 A. My name is Richard M. Hermance; my age is 61; residence is Half Moon, Saratoga County; my occupation is tending my garden in the summer, and selling my patents in the winter.

2. Q. How far from Troy is Half Moon?

A. Seven miles, so called.

3. Q. Have you been in business in Troy?

A. No; in no particular business; I lived here four years, being rather out of health; meanwhile getting up patents.

4. Q. What four years were those?

A. I have resided at Half Moon for eleven years past; lived here the four years previous to that.

5. Q. Are you pretty generally acquainted with the people of Troy?

A. I claim that I am pretty well acquainted.

6. Q. About how many patents have you taken out?

A. Well, what has been issued through the office, I think, is seven.

7. Q. Has your business been mainly the making of inventions?

A. No; I never made a particular study of inventions; I want to be understood as saying that in some of the patents that I have made it was merely applying some rolling thought or observation which I had to some invention; I have got up in the night and made memorandums to show my rolling thought, and then at some future time models and drawings.

8. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. I do know him.

9. Q. How long have you known him?

A. Over fifteen years.

10. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community as regards truth and veracity, whether it is good or bad?

A. I heard the man spoken of in almost the worst of terms; not here but elsewhere.

11. Q. Is his reputation here in Troy good or bad for truth and veracity?

2180 A. I should consider it bad, sir, from what I have heard.

12. Q. On the basis of that reputation, state whether you would believe him on oath.

A. On the basis of his reputation here, I would not believe him.

Cross examination by Mr. NORTON:

13. Q. When did you last come from Half Moon here?

A. This morning.

14. Q. Did you come on the railroad or by the canal?

A. I came on foot three miles and rode down from Waterford on the cars, not being in time for the stage, and your hour of meeting being so early.

15. Q. When were you first applied to to be a witness in this case?

A. Last evening, about eight o'clock.

16. Q. Who saw you about it, and what was said to you by him or her?

A. I was met by a gentleman and did not know his name; he saw I was hard of hearing, so we went into the store, as the wind was blowing under the poplar trees; he asked me if I knew Mr. Norton.

17. Q. Did he tell you who sent him there?

A. He told me that the party—I had no specs, so he read me the subpœna, and gave me a copy and said "This one is just like it"; he said it was an important patent case, and then we went inside—something about a stamp.

18. Q. Did you have any conversation with the person who served the subpœna previous to its service "outside"?

A. Well, he spoke and said that he had a subpœna to give me; well, we had a few words of conversation before we went in.

19. Q. Are you so deaf that on that occasion you put one or both hands up to your ear or ears to hear that individual?

2181 A. Well, I think I put up one hand; I generally do.

20. Q. Have you any doubt about that?

A. No; I don't think I have any.

21. Q. What did that stranger say to you before you "went in"?

A. He asked me if I was acquainted with Marcus P. Norton.

22. Q. What else was said besides that?

A. I told him that I was.

23. Q. Was that all that was said?

A. No, sir.

24. Q. State all that you said before you "went in."

A. He asked me what I knew of Marcus P. Norton and his reputation; well, I told him so far as myself, that he did some business for me, or attempted to do it, and didn't do it.

25. Q. Is that all that was said by you at that time?

A. I expressed myself when he asked me as to his reputation; I told him I considered it bad; and on that he said he had a subpœna for me; he had spoken, I think, of a subpœna.

26. Q. Did he write a subpœna in your presence, or a copy of one?

A. No, sir; he had it already.

27. Q. Will you let me see your copy of subpœna?

A. I will if the court orders me to.

28. Q. Won't you without an order from the court?

A. Well, by open word; by counsel or by somebody outside taking the evidence.

(Defendant's counsel consents.)

29. Q. After you "went in," what did you and this stranger do?

A. Well, he then took out his subpœna and gave it to me, and paid me my fee, and asked me what the distance was, and asked me
2182 about the conveyance; he asked me if I kept a horse; I told him no, that a stage came along about 9 o'clock.

30. Q. What remarks did you just make to the examining counsel while you were answering?

A. I say I made some rolling remark; I said you needn't put it down.

31. Q. What else did this stranger say to you beside asking you if you kept a horse, after you "went in"?

A. Well, I told him that I did not; that I could catch a chance, or walk down to Waterford and then take the cars there.

32. Q. Is that all he said to you?

A. That is about all he said to me—that he would like to have me get here at nine o'clock.

33. Q. Well, what did you promise him on that subject?

A. I promised to come if I wasn't sick; I had a colic turn two or three days ago.

34. Q. How long did that stranger remain with thee?

A. He disappeared very quickly after he paid me the money; probably it was fifteen minutes.

35. Q. You have stated everything that took place between you and this stranger, have you not?

A. Well, about in substance; there might have been a few more words expressed.

36. Q. Did he make any written memorandums while he was there?

A. I didn't see him write any.

37. Q. Did he tell you what was going on in Troy in reference to this impeachment business?

A. He told me when it was to be tried, here over Moore & Nim's store, and that it was an important patent case pertaining to a stamp.

38. Q. You concluded that you would answer his purposes for a witness, didn't you?

A. I concluded that when I was asked the questions about Mr. Marcus P. Norton's reputation I should answer it was bad.

39. Q. You are and have long been one of Norton's very particular friends, have you not?

2183 A. Well, until I became acquainted with his acts and a more general knowledge of his reputation.

40. Q. When did you find that out?

A. I found it out in transacting business, in part—transacting business for me.

41. Q. When, is the question.

A. Well, some nine or ten years ago—about the time of the reissue of the Spaulding patent, and about the time Norton made application for me for the patent for a reservoir which Joseph B. Wilkinson now owns; the exact time doesn't just occur to my mind.

42. Q. Now state about the reservoir application of which you speak, and all you know of your own knowledge about it.

A. I took a model of the reservoir patent to Mr. Norton, and he viewed it, and he said there were a number of patentable features about it; I made application to him to take out the patent for it, Alvah Travor, a counsellor here, furnishing the means for an interest in the patent; this application, when applied to Mr. Norton, he was to take it out at once; that he was going to Washington in a few days, and would take the case for me. He left my case here and he went to Washington, and when I came back he said Bussey & McLeod had a model there just like it. I paid him this twenty dollars before he went. He took my case to the Patent Office afterward, and then dropped the case, put the notice in the model, and then, I think, made an amendment in the case, and then cancelled the amendment, put a notice in the model—there was a notice found in the model; I don't know whether he put it in or not; then the Commissioner notified me that Norton had withdrawn from the case; he withdrew and left me without a counsel.

43. Q. Is that all?

A. There is a little more in regard to his and my business together which will bring in the issue of another patent, and also this one.

44. Q. Were Bussey, McLeod & Company clients of Norton at that time?

2184 A. They were very shortly after, about or within this time. I was informed that McLeod went to Washington the next night after I learned that my patent was rejected, for I showed them the notice of rejection. I showed McLeod. I don't know as I showed Bussey. I said, "I suppose this is betwixt you and me on this reservoir." Then I heard that Norton was their counsel.

45. Q. Who told you all that?

A. I think Mr. McLeod told me that Norton was doing business for them.

46. Q. Previous to the time of your application for the patent, had you not given a license to Bussey, McLeod & Company to use those improvements; and after the application was made for the patent, did you not endeavor to cancel that license in a most disreputable and dishonorable manner?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

47. Q. Do you say that you didn't give them a license?

A. I didn't say that I never gave them a paper under which they claimed a license; but they never paid me a cent for it. They agreed to pay me $300, but didn't pay it.

48. Q. Why didn't they pay it?

A. I could not tell you. They were very anxious to get it.

49. Q. You afterwards assigned that reservoir improvement to other parties, didn't you not?

A. I sold Mr. Wilkinson this patent, he agreeing to take the case as it stood in the office rejected, for one-half of the patent, Mr. Traver releasing his interest by refunding his money, which I paid out of the first money I received, which was $20 for fees, into the hands of Marcus P. Norton, he, Wilkinson, agreeing to take all the interest in the patent, assigning me back one half, and agreed to pay all expenses of issuing patent and reissues.

2185 50. Q. At the same time you had made the exclusive license to Bussey, McLeod & Company for $300, to be paid on the issuing of your patent, had you not also made and delivered substantially the same license to Potter, Paris & Company?

(Objected to as assuming facts.)

A. I did not make any exclusive license to either party—not of the whole.

51. Q. Did you make one to Potter, Paris & Company similar to the one made to Bussey, McLeod & Company?

A. They didn't read alike as they were written, and they haven't given me a dollar—either one of them. Mr. Norton reissued the Spaulding patent through that firm of Cowen & Norton; and what I saw written on one of the loose sheets of what had been put together of my patent before folding up and being coupled together, I saw what was set forth in my application when read, and I looked at it myself; and about this time this Spaulding patent was being reissued, and I saw reissued in the Spaulding patent the same words and language as those set forth in my patent, which I had seen in their office; and Marcus P. Norton was going to kick me out of his office for ever speaking of it.

52. Q. Did you ever know a firm in this city by the name of Cowen & Norton?

A. Norton & Cowen.

53. Q. Why didn't Norton kick you out of his office when he proposed to do so; he could have done so easily enough, could he not?

A. I told him I came there on business, and I wanted to know what had been done.

54. Q. You found out, didn't you?

A. No, sir; I didn't—nothing more than insults.

55. Q. You got very mad on that occasion, didn't you?

A. I told him I wasn't afraid of his putting me out; I could throw him out of that window in two minutes.

2186 56. Q. Did you throw Norton out of that window in two minutes at that or any other time?

A. I don't propose to ever clinch with a man unless a man clinches with me.

57. Q. How much was your avoirdupois weight at that time.

A. It is a scale and a half deep, and my weight is a hundred and seventy eight pounds, and it plays quick when I am interfered with.

58. Q. Norton ordered you out of his office on that occasion, didn't he?

A. He told me, in his polite way, that he "would kick my damned arse out of the office."

59. Q. How long after that did you leave that office?

A. Very shortly; I wasn't in any particular driving hurry.

60. Q. Were you ever in that office a ter that?

A. I don't particularly recollect that I was ever there while Mr. Norton was there. This was after Mr. Norton came back from Washington the first or second time.

61. Q. The last question is here repeated. You are requested to give an answer either yes or no, or to give your present best recollections about it.

A. I think I was there and spoke with his draughtsman, and also with Mr. Cowen, but I don't recollect having seen Mr. Norton there.

62. Q. Since Norton threatened to kick you down stairs, you have never had anything but kind feelings toward him, and your conduct toward him and about him has been entirely peaceful and as gentle as that of a lamb, has it not?

A. Well, there are lambs that buck, but at the same time I thought I was imposed upon.

63. Q. Have you ever, since that time, changed your mind on that subject?

A. No, sir; I thought when I had counsel he should use me gentlemanly.

64. Q. How much money did you ever pay into Norton's office, or into the office of Norton & Cowen, for professional services performed for you?

2187 A. I paid Norton this $20. I asked him how much money he wanted. He said $20 was all he wanted then. I told him he could have his money any time. I took Travor's check on some bank here, and handed it to Mr. Norton personally. I think it was a check.

65. Q. What was that $20 for?

A. It was what he asked for his counsel or application. I don't know what he done with it. I don't know whether he applied it then or not. I never got any receipt to show where the $20 went. The supposition is that he took the fee of $15; it was $15 in those days.

66. Q. How much money was paid into the Patent Office as fees on your application, about which you speak?

A. Well, I say I do not know; the supposition is that the fee of $15 was paid.

67. Q. Do you owe Norton anything for professional services rendered by him, or Norton & Cowen?

A. I took this case to him, as Mr. Travor was to pay the expenses; he never called on me as claiming any, as I know of.

68. Q. Did he ever call on Travor for any pay for professional services?

A. Never that I heard of. I saw him into Travor's office once since that time.

69. Q. Since when?

A. Well, the time that he left me as counsel in Washington. I saw him about six or nine months after. I dropped in and saw you then.

70. Q. Did you say anything to Norton on that occasion?

A. I talked a few words with him.

71. Q. You received a written notice from the Commissioner of Patents that Norton, or Norton & Cowen, had abandoned your case, and declined further to act for you, did you not?

A. They had appended an amendment to the patent, and then 2188 cancelled the amendment, and then dropped the case, and had withdrawn from the case, leaving me without counsel.

72. Q. At the same time the Commissioner notified you to employ other counsel, didn't he?

A. No, sir; he did not.

73. Q. Did you employ any other counsel in that case?

A. I did not.

74. Q. Did anybody for you ever employ any other counsel in that case?

A. Not direct for me, without an interest for themselves.

75. Q. How large a farm do you own at Half Moon?

A. Well, sir; I am not the real owner of any; I am on a place owned by my son.

76. Q. Do you own any real estate of any kind?

A. No, sir; I have a life estate in that farm for myself, as a home.

77. Q. How large a farm is that and what is it worth?

A. It is merely a village lot, with a fair sized garden, and I hire some beside it which makes me a good sized garden.

78. Q. Is there half an acre in it?

A. Yes, sir; and more, too, with what I have, but not in what my son owns.

79. Q. Have you any government, railway, state, municipal, or other bonds of money value?

A. No, sir.

80. Q. To come to the exact point, how much money are you worth, or how much property have you of all descriptions in your own name or right?

A. I have none.

81. Q. In what society, socially or otherwise, have you ever had a part in the city of Troy?

A. There is one of my associates in the other room, Irving Browne; Martin I. Townsend, and I said the firm of Townsend & Browne, I respect them; Thomas Goldsmith seems to be a friend of mine; I 2189 call in there often; J. M. Warren & Co., I have dealt with them for thousands of dollars; Captain Virgil always appeared to be a great friend of mine; the Allendorphs.

82. Q. What have been your relations with those persons you have named in your last answer socially.

A. Well, I have had small dealings with them; they always seemed to take an interest in what I had; I have sold 2,000 stove-pipe dampers in this city.

83. Q. Has it not generally been understood among business men in this city, and especially among the stove men, that you are a lunatic and ought, years ago, to have been in the lunatic asylum?

(Objected to as improper.)

A. He speaks of the stove men—that I am a lunatic; they have asked me, "Hermance, how is it that you are so far-seeing in the invention of stoves, and you brought up a farmer?"

84. Q. What reply did you make?

A. I replied that they were short sighted, some of them, and didn't see the points.

85. Q. You consider yourself a great man, do you not, on the subject of inventions?

A. Not very great, and full grown.

86. Q. Full grown in what?

A. Well, I meant stature when I spoke, that I might converse with men.

87. Q. What do you mean by "stature" in your last answer?

A. My height, depth, and growth.

88. Q. What has become of your stove patent inventions?

A. Well, my first patent of 1858, called the Battle Ground stove and side diving flue, on the side which no other had—those patterns were brought here to Troy, and burned at O'Brien's shop; about $1,600 loss; I had no insurance upon it; the other inventions are owned by Mr. Wilkinson and Lawyer Travor; Mr. Wilkinson owns ¾, Mr. Lawyer Travor

$\frac{1}{8}$, and Mr. Marsh $\frac{1}{8}$, of the one original patent which Mr. Nor-
2190 ton had when he made application; three patents were afterwards made and obtained.

80. Q. Have your patents, any of them, been in the courts; and if so, have they ever been declared good and valid?

A. I have heard that they have; I haven't been present.

90. Q. In what suit was it?

A. In this Wilkinson suit.

91. Q. Who has Wilkinson ever had a suit against on your patent?

A. Well, it is hearsay—with Bussey & McLeod.

92. Q. How many times since Norton threatened to "kick your damned ass out of the office" have you spoken of him to anybody in Troy in terms defamatory, derogatory and injurious to his character for truth?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Well, I have heard Mr. Norton's name brought in many times; I don't now remember; I think Travor has spoken of him, that he was not to be trusted.

93. Q. Now, please answer my last question, if you understand it; if you don't understand it, say so?

A. I cannot now say.

94. Q. Have you any photographs of yourself?

A. I have one.

95. Q. When was that taken?

A. When I was a farmer in the town of Malta; I had one on that first invention of mine; my stove was taken and I was taken with it.

96. Q. Is that the only one you ever had taken?

A. I think those are the only times I have had photographs taken; I had a family group once.

97. Q. Where are those photographs now?

A. One is in the possession of my sister—the one I had taken in front of the hotel.

98. Q. Where is the other one?

A. I think it is broken or smashed up.

2191 99. Q. Will you, to-day, go and be photographed, and furnish a copy of it for the edification, instruction and benefit of the court, at the time this deposition shall be considered by it?

(Objected to, unless complainant's counsel will guarantee the expense by offering a certified check.)

A. I do not consider my beauty as great enough that I would like to have it taken; I further consider it foolish to have money wasted by running to get my photograph taken; else I might have had it many times taken, as my children have wanted it.

100. Q. I am very desirous that the court should see you by a photograph just as you are and just as you appear on this occasion, excluding, of course, your restive manner, but including that part so elegantly designated by you in answer to a question; so that the court may be enabled to understand your business here, and your examination-in-chief; for that purpose, do you decline to furnish such photograph?

(Objected to for its unwarranted innuendoes, and as being scandalous and frivolous.)

A. If I am compelled to answer that, I will answer it; otherwise, I consider it out of place.

101. Q. Do you refuse to comply with the request of the last question?

A. Not if the court requests me to answer it.

102. Q. Do you decline to answer the question number 100?

A. I don't object to the photograph.

103. Q. When will you furnish the photograph?

A. They might be all employed, and it might be difficult for me to get one without an application in writing, and somebody to go and recommend me.

R. M. HERMANCE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of July, 1878.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

2191*a* Present, pursuant to adjournment, at 2.30 p. m.

HENRY G. GILES, a witness called on the part of the defendant, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. CLARKE:

1. Q. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. My name is Henry G. Giles; residence, Troy; age, 63; occupation, stove manufacturer.

2. Q. How long have you been in business in Troy?

A. Since the spring of 1863 or '4, I think; it was in May, '63, I think.

3. Q. Do you know Marcus P. Norton?

A. Yes, sir.

4. Q. How long have you known him?

A. About eighteen years, I should think.

5. Q. State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community in respect to truth and veracity, whether it is good or bad.

A. Bad, sorry to say.

6. Q. On the basis of that reputation, state whether you would believe him on oath?

A. Well, I could not believe him in a case where he was interested.

Cross examination by Mr. NORTON:

7. Q. Do you know James Morrison, jr., of this city?

A. Yes, sir.

8. Q. Did you ever have any trouble with him in any way?

A. Oh, I had some difficulty with him.

9. Q. Did you sue him in the State courts?

A. Yes; I sued him.

10. Q. How many suits did you have against him at one time?

A. Two.

11. Q. What were those suits about?

2191*b* A. I think one was for damage on non-fulfilment of contract and one for royalties on a patent.

12. Q. Who was Mr. Morrison's attorney or attorneys in that case?

A. I don't remember; William A. Beach—I do remember.

13. Q. Who was William A. Beach?

A. A man that used to be a prominent lawyer here.

14. Q. What was the firm name?

A. I couldn't tell you.

15. Q. Did you ever hear of the firm of Beach & Smith?

A. I might have heard, but I don't remember.

16. Q. Who were your attorneys in those suits?

A. Millard & King were my principal attorneys.

17. Q. In what year did you commence those suits?

A I couldn't tell you.

18. Q. Give your best recollections about it.

A. 1863 or 1864, somewhere.

19. Q. When were those suits brought to trial?

A. That I don't remember.

20. Q. Give your best recollections as to time.

A. I couldn't give the years.

21. Q. Mr. Morrison, after having obtained a license from you to manufacture under your base-burner patent, became satisfed that your patent was invalid and void, refused to carry out the contract or further to pay you royalties under the license, made that defense, did he not?

A. I couldn't say exactly, for I have no recollection of ever having seen his defense.

22. Q. Who were examined in that case as witnesses by Mr. Beach?

A. Upon what is in my mind, I answer that Littlefield was one, as I remember.

23. Q. Was not Marcus P. Norton examined as a witness against you in that case?

A. Not to my recollection.

2192 24. Q. Will you swear that he was not?

A. I will not.

25. Q. Has Norton ever been engaged in any patent business against you?

A. No, sir; not that I recollect or know of now.

26. Q. Will you swear to that?

A. I do.

27. Q. And you do swear that Norton was never engaged in any patent business against you?

A. Not that I think of.

28. My question is not as to what you think, but do you now and here swear, on your oath, that Norton was never engaged in any patent business or any other business in his profession against you?

A. Not to my recollection.

30. Q. Did I ask you anything about your recollections about anything in my last question?

A. I don't think that you did; please read the last question.

31. Q. Why do you want the last question read?

A. Because I want to see if the word "recollect" was there.

32. Q. Your understanding of that question is as intelligent as any question put to you on the direct examination, is it?

A. In regard to recollection, do you mean?

33. Q. Did you understand the last question when you answered it?

A. I can't say; just begin back and I can tell.

34. Q. On your direct examination this question was put you: "Do you know Marcus P. Norton?" Was that question ever put to you before to-day?

A. Yes, sir.

35. Q. When, and by whom, and on what occasion?

A. I couldn't say when, but it was put by Mr. Smith; I think it was in the case of Hagan against Groom and others.

36. Q. Who is Smith that you mentioned in your last answer?

A. A lawyer in this city.

37. Q. Levi Smith, of the firm of Beach & Smith?

2193 A. He is of the firm of Smith, Fursman & Cowen.

38. Q. On your direct examination this question was put to you: "State, if you know, what his reputation is in this community in respect to truth and veracity, whether it is good or bad." Was that question ever put to you before to day, or one in substance the same?

A. Yes, sir; I think it was.

39. Q. When, by whom, and on what occason was it?

A. By the same party and on the same occasion as the former answer.

40. Q. What answer did you then make to it?

A. I don't remember, but I presume the same as my answer to that question now.

41. Q. How many years ago was that?

A. I couldn't tell.

42. Q. Where was the case pending?

A. Well, I think before the Commissioner of Patents, in Washington.

43. Q. You are one of the few standing witnesses always ready to testify against Norton for truth and veracity, are you not?

A. I think I am sitting; I don't stand for anybody.

44. Q. Did you refuse to testify against Norton when called upon for this business?

A. Yes, sir.

45. Q. When?

A. Well, it was yesterday or day before.

46. Q. Whom did you refuse?

A. Mr. Robinson.

47. Q. How many times had Mr. Robinson been to see you about this matter of impeachment?

A. But once, before he summoned me.

48. Q. And you refused him?

A. Well, yes; I told him I did not want to come; I would come by authority, but not by request.

49. Q. Having failed in the enterprise in which you were engaged some years ago, you hesitated some about undertaking it again, didn't you?

(Objected to as assuming a failure.)

2191 A. I want to know what enterprise.

50. Q. Your enterprise of lending yourself as an impeaching witness on that occasion.

A. I was not engaged in any such enterprise; never was.

51. Q. You swear to that, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

52. Q. Were you examined as a witness in that case?

A. I was, by authority; I was subpœnaed; I did it then, as I do now, by compulsion.

53. Q. Have you ever spoken to anybody about Norton, and in terms defamatory or derogatory to his character for truth?

A. I don't know that I have. I have heard persons speak of him and of his character for truth, and of some of his transactions, but I have no recollection of defaming him, as the question implies.

54. Q. Who have you ever heard speak of Norton in terms defamatory or derogatory to his character for truth?

A. I think of James E. Freiot as one, but the names of others I don't recollect, although I have heard from others; that was a good many years ago, and I don't recollect just what he (Freiot) said.

55. Q. Do you remember what the others said?

A. I don't recollect their exact language, sir.

56. Q. How long ago was that that you heard said, whatever it may have been?

A. I can't tell that.

57. Q. Was it about the time of the Hagan and Groom, Shavor and Potter case, the Patent Office case of which you speak?

A. It might be, and I think since.

58. Q. Now give the name or names of every person whom you ever heard say anything against Norton in terms derogatory to his character for truth.

A. My impressions are not all from what I have heard men say, but I have read reports from the Patent Office, and seen articles in print;
2195 and while I have heard many speak, I possibly cannot now name one; not expecting to be called on such an occasion as this kind, I never took the pains to charge my mind with their names.

59. Q. You cannot give the name of a single person?

A. None further than I have at this time.

60. Q. Where did you get the report you speak of as printed by the Patent Office?

A. Well, I forget whether it was by mail, or by the hand of some party.

61. Q. If by mail, who did it come from?

A. I don't remember.

62. Q. Was it anonymously communicated to you?

A. I don't remember.

63. Q. Your present best recollections about it?

A. I don't remember; it rather seems to me that some person handed it to me.

64. Q. What person?

A. Couldn't tell you.

65. Q. Somebody in Troy, was it?

A. I could not tell you.

66. Q. Let us have your present best recollections of it.

A. It seems as though somebody handed it to me, but I cannot tell any further.

67. Q. Where were you when it was handed to you?

A. I do not remember.

68. Q. Where you on earth or up in the moon?

A. I did not take any observations.

69. Q. You cannot tell where you were—whether on earth or elsewhere?

A. As I said before, I did not take any observations.

70. Q. Were you in the city of Troy?

A. I could not tell you.

71. Q. Give your best recollections of it.

A. I cannot tell; I positively cannot tell whether it was in Washington or Troy, or somewhere else.

72. Q. Or anywhere?

2196 A. Yes, I was somewhere.

73. Q. Where?

A. Somewhere.

74. Q. How do you know you were "somewhere"?

A. Because I received a Commissioner's report.

75. Q. Now, where was this, Mr. Giles?

A. Where, I couldn't tell.

76 Q. What did you do with that printed report?

A. I read it.

77. Q. After reading it, what did you next do with it?

A. I laid it away.

78. Q. Did you show it to anybody?

A. I don't remember.

79. Q. Will you swear that you did not show it to anybody?

A. No, sir.

80. Q. Where is that printed report?
A. I can't tell exactly.
81. Q. Why can't you tell?
A. Because I don't know.
82. Q. When did you last see it?
A. I don't remember.
83. Q. Did you ever speak to anybody about it?
A. I do not remember of any one.
84. Q. Had you any knowledge of your own that the statements contained in that defamatory printed report were true in point of fact?
A. No, sir.
85. Q. Did you believe anything contained in it?
A. Yes, sir.
86. Q. On what basis did you found that belief?
A. The statement of the case.
87. Q. You are quite apt to believe things of the truth of which you know nothing, are you?
A. When they come from good authority.
88. Q. From what good authority did that defamatory, derogatory, and lying printed statement come?
A. From the Patent Office.
89. Q. You received it from the Patent Office, did you?
2197 A. I am not clear as to that, but think that it was handed to me by some person somewhere.
90. Q. You are as clear on that subject as on any subject that you have testified about to-day, are you?
A. I am as clear that I didn't know who handed it to me.
91. Q. That is not my question; the examiner will read the question to you.
A. I am as clear on that as I am on any other question that I have answered to to-day; I mean to say that I am just as clear that I don't know who handed me that paper as to my answer to any other question put me this afternoon.
92. Q. You have spoken about some newspaper reports which you read about Norton; in what newspapers did you read such reports?
A. I couldn't tell you; I read a good many papers, and it would be pretty hard to tell you out of which.
93. Q. In how many newspapers did you read such report; more than one?
A. I should think I did.
94. Q. Well, how many?
A. I can't tell you.
95. Q. Name one or more of those papers.
A. I cannot now do so.
96. Q. How long ago was it?
A. I could not tell you; I can't tell.
97. Q. W'ere did you get those newspapers?
A. I can't tell that; I buy single papers sometimes; travelling I buy papers; I read papers in the reading rooms, so I can't tell; I take quite a number regularly.
98. Q. What did you read in the newspapers concerning Norton?
A. I can't state exactly what I have read.
99. Q. Did any of those newspapers state that Norton was a liar, and could not be believed under oath?
A. I don't know that they did in so many words.
2198 100. Q. Did the printed paper from the Patent Office, which you say you read, state that Norton was a liar and could not and ought not to be believed under oath?

A. It did not state so in so many words, but I thought the inference was pretty fair.

101. Q. What do you mean by "inference"?

A. The conclusion to be drawn from a statement.

102. Q. Drawn by whom?

A. By the reader.

103. Q. You have stated that as to the truth of that paper, or of the contents contained in it, you had no knowledge of your own, have you not?

A. I think I stated so; but I relied upon the authority of the statement.

104. Q. Do you know whether that paper was sent out for the purposes of slander, and to injure Norton, and to prejudice such men as you against him?

A. I do not; but I don't think it was so.

105. Q. What reason have you for making your last remark in your last answer, "I don't think it was so?"

A. Simply that this paper was put into my hands for information as a patent right man—one engaged in that business more or less.

106. Q. Do you know whether that paper was sent out for that purpose or not?

A. I do not.

107. Q. Do you know of your own knowledge that that paper was sent to you to give you information as a "patent-right man more or less?"

A. I do not; but supposed so.

108. Q. What reason have you to suppose so?

A. I don't know that I have any; but I frequently receive papers from parties, and they are generally for information.

109. Q. Do you know from whom you receive such papers?

A. Not always.

2199 110. Q. Did you ever state to anybody that Norton was a liar, and that you would not and could not believe him on oath?

A. I have no recollection of stating anything further than I have stated this afternoon.

111. Q. The examiner will read to you my last question which I here repeat, and then you are requested to answer that question, either yes or no.

A. Well, I will say no, with the explanation that in conversation with parties I might have said that I would not believe him under oath, if he is interested in any way.

112. Q. With whom did you have any such conversation?

A. I couldn't tell you.

113. Q. You cannot name the first person, can you?

A. No, sir.

114. Q. Did you ever hear anybody say that Norton was a liar—a notorious public liar?

A. I never heard any one use those exact words.

115. Q. Did you ever hear any one say that Norton was a liar, and that nobody could believe him on oath?

A. I could not say that I ever heard any one use words exactly in that language, but words to that import.

116. Q. State the words that you say you heard.

A. It is a difficult matter. I don't know that I can.

117. Q. Did you ever hear any one say anything against Norton as a citizen or as a moral man in this community?

A. Well, that is a difficult question to answer. I have heard men say that he was a dead beat, in substance.

118. Q. Who did you hear say that Norton was a "dead beat?"

A. I don't know that I heard any one say "dead beat;" but that, in substance, he defrauded—that he took things without authority and without a right to take. From all that I heard I should say that he was a bad citizen.

2200 119. Q. Whoever told you that Norton defrauded anybody?

A. Well, I can't tell you that.

120. Q. Of your own knowledge, do you know that Norton ever defrauded anybody?

A. No; but I do know of debts that he never paid. Whether that would be called fraud is a question in my mind.

121. Q. What debts do you know of your own knowledge that Norton owes to anybody and never paid?

A. One to me.

122. Q. Any other?

A. Of my own knowledge, no, sir.

123. Q. How much does Norton owe you?

A. I haven't figured it up in ten years. It was about $74 originally.

124. Q. What was it for?

A. My recollection is that it was for stoves.

125. Q. For what kind of stoves?

A. Empire Gas Burner.

126. Q. Did you ever ask Norton for the pay of the stoves?

A. Yes, sir.

127. Q. When?

A. I could not tell you that.

128. Q. When you asked him, what did he reply?

A. Some kind of put-off; but I don't remember what.

129. Q. You put an Empire Gas Burner up in his office once which blew up, came near destroying his office, and you were required to remove that stove, were you not?

A. No, sir; not required to.

130. Q. You swear that that stove did not blow up, do you?

A. No, sir; I don't swear.

131. Q. You swear that that stove was not removed in consequence of its blowing up through the sudden ignition of gas in it, do you?

A. I swear that I don't know. But I swear if it did blow up, it was not the fault of the stove.

2201 132. Q. Now, how many stoves did you make after that?

A. Oh, I can't tell. We made them for a number of years after that.

133. Q. What town and county did you come from when you came to Troy?

A. The county of Monroe, the city of Rochester.

134. Q. Were you ever sued out there by anybody?

A. No, sir.

135. Q. Any judgments entered up out there against you?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

136. Q. Were you ever sued by anybody or anywhere before you came to Troy?

A. Yes, sir.

137. Q. Where?

A. In Rome, Oneida County. I was the deputy sheriff's bail and got sued on it.

138. Q. Any judgments entered up against you there?

A. A. There was a judgment entered up on that.

139. Q. Did you ever pay it?

A. I paid it in part; I compromised it—settled it.

140. Q. How much of that judgment did you pay?

A. I don't remember.

141. Q. Before you came to Troy to reside, or after, were there any judgments entered against you anywhere in the State of New York?

A. There was one against Giles & Seymour in which I was involved.

142. Q. Any others?

A. Not to my recollection.

143. Q. Do you swear that there were no other judgment or judgments entered against you in the State of New York?

A. That is all I remember.

144. Q. Have you any judgments against you now unsatisfied?

A. No, sir.

2202 145. Q. How many debts of your contracting have you compromised in the last 25 years?

A. Well, I have no recollection of but two, and those afterwards I paid, with the interest; one was in Troy and one was in New York, and I never paid anything that did me so much good to my own satisfaction.

146. Q. If Norton should do as you swear you had done in your last answer you would think him an honest man, a good citizen, a good moral man, and who ought to be believed under oath under any and all circumstances, would you not?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I think it would be a good step toward a good citizen and an honest man; further I shouldn't want to answer, for I can't.

147. Q. Do you think that you ought to be believed under oath at all times and under all circumstances?

A. That I don't want to answer; it is for other men to say.

148. Q. Why don't you want to answer?

A. I don't want to swear as to my own virtues; I don't think it is a proper question; I am not on the stand to prove my virtues.

149. Q. What are you on the stand for?

A. To testify as to the matter in difference between Campbell and James.

150. Q. That is all, is it?

A. That is all that I know of.

151. Q. Who ever told you that Norton took things that did not belong to him?

A. I don't know; I think I read it.

152. Q. Now, where did you read it?

A. I don't remember.

153. Q. Did you read it anywhere?

A. I can't say; it is my impression that I did.

154. Q. What do you mean by impressions?

A. Well that I read it rather than heard it.

2203 155. Q. And that is all that you know about it, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Adjourned, by consent of counsel, until Thursday week, July 25th, at 10 o'clock, a. m.

TROY, June 25th.

Adjourned, by consent of counsel, until Monday, July 29th, 2 p. m.

MONDAY, July 29th—2 p. m.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel as before.

Cross-examination of Mr. GILES resumed:

156. Q. Did you ever reside in Oneida County in this State?

A. Yes, sir.

157. Q. Did you know a person by the name of Timothy Seymour while residing there?

A. Yes, sir.

158. Q. Did you know a person by the name of Charles W. White, Woodman Kimball, Richard G. Savery, Henry T. Weller, Francis Warriner, and Jeremiah B. Angell, while residing there?

A. All but Weller; I don't remember him.

159. Q. Were you ever sued by Daniel Cady, president of the Oneida Central Bank?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I don't remember.

160. Q. Give your present best recollections about it?

A. I don't recollect about it.

161. Q. Was there not, on the 31st day of October, 1856, a judg-
2204 ment entered up against you in the supreme court of this State in favor of the Oneida Central Bank for $349.39?

(Same objection.)

A. I can't say as to the amount, but there was such a judgment entered up against the firm of Seymour & Giles, which Mr. Seymour was to pay; the judgment was paid by me before entering up, in order to make Mr. Seymour pay his share.

162. Q. Who did you pay that judgment to before it was entered up?

A. I paid it to the bank; I don't know but what I had better qualify that answer by saying that I am not clear whether I paid it to the bank or to Mr. Ethridge, who, by an understanding with me, took an assignment of the judgment in order to collect from Mr. Seymour his proportion, he being my brother-in-law.

163. Q. Now, what did Mr. Ethridge pay you for an assignment of that judgment?

A. I don't remember.

164. Q. Give your best recollection as to the amount paid by your brother-in-law for an assignment of that judgment.

A. I have no recollection.

165. Q. Did he pay you or anybody else a single dollar for it?

(Same objection.)

A. I have no recollection.

166. Q. Now, who made an assignment of that judgment to your brother-in-law?

A. I don't remember.

167. Q. Do you know that there was an assignment made of that judgment to your brother-in-law?

A. I do.

168. Q. How do you know that, while you can't remember so as to answer a single question put to you in reference to that assignment, as the record last above shows?

2205 A. I know that what I stated was purposed, understood and accomplished; exactly who made the papers and what was passed between us I have no recollection.

169. Q. Now, state what was understood, state what was purposed, state what was accomplished, as stated in your last answer, and by whom it was understood, and by whom accomplished, and then state further whether it is not true, in point of fact, that you and your brother-in law entered into a conspiracy to defraud Timothy Seymour out of the amount of that judgment?

(Same objection.)

A. To the latter part of it I say emphatically, no, sir; as I stated before, the purpose was for him to hold the judgment until Mr. Seymour could pay his proportion of it; he held it until there seemed to be no prospect of ever getting anything from it, and until I wished, on account of my credit, to have my record clear; he gave me a discharge.

170. Q. When did your brother-in-law discharge you from that judgment?

A. I don't remember; a good many years ago.

171. Q. How many years ago?

A. I can't tell.

172. Q. Was it since the 23d day of December, 1862?

A. I should think it was somewhere after that; I can't tell precisely.

173. Q. You and your brother-in-law didn't succeed in getting anything from Seymour on that judgment, did you?

A. I didn't know that he got anything; I know that I didn't.

174. Q. You say you paid the judgment to the bank before it was entered up, and then procured the bank to make an assignment of it to your brother-in-law, with the understanding that your brother-in-law was to make Timothy Seymour a defendant with you in that 2206 action; pay back to your brother-in-law the money you had paid the bank, in order to procure for your brother-in-law an assignment of that judgment by the bank to him; is that it?

A. I said I was not sure whether I paid it to Ethridge or the bank.

175. Q. Was Ethridge a plaintiff in that action?

A. No, sir.

176. Q. Now, won't you please explain to the court precisely how you could pay a judgment to a man who was not a plaintiff in an action against you, and take an assignment from him of that judgment?

(Same objection.)

A. I didn't take any assignment.

177. Q. Who did?

A. My brother-in-law.

178. Q. Who did he get it from?

A. I don't remember.

179. Q. You don't know?

A. I don't remember.

180. Q. Why don't you remember?

A. Because my memory does not serve me as to that.

181. Q. Does your memory ever fail to serve you, and if it does, state on what occasions?

A. My memory does fail me sometimes, but as to occasions I can't say.

182. Q. It never fails you amid scenes of scandal, slander, vituperation, or when you take the witness stand to attempt to swear away the reputation of a fellow being, does it?

A. It does fail me sometimes, I presume, in such cases, but in this case I am not conscious of swearing away the reputation of Mr. Norton.

183. Q. Returning to the judgment of $349.39, I ask you who furnished your brother-in-law the money to purchase an assignment of that judgment to him?

A. I can't state.

184. Q. Did you furnish him that money?

2207 A. I can't state.

185. Q. Will you swear that you did not furnish it to him for that purpose?

A. I can't.

186. Q. Where is Timothy Seymour now, if you know?

A. I don't know.

187. Q. After your brother-in-law had for several years endeavored to compel Mr. Seymour to pay that judgment, and failing to get it from him, he discharged you from it, did he not?

A. He discharged me from it. I do not know that he ever endeavored to compel him. I don't think that he ever attempted collection of it.

188. Q. For what purpose did you procure an assignment of that judgment by the bank to your brother-in-law?

A. To keep it in life until Mr. Seymour was able to pay his proportion.

189. Q. Had the bank retained that judgment instead of selling it ts your brother-in law, would it have made any difference about Seymour'o paying it; could he not have paid it to the bank quite as well as to your brother-in-law, if it was fair that he should pay it to anybody?

A. I suppose he could.

190. Q. That judgment was entered upon a note made by you, endorsed by Seymour, and discounted by that bank, was it not?

A. No, sir; Mr. Seymour never endorsed for me.

191. Q. I did not ask you that, but I desire an answer to my last question, which the examiner will now read to you.

A. I answer; no such note was ever made.

192. Q. Now I ask you upon what did that bank sue you, out of which grew the judgment of $349.39?

(Same objection.)

A. A note made by the firm of Seymour & Giles.

193. Q. And endorsed by whom?

2208 A. That I can't tell you; I don't remember.

194. Q. Now did not your name stand first in the firm referred to by you?

(Same objection.)

A. It did not.

195. Q. Were not the defendants in that suit Henry G. Giles and Timothy Seymour?

A. Those are the names; whether they were used in that order I can't say.

196. Q. Were you ever afterwards sued by that bank?

(Same objection.)

A. Not to my knowledge; no recollection.

197. Q. Did not that bank on the 16th day of June, 1857, enter a judgment for $83.95, in a suit against you, David T. Turpenny, Francis W. Warriner, and Jeremiah B. Angell?

(Same objection.)

A. I don't recollect that they ever did.

198. Q. If it did, have you ever paid that judgment?

(Same objection.)

A. If it did, I don't think I ever did; I left Rome about that time, and have no recollection of any service being made upon me of that kind. It is rather an indefinite recollection that we had a note of Turpenny's, and I am not clear that we didn't get the bank to sue it for the purpose of getting a judgment against him, but the management of it in my absence was with Warriner and Angell.

199. Q. Who held the note against Turpenny?

A. Warriner, Giles & Angell; I don't remember how the arrangement of names was; the firm of Warriner, Giles & Angell was dissolved some time prior, and they settled the debts—that is Warriner & Angell.

2209 200. Q. You obtained the bank to sue your firm so as to get a judgment against Turpenny, did you not?

A. I can't say as to that; the matter was in the hands of these two men—Warriner & Angell; I don't know how they managed that.

201. Q. How many judgments have been entered up by John R. Jones, former sheriff of Oneida County, against you?

(Same objection.)

A. I guess only one; that is all I recollect of; I don't see how he could enter any more.

202. Q. Was there not one on May 15, 1857, for $768.16, and another on the 16th May, 1857, for $1,455.40 against you, and in favor of John R. Jones, a former sheriff of Oneida County?

(Same objection.)

A. Not to my knowledge; I don't believe there was.

203. Q. Should it appear that there were such judgments, what answer have you to make about it?

(Same objection.)

A. Simply that I don't know about that; I recollect that we were sued as bondsmen on our bond, and had a general hearing; I don't remember who before; John J. Crocker, I guess; in that matter there might have been charged up these several items mentioned, but have no recollection of any separate judgments, which the sheriff, Jones, alleged to have paid; I don't know anything about these separate items; there might have been separate items charged up, which his deputy, for whom I was bondsman, may have collected and not paid over to the sheriff.

204. Q. You state on your direct examination substantially that 2210 you are in the foundry business in this city; how much capital have you invested in that business?

(Same objection.)

A. I decline to answer.

205. Q. How much capital have you at this time invested in any kind of business in this city?

(Same objection.)

A. I decline to answer.

206. Q. Have you any?

A. I decline to answer.

207. Q. Are you the owner in part or in whole of any foundry or any other manufactory in the city?

A. I decline to answer.

208. Q. Have you at this time anybody in your employ in this city in any kind of business?

A. I decline to answer.

209. Q. Are you carrying on any kind of business in this city at the present time?

A. I decline to answer.

210. Q. Have you at the present time any property unencumbered by mortgages or judgments?

A. Well, I make the same answer.

211. Q. In what part of the city of Troy do you live?

A. I decline to answer.

212. Q. Do you know Philetus W. Bishop, of this city?

A. I don't think I do.

213. Q. You never heard of such a man, did you, as residing in Troy?

A. I don't know.

214. Q. Did you ever hear or know of a lawyer in the city of Troy by the name of Philetus W. Bishop?

A. I don't know of any such man; I don't know that I ever heard of him.

215. Q. Do you know of a person in the city of Troy by the name of Frederick G. Ransford?

2211 A. Really I can't say; the name seems a little familiar; I can't say.

216. Q. Do you know of a person residing in the city of Troy or elsewhere by the name of Hermance?

A. Yes, sir.

217. Q. Who is he, and where does he live?

(Same objection.)

A. I couldn't tell you any more than that he lives in the upper part of the city, as I have understood.

218. Q. What is his business?

A. Well, that I couldn't tell you.

219. Q. Did you ever know of a man in this city by that name who ever had anything to do with stoves or stove inventions, said at the time to reside at the town of Half Moon, in the county of Albany, or Saratoga, this State?

A. I know a man by that name who was said to have something to do with stoves, but where he resides, or is said to reside, I don't know.

220. Q. Did you ever have any conversation with him about stove inventions?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes.

221. Q. You are, then, on intimate terms with him, are you not?

A. I have been.

222. Q. Have you ever seen him out on the mission of peddling stove-dampers in the city of Troy?

A. I don't know that I can say; I don't think that I have.

223. Q. You never knew anything about his peddling stove dampers, then, in the city of Troy, did you?

A. I can't say that I do.

224. Q. Have you and Hermance ever had any conversation together about Marcus P. Norton, of Troy?

A. I should think we had.

2212 225. Q. Well, sir, have you any doubt about that?

A. I have no doubt we talked about some business that Norton did for him.

226. Q. Was that conversation in terms derogatory or defamatory to the character of Norton for truth?

A. I don't know that it was especially so; my impression is that he thought that he was dishonorable in his treatment of him or his business.

227. Q. What did you say to Hermance about Norton?

A. I don't know as I can tell you.

228. Q. Did you say anything to Hermance good concerning Norton?

A. Under the circumstances I didn't see anything good to say; it was a matter of business.

229. Q. Did you say anything good concerning Norton at the time of any interview with Mr. Hermance?

A. I can't say; I don't remember.

230. Q. Did you see Mr. Hermance here while he was being examined as a witness in this matter?

A. No, sir; I don't think I have seen him under a year.

231. Q. In your interviews with Hermance, did Hermance say anything good to you about Norton?

(Same objection.)

A. Well, I can't say.

232. Q. You don't know whether he did or not?

A. No, sir.

233. Q. Now, what did you hear Hermance say about Norton, and where was it, and who was present?

A. I can't tell, and I can't tell who was present; I don't know as anybody.

234. Q. Do you know a man in this city by the name of Joseph C. Henderson, formerly a partner of Jacob Shavor?

2213 A. I do know a man by that name; I know Joseph C. Henderson, of this city.

235. Q. Did you ever have any conversation with him about Marcus P. Norton?

A. I don't remember now.

236. Q. You knew Jacob Shavor when living, did you?

A. I knew him; yes, sir.

237. Q. Did you ever have any conversation with him about Marcus P. Norton, or he with you?

A. I don't remember.

238. Q. Well, did you ever have any conversation with anybody about Marcus P. Norton?

A. I think I have.

239. Q. With whom, and when was it?

A. I think quite a number, but the only one I can name is James Freiot; there was also Hermance.

240. Q. All the persons that you can now name with whom you have had any conversation concerning Marcus P. Norton you have named in your last answer, have you not?

A. I don't know but that I have had conversation with William E. Hagen; I think I have.

241. Q. My question is repeated, and I want a direct and positive answer to it.

A. I have in my last two answers; those three names comprise all I can give.

242. Q. Do you remember to have ever heard said in the city of Troy, concerning any man, that he was a liar?

A. Well, I decline to answer; I don't know.

243. Q. Did you ever hear said in the city of Troy, concerning anybody, that he was a scoundrel and could not tell the truth?

(Same objection.)
A. Oh, I decline to answer that.
244. Q. How old are you, Mr. Giles?
A. Sixty-three.
245. Q. Is your memory good at this time?
2214 A. About an average I should think.
246. Q. You are in good health, free from all diseases, are you not?
A. My general health is good.
247. Q. Do you belong to any church?
A. I do.
248. Q. What church is that?
A. Third Street Baptist.
249. Q. Are you regular in your attendance there?
(Same objection.)
A. Well, I decline to answer.
250. Q. Are you in good and regular standing there with that church, and with its pastor?
(Same objection.)
A. I decline to answer.
251. Q. Are you on terms of friendship and at peace with all the world?
(Same objection.)
A. Same answer.
252. Q. You solemnly decline to answer my questions, do you?
A. I decline to answer those questions.
253. Q. I now give you an opportunity to answer all questions which I have put to you, and which you have declined to answer on this cross-examination, and I now ask you if you will make answer to those questions?
(Same objection.)
A. Well, sir, I decline to answer them.
254. Q. Do you wish to change, to alter, or to modify any answer or any testimony that you have rendered in answer to questions put to you on your cross-examination in this case?
A. I think I do not; I think I have none.
255. Q. Do you know whether you do or not?
A. I know that I don't think of any.
2215 256. Q. If there be any, the opportunity is now given you in answer to this question.
A. I understand that.

Redirect examination by Mr. CLARKE:

257. Q. Explain to the court why you decline to answer the questions put to you about your church, capital, etc.
A. Because they in no way relate to the matter between the parties in this suit, and therefore improper questions.
258. Q. Do you know Nelson Pramer, who does a foundry business on Green Island?
A. I do.
259. Q. He is one of the aldermen of this city, is he not?
A. I believe he is.

Recross-examination by Mr. NORTON:

260. Q. Of your own knowledge do you know that he is an alderman in this city?
A. I have the same knowledge of him as I have of any other.

261. Q. My question is repeated.

A. I did not see the votes counted in his ward, but have seen reports of his election, and have heard his being acknowledged as alderman, and that is as much as I know of any of them; I have heard his character spoken of as that of an honorable, upright man; a man, Henry S. Church, used the word "honest."

262. Q. Who asked you to state anything about the character of Mr. Nelson Pramer, whether he is honest or dishonest, or anything else about him, concerning his character?

A. No one.

263. Q. Then, why did you go into a long lingo about Nelson Pramer's character, and what people said about him, or didn't say about him?

A. Because I was impressed with the report of it.

264. Q. Who impressed you with the report of it?

2216 A. Well, Henry Church, most of any one recently.

265. Q. Did Mr. Church use any particular means to impress you with that idea about Pramer?

A. He used the language "I believe him to be an honest man"; that is all the means.

266. Q. And at that utterance on the part of Mr. Church, and finding for the first time since you lived in the city of Troy that there was one honest man here, you "became impressed" and overwhelmed with joy, did you not, and will never forget the occasion when Mr. Pramer was called an honest man?

A. I decline to answer.

H. G. GILES.

Special Examiner.

TUESDAY, July 30.

Met pursuant to adjournment.

Same counsel as before.

Defendant's counsel offered in evidence a printed pamphlet, the title page of which reads as follows: "Marcus P. Norton, postmarking and postage-stamp cancelling device, patented April 14, 1863, reissued August 3, 1869; and another, letters patent dated July 13, 1869, antedated June 10, 1869. Application to the Hon. Postmaster-General for compensation for the use of said invention under the said patents by the Post Office Department. Points and arguments in support of that application. Washington. Cunningham & Mackintosh, printers, 1869." The same being certified under the seal of the Post Office Department and the signature of the Postmaster General as an original paper taken from the files of that department.

2217 (Complainant's solicitor, Marcus P. Norton, does not object to the introduction and reception in evidence on the part and behalf of the defendant, if defendant's counsel will concede that this pamphlet was on file in the Post Office Department in the month of September, 1869, and that the same has remained on file in that department until the date of the Postmaster General's certificate, dated May 24, 1878; and it also defendant's counsel will admit that the said printed pamphlet was written by and printed for Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, New York, in the fall of the year 1869, and if he will also admit that at that time there were no pencil marks upon the said printed pamphlet, excepting those that appear upon the first title page in blue and red pencil marks; and also that said printed pamphlet was printed by Cunningham & Mackintosh in Washington, D. C., for the said Marcus P. Norton, and that the same was addressed by him to the Hon. J. A. J. Creswell, then Postmaster-General of the United States.)

The pamphlet is marked Defendant's Exhibit 183—(Norton's pamphlet)—Troy, July 30, 1878, I. B., ex'r.

I hereby authenticate the above offer with my signature.

IRVING BROWNE,
Special Examiner.

Complainant's solicitor requests defendant's counsel to recall the witness Philetus W. Bishop for the purpose of further cross-examining him, and especially on the subject of his having been a well-known gambler in the city of Troy and elsewhere for many years past; having been instructed by Judge Williams, complainant's counsel, since 2218 the cross-examination of that witness, to so cross-examine him further.

Defendant's counsel states that the record shows that the witness was examined, cross-examined, and re-examined several weeks ago, and the witness then signed his deposition and departed. Defendant's counsel, therefore, declines to take the trouble of bringing the witness again before the examiner.

Complainant's solicitor offers to pay the necessary and reasonable expense of producing the witness again for further cross-examination.

Defendant's counsel also offers in evidence a certified copy of an indictment in a case of the United States against Marcus P. Norton in the District of Columbia, and the same is marked Defendant's Exhibit 184, Indictment, I. B., exr., July 30, 1878.

I hereby authenticate the above offer with my signature.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Northern District of New York, ss:

I, Irving Browne, a special examiner, appointed by the circuit court of the United States in and for the southern district of New York, do hereby certify that the foregoing depositions were taken before me at my office in the city of Troy, State aforesaid. I further certify that I was attended, on the taking of the said depositions, by Marcus P. Norton, esquire, as counsel for the complainant, and S. B. Clarke, esquire, assistant United States attorney, as counsel for the defendant, and that the several witnesses above-mentioned were, at the time of their examination, each of full and lawful age, and of sound mind, and that each of said witnesses were carefully examined and cautioned and sworn to testify the whole truth; their several depositions were by me caused to be reduced to writing in the presence of the witnesses, who sever-
2219 ally subscribed the same in my presence; and I further certify that I am not of counsel or attorney for either of the parties in said depositions and caption hereto named, nor in any way interested in the event of said cause.

In witness whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my seal this 1st day of August, 1878.

CHRISTOPHER C. CAMPBELL, ASSIGNEE IN trust, against
THOMAS L. JAMES, U. S. POSTMASTER, NEW York.
} In equity.

POST-OFFICE, NEW YORK, 8 Aug., 1860.

HON. HORATIO KING,
First Asst. Post M. Gen.:

SIR: The order of the Post M. Gen'l of the 23d ult., prohibiting the cancelling of postage-stamps by the dating or postmarking stamps, and requiring the work to be done by a separate instrument, could not be executed in this office without an increase of our clerical force. We were compelled a few days ago to keep back a mail nearly half an 2221 hour in order that the postage-stamps on the letters to be transmitted by it might be properly cancelled. When the letters amount to tens of thousands, the duplication of the work of cancelling and postmarking is a very serious matter. On Monday our carriers and messengers brought to the office 11,985 letters for the mails.

In this extremity, and with an extreme reluctance to augment the clerical force of the office for the purpose of doing the work, I have hit upon an expedient which answers the purpose perfectly. It occurred to me that the "separate instrument" required by the dept. might be attached to the postmarking stamp, and I sent for the stampmaker and gave him my idea, which he has carried out very well. The cancelling stamp is soldered on to the other so that one handle answers for both, and the double operation is performed with one blow. There is, therefore, no increase of work.

I send you a specimen of the work on the enclosed envelope.

Respectfully, yours,

JOHN A. DIX, P. M.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the records of this office of all assignments of record, under letters patent, granted Marcus P. Norton. Dated April 14th, 1863. No. 38,175. For "Imp't in post-office stamps."

In testimony whereof I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed, this first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

[SEAL.] W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

Dtf't's Ex. No. 15 A (Corse).—I. B., ex'r.—Feb. 4, 1878.

C. 7, p. 458.

Whereas I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, have invented "new and useful postmarking and canceling stamp," for and upon which I did, on the 14th day of April, 1863, obtain of and from the United States of America letters patent, to which reference is hereby had, for the invention this day sold and assigned;

2227 And whereas Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, each of the city of Troy, county and State aforesaid, are desirous of purchasing, and have purchased of and from me all the right, title, and interest secured to me in said invention by said letters patent, or which may be secured to me by reissue of the same, or otherwise;

Now, therefore, this indenture of assignment witnesseth:

That for and in consideration of the sum of five hundred dollars to me in hand paid, the reciept whereof is hereby acknowledged, I have sold, assigned, and transferred, and do hereby sell, assign, and transfer, unto the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, their heirs, assigns, executors, or administrators, all the right, title, and interest which I have in the said invention as secured to me by said letters patent, or as may be secured to me by reissue of the same, or otherwise; the same to be held and enjoyed by them, the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, for their own use, benefit, and behoof, and for the use benefit, and behoof of their legal representatives, to the full end of the term for which the same were and are granted, as by reference to said patent will fully appear, as fully, freely, and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by me had this sale, assignment, and transfer not been made.

In testimony whereof I have, on this 20th day of April, 1863, hereunto set my hand and seal.

MARCUS P. NORTON. [SEAL.]

Affidavit and assignments.—Transfer of patents.

CITY OF TROY,
County of Rensselaer and State of New York, ss:

Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of the city of Troy, being duly and severally sworn, each for himself doth depose and say that they reside at the said city of Troy, in said county and State; that they have so resided there for about twenty years. We know Marcus P. Norton, who also resides at the same place. He is a practicing lawyer by profession in the several courts of the State of New York in the United States, as well as before the U. S. Patent Office. We have so known him for five or six years past. In the summer of the year 1860 he exhibited to us at his office in said city of Troy a double or combined stamp or instrument for postmarking of letters, and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon in ink, at one blow or operation of the same. This device consisted of the device for giving the name of the post-office where used, together with the date of the same, and with a device of either cork, wood used endwise, rubber, or metal having any suitable configuration upon the lower surface of the same, for the cancellation of the postage-stamp, and used and arranged in combination with such postmarking device. At about that time the said Marcus P. Norton called upon us, we being then considered clients of his, and at that time he there made known unto us that he had a very valuable invention and improvements for use in the postal service of the kind, character, and for the purposes hereinbefore stated, and that because of having indorsed so large an amount of paper as to cause him very great embarrassment in 2229 the year 1856 and 1857, and from all of which he at that time was a great financial sufferer, and thus being much distressed, he desired each of us to aid him in money for the purpose of obtaining letters patent upon his said invention and improvements in this country and perhaps Europe.

Whereupon, and after due consideration, we agreed with him, the said Marcus P. Norton, to furnish him with such sums of money as he might require in order to get his said invention into general use by the Post-Office or other departments of the government requiring such inventions or instruments. The money so furnished by us, or either of us, as in the judgment of the said Marcus P. Norton he might need or require from time to time in order to obtain such patents as he might deem best in order to get his said improvements into general use by the government or Post-Office Department at as early a date or time as possible, or within his power to do, he having the entire management of the same. We agreed with and promised to the said Marcus P. Norton to receive one-half interest or moiety part of the said inventions, improvements, and letters patent when obtained for the uses and purposes aforesaid, while the other and remaining half interest or moiety part of such inventions, improvements, and letters patent were to be and the same were in any event or under any circumstances to remain the property and right of the said Marcus P. Norton and of his lawful representatives; we were to make no charges whatever against him for any money thus furnished by us to him. His one-half interest and moiety part of the said inventions and patents were to be wholly and entirely free from any and every claim or charge for money or other matter or thing on our part or by us. The said Norton was not to charge our said one-half part with any professional services rendered by him in the premises.

The said Norton was by the arrangement to assign all his said pat-2230 ents to us soon after or before the same were issued to him, in order that all his patents, inventions and improvements and every of them might be in safe hands while said Norton was so embarrassed, because of his losses aforesaid, or for other causes, as well as to permit of his being a witness of and concerning his said inventions, improvements, and patents, in court or elsewhere, concerning such matters as were within his personal knowledge, and could not be proven by any other person, such, for example, as matters appertaining to his caveat filed in the U. S. Patent Office in the year 1853, and containing, among other things, the several inventions herein named. It was also agreed that whenever the said Norton should be able in his own judgment to manage the affairs concerning and connected with his said inventions, improvements, and letters patent and to us assigned and transferred in the manner as aforesaid, and upon being requested so to do, we were to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer unto him, the said Norton, his heirs and legal representatives, the invention, improvements, and letters patent dated December 16, 1862, also dated April 14, 1863, including each and every reissue of either of said patents, if at the time of such request and demand of and by said Norton upon us, there were any reissue or reissues of the said letters patent or either of them; we were also to reassign, reconvey and retransfer unto him, the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs and legal representatives, each and every other letters patent than those hereinbefore named, which at the time of his request and demand aforesaid, might be in our possession through and by means of any assignments and transfer thereof from the said Norton to us, including the "post-office way bill envelope," patented on or about the 10th day of June, 1862, including, also, all other patents upon postmarking of letters or packets, and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, and including each and every reissue of any of 2231 the said patents. That whenever he, the said Norton, should for any cause desire, request, or demand of us the reassignment, retransfer, or reconveyance of any or of all of his said patents, by him assigned to us under our said agreement with him, and for the purposes aforesaid, then the same should be so done without any trouble to him or unnecessary delay; and in consideration of such reassignments, retransfer, and and reconveyances of the said inventions, improvements, and patents by us to the said Marcus P. Norton, he was only to pay to us all sums of money and lawful interest thereon paid out by us at the request of the said Norton, when we should present to him proper vouchers for the same, and that, if at the time when said Norton should desire or demand of us the reassignment, retransfer, or reconveyance of any, or of each and every of the said patents, by us as aforesaid, he might not be able to cash at once such money and the lawful interest upon the same, then he, the said Norton, his heirs or lawful representatives, may at his or their own election, pay such money out of the first money had or received by him or them, out of any sale or sales made with the Government of the United States, by him or them, and which should under such circumstances be so paid as soon as possible after any such sale and payment of money in accordance therewith, we producing vouchers for all moneys so expended by us as aforesaid stated. It was also agreed that the said Norton was to have full and uninterrupted charge and control of, as well as the management and direction of all matters appertaining to each and every of said patents, both in the obtaining of the same, all legal matters thereon, or in the sale or either of them, or in the introducing of any or all of them into public use by the "Post-Office Department," or other department of the government. The letters patent thus far obtained under our said understanding and agreement with him, the said

2232 Marcus P. Norton, are dated as follows, to wit, December 16, 1862, assigned to us December 20, 1862; also April 14, 1863, assigned to us April 20, 1863, and each for improvements in postmarking letters, packets, &c., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps, and each recorded in the U. S. Patent Office, also June 10th, 1862, assigned to us December 20th, 1862, and recorded in the U. S. Patent Office, December 31st, 1862, and for and upon an invention entitled post-office way bill envelopes, made by said Norton.

And deponents further say for answer to the position taken by the committee of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, as well as in full statement and vindication us at his office in said city of Troy a double or combined stamp or instrument for postmarking of letters, and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon in ink, at one blow or operation of the same. It was also agreed that the said Norton was to have full and uninterrupted charge and control of, as well as the management and direction of all matters appertaining to each and every of said patents, both in the obtaining of the same, all legal matters thereon, or in the sale or either of them, or in the introducing of any or all of them into public use by the "Post-Office Department," or other department of the government. The letters patent thus far obtained under our said understanding and agreement with him, the said

2232 Marcus P. Norton, are dated as follows, to wit, December 16, 1862, assigned to us December 20, 1862; also April 14, 1863, assigned to us April 20, 1863, and each for improvements in postmarking letters, packets, &c., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps, and each recorded in the U. S. Patent Office, also June 10th, 1862, assigned to us December 20th, 1862, and recorded in the U. S. Patent Office, December 31st, 1862, and for and upon an invention entitled post-office way bill envelopes, made by said Norton.

And deponents further say for answer to the position taken by the committee of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, as well as in full statement and vindication of the facts and that such committee may know the whole truth, to wit: The position aforesaid being, that deponents are mere speculators upon the invention and ingenuity of another, and that the purchase of said inventions and patents by Congress would not be a reward to or compensation to the said Norton or his family, nor would it be a reward by the government, through Congress, to the inventor for invention and valuable improvements made by him; that the real and true inventor should himself be the recipient of the attention of Congress, as well as of the compensation whereby to encourage, to reward, and to stimulate invention for the benefit of the government, and not persons who claim as mere assignees, for Congress cannot know how or in what manner they came by or into the possession of the same; that the payment of a very large sum of money by Congress to such assignees would not have the tendency to stimulate and encourage invention; that Congress should reward the inventor and patentee directly, and thereby encourage other inventors as well as to discourage speculation by assignees. The deponents say that they were only to be temporary assignees in order to aid said Norton in the manner hereinbefore 2233 stated, for deponents were by the arrangement to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer each and every of the said patents to them assigned by said inventor and patentee Norton previous to the time when he might or should request or require of and from us such assignments and transfers, no matter what may have been the name or nature or style of the same.

Deponents further say that it was their purpose and intention to render unto the said Norton all the aid in their power whereby to enable him to complete his models, drawings and specifications, in order to obtain the patents contemplated by him, and to enable him to get the Post-Office Department or government to consider, adopt and put into use the several inventions made by him for the purposes and uses aforesaid, for the said Norton was at that time engaged for deponents in and about business and certain matters appertaining to said Norton's profession, to wit, that of a practising lawyer.

And deponents further say that upon the said Norton's request so to do, deponents were to, and would duly and faithfully and freely reconvey, reassign, and retransfer each and every of the aforesaid inventions and patents unto the said Marcus P. Norton, in legal form and condition the same as we had and received such inventions and patents and each of them in trust as aforesaid from him, whereby the title thereto should be full, free, and perfect, and clear from any, all, and every encumbrance whatsoever.

And deponents in further answer to said position of the said committee of Congress, do hereby make, execute, and deliver the following absolute assignment and transfer of the aforesaid patents, inventions and improvements to the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs, assigns, or legal representatives, to be by him or them used and put upon the 2234 record at the U. S. Patent Office whenever he or they may desire so to do; that is to say, whereas letters patent of the United States of America were duly granted, issued, and delivered unto the said Marcus P. Norton, under and bearing date as follows, to wit, December 16th, 1862, also April 14th, 1863, for and upon improvements in instruments for postmarking of letters and for the cancellation of the postage stamps thereon as, and in the manner, form, and for the purposes substantially as hereinbefore stated and set forth, also a certain letters patent dated June 10th, 1862, for and upon an invention known and denominated a "post-office way bill envelope," as hereinbefore stated and set forth:

Now, therefore, and by virtue, force and power of our said agreement and contract with the said Marcus P. Norton in the manner aforesaid, and in consideration of the premises hereinbefore set forth, and in the further consideration of the sum of three hundred dollars, the receipt of which is hereby duly acknowledged, we have sold, assigned and transferred, and we do hereby sell, assign, and transfer unto the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs, assigns and lawful representatives, the full, clear, entire, and the exclusive right and title to each, every, and all of the aforesaid named and described letters patent, inventions and improvements, also each and every reissue of any or either of the same, including together with those hereinbefore named and described, each and every invention and letters patent acquired by us, of and from him, the said Norton, under our aforesaid agreement and contract with him as aforesaid stated. To have and to hold the same, forever, for his own 2235 use, benefit, and behoof, and for the use, benefit and behoof of his heirs, assigns, and legal representatives for and during the full length of the term for which the same were and are granted, as fully, freely, and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by us had this grant and sale not been made by us.

In consideration of the sum of twenty thousand dollars to me paid by Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, of the county of Rensselaer and State of New York, I do hereby sell and assign to the said Charles Eddy in trust for himself and the said Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, one undivided one-third part of all my right title and interest in and to certain letters patent of the United States, issued and granted to me as the original and first inventor for "improved postmarking and cancelling hand stamps," dated respectively as follows, to wit: January 14th, 1862, No. 34,184; December 16th, 1812, No. 37,175; April 14th, 1833, No. 38,175, reissued August 23d, 1864, reissued No. 1748 and August 3d, 1869, reissued No. 3586[1]. Also patent for revenue cancelling stamp, dated August 15th, 1865, No. 49,432; also patent for improvement on postmarking and cancelling hand stamps issued July 13th, 1869, and dated June 10th, 1869, No. 92,688; and also the undivided one-third of any patents which may be hereafter granted or issued upon my application for the purpose of improving or perfecting said inventions or either of them.

The said undivided one-third of each of said patents to be held and enjoyed by the said Charles Eddy as trustee, as aforesaid, to the full end of the term for which said letters patent or either of them are granted and for the term of any extension of either of said letters patent, as fully and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by me if this assignment had not been made.

Memorandum agreement.

Z[12], p. 43.

This article of a memorandum agreement made and entered into on this 22d day April, 1870, by and between William A. Wheeler, of the city, county and State of New York, party of the first part, and Frederick G. Ransford, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, State aforesaid, and Peter Low, of the city of Cleveland, and State of Ohio, and Charles Eddy & Co., composed of the following named persons, to wit, Charles Eddy, Jacob Shavore, Albert C. Corse, of the said city of Troy, State of New York, and Wm. B. Hatch of the said city of New York, party of the second part, and who are assignees by original and mesne assignments of Marcus P. Norton of the said city of Troy, of an invention and of certain improvements made by him in postmarking stamps, upon which letters patent of the United States of America were granted and issued under and bearing date August 9, 1859, and numbered 25,036, witnesseth:

That the said party of the first part is to have and shall have an absolute assignment and transfer of said letters patent of August 9th, 1859, for the balance of the term now unexpired for which the same were granted and issued upon the making of an agreement in writing by and between the parties hereto and of even date with such assignment

2238 and transfer, wherein and whereby shall be provided the terms, conditions and royalties upon which said Wheeler receives such assignment. It is here understood and agreed upon that said Wheeler desires to have and obtain said patent in the manner aforesaid for the purpose of manufacturing and vending in an exclusive manner stamps for internal revenue use and purposes in such manner as to render permanent cancellation of internal revenue stamps complete and perfect by means of the improvements and invention contained in said patent, which among other things consists of cutting and inking the said stamps, and so cutting and inking the same as that the ink so applied shall impregnate the fibres of such internal revenue stamp and thereby prevent a second or re-use by means of any chemical or other cleansing, whereby to prevent frauds upon that revenue departments.

The object of obtaining such an assignment and transfer is for the purpose of permitting a reissue of said patent by said Wheeler in such manner and form as shall more fully protect the invention and improvements therein both as to the manufacture and as to each and every of the owners of said patent and invention. The said Wheeler shall supply the demand for the use of said invention, and is to do all in his power to create a demand for the use thereof.

The party of the second part shall also do all in their power to create and to increase a demand for the use of such device and invention, and shall do all they can to protect said Wheeler in manufacturing and vending of said invention, which shall be done at said Wheeler's own cost and charge, and whenever required by him, he employing such lawyers as he may need at his own expense, requiring no attorney from the party of second part. He (said Wheeler) shall pay fifty cents royalty upon each of said cancelling stamp made by him and pay the same every thirty days on settlement then to be made with all persons 2239 in interest. And said Wheeler shall resort to all the lawful means in his power to get up and continue a full demand for the use of said cancelling stamp by the business men of this country.

The permanent contract between the parties hereto shall be made and delivered within ten days from date hereof, at which time a good and sufficient title or deed of an assignment shall be made to said Wheeler of said patent of August 9, 1859, for the balance of unexpired term of said patent conditioned upon payment of royalties of fifty cents on each stamp made by said Wheeler or any other one or person under him or at his request.

Each party hereto shall make every effort in their power to make to cause the Government of the United States or the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or Secretary of the Treasury, to fix and establish the price of said cancelling device so patented from $10 00 to $12.00 (twelve dollars) each one, in which event the said Wheeler is to pay the sum of one dollar and thirty cents royalty on each stamp made to said party, who shall then be entitled to receive the same under said contract, and settlement for said royalty shall be had once every thirty days, and if it shall hereafter become necessary for the said party of second part or their lawful representatives to have or own the said invention in order to make any settlement with the Post-Office Department for a claim now held against that department under another patent granted to said Norton, dated April 14, 1863, reissued August 23, 1864, and again August 3d, 1863, then said Wheeler shall reconvey and retransfer as much of said patent and invention therein as may be necessary for such purpose, and shall do it without cost or charge or payment therefor, but it must be done upon the written request of the Postmaster-General that he requires the same for the more full or better protection of the rights or interest of his said department under such settlement of the patent of April 14, 1863, and said reissues, and immediately after the re-2240 issue of said patent said Wheeler shall reconvey to said party of second part, or the lawful representatives of the same, all that part or portion of the invention and improvements which in anywise relate or appertain to the use, purpose or requirements of the Post-Office Department, and in case the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or Secretary of the Treasury shall raise the price of said device from $10 to $11, then said Wheeler shall pay as royalties to said party of second part the sum of one dollar on each stamp made under said contract. Said Wheeler shall not permit or suffer or allow any infringements of any kind upon said patent or said reissue, or reissues of the same or of any part thereof, but shall prosecute the same at once after knowledge of the same, and said party of second part shall furnish all the evidence in their power or knowledge to furnish whereby to sustain said patent, and said Wheeler shall pay the same sum of royalty on each stamp in all cases of prosecuting and recovery for infringements to said party of second part, and said party of second part shall be at no money expense in defense of or for maintaining said patent or said invention.

The details of our original agreement concerning the said Norton cancelling device for internal revenue, of which this is but a memorandum, we here refer to the original and permanent contract to be made and delivered in the time aforesaid, and containing the points or features herein mentioned.

In case said Wheeler shall for any cause discontinue to manufacture and sell said cancelling device, and to pay such royalties as before named, or in case he shall not make such settlements and payment of said royalties for any length of time, or shall fail to supply the demand and market, or shall fail, refuse or neglect to prosecute all case, for or of infringement of said invention patented as aforesaid for the space of ten days after information of the same from said party of the second part or either of them, or suffer any infringement suit to be con-
2241 tinued from time to time, upon the court calendar, or shall in any other manner fail to comply with the terms or conditions of said original agreement, then said title shall revert at once, and said party shall have possession of same at once. When the original permanent contract shall be executed and delivered then this shall cease and be of none effect.

The interlineation upon page 4 and 6 of this memorandum were made and inserted before the execution of this instrument, and at the request of the parties hereto.

In testimony whereof we have on this 22d day of April, 1870, hereto set our hands.

B[13], p. 151.

Whereas I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, in the county of Rensselaer and State of New York, did obtain letters patent of the United States of America, for and upon improvements in "post-office postmarking and cancelling hand-stamp," which letters patent were issued and delivered and bearing date the 14th day of April, 1863, which letters patent have been twice reissued under and bearing date as follows, to wit, August 23d, 1864, and August 3d, 1869, the last of which is numbered 3586; and whereas the invention and improvements contained in said letters patent have been in general and contin-

ned use in the postal service of said United States since the first day of March, 1863, by the order and direction of the Postmaster-General; and whereas Helen M. Ingalls of the said city of Troy, county and State, is desirous of having and acquiring all the right, title, and interest which I now have and ever had in, to, or for the said invention, improvements, and letters patent and the several reissues of the same, also any and every claim for past use of the same:

Now, therefore, this indenture and assignment witnesseth that, for and in consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars to me, the said Marcus P. Norton, in hand paid, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and in the further and other valuable considerations the receipt of which is hereby duly acknowledged, I have sold, assigned, and transferred, and I do hereby sell, assign, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs, assigns, and lawful representatives, all the right, title, and interest which I now have or ever had in the said invention, improvements, and letters patent and the several reissues thereof; and I also sell, assign, convey, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs, assigns, and lawful representatives, all the right, interest, or claim I now have against the Post Office De-
2243 partment or Government of the United States aforesaid, for the past use of the said invention and improvements under the said letters patent, intending herein and hereby to sell, assign, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls and her lawful representatives all my right, title, interest or claim for the past and future use of the said invention, improvements, and letters patent, in the postal service of the United States by the Post-Office Department, and also the entire invention, improvements and letters patent, and all and every reissue of the same, each and every of which is to be held and enjoyed by the said Helen M. Ingalls, for her own use, benefit, and behoof, and for the use, benefit, and behoof of her legal representatives, to the full end of the term for which the said letters patent the said several reissues are or were granted, as fully and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by me if this sale and assignment had not been made in the manner aforesaid. Hereby selling and conveying unto her, the said Helen M. Ingalls, and her assigns and lawful representatives, all and every right, interest, privilege, title, or claim which I now have or ever had in any way, manner, or form, under the said letters patent, and any and every reissue of the same, to the full end of the term of seventeen years for which said letters patent were granted, on and commencing the 14th day of April, 1863, with full right, power, and authority to enforce, settle, and adjust the same for the past use of the said invention, improvements, and letters patent.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal on this 23d day of October, 1869.

second part, and said party of second part shall be at no money expense in defense of or for maintaining said patent or said invention.

The details of our original agreement concerning the said Norton cancelling device for internal revenue, of which this is but a memorandum, we here refer to the original and permanent contract to be made and delivered in the time aforesaid, and containing the points or features herein mentioned.

In case said Wheeler shall for any cause discontinue to manufacture and sell said cancelling device, and to pay such royalties as before named, or in case he shall not make such settlements and payment of said royalties for any length of time, or shall fail to supply the demand and market, or shall fail, refuse or neglect to prosecute all case, for or of infringement of said invention patented as aforesaid for the space of ten days after information of the same from said party of the second part or either of them, or suffer any infringement suit to be con-
2241 tinued from time to time, upon the court calendar, or shall in any other manner fail to comply with the terms or conditions of said original agreement, then said title shall revert at once, and said party shall have possession of same at once. When the original permanent contract shall be executed and delivered then this shall cease and be of none effect.

The interlineation upon page 4 and 6 of this memorandum were made and inserted before the execution of this instrument, and at the request of the parties hereto.

In testimony whereof we have on this 22d day of April, 1870, hereto set our hands.

Whereas I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, in the county of Rensselaer and State of New York, did obtain letters patent of the United States of America, for and upon improvements in "post-office postmarking and cancelling hand-stamp," which letters patent were issued and delivered and bearing date the 14th day of April, 1863, which letters patent have been twice reissued under and bearing date as follows, to wit, August 23d, 1864, and August 3d, 1869, the last of which is numbered 3586; and whereas the invention and improvements contained in said letters patent have been in general and contin-

ned use in the postal service of said United States since the first day of March, 1863, by the order and direction of the Postmaster-General; and whereas Helen M. Ingalls of the said city of Troy, county and State, is desirous of having and acquiring all the right, title, and interest which I now have and ever had in, to, or for the said invention, improvements, and letters patent and the several reissues of the same, also any and every claim for past use of the same:

Now, therefore, this indenture and assignment witnesseth that, for and in consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars to me, the said Marcus P. Norton, in hand paid, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and in the further and other valuable considerations the receipt of which is hereby duly acknowledged, I have sold, assigned, and transferred, and I do hereby sell, assign, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs, assigns, and lawful representatives, all the right, title, and interest which I now have or ever had in the said invention, improvements, and letters patent and the several reissues thereof; and I also sell, assign, convey, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs, assigns, and lawful representatives, all the right, interest, or claim I now have against the Post Office De-
2243 partment or Government of the United States aforesaid, for the past use of the said invention and improvements under the said letters patent, intending herein and hereby to sell, assign, and transfer unto the said Helen M. Ingalls and her lawful representatives all my right, title, interest or claim for the past and future use of the said invention, improvements, and letters patent, in the postal service of the United States by the Post-Office Department, and also the entire invention, improvements and letters patent, and all and every reissue of the same, each and every of which is to be held and enjoyed by the said Helen M. Ingalls, for her own use, benefit, and behoof, and for the use, benefit, and behoof of her legal representatives, to the full end of the term for which the said letters patent the said several reissues are or were granted, as fully and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by me if this sale and assignment had not been made in the manner aforesaid. Hereby selling and conveying unto her, the said Helen M. of August, 1870, by and between Marcus P. Norton of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, party of the first part and W. W. Secombe of the city, county, and State of New York, party of the second part, witnesseth:

That whereas letters patent of the United States were granted and issued to said Norton on or about the 14th day of April, 1863, upon "Post-Office, Postmarking and Postage-stamp Cancelling device," which was re-issued the 23d day of August, 1864, and again on the 3d day of August, 1869, which invention has been in general use by the Postmaster General's order in the Postal Service of said United States for many years past, and now in general and extensive use in said postal service, and the Congress of the United States of America did, on the 13th day of July, 1870, pass a joint resolution authorizing and directing the Postmaster General to continue to use the said invention and patent in said postal service, and to settle with the owners of said invention and patent for such past use, and also for the future use of the same while the said patent shall continue, and for him to make a fair, just, and equitable compensation for such past and future use of said invention and said letters patent, which said joint resolution was approved on the 14th day of July, 1870, by the President of the United States, and which is now a law; and whereas the said Secombe has heretofore advanced to said Norton for expenses in Washington, and the said Norton wanting hereafter and during the next sixty days the sum of twelve hundred and fifty dollars, in all the sum of ($2,500) two thousand and five hundred dollars: Now, in consideration of the sum of twelve hundred and fifty dollars already advanced to said Norton while he was in the 2245 city of Washington, D. C., as aforesaid, and in the further consideration of the said sum of twelve hundred and fifty dollars, to be advanced to said Norton during the sixty days by said Secombe, I, the said Norton, hereby agree, covenant, and bind myself as follows, to wit: The said Secombe, in view of the considerations, shall have, shall be entitled to and shall receive out of any sum of money which the Postmaster General shall agree to pay in settlement of said matter under the said joint resolution to said Norton, or to any one acting for him and in his name or behalf, the sum of ten per cent. on such sum so contracted for or agreed to be paid. It is also hereby agreed that if said Norton shall succeed in obtaining from Charles Eddy, trustee for himself, A. C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor, each and all of said city of Troy, the one-third interest in said invention and patent claimed by them under an agreement made by them with said Norton in the fall of the year 1869, and in case said Norton shall, in any manner recover the same from them, as said Norton claims he has legal right to recover and should recover the said one-third interest so held by the said Eddy, Corse, and Shavor then instead and in place of the said sum of ten per cent. the said Secombe shall be entitled to and shall have and receive one undivided fourth part of the said invention, letters patent, and claim to be settled for by the Postmaster-General, under and in conformity to and with said joint resolution.

This article of an agreement, made and entered into on this 4th day of October, 1870, by and between Helen M. Ingalls of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, party of the first part, and W. W. Secombe, of the city, county, and State of New York, party of the second part, witnesseth:

That whereas, on the 14th day of April, 1863, letters patent of the United States of America were duly issued unto said Marcus P. Norton, of said city of Troy, N. Y., for and upon improvements in "Post-Office, Postmarking, and Postage-Cancelling Hand-stamp," as by reference thereto will fully appear, which letters patent were, on the 23d day of August, 1864, duly issued and again reissued on the 3d day of August, 1869, and which letters patent, after having been duly assigned to me by the said Marcus P. Norton, and the assignment thereof duly recorded in the U. S. Patent Office, the same were by me surrendered to the Commissioner of Patents, and new letters patents were issued in two divisions, to wit, "Division A" and "Division B," and of even date herewith, "Division B" having been by me assigned to the "Secombe Manufacturing Company of the city of New York," according to the terms and provisions of a certain memorandum agreement in writing signed by the said W. W. Secombe, as president of said company, having authority so to do; and whereas the said W. W. Secombe has heretofore made a certain agreement in writing with the said Marcus P. Norton, concerning said reissued letters patent and certain moneys then advanced and to be advanced by him to said Marcus P. Norton, to which reference is now and hereby had as a part to this agreement, which said agreement so made by them before the said last reis-2247 sue of said patent, but while I was the lawful owner of the same, with the assignment thereof not then recorded, but since recorded in order that the said letters patent might be reissued, as before stated, I, the said Helen B. Ingalls, assignee and lawful owner of the same, do hereby ratify, confirm, and consent that the same may be, and stand the same as though it were executed by me in case it shall appear necessary in order to carry out fairly and honorably the agreement so made by and between said Norton and said Secombe; and in the further consideration of money advanced, and which may hereafter be advanced to said Marcus P. Norton by said W. W. Secombe previous to any settlement by the Post Office Department for the past and future use of said invention contained in said "Division A," according to the requirements of a certain act of Congress approved on the 14th day of July, 1870, I hereby consent and agree that the same provisions and conditions named and set forth in the said agreement by and between the said Marcus P. Norton and said W. W. Secombe, may and shall apply and become a part of this agreement in consideration of any loan of money so made, or that may hereafter be made by said W. W. Secombe to the said Marcus P. Norton previous to such final settlement under said act of Congress as before stated, and I hereby ratify and confirm any and every loan of money made or to be made by said Secombe to said Norton under the aforesaid named agreement as well as under this agreement the same and in the same manner as though such loans had been made directly to me. In all such loans so made and to be made, the same have been done and are to be done at my request by and through said Norton, and all agreements in writing between said parties of and concerning the said letters patent, are therefore binding upon me as the assignee and lawful owner 2248 and holder of said letters patent as well as of every and all claims for the past ten years' use of the said invention by the Government of the U. S. in the postal service of the United States of America.

In testimony whereof, I have, on this 4th day of October, 1870, hereto set my hand and seal.

Whereas, I, Helen M. Ingalls, formerly of Troy, New York, am the owner by mesne assignment of one undivided third part of the entire interest granted by the United States to Frederick G. Ransford, and Peter Low, as assignees of Marcus P. Norton by letters patent granted August 9th, A. D. 1859, for improvements in postmarking hand-stamps;

And whereas I am in like manner the owner of the entire interest in three other patents for improvements in postmarking and postage canceling stamps granted by the United States to said Marcus P. Norton, which said letters patent are respectively dated as follows, viz:

1st. Patent dated December 16th, A. D. 1862.
2249 2d. Patent dated April 14th, A. D. 1863, and subsequently reissued August 23d, A. D. 1864, and again reissued August 3d, A. D. 1869, and again reissued as Div. A, on the 4th of October, A. D. 1870.
3d. Patent dated July 13th, A. D. 1869.

And whereas, Wm. W. Secombe, of the city and State of New York, is willing to accept the ownership and charge thereof:

Now, therefore, in consideration of the sum of five dollars, to me in hand paid by said Wm. W. Secombe, I have assigned, transferred, and set over, and by these presents do assign, transfer, and set unto the said Wm. W. Secombe, and his assigns and personal representatives, all my right, title, and interest in and to each and all of the above recited letters patent, as fully as the same are vested in me, to have and to hold the same in trust for myself, my sister, Minnie D., wife of said Marcus P. Norton, and the children of said Marcus P. Norton, as follows:

The said Wm. W. Secombe may manufacture under said patents, or grant licenses to others to manufacture, or may sell and assign said letters patent, or any of them.

And I also assign to said Wm. W. Secombe all my right to compensation for the past use of said letters patent, or any of them, by the United States or others, as conveyed to me by said Marcus P. Norton, on the 20th day of October, A. D. 1869, and recorded in Liber B[13], p. 351, of transfers of patents in the Patent Office of the United States, authorizing him to collect and receipt for the same.

The proceeds of sales, licenses, or collections to be accounted for according to the following rule: Said trustee is first to pay all the expenses of the trust, and reserving his compensation as trustee, to pay over the balance of money remaining in his hands according to the terms of a declaration of trust executed contemporaneously herewith to myself, and the said wife and children of said Marcus P. Norton.

Whereas, at various times and under several and different dates, the letters patent of the United States of America were issued upon the application and petition of Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, for and upon improvements in hand printing and dating-stamps, post-office post-marking stamps, internal-revenue dating and canceling stamps, and for other improvements not necessary here to name, among which were letters patent of the following dates, to wit, January 14, 1862; December 16, 1862; August 4th, 1865; and also during the years 1870 and 1871;

And whereas the aforesaid inventions and letters patent were duly assigned, sold, and conveyed to the "Secombe Manufacturing Company," located at and doing business in the city, county, and State of New York, by the said Marcus P. Norton, inventor, and by Helen M. Ingalls, assignee of said Marcus P. Norton; which several deeds of assignment were duly recorded in, and are now of record in, the Patent Office of the United States, to which reference is now and hereby had for a more full and perfect description and understanding of the inventions and of the letters patent sold, assigned, and conveyed unto 2251 said Secombe Manufacturing Company by the said Marcus P. Norton and Helen M. Ingalls, assignee of said Marcus P. Norton, or by either of them, and reference is now and hereby had to the invention and to the several letters patent mentioned in the said deeds of assignment to the said Helen M. Ingalls by the said Marcus P. Norton, and by the said Helen M. Ingalls and said Marcus P. Norton, or either of them, to the said Secombe Manufacturing Company, or to William W. Secombe, as president of the said manufacturing company, for a more full and perfect description of the said several letters patent and inventions and improvements so sold and conveyed, and herein and hereby sold and conveyed, as hereinafter written;

S. A. Curtis, Marcus P. Norton, witnesses.

W. W. Secombe, president.

And whereas, the said Helen M. Ingalls is desirous of having and obtaining each and every of the aforesaid letters patent, inventions, and improvements now held and owned by the said Secombe Manufacturing Company, or by the said William W. Secombe as president;

And whereas the said Helen M. Ingalls has purchased of the said Secombe Manufacturing Company and of William W. Secombe, president, each and every of the aforesaid named and described inventions, improvements, and letters patent, now therefore, for and in consideration of the sum of one thousand dollars, and in the other and further and valuable considerations, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and in the additional consideration that the said Marcus P. Norton shall make no claim against the said Secombe Manufacturing Company for professional services rendered, we, the said Secombe Manufacturing Company, and William W. Secombe, president, have sold, assigned and conveyed, and we do hereby sell, assign, and convey unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs, assigns, and executors, each and every of the said inventions, improvements and letters pat-2252 ent, and all of our right, title, and interest in the same, or in either thereof, now and forever; the same to be held and enjoyed by the said Helen M. Ingalls, for her own benefit and behoof, and for the benefit and behoof of her legal representatives to the full end of the term or terms for which the said letters patent are granted, or may be hereafter granted, issued, or extended, renewed or reissued, as fully and freely as the same would or could have been held and enjoyed by us had this sale and assignment not been made as and in the manner aforesaid.

W. W. Secombe, president.

S. A. Curtis, Marcus P. Norton, witnesses.

It is also the intention to sell, assign, and convey to said Helen M. Ingalls, each and every application for letters patent or for reissue of any letters patent, or for any extension of any letters patent now pending in the U. S. Patent Office in the name of said Marcus P. Norton, in which said Secombe Manufacturing Company, or by said William W. Secombe, president, have or claim to have any interest, right, or title whatever; and we do hereby sell, assign, and convey, now and forever, any and every right, title, claim or interest we have or either have in, to, or for any such pending case or application to the said Helen M. Ingalls, her heirs and assignees, now and forever.

Meaning to convey, and we do hereby convey unto her, the said Helen M. Ingalls, each and every claim, right, title, and interest we now have or can or would have in any of said inventions, improvements, and letters patent, by means or reason of any contract between us or either of us and said Marcus P. Norton and Helen M. Ingalls, or either of them, in, to, or for the said inventions and said letters patent, or either of them, so that they and each of them shall have and possess the same rights, titles, interests, and privileges they and each of them would have had and did have at the time of the making and executing of the said several deeds of assignments of said inventions, improve-2253 ments and letters patent to said Secombe Manufacturing Company, or William W. Secombe, president.

In testimony whereof I have on this 10th day of July, A. D. 1873, hereunto set the hand and seal of the said Secombe Manufacturing Company, and of the said William W. Secombe, president.

Whereas letters patent of the United States of America were duly granted, issued, and delivered unto Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, for and upon new and useful improvements in post-office, post-marking and canceling hand-stamp for postmarking letters and for the cancellation of the postage stamps, in the manner and for the purposes, and by the means therein described and set forth, which letters patent were issued and delivered, bearing date the 14th day of April, A. D. 1863, and numbered 38,175; which letters patent have been three times reissued, in the manner as by law provided, to wit, on the 23d day of August, A. D. 1864, number 1748; also on the 3d day of August, A. D. 1869, 2254 numbered 3586; and again, and for the third and last time reissued, on the 4th day of October, A. D. 1870, in two divisions of the same date, to wit, Division A and Division B, Division A being numbered 4143, and Division B being also numbered 4144 of reissues of patents, in the said Patent Office, to the specification and drawings of each reference is now and hereby had for a more full and perfect description of the said invention and improvements, as well as for full information of the same and of the invention, improvements, and letters patent herein and hereby assigned, in trust, in the manner and form following in this deed of trust, as herein stated and set forth;

And whereas the original letters patent, dated as aforesaid on the 14th day of April, A. D. 1863, and numbered 38175, were by the said Marcus P. Norton, on the 20th day of April, 1863, assigned and transferred in trust to Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of the said city of Troy, in the manner and for the purposes stated in their reassignment and retransfer to the said Marcus P. Norton, dated February 23d, 1864.

And whereas, on the 23d day of February, A. D. 1864, they, the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, reassigned and reconveyed the aforesaid named letters patent and all reissues thereof to the said Marcus P. Norton, which assignment and deed of reconveyance being accompanied by the sworn affidavit and statement of the said Jacob Shavor, and of the said Albert C. Corse, was duly and lawfully entered of record, and was recorded in said United States Patent Office, on the 24th day of July, A. D. 1869, in liber U 11, page 319 of transfers of patents, as will fully and at large appear by the original deed of assignment and retransfer now in the possession of the undersigned; and whereas the said Marcus P. Norton did, on the 20th day of October, A. D.
2255 1869, by deed of assignment and transfer, and for a valuable consideration, sell, assign, and convey unto Helen M. Ingalls, of the said city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, his entire right, title, and interest, in the invention, improvements, and letters patent, and of any and every reissue of the same, and also all and every right to compensation, and to recover by suit or otherwise for the use of the same, past or future, or for both, by the said United States, as by reference thereto will fully and at large appear.

The said Helen M. Ingalls, being the true and lawful owner and holder of the said invention and letters patent, duly surrendered the same to the Commissioner of Patents, for the purpose of reissuing the same in two divisions; and thereupon, upon the petition of the said Helen M. Ingalls, the said Commissioner of Patents, in conformity to law, granted a reissue of the said letters patent unto the said Helen M. Ingalls, according to said petition so made and filed by her in said Patent Office.

The said reissue was granted to her in two parts or divisions, under date of October 4th, 1870, as hereinbefore stated, of which "Division A" is the same or substantially the same as the said reissued letters patent granted to the said Marcus P. Norton, on the 3d day of August, A. D. 1869, and numbered 3586, as aforesaid stated.

The said deed of assignment to the said Helen M. Ingalls was duly entered of record, and recorded in said Patent Office on the first day of August, A. D. 1870, in liber B 13, page 351 of transfers of patents, as will appear by reference to the original deed of assignment and conveyance now in the possession of the undersigned, Helen M. Ingalls; and

Whereas, on or about the 4th day of March, A. D. 1871, the said Helen M. Ingalls, by a certain deed of assignment, and upon the terms and conditions stated therein as a part thereof, did in trust assign and convey to William W. Secombe, then of the city, county, and State of New York, her right and title to the said invention and letters 2256 patent, which was recorded in said Patent Office on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1871, in liber X 13, page 315 of Transfer of Patents, and which deed of assignment "in trust" has long since become void and of none effect, because and for the reason that the said William W. Secombe has not only wholly and entirely failed to keep and carry out the conditions therein named as the sole and only grounds for that "trust," but has repeatedly refused so to do. The considerations wherein said deed of trust was executed and delivered so as aforesaid and named therein, were not and have not been kept and faithfully observed by the said William W. Secombe in the manner as in said deed of trust was and is required of him in and thereby, but on the other hand, the same were and have been utterly neglected and refused on the part and behalf of him, the said William W. Secombe, whereupon the said invention and letters patent, and each and every right, title, and interest therein and thereto, became reinvested in and the sole and exclusive property of the said Helen M. Ingalls, the same as though no assignment "in trust" had been made to said William W. Secombe in the manner as aforesaid.

And whereas it has been deemed advisable that Christopher C. Campbell, of East Cheatham, county of Columbia and State of New York, should become fully vested with and should have vested in him in trust all the right, title, and interest which I now have or can have had in, to, or for the said invention and letters patent, and of each of the several reissues thereof, also of any and every claim or claims for past use of the said invention in the postal service of the said United States, from the date of the said letters patent, to wit, the 14th day of April, A. D. 1863. The right, title, and ownership of the said invention and letters patent is, in trust, vested in the said Christopher C. Campbell, upon the conditions that he shall have the sole management of said trust, and be at the expense of the same until a fair, just, and reasonable 2257 settlement shall be had with the United States aforesaid for such use of the said invention in the postal service of said United States by the Post Office Department, for which the said Christopher C. Campbell shall have and shall receive one-third of such sum as may hereafter be determined upon by the Court of Claims of the said United States, in payment for the past or for the future use of said invention in the said postal service; and the said Helen M. Ingalls shall have and shall receive two-thirds of such sum as may hereafter be determined upon by the said Court of Claims, in payment for the past or for the future use of the said invention in said postal service; and the said Court of Claims in the making and entering of any judgment against said United States for the use of the said invention, improvements, and letters patent in such postal service, is now and hereby authorized and requested to make and enter such judgment as follows, to wit, one-third of the whole sum or amount to the said Christopher C. Campbell, and two-thirds of the whole sum or amount to the said Helen M. Ingalls, and thereby to require each of said named persons to sign and acknowledge satisfaction of such judgment, or to receipt therefor when the same is paid by the Treasury of the said United States in the manner provided by law, which payment shall be at the same time and in the presence of each, who thereupon shall sign a receipt or make satisfaction for such judgment or receipt of payment, or by their legal representatives, as by law may be provided; and the said Court of Claims shall have full power to make an order or decree in the premises as hereinbefore stated, so that one-third of the recovery or judgment determined and fixed by said court as by law may be provided, shall be paid to the said Christopher C. Campbell, and two-thirds thereof shall be paid to said Helen M. Ingalls, directly from the Treasury of said United States, and in no other manner shall payment be made for such use by the United States of the said invention and letters patent.

2258 Now, therefore, this deed of assignment and transfer in trust witnesseth, that for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar, to me in hand paid, the receipt whereof is now and hereby acknowledged, and in the further and other valuable consideration hereinbefore and herein stated as the main conditions upon which this instrument is now and hereby made and executed in trust, I, the said Helen M. Ingalls, have in trust so as aforesaid, sold, assigned, and transferred, and I do in like manner hereby sell, assign, and transfer in trust unto the said Christopher C. Campbell all the right, title, and interest which I now have or ever had in, to, or for the said invention and letters patent, and the several reissues thereof, which is as aforesaid stated, the entire invention, improvements, and letters patent named, dated, and numbered so as aforesaid and in like manner in trust and upon the same terms and conditions.

I also sell, assign, and convey unto him, the said Christopher C. Campbell, all the right, interest, and claim for and to the past use of the said invention and improvement under the said letters patent or any reissue thereof obtained by me from the said Marcus P. Norton by the said deed as assigned, dated the 20th day of October, A. D. 1869, and now of record in the manner so as aforesaid stated and set forth, intending herein and hereby to sell, assign, and convey in trust unto the said Christopher C. Campbell, in the manner herein provided and set forth, all my right, title, and interest or claim against said United States for the past or future use of the said invention and letters patent in the postal service of the said United States by the Post-Office Department, and also in like manner the entire invention, improvements, and letters patent and all and every reissue of the same since the 14th day of April, A. D. 1863.

The same and each and every thereof to be held in trust in the 2259 manner and for the benefit of each of the persons herein named and as herein specified and set forth, and on no other grounds and for no other use or purpose.

In testimony whereof I have on this second day of January, A. D. 1877, hereto set my hand and seal.

A. C. CORSE, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Mr. King has just left my room. The Postmaster-General sent the papers to Congress on the day he promised; they were referred to the same committee as the first ones were, who put the matter into the hands of Mr. Norton, the same as last year. He and Mr. King have fixed on to-morrow to examine the case and prepare the report for the House, which will be done in about two day', in all probability. King say that there will be no trouble about the report of the committee. He will recommend the gov't to pay us a handsome sum for the invention. Norton & King will try and settle upon some fair plan of payment. The question will be whether it shall be a fixed sum or a per cent. The committee seem to favor a per cent. of the amount saved in labor and then add to that a per cent. for saving in preventing frauds, also a per cent. in the expedition of the transportation of the mails without delays, &c. This would make an income annually almost as much as we ask for the patents. The first payment would be as much as $300,000.00, taking into the account past use, &c., of most two years. Will write you when the report to the House is ready. How is Shavor? Better, I hope, and fast getting well. I have seen the Gregorys but twice since you left, once Saturday and again to-day. Have not drawn for any money yet, but think I will have to do so to-morrow as I am near a point when I need it; still may not ask for two or three days yet. I think this matter is going ahead finely. We shall want Dr. Baldwin when the 2261 committee report to the House, which will be some time this week; will telegraph him when we want him; have him ready to come, as we want him to have Colfax push the matter ahead without delay, &c. Write me about Shavor, &c., &c.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: I enclose you parts of papers taken from the Congressional Globe, and have marked such places as refers to our stamp business and another referring to the Stanley case.

All things are going finely. I expect the committee soon to report on the stamp case. They won't receive the old papers filed last year because they say the suit is conclusive, so they only receive our new papers filed this term; also Gen'l Dix's affidavit, Wakeman's letter to Postmaster-Gen'l as well as Gen'l Dix's letter to P. M. G. This is all in our favor. It makes our case clear and without any opposition of any kind whatever. Now for hanging up the matter, &c., &c.

The Stanley papers came to-day. How is Shavor? Hope he will soon get well and be out again.

Yours truly,

M. P. NORTON.

A. C. CORSE:

I have a second call by my Albany attorney in the Hagan case to pay him balance of his bill, which is $140. This closes up everything in that case, and of course no more to pay. If you can do this for me to-day it would put me on fair ground. I mean, of course, if the co. can do it. The life insurance policy will be ready for assignment to you and Shavor in a day or so. It had to be returned for written consent of the company, as at the time we did not know to whom to make the assignment, and did not know until day before yesterday, when Mr. Shavor requested the assign to him and to you.

Can you meet Dr. Baldwin and myself at my office to-morrow evening at 7.30 in relation to the post-office matters?

I send you certified copies of Patent-Office search for assignments in our matter which show you the true condition of matters, and as I have always told you and Shavor. When Mr. Shavor was here yesterday we were busy in taking testimony it the Atwood case, and I forgot the Albany matter, although I had made a memorandum of it. I am to-day so lame that I can hardly walk.

Yours truly,

M. P. NORTON.

P. S.—The last patent does not seem to be assigned, or at least there is no record. If you have not the assignment I make one. Please 2263 look and see. This ought not to be left so. I want it just as we agreed. I think I made the assignment, and that you have omitted to have it recorded.

You will keep these certificates sent you herewith

SHAVOR & CORSE:

DEAR SIRS: I enclose you copy of letter this day sent to House Com. by Mr. King in relation to certain exhibits which make for us a strong case on the question of perfection in the cancellation. It is a capital hit. Just as soon as Congress get our papers printed I will send you a copy of the same, which will not be long, as they have been duly sent to the Gov't Printer by vote of the House.

Mr. King met the postmaster here to-day, from St. Louis, Mo., who gave us a certificate of the saving of between one-third and one-half of the labor in his post-office. This was another big point, because St. Louis is so far away from Washington and New York post-offices, and they all agree so well as to am't of labor saved. He would have stated one-half fully so, but he thought as "Shavor" has always thought better not over-state the case, but it would be better for us to understate it. I think that our case is going first rate and successful to us. It wants watching and hurrying up. That is just what I am doing. It will not be many days now before we shall get a vote in the House on the bill. The 2264 committee are all in our favor, and are now examining the matter of the amount of the compensation. I shall telegraph Dr. Baldwin when we want him. Hoping that Shavor is getting well I remain,

Your ob't ser.,

DEAR SIR: I send you enclosed the Congressional Glob' with a little item marked by which you will see that we have sent to Congress some additional papers. Our papers are now all before Congress, and in the hands of the Congressional Printer; when printed I will send you a copy. Having the printing done now will greatly aid the passage of our bill through the House. As it will be put upon its passage immediately after it comes completed from the committee room, which will be sometime next week. We are getting along finely and quite rapidly with this business now.

How is Shavor? I have not heard from you since you went home. I hear from Shavor every day or two through my clerk and from my family. I do hope Shavor will get well and about soon. Wheeler is here and is pushing ahead the Stanly matter. We hope for a report from Senate committee next week. I see no reason why it may not be favorable to us. I drew $100 on Gregory & Brother a day or two ago, and gave my receipt for it as the attorney of Chas. Eddy & Co.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

A. C. CORSE, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I received your telegram yesterday, but not your letter you spoke about in the dispacth.

I am and have all the time been trying to do what is right here in the stamp matter, in the Pierce case, in Stewart's and in several matters connected with the Hogan invention for gold separation, and I hope to be able to convince you all that I have acted honorably and rightfully. It is by no means pleasant for me to be here, away from business, away from home—from children—but I dare not leave matters here yet. I want the papers in the Pierce matter, but they have not come to me yet as agreed upon, but then they will come. Impeachment has delayed me one full month. I am tired out almost, and never so homesick as I am now, and yet I have some work to do yet which must not be omitted.

I have done a large amount of work here for which I may never have credit or payment, but I will do all I can and all that is required of me, and if others complain I can't help it. I'll do my best for the best interest of all I may represent.

No vote will be taken by the Senate on impeachment until conviction becomes sure. God grant it may be very soon. I hope to get your letter to-night.

Truly yours,

M. P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: I sent to see if I could see you on Thursday evening last, but I think you did not get word.

The printing of the case sent from Washington was completed Wednesday and 15 more copies sent Merriman by express. Then, not to be caught again, and while the type was set and in printing order, I had extra copies, for which was only charged, extra, the cost of paper and for press work.

He came here on Thursday and I had to raise the wind and pay it. Now I would like that you would send me check for the same, as I am straped by the Stewart matter and will have hard work to get along. The bills are enclosed herewith. I want to see you about Stewart stove matters just as soon as I can; if you can't come let Charles come. Don't pay one cent, and I'll tell you why. I understand that a person was to go to your house and make a proposition. This is in confidence, &c.

I hope you will give me the amt. of bills enclose to make good what I settled for to day.

The probabilities are that it will come on to-morrow, and it will take two days, &c., and it seems to me that you would be of great service there. Those Washington men hardly comprehend the case, and I am really afraid of them unless you are there to keep up the line of operations. A. C. CORSE, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I would like to see you very much indeed on several matters. The Stanley stove case ought to be seen to before I go to Washington. I want to see you about the P. O. stamp matter; I want to see you also about the Stewart matters and many other things. Swett was here last eve. about Hanks' matter and spoke of the Stewart affairs, and said the stove men would stand by me and would, &c., &c., &c. Now it is really necessary that I go to Washington on Monday next, and you will concur in that when you have seen me, and I have telegraphed I would go at that time; but I ought to see you first, and the question is whether or not I can. I did expect to see you yesterday afternoon. I am out in the boat, far from land, in the reservoir of P. P. Stewart, and I hope things will go as suggested. I have written the papers and everything just as Swett required, and Keep took their papers away last night at 6.30—railroad time. Now, will I see you before I go to Washington, as before stated? I think matters are important enough for you to see me, and still I may be mistaken.

Truly yours,

A. C. CORSE, Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: All the claims have been allowed in your reservoir stove case, with one broad claim on all two flues combined with reservoirs. The patent will be sent to my office in a few days; it is a good and full one.

I have been expecting you here for a long while, as I wish to see you about your reissue case, and was in hopes you would come here, as it is here that I could see you best, because of matters in the Patent Office about which I wished the conference.

What about the P. O. stamp and matters connected with the same? I hear that the Hogan case in New York has been gained, and that there is a prospect of getting a big pile of money. Where are your papers? Where are mine in this case and matter? I think it not right that certain matters are left as they now are, and when I get home I mean to see to matters, and, so far as I am concerned, they shall be put in shape. It is said here that you have loaned me about $12,000 and Shavor about $18,000. If this is so I think we better settle our affairs, and that you should have all refunded that you have loaned; so let us settle it up as soon as I return.

The $250 note I will pay you as soon as I get home. It is all a loss between us. Have you seen the decisions? only one judge of the five was for us. What shall we do in this matter? Will you be here; if so, when? I shall go home about the 20th inst. Congress adjourns on Saturday next. I suppose that I am to lose all of the Stewart matters, but there is a time coming, &c.

A. C. CORSE, Esq., Troy, N. Y.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter, the only one that I ever received from you since I came here this time, came to me this evening, and without waiting a single moment I answer it. What I say is, confidential. I am much surprised at the matter you mentioned about one Mr. Green. No arrangement of any kind whatever has been made or proposed by me with him or any one else in Troy about our P. O. stamp. I think it quite time that people outside better let our business alone and attend to their own. We want no such arrangement as proposed. We care nothing about Low, Hatch, or any one else in that case, so long as you and I can agree to work together. I am deeply affected and grieved at the course that Shavor has taken with you as well as with myself. Let work together just as we agreed to do, if such a thing be possible. This outside meddling and interfering in our matters is a mean thing, and what I call dirty business. For Heaven's sake make no arrangement with Green or with any one else, but come here, if possible, early next week, and if I succeed in a certain undertaking, then we have cash on hand at once. Green came to see me about the Atwood Stove and Car Wheel case, and commenced a large amount of talk concerning what he would do were the matter in his hand, and I think he put as much as $500,000 into our pockets, to all of which I simply said "Yes," "I think so," and this was only to get rid of talk which was about a matter that was none of his business. What could he do here with this Ad-
2271 ministration whom he knows nothing about. What business has he to see Low or Hatch? I hope you have given him no authority at all. If we now can't manage our own matters, then we ought to lose it. We ought to move with as much quietness as possible. There has been already too much outside talk. Why, Corse, what could J. D. Green do here that we can't do? I think a piece of impertinence and of intermeddling with business that is none of his business. What I may do you will certainly be consulted, and that is just what I want you here for. Come if possible. I think it really necessary you should come as early as Monday next.

Let Stanley go to Charley, but wait until I get home for preparing the case. Come here and we will certainly get cash soon. The Hagan people must do by us as they agreed, or we will go into the crockery house.

Truly, yours,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR:

MY DEAR SIR: The "bids" were opened yesterday. There are five bids on our improvements, to wit, the Boston house, who have bid at $5 and $3.50—their lowest bid on our stamp. Hoole has bid at either

$5.25 or $5.50, I do not know which; a New York house has bid, but I do not know at what price; Zevely's brother has put in a bid, but I do not know how; so with some one from Albany. The committee will meet on Tuesday and will decide on Wednesday next. It is a secret committee, and no one can see them, but Gen. Skinner is chair-
2272 man of that com., and I have seen him. The Boston man is here and working hard for himself, also for us. To-morrow I am to have an interview with P. M. General as to price of patent fee; should we not agree, I shall propose to refer the matter to the next Congress for adjudication. One thing is settled; it is this: the government must use our improvements; they can't get around it. Postmasters from all sections of the country are sending here for it; this makes a demand for it. The New York office has given it the highest kind of a recommend; I shall have a copy of the letter to show you when I get home; it is a big thing. I never saw the letter until yesterday. It is now on file in the Post Office Department. Now, I think we must have our price for the improvements, and if the department will not now come to it, it will be much better for us to wait, with all this proof, until the next session of Congress; in the mean time get the case in an ample condition, and have Griswold present the case, backed by Colfax, Corning, and others of that class. I think we can do much better to take such a course. Indeed, I should be unwilling to attempt to close anything less than I have talked with you, under such circumstances, without first having seen you and Corse. The whole thing is moving right and doing well.

Yesterday another patent was granted to us on P. O. stamps, which is a good one, and, I think, the best one of the lot. There are still three cases behind and not yet reached at the Patent Office. We now have four patents. By this course we have cut off effectually about 30 different applicants, and put ourselves in the strongest possible condition. We have no competitors who can do us any harm; enough stand ready, but it is no go with them. I have great confidence in our final success in this matter. The Boston man—Hoole—Zevely, and all who know anything about it, say the same thing.

I shall try and get up the Morning and Evening Star case before I return home. Will write you again.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Let the whole thing rest until I return, and then there will be no mistake about it.

I have take' copy of our Congress petition to New York with me to have the P. M. there endorse it, and hope to be able to have him do it. If so, it will be a good thing. The papers and model will reach Griswold on Monday morning. I wrote to Europe an answer to that letter.

DEAR JACOB: I enclose to you a letter received last evening from Mr. King, Buchanan's "Postmaster-General," which you will see is just to the point. We can now have everything our own way. I want to leave here on Tuesday afternoon for W———, and remain at New York over Wednesday, for the purpose of getting Gen. Dix's statement, and then go on to Washington and get the report of House committee. I shall want to see you and Corse on Monday evening, unless you had as soon come here this evening, and of this you will please inform Charlie.

The assignments of desk patent, punching patent, &c., Charles will make out to-day to you and Corse. I have the specifications all done, except that on the desk, which will be done to-day, and all cases sent to W——— to-night, so that I can get them through, or at least the desk case while at Washington. There are three of these, $15 on each, $45; express and gov't stamps will am't to $5; in all $50, which send to me, and I will shove these all over the course. This stamp-punching matter will complete all that we patented in Europe, and make our position strong against improvements of others, but after Congress pays for the pat. of 1853, of course we don't care for the other stamp patents only so far as the internal revenue is concerned; then we may hope for a 2d slice.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: The post-office stamp matter goes on finely. The House committee chairman is to meet Mr. King, Gale, and myself at the Postmaster-General's room in the department to-day at 10 o'clock this morning. The former report which did us so great injustice is to be entirely withdrawn and a new one handed in, after which the whole matter will go straight through Congress in our favor. The proofs taken for the House committee will answer the Senate chamber when the case gets there. I think I wrote you that I would send you a copy of Gen. Dix's affidavit, but I have only just had it copied, and will therefore bring it with me to Troy when I return. It is the thing for us. We have also two certificates in favor of the stamp from the city post-office here, which you know is one of the largest post-offices in the country as to mail matter. These certificates are also to go to the House committee with the other papers. They are strongly in our favor. Mr. King has furnished me with extracts from the files at the Post Office Department, which I will also show you on my return. I can see nothing to prevent our complete and most certain success. Gale, King, Olin, and Griswold all concur with me in this belief. Mr. Gale has had the matter all talked over with "Judge Olin," and Olin is with us in this matter, and will do what may be necessary to be done for us so far as within his power to do; and he can do a great deal.

Ransford has not been here yet. You no doubt have seen him 2276 at Troy since I came here. Of course you will have no conversation with him about our movements here or at New York on this stamp matter. He was at my house just before I left Troy, and wanted I should write him as to what I did at New York on this matter, but I could hardly see the point; and coming myself to the "unanimous" conclusion that it was no more his business than that of Dauchraw's, I did not write him either from New York or from here. He must not be at all recognized under these patents, no more than what I do by way of "soop." They are none of his in any way, shape, or manner. He has not spent a single cent for or in anywise relating to the same. The patent of 1859 is a condemned thing by the department for reason which I have heretofore given you and Mr. Corse. I suppose, of course, that you communicate my letters to Mr. Corse.

The desk patent has just been granted to me. We will push that right into market, and we will get enough out of that to more than pay expenses in the stamp matter. I will assign this to you and Mr. Corse, just as we agreed, on my return home.

Your original assignments in the stamp matter I had to leave with the House committee, as well as the original patents, which we can get again if we have use for them.

I am, indeed, well pleased with our matters here.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SHAVOR: I have received two letters from Mr. King
2277 since I came here. The Washington stamp matters are all going along finely. He encloses to me a certified copy of a certificate from the Washington post-office which he has obtained. It is signed by the postmaster, his chief clerk, chief stamper, and postage-stamp canceler, and one other clerk. It is a first rate certificate. You will be pleased with it; so will Mr. Corse. The original goes before the House committee. I go to Phil. to-morrow morning early in Atwood extension case, and on my return to Troy will see you and hand you Mr. King's letters. Atwood and his expert Kellogg yesterday threatened to whip me while conducting the extension case. Only think of 210 pounds averdupoise being whipped here in New York and so far from home; but the duty to clients must be fully and strictly observed, let the consequences be as they may.

I shall want an interview with you and Mr. Corse on my home return.

Yours truly,

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Our matter before the committee for sufficient reasons has been postponed until Friday next. I saw Mr. Norton this morning in company with Mr. King. He says that in the best judgment of the committee, so far as he has information, we are right in our views of the stamp matter, and that it was very valuable, and would be well paid for beyond doubt.

I will write you again to-morrow. I have been much engaged in the Atwood case since I came here. The examiner in charge has reported against Atwood. We go now before commissioner on the 5th inst., when we expect to "cook his goose" thoroughly.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 9th inst. came at hand this morning. If you did not get my letter, referred to in your letter, the fault was not mine, for one was certainly written and mailed to you. I am sorry that my letters "caused unpleasant feelings." Your confidence in me (which has never for a moment been betrayed) seems to have been lost. For what cause I cannot now say. One thing is most certain, that for more than five long years I have steadily and without reservation labored hard, at many times during the small hours of the night, for the success and best interest of your firm, as well as for you personally. In nothing yet have it failed to accomplish for you which I have in my profession undertaken. In this you will bear me witness. It has sometimes taken a long while and has cost considerable money, but at last, finally, we have triumphed and our rejoicings have been mutual. Now, because I have not written you so as to make you feel good on paper, you scold me rather hard. But, Shavor, what I have written to you is the truth. Would you have me do more? I know you would not, but I think my last letter contained important information to you and Mr. Corse. As to the Ball paper you very well know why I did not settle with "Corning, Winslow & Co." and wipe out all of that paper. I was working night and day even without rest for the best interest of the firm of Chas. Eddy & Co., which add to that the stamp matter and I ask you if I did not have all that I could do? and then thus there could be no delay in either.

2280 You say that "it appears that you have been engaged in the Atwood case ever since you left Troy." In the first place, this is not so. I have been and am engaged in the Atwood case, but I have neglected nothing for you and Mr. Corse. I have been twice heard by the committee, and had private interviews as occasion might require. I have established your and Corse's claim to the introduction of cold air downward upon the fire in numerous small streams or jets in stove covers, a thing which you considered doubtful at the time. I spent some two or three days in seeing Mr. Hoole and getting our matter right there after Ransford betrayed me by his lying promises. I made the point good with Hoole, and will have his affidavit to show you when I return. I went to see the agent for the sale of the patent chair, and arranged all things right there with the full assurance of a speedy and satisfactory sale. I went to see Mr. Wakeman and got all things right there; all of which hindered me so that I did not get into Washington until Sunday morning next after I left Troy. The committee waited for me until on Tuesday following. Then there are many other things which would appear as though I had been attending to something else besides the Atwood case. Then, again, let me here ask you if you have not a vital interest in that case? Atwood claims $40,000 against your firm up to now. Should his extension be granted and he succeed in his suit where would you then be? Just look this whole matter over again, I pray you. They are bearing my expenses in that case. Now, suppose they should turn upon me and say, you have been engaged in your stamp matter and in Stove-Cover case for Shavor & Corse—let them pay your expenses, what would you say? If I had nothing but my own personal expenses to pay, the expense would be very light compared to what they are. But every case is attended with its own expense, whether legitimate or not. Washington in that respect is unlike any other place in this country. Past experience will inform you all about it. But the business comes always right.

2281 On Tuesday of this week I met the House committee in relation to the P. O. stamp, when it was expected I would know their full decision, but Mr. Alley had that morning been called away on account of the Army movement and could not be present nor could a quorum be had, so it was postponed until Friday of this week. Mr. King was with me. I have the full assurance that we will be perfectly satisfied with the report or decision on the stamp matter. My faith is without a waver on that matter. There will not be any doubt but that we will come very near if not up to the figures which we have fixed. Patience we must have for our legislators move slow. Mr. Norton says that the universal opinion of the committee is that the invention ought to be paid for, and well paid. He says that we have made a strong case for good pay, and not one word has yet been said against the sum we have named. This matter has gone just as fast ahead as it could possibly. The Army movements makes a considerable difference here as to business. Much more than it would at Troy. I am also in hopes of getting something tangible as to the chair on my return to New York; such was intimated to me when there. I shall, of course, be here all of this week and perhaps some of next week. I shall not leave here until the Atwood patent expires, which is Saturday night of this week. There is not a particle of doubt but that we shall give him a good sound threshing. He deserves it. I will trust nothing here alone in that case when so much is hanging on it; and when I beat him I hope you stove men will at least thank me for it. I hope to telegraph to you before you get this letter of his complete defeat.

The committee meet again on Friday next at 11 o'clock a. m. I shall always write you when I have something to write. Now, Shavor, I hope you will try me a little longer. I may be of some service to you after all. You have stood by me like a man and I will not forget you or your interests, or that of Chas. Eddy & Co.

Yours truly,

M. P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 11th came duly at hand. I was sorry to find you in such bad spirits. But when you find that everything is just right, as you certainly will, and when I explain to you why I did not write you earlier than I did, you will not blame me any, and you will feel much better. Atwood is badly whipped. Nothing left of him. This is as I told you it would be. The Commissioner in person signed an order yesterday, at 3 o'clock p. m., denying him any extension. It could not have been done by him any earlier than the 14th, the day on which the patent was dated. The appeal board decided against him on Thursday afternoon. The House committee concur in every position taken by us in the stamp matter. That is also a sure thing—no mistake—particulars when I see you. I have one more interview, which will be on Tuesday, on the question of compensation. It is a big thing, they say, and we must give them time to figure and make also estimates, so that no censure can be put on them for recommending a large appropriation.

Charles Eddy is here and in my room. Simmons is also here.

Yours, truly,

METROPOLITAN HOTEL,

DEAR SHAVOR: I did not reach here until 6.30 last evening; the train was about 3 hours behind time. I have been to the post-office to-day; have seen the P. M.; he has fixed upon to-morrow to see me. I saw Hoole. He is most emphatically with us; he is to make an affidavit to-morrow fully sustaining the points made in our letter by Mr. King to the "Post-Office Department," and it will have weight of course. Smith is quite ill at his house. I go there to-morrow to see him, and and if he is well enough I shall get what I want from him; at any rate Hoole's statement will answer the purpose however; I have the stamps in the hands of the engraver. The P. M. could not see me to day in an interview of any length, because of Post Office Department business, but has promised to give me attention to morrow. I saw Hogan at his office. I now believe that he will make the "Water Gas" a great success. I have to-day seen enough for that. I have seen the company whose works are at "Pougkeepsie" and at "Spuyten Duyvul" about the "Railroad Chair." They are to take it just as soon as I return from Washington, and say that they can make and sell them by the hundreds of tons. Will write you to-morrow.

Yours, faithfully,

M. P. NORTON.

METROPOLITAN HOTEL, N. Y.,

DEAR SHAVOR: I wrote you by telegraph to-day that our papers were all signed and executed just right. Hoole * Smith came right up to the mark. Smith says that our invention saves seven clerks in the New York office, at an average salary of $900 each per year, which would be $6,300 in all. Hoole has made an estimate of the value. His lowest sum is over two millions of dollars. His separate letters are quite lengthy, so I will send you copies of them from Washington just as soon as I get there and can copy them before filing them with the committee. You will be much pleased with them, as I can assure you I am. These letters are in addition to his affidavit and in answer to a letter signed Shavor and Corse. I have them with his and Smith's affidavit. They are all strong documents, and now I see nothing to prevent a good and substantial consideration for the invention.

I saw Hogan to-day. He is going to Troy Saturday night. It is quite important that you and Potter see him at once. The details would be too long for this letter. He will give them to you. The matter is an important one. That invention is more valuable than we have hitherto supposed. It should be taken care of at once. Do not sign any assignment or any paper which will change or affect your title. It is the Hogan patent to be reissued, so you may say "we hereby consent that Wm. E. Hogan, of, &c., may reissue said patent, not, however, in anywise relinquishing our right, title, and interest therein and thereto, as well as to all reissues of said patent." This will be sufficient to enable him to reissue the original patent granted to him, which should 2286 be done in two separate patents. One patent on that part of the invention sold to the Hogan Co., and one on that part reserved to and belonging to you. Potter & Hogan, so have Reiley, make two sets of drawings after you have seen Hogan. I will write you from Washington. I am in the best of spirits; I feel that we are right and that a good Providence is with us and directing our movement.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,

MY DEAR SIR: I have just received a letter from Mrs. Norton, and am so happy to hear that you are getting better, and that the prospect of your being out soon are so bright. God bless and preserve you yet many days and years.

I wrote to Dr. Baldwin yesterday. He will let you see the letter. I wrote to Mr. Corse day before yesterday and again to-day. I am happy to inform you that all of our papers submitted this year to Congress have been printed, and each member of the House has now on his desk a copy in print. "Mr. King" and our friend "Norton," of the committee, are to day at work making the report of the House Com. on the P. O. & P. R., to whom the matter was submitted or referred. King will see that all things are right. He has been requested by the 2287 Com. to aid Mr. Norton in this matter. This is confidential. What precise plan of compensation they will agree upon I cannot to-day tell, but shall know when the commitee act on that question, which will be just as soon as Norton writes up his case. The Committee, you will recollect, referred the matter to Mr. Norton to draw up the report of the committee. There is not one of them but that are for us, because they say it is right and just. Mr. King told me last evening that he and Norton would get it all completed this week, and perhaps to-day. I shall send you printed case to-morrow or Monday by express to Charlie, who will see that you have the same.

We have beaten Bowsley before the appeal board on our revenue stamp matter. I mean the one which cancels by tearing or separating the same across the center. The Commissioner of Patents has also given us a patent upon our punch stamp for canceling revenue stamps by punching a hole through the same while giving date, name, &c. So this is first rate on the revenue stamp matter.

The patent on the Mabbitt machine for the manufacture of railroad chairs has also been granted, and will issue on Tuesday, one week from next Tuesday. The patent upon Lane's stove has also been granted in good shape, too. The Stanley matter don't go quite so fast as I wish it might. Foot has hold of it and will do all he can for its extension. I will write you again in a day or two.

Rest assured of one thing, that everything is going all right, and that I shall neglect nothing pertaining to our business. I am quite well satisfied with it so far, and hope that you are and will be. Dr. Baldwin will explain to you about his coming here. We shall want him soon. By the way, Mr. King and his entire family are Baptist people, and also the very good friends and acquaintances of "Speaker Colfax." In this we were most fortunate.

Hoping that you will soon be well again and about business, I remain, as ever, your friend and ob't s't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

MY DEAR SHAVOR: In great haste I now write you to inform you that I was with the House Committee on Saturday evening last, and with Mr. King. They were all agreed that we were and are entitled to liberal compensation. We meet again this eve at 6 o'clock on that question. Some are for a fixed sum—a majority are for a per cent. Either way will make us a handsome fortune. To-morrow they have fixed for completing their report and drawing up the bill for Congress to pass on, which will be introduced on that day, or early Wednesday. Of to-night's result I shall write you to-morrow morning; will send you copy of their report and bill just as soon as printed. The papers which Congress printed I sent to you by mail, under the frank of "I. O. Norton," who is on that Com. I sent one to Corse, and shall to-day send one to Dr. Baldwin. When the bill, &c., is introduced I shall send for him. I may telegraph him to morrow. I have written you two or three letters within as many days, almost, giving you the facts. Hearing that you are much better, I now address my letters to you. I am feeling well indeed about our business here. I have been quite well for me, with the exception that a few days since I had one of those most terrible nervous prostrations, the result of overwork, but am much better now. We have done a great deal of hard work since I came here, and a kind Providence has favored us with grand success and in good time. I may write you again this evening; shall in case 2290 our conference is over in season. Mr. King is faithful and most untiring in his efforts. We have got the matter before Senate Com. too, and the chairman says our bill shall go through just as soon as it comes from the House. I will give you the details in my next about this Senate matter. It was a Yankee operation.

You' faithful friend & ob't s't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

P. S.—Don't let my family know yet about the little nervous matter mentioned above, as it will worry Mrs. Norton; will write you more about it in my next.

DEAR SHAVOR: I have just received an assignment made by you and Holdridge to Hogan in a letter written by Potter. He wants it put on record at the Patent Office in case I was of the opinion that it was "all right." I am not of that opinion yet. I do not see the necessity of so doing, and shall hold on to the assignment, and neither record it or give it to Hogan unless you so direct me. I have not time to-day to give you my reasons and get this off in the mail. I see from my bk. book that your note for $200 is due the 14th and 17th inst. I will write you to-morrow about this, also to Charlie, and make provisions for its payment; wrote you about stamp last evening at length.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: I received a letter from Mrs. Norton this morning, in which she informs me that you have not seen the letters which I wrote to Mr. Corse since he went from here. These letters were details about the stamp matter. Congress has printed all of our papers filed since I came here this time, and they will be ready day after to-morrow, when I will send you a copy just as they have gone before Congress. When these papers are printed and sent back to Congress, then comes next the report of committee, which is now understood to be strongly for us. When this report is laid before the Speaker, then I shall want Dr. Baldwin to come here, and shall telegraph for him. Then the coast will be entirely clear, and we can rush it through. Printing our papers gives the members the opportunity to examine our case and claim, and be ready to act when the report comes in from the Committee. It will also carry it to and through the Senate without any delay. This is some of Mr. Colfax's work, at the request of Mr. King, who are special and good friends. The printing would have been done to-day had not the express company delayed our engraving cuts, which I sent for by telegraph to Charlie, just the moment Congress ordered the printing of our papers. They came this morning, and are now in the hands of the printer. King and I took a carriage and made things hum for about two hours in the forenoon. We are now all right, and the matter is all right. It is a go, certain.

The Stanley matter hung fire yesterday in Senate Com. Senator Foot has taken hold of it to-day, and says it shall go ahead.

2292 I do hope you will soon get entirely well. I have written to Dr. Baldwin to-day. I wrote you a day or two ago.

In great hurry, your frind & ob't s'v't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

[Mr. Foot presented two communications from the Postmaster-General to the House of Representatives, and printed by order of the House as Executive Document No. 27 of the present session, on the subject of a patent canceling and marking stamp used by that department; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post Roads.]

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 24, '65.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I will write you only a short letter now, as Dr. Baldwin wrote you yesterday about the stamp. We are fairly under way in the Senate. The plan now is to vote in both Houses on the same bill at same time, so as to get it through this session. Senator Collamar agrees with the report of the House committee on the stamp subject. He went to see the P. M. Gen'l this morning about the out-and-out purchase of the patent. Collamar thinks that the gov't should make the purchase at once. The P. M. Gen'l has agreed to send a letter to Congress to-morrow recommending the absolute purchase. If he will do this, our case will go through before the adjournment of Congress. I am still full of confidence that we shall go through all right now. The report, with bill in each house, will go in as early as Tuesday 2293 next for the purpose of voting, &c. This will make quick work of it, for then there will be no necessity of sending either bill to the other house for confirmation, because the bills thus passed will become a law, upon approval by the President; so says Mr. Callamar. The P. O. D., the House, and the Senate Com., each and all agree that we are entitled to a fair and just compensation.

I was at the department to-day, and saw 60 new stamps just from Hool's works, and every one of them were cork. I saw there two for the Troy P. O., and they will be there the first of next week. They are splendid ones. The gov't intend to put it into use in all the P. O. just as soon as they can get them made. I was told there that postmasters would have nothing else. It grows more popular every day. The department told me this day that it is the best stamp ever used, and would not, could not be superseded by any other, as that question had already been settled. We are all right, and going ahead. I am sorry that Dr. Baldwin was oblige' to go home to-day. He will see you and explain to you such facts as he may have obtained while here one day. I could have made him useful had he staid here. Will write you again, when I learn what the P. M. G. writes about an absolute purchase. All things shall move to the point, and everything will be done to secure the thing so much desired, to wit, success in money. I have to-day agreed to take gov't bonds of 1881, and asked Mr. Collamar to provide in the bill an exemption from gov't income tax. I had one of those most terrible spells of nervous prostration, which lasted for about five hou s, but Nellie, being here, knew just what to do, and took good care of me. I am better to day. Over taxation of the nervous system is the cause of them, but they will wear away after awhile.

Yours, truly,

M. P. NORTON.

2294 E. P. S. has gone to the front. I let him have in all $30. He will need no money for promotion; we can get it for him. I have his papers and his trunk here. His time was up.

DEAR SHAVOR: In the case which Charles said we had got into trouble, I have put through, and a patent will now issue to us. I inclose you receipt for the balance fee. We may have no special use for this pa ent only as a "tub to throw at the whale" in defending our great paten , which by the way is now very popular with the Postmaster-General. I called to inquire in relation to it, and was then informed that it was in more favor than ever before and was now considered an almost indispensable improvement. That the only fault found was that the department could not get as many made as it had demand for, but that the contractor was making large quantities of them, and that the P. O. D.

was putting them into all the post-offices where stamps are used. There will be no trouble in getting the department to do the handsome thing by us next fall. It is now promised us.

This $20 I paid out of draft on C. & E. & B. for $55, and the balance went for other fees, such as appeals, &c., in the same case. I became anxious about this case on account of the information which Charles brought home to you and Corse, so that you now see where we again are—as always, "all right."

2295 I shall see Hogan in New York, on Friday or Saturday.

Have got all of Lillie's cases, reissues, new patents, extensions, &c., &c., "all just right."

U. S. PATENT OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., November 14th, 1865.

DEAR SHAVOR: I am now in the Patent Office, and write you from here so that you will get the letter to-morrow. I have carefully examined the Mason cases, and I find that he never had a caveat on file for the inventions which he took patent for—or at least such is the record here; and I have for that and other purposes ordered certified copies of such record. His matter, I am satisfied, is a great wrong, and his patents cannot be maintained in law or in equity. Something ought to be done here, but I do not know as I ought to do it, because I have no instructions from you or from Potter. Mr. Holloway is now absent, and in the State of Indiana, and is expected home every day, when I shall expect to get a certificate from him in relation to the Hogan matter. Mr. Combs, who was on the appeal board at the time of the granting of the Hogan patent, is now practicing law here, he having resigned his position on the board of appeals. I think it would be well for the New York men to get his services secured if they want immediate ac-

2296 tion, by way of an opinion to counteract the D. A. Burr opinion given in favor of Mason. I have made some inquiries in relation to this Burr, and I find that he is a new man in the patent business, and his opinion is not of great value in patent cases and matters.

I have daily expected that you would send me the post-office certificates, and King and I would then see the Postmaster-General about the stamp business. Mr. Norton is now at the National, and will be here all of next winter during the session of Congress, and says that he can and will help us through with the p. o. stamp matter. He was on the committee last winter, and had charge of the case then. I shall see Colfax on the 17th inst. We are getting along finely with our business here.

DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter is at hand. The package came by express late last evening. Mr. King came in in a few minutes after, and I gave it to him, and he will take it to the department to-morrow. Mr. Coombs is now writing out an opinion in your favor, in the Hogan matter. He will have it done to-morrow or Tuesday, and I will take it to New York with me. Mr. Holloway has not yet returned from Indiana.

Colfax is now here; I shall see him to-morrow. Norton, who was 2297 last winter on the P. O. Com., says that we ought to have the $300,000, and that he will help me to urge this matter, and secure with members of Congress at the next session. Mr. King says the same. Senator Collamer is dead, and I do not know who will take his place on that committee in the Senate, but it will be some good man who may be more liberal towards us than he was last winter. I think, on the whole, that we will be quite as well off in the Senate. Our claim and case is now a pretty strong one. About the chair I will say that I enclose you a letter from N. Y. I shall see to the matter on my return there, and hope that they will be far enough along to be able to close the matter up. I shall leave here on Wednesday next, and remain there long enough to finish up the case, if possible, and will take papers to your men which will offset Mr. Burr. All our matters now look well, indeed, much better and hopeful than ever. Don't lose the the letter.

Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I shall have to take to New York with me to-night Coombs' opinion in the Hogan matter, which knocks Mr. Burr's opinion into pie. He was on the appeal board, and of course perfectly familiar with the case. He does not think much of Burr's opinion. Holloway has just returned, and will also give certificate. I go to New York to-night, and meet Mabbitt and our chair men there to-morrow, and hope to arrive to a definite fact and close up a bargain. The note you gave me for the Bishop matter—$450—is due the 23d and 26th of this month. I hope to get home before then. We will have to get a new note discounted to make this one good, which I can get next discount day, one week from to-day, without any mistake. The post office matter came all right, as I wrote you some days ago. Mr. Colfax, in case he is made Speaker, will do as we have proposed about committee, and I think there is no doubt about his election. Our certificates please the department much, as now it has something definite to act upon. We are advised to put our case in the first thing after the organization of the House and formation of committees.

Hoping to see you soon, and that the Hogan matter will now go ahead without any more stops, I remain,

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

MY DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter is at hand just as the New York mail is about to close, and I hasten to write you by this mail.

The stamp business is going just right, so far. There is nothing wrong about it. Both the House and Senate committees have agreed that we are justly entitled to compensation, and they have called on the Post-Office Department for information as to the average price paid clerks in the New York and other post-offices, which is to serve as a basis for them to get at the amount in round sum, or in some of the per cent. plans we have talked over. We had interviews with these committees in session last of last week. The department have this day promised the statement, in writing, as to salaries, &c., &c., within this week, and the committee will then report to the house immediately after agreeing upon a bill. We shall be able to get through with it long before the close of the session. We are arranging with members now, so as to have no opposition when the bill is reported to the House. If there were anything wrong about it, I would write you just as soon as I would on good news, but I was waiting, hoping for this report from the department by this day, so as to let you know what it was, but shall have to do that at some other day. I have no doubt but that it will be satisfactory. I hardly believe it will be necessary for the Dr. to come here, as the matter does not yet meet with any opposition. Should it be necessary I will advise you in time. I want to save this expense if 2300 I can. The man here who makes the stamps for F. & Co. does it for $5.75, all complete, out of good steel, and the department say they are a great deal better than Hoole. Hoole cheated the department in the making of the stamp. He expected to bring us and the department under his control—so thinks the stamp agent in the department. Only think, a good combined steel stamp, all ready for use, at $5.75. We have paid a big figure for all our work on stamps, and I am ashamed of myself that we did not find it out sooner in some way. Have you received the new stamps yet which we sent to New York, and for the offices you named?

The department are putting our stamp into all the offices as fast as it can get them made. Mr. Davis, the agent of that department, told me to day that he had just given the largest order ever given since he had been there, which is about 15 years, and every one of them are our cork double stamp. He says that postmasters won't use anything else; but once in a while they find a P. M. who don't know how to use it. He says, also, that the P. O. D. will have to use our bag within the next year. The committee are going to see Davis and witness the stamping of letters in the Washington P. O. I have got all things ready for them in both places. This is to aid them in drawing up their report to present to the House, and to give them argument to use in favor of the passage of the bill. I will keep you fully advised. The central perforated tube matter I will write you about this evening or to-morrow morning; also, finish answer to your letter. I have struck this by the power of "lightning," so try and read it.

Yours, truly,

M. P. NORTON.

will go to New York to-morrow in time for the 24th inst. He says the case is sure, and that Kellar says so too. Good.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,

DEAR SIR: I send you a copy of the act passed the House yesterday so you can see the failure of the envelope scheme of the P. M. G., and that stamps are still to be used, by permission, to change the design, if found necessary so to do by reason of any counterfeiting, any and all of which will require cancellation. This being now out of our way we will hurry up the matter. All is going well with committee.

Yours, truly,

M. P. NORTON.

The following is a copy of the amended bill as passed:

A BILL to amend the postal laws.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, prepaid letters shall be forwarded at the request of the party addressed from one post-office to another without additional postage charge; and returned dead-letters shall be restored to the writers thereof free of postage.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the tenth section of the act entitled "An act to establish salaries for postmasters and for other purposes," approved July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-four; and so much of the twenty-eighth section o the act entitled "An act to amend the laws relating to the Post-Office Department, approved March 2306 three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, as requires postage to be charged at the prepaid rate, to be collected on the return delivery of letters endorsed with a request for their return to the writers, be and the same are hereby repealed; and all letters bearing such endorsement shall hereafter be returned to the writers thereof without additional postal charge.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the third section of the act entitled "An act to establish a postal money-order system," approved May 17, 1864, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to authorize the issuing of a money order for any sum not to exceed fifty dollars, and that the charge or fee for an order for a sum not exceeding twenty dollars shall be ten cents, and for an order for a sum exceeding twenty dollars twenty-five cents.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That a money order shall be valid and payable when presented to the deputy postmaster on whom it is drawn within one year after its date, but for no longer period; and in case of the loss of a money order a duplicate thereof shall be issued without charge on the application of the remitter or payee, who shall make the required proofs; and the postmasters at all money order offices are hereby authorized and required to administer to the applicant or applicants in such cases the required oath or affirmation free of charge.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all railroad companies carrying the mails of the United States shall convey without extra charge, by any train which they may run over their roads, all such printed matter as the Postmaster-General shall from time to time direct to be transported thereon, with the persons in carge of the mails designated by the Post-Office Department for that purpose.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall wilfully and maliciously injure, deface or destroy any maila-
2307 ble matter deposited in any letter-box, pillar-box, or other receiving boxes established by authority of the Postmaster-General of the United States for the safe deposit of matter for the mails or for delivery, or shall wilfully aid and assist in injuring such mailable matter so deposited as aforesaid, either by pouring into such boxes oil, water, or other fluids, or by any other means, every such offender, thereof being duly convicted, shall for every such offense be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned not less than one year nor more than three years, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That whenever it shall become expedient, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, to substitute a different kind of postage-stamps for those now in use, he shall be, and is hereby, authorized to modify the existing contract for the manufacture of postage stamps, so as to allow to the contractors a sum sufficient to cover the increased expenses, if any, of manufacturing the stamps so substituted.

SEC. 8. That section two of an act entitled an act to establish salaries for postmasters and for other purposes, approved July 1, 1864, be amended by adding the following: Provided, That when the quarterly returns of any postmaster of the third, fourth, or fifth class show that the salary allowed is ten per cent. lower that it would be on the basis of commissions under the act of 1854, concerning compensation, then the Postmaster-General shall review and readjust under the provisions of said section.

Mr. Schenck, of Ohio, from the Committee on Military Affairs, gave notice that he should at an early day report the Army bill and ask its immediate consideration by the House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 28th, 1866.

HON. T. W. FERRY,
A House Committee on the P. O. & P. R's:

SIR: Your answer to my letter of the 26 instant with copy report of the Postmaster-General in relation to the use by the government through the Post-Office Department of the invention known as the "Norton post-marking & postage-canceling stamp" is received, and in reply thereto, I have to state:

That I am much surprised at the inadequate compensation recommended by him for the past and future use of the said invention. It is not a fair or just sum for the purchase of the said stamp. His recommendations are formed upon a wrong and entirely unsatisfactory basis, which will become apparent as I proceed with this letter in answer to yours and that report.

The main and more substantial points of advantages, gains, and profit of said invention to the government are briefly as follows, to wit:

1st. It certainly saves in labor alone one-half the clerk-hire in all the larger offices where stamping clerks are required, and the Postmaster-General says in his said report that it now saves in the different offices in this country "two hundred and fifty-four clerks," who, at an annual salary of $800, would receive (but for this invention) the full sum of $203,200 (two hundred and three thousand and two hundred dollars). This is, therefore, the amount in round numbers saved to the government annually, and for the three past years this invention has saved the Post-Office Department $609,600 (six hundred and nine thousand and six hundred dollars).

2309 2d. It is a most complete and perfect invention for the successful and permanent cancellation of the postage-stamps, whereby they cannot be cleaned chemically or otherwise for the purpose of a second or reuse of the same in fraudulent payment of postage, which to the government is another item of certainly great interest and importance in the saving of the revenue of the Post-Office Department.

It will be remembered that a few years ago many persons were engaged in advertising for the procurement and purchase of old or once used postage stamps for the purpose of converting the same into "papier mache" which were to be sold for the purposes of educating young men for the Christian ministry. Into the work of supposed charity many good people went with great will and effort, and thus many hundred thousand of old or once used postage-stamps were collected and given to such charity; not a single device of the kind named was ever made out of these postage-stamps, and of course not one person was educated for the Christian ministry as thus proposed, but such stamps were washed or cleaned by a chemical process and sold and reused in payment of postage whereby the government was defrauded out of many, many thousand dollars. But when this invention of Norton's went into general use in all of the larger post-offices, this fraud, though beginning upon a small scale yet ending in a gigantic one, had a most certain and positive end, for the postage stamps then became permanently canceled so that no chemical process, or wash, or other device would so clean the said stamps without the entire destruction of the design, which would immediately discover the fraud if an attempt were made to reuse the same; to what extent this invention has already or may hereafter save the government in dollars and cents by permanently checking and stopping this fraud, which with some scoundrels had become an extensive business, cannot with a certainty of course be known, but it is fair to draw an inference from this fact and surrounding; for this purpose the said invention is of great value.

2310 3d. By the use of the said invention the mails in the large post-offices are made up with much greater rapidity than ever before, by means of which there is no delay in the dispatch and transportation of the mails. Previous to the use of this invention, in the large offices it very often happened that a large number of letters, papers, &c., had to remain over for one mail because the full number of letters could not be mailed in time for the trains. This of course would be a great injury to all kinds of business men, whose letters were thus detained. Now by this invention every letter or other matter is made ready for transit as soon almost as received at the mailing office; of course there is no delay; more than that, postmasters may now hold open their mails to a much later hour, and then receive, and mail, and send in transportation the correspondence of business men, which to all kinds or classes of business men is of considerable importance. For this reason the said invention is of importance and value not only to the department, but to the business men of our country. It thus confers a permanent benefit upon business community and hastens transit of mail matter.

There are many other ways set forth in the petition for compensation for past use and for the purchase of the said invention, by which the entire business portion of our country are much benefited by the use of said invention, so there are many others therein set forth by which the government itself, through the Post-Office Department, is very much benefited, and money saved, which I do not deem best to here mention at length length, but I do ask for them your careful consideration, for small items in a great country and government become large, very large.

The Postmaster-General in said report says that in 1860 I sold to the New York office a number of these stamps for use there. His is a great error. I never sold a stamp to that or any other post-office in my 2311 life, nor did any one by my authority. The stamps then and since used in that office were made by the then government contractor by direction of the Post-Office Department; I have not directly or indirectly received from the government or from any other source a single dollar in compensation for this invention, nor have I in any way or manner whatever given my consent for the Post-Office Department or any sub-post-office to use the said invention without a fair and just compensation, but, on the other hand the understanding has always been with the department that when the matter came up in Congress justice should be done in the purchase and payment of this invention; I did consent to a full and thorough trial of this invention in the New York office so that the department might have as it had expressed a desire to prove the value of the said invention before undertaking to put the same under contract for manufacture for its use in post-offices, and having by a fair test proven its great utility and value to the postal service it adopted it and let a contract to Fairbanks & Co. of New York to manufacture stamps containing said invention for a term of four years (more than three of which have now expired), knowing at the same time that Fairbanks & Co. had no right whatever to make for the department such stamps and sell the same to the government. This question has also been determined against them, i. e., that said contractors or their subcontractor, Edmund Hoole, had no such right. This was settled in a suit of the assignees against said Hoole, wherein it was also determined by judge and jury that said Norton was the original and first inventor of said invention, and that suit with its surroundings was necessarily an expensive one, and had to be brought, because the late Postmaster-General, in order to prevent the payment of a fair and just compensation for said invention, assailed the patent thereon by denying that said Norton was the original and first inventor thereof as by the law required in order to maintain the title in the patent. It was decided in Norton's favor at a large expense in money and loss of time.

2312 Out of more than 28,000 post-offices in this country, but a few comparatively have it now in use, and yet the Postmaster-General was compelled to admit the fact which I have before stated in relation to the enormous annual savings by the use of this invention, to wit, more than two hundred thousand dollars per year, which would amount in 17 years, the life of said patent, to $3,454,400 (three millions four hundred and fifty-four thousand and four hundred dollars) just for the offices alone in which the invention is now in use and leaving about 27,000 post-offices yet to provide for, and in about half of which post-marking stamps are now used, and which are to be supplied with the said Norton invention so soon as there old stamps become worn out; so says the Postmaster General in said report. Now upon his basis of calculation for every thousand offices which use said invention there is and will be saved more than 3,000,000. A few figures will show you the immense sum counted only by millions for the lifetime of said patent.

Any patented invention to be valuable to the inventor must of course be used, and it is the use of said invention by the government which makes this one of great value to the inventor. The Postmaster-General is entitled to great credid for the discovery that unless the department used said invention that it would have no money value to the inventor. Would not this have been so with the rubber patent, with the tel graph patent, and many other valuable inventions if not used? But the fact is, the department use this invention and extensively, too, and it is putting it into still more extensive use as fast as it can; so says the Postmaster-General in said report.

No one will for a single moment believe that the department intend to discontinue the use of said invention which in three years has saved to it more than $600,000. This is merely an effort to get this invention for a small sum, "a song," to wit, $20,000. There is no danger of 2313 said invention being superceeded by another; if there is, why has it not been done before now? And again there is no necessity for it. This does just what is required to be done, and it was the result of many experiments, labor, and money expense, and such argument of the P. M. General is inequitable and is for the purpose of obtaining said invention for those low figures, to wit, $20,000. More than that the department has deliberately decided and determined this the best one, and without any right in law or in equity put it into extensive use to its own great gain and profit and still so continue it.

It appears upon the face of said report that the Postmaster-General made his low estimate, to wit, $20,000, upon the assumption that the present Congress would pass a law compelling the people to use "stamped envelopes" only, that no detached and adhesive postage-stamps should be allowed to be used in payment of postage. This impractical and inconvenient thing or plan will not work, for the House Committee, whereof you are a member, has already refused to recommend such bill to become the law, for such an act would have been one of great injustic' to the people at large as well as to our manufactures; detached and adhesive stamps for payment of postage must be used always. Business requires it. In some cases stamped envelopes are convenient, but in all cases the separate and adhesive stamp is always the more convenient.

These are in my judgment only arguments of fancy and of an equitable mind in order to fix the arbitrary price of a valuable and meritorious invention at the small sum of $20,000, and thus forbid that right and justice shall be done under the law which gave to the inventor property in this invention. That same government which now uses said invention by the law of force only gave to the inventor the exclusive right to and property in said invention, and it now has no right to convert it to its own use without a fair and just compensation, and no one will pretend under all the facts that $20,000 is anywhere near a fair or just sum.

2314 The $20,000 recommended would not pay me the usual rates in my profession for the time and trouble expended upon this invention in the getting it into public use, in getting patents and in prosecuting a suit in regard to the validity of said patents when a former Postmaster-General sent me to test the validity of said patent, he having, as before stated, denied to your committee my right to the invention as the original and first inventor. As before stated, the courts decided the case in favor of the patent. I made no charge to the expenses for this service and labor, nor for counsel who were employed with me in the case; I ought to have 6,000 for such service and labor, and $4,000 for payment of associate counsel in the case; these sums would but be fair and usual charges in such case.

I am authorized to state that the $20,000 recommended by the Postmaster-General is not anything like a fair, just, or equitable compensation for the past use of said invention and for the purchase of the patent, and that the sum of $100,000 for such purchase of the patent, and $12,282 $\frac{70}{100}$ cash expenses, and $10,000 for attorney and counsel fees, for labor and services rendered, in all the of $122,282.70 free from income tax, will be received as a round sum for the transfer of said patent to the department, together with the interest on the money expended as recommended by the P. M. General.

It is well here to call your attention to the fact that it is within the power of my assignees and myself to prevent the further use of said invention by the issuing of an injunction against all who attempt to use it, and to prevent the contractor from manufacturing it as according to his or any other contract with said department, but we much rather that a fair, just, and equitable course should be pursued towards us than to be driven, because justice is withheld, to stop such use and manufacture, and thus at once compel the department to put into office the "two hundred and fifty four clerks" per par, which the P. M. General 2315 says are now saved to the department, which would be the best and most honorable course for government to pursue. What shall encourage and stimulate invention for the benefit of the public at large and for the maintainance of the government!

I am authorized to say also, that instead of a "round" or fixed sum the said invention may be purchased for the price of the annual saving in labor alone for the term of three years, as reported by the Postmaster General in said report, provided that settlement is had upon that basis and the payments made on settlement and transfer of the patent in 1866.

On the 3d day of June, 1864, Congress passed an act act or joint resolution agreeing to pay for a "shell and fuse" patent for war purposes the sum of $100,000 (one hundred thousand dollars). It does not appear whether or not the government was benefited by this last-named invention, while the said stamp and canceling device is not only admitted to be one of great benefit to the government, but is shown to be so by a large amount of proofs. I have expected that the government would at least consider this invention as fairly as it has many others pertaining to the War and Navy Departments.

I have no objections to going to the Court of Claims to establish the price by positive proofs at which the government shall purchase the said patent and settle and pay for past acts of infringements, provided that costs shall be allowed for such course, and that the said court shall fix the sum upon the proofs produced as to the saving and the actual value to the government, and give judgment therefor.

It is a well settled rule of law that the inventor bringing suit for the infringement of his patent is entitled to recover all profits made by the vendor, manufacturer or user of his invention, and in the case of the user the rule is that what he saves by the use of the invention and advantages materially and permanently gained are to be considered 2316 as the profits made by such use. I have no doubt but that the best way for the government is to pay the sum first proposed, and as proposed, as it would be much the cheaper, and it ought not to expect to use and continue the use of this invention, by which it annually saves such large sum of money, without a fair and just compensation in proportion to the benefit conferred by it.

I have made this communication as short as I could in justice to myself and the department, and I think your committee will have no trouble in coming to the conclusion that the Postmaster-General in said report begs the question, &c., &c.

Very respectfully, your ob't serv't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter is at hand. If it had intimated that you would undertake to stop the use of the invention unless gov't a fair and just sum for the same, by an injunction, and being wholly in relation to the stamp matter and the P. M. G.'s report, I would have handed it to the committee, for your ideas in relation the report and use of the invention are first rate. Now, if you think best to send me such a letter, I have no doubt but that it will work well.

Mr. Ferry will report as an allowance the sum of $122,282.70, and just as soon as I can get the papers and get copies from them all, I will send you them, and then you see how it came about. You wrote 2317 me to take $100,000, round sum, or I would have had more reported. This is, perhaps, as large a sum as we can get through in round sum. He has proposed two other plans, either of which would give us more than three times that sum, and I believe would go through the sooner. Now, he will certainly report on Friday of this week or Tuesday of next, and any suggestions you may make to me will not be out of time or place, in my judgment. If you would show fig t by court or injunctions against every person who makes or uses this stamp, it would have a good effect here.

I shall answer your letter more in detail in course of a few days, say this week, just as soon as I get the papers to copy. It will go straight ahead as soon as the report is made.

The Hagan matter in New York has occupied considerable of my time in hunting up an' sending papers to New York, and I am so glad that I am here so as to get it all O. K. He writes me that the case is a sure one for us.

Shavor, the governor of Montana has been here to see me about the great invention—Hagan process. He says it is the greatest invention of the age, and worth millions—and he wants to get a slice. He is coming to see me again to-night. A lady friend of Nellie's introduced him to me. He is sound on the greenbacks. After I have had another interview with him I can tell you more about it, but don't part with that invention for any small sum. With the New York suit won you may then rest certain of a big pile in three months—so he says. He is anxious that you should win.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Ferry makes his report to-day to his committee, and then a bill will be drawn up and submitted to the House at once. He recommends in round numbers $122,270 $\frac{70}{100}$, or the saving for the years, based upon the Postmaster-General's report of annual saving of 254 clerks at $800 salary per year, immediate settlement and free from income tax. The papers, he says, will be ready to furnish copy to-morrow, and I will send them all to you just as soon as we get them.

It came just right in our New York suit by my being here. Will write you more about this suit next time. The governor of Montana was on a visit to our rooms here last evening. He wants to get an interest in the patent in case you win the suit, &c.

I send you draft on Allen for $260 at one month. He is the one I drafted on before, and who paid the draft. I did not dare to risk a sight draft on him here for fear he might be from home. He told me to draft on him for any money I wanted in his business, so I have used for him some money out of our general fund and now draft for it back and some more to use right here. I want to make the matter just as light as possible for you. In exchange for this draft I have drawn on your Co. for same amount. This discount and other expenses, if you will name them to me, I will send it to you by letter from here.

Charlie says that the Providence man will be in Troy and pay his draft, &c.

The New York man is now in Ohio, and I am expecting him
2319 here every day, when he said he would pay your draft by draft to your order on New York. Please pay my draft on your house and put my draft on Hon. J. L. Allen to my credit, in place of my draft on you, which will make this transaction even when you let me know the charges, &c. The Stanly extension case will come up in committee to morrow. The chairman has promised me to put it through, but his bankrupt bill has, until now, prevented his action, &c.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.

DEAR SIR: I am preparing the bill which are to be submitted to the committee, and they has specially assigned Friday next for that purpose and to hear me on the subject. I will send you copies of them on Tuesday next. There is but one of the nine on the committee who sides with the P. M. General, and he will have to submit to the others, so says Mr. F. He thinks that we can put it through in the early part of next week.

I have sent to Wm. E. Hagan, New York, the balance of English and other patents and duplicate models which I found all complete when I got back here, and which completes all for the defence and prosecution of the New York case. This I suppose gets in all the testimony on both sides.

The examiner in charge reported against the extension of the Earle's Smut Machine Patent on the ground that Leonard Smith of Troy had a patent on the same thing. I don't believe it, and so have gone 2320 on an appeal, and have no doubt but that I shall get the extension. I shall know by Wednesday or Thursday next. I will say that I will get the extension. I will have a copy of his report sent to you. The copy of patent you and I talked about which will kill Littlefield's patent will go to you about Thursday next. Wrote you Friday last.

I mean to get through here in the next two weeks. Jencks will take up Stanley Wednesday next.

Yours, truly,

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., April 18, 1866.

DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter is just received. In relation to the expenses here I have to say that I paid some of them for Hagan case out of our general fund of $750, which I brought with me in addition to my railroad and other expenses here, allowing stopping of two days in New York, say $100, in all about $850. I wrote to Mr. Hagan, asking him who should pay these expenses, and I have his letter (which I will look up and send or hand to you) in which he said you and Potter were were to pay them, so I thought I would get them all together and then make our fund good by draft. Now, we have had a large amount of English cases—patents as well as several from our own country to get, and to get them when we wanted them we paid more than the regular fees. But one thing more, I had duplicate models made of Mason's patented models, which I have sent to New York, and on which I was blis-2321 tered somewhat, and after I supposed all things were just right, and had made my draft and was about to box up the duplicates, &c., I discovered that there was something wrong about the duplicate, so I had to wait until Monday last (Saturday being a day in commemoration of the lamented Lincoln, all business was suspended and departments were closed). On Monday I went to Patent Office, and found that Mr. Mason had patented an invention not shown in his model, to wit, the treating of ores with gases through jets—Hagan's invention—but on examining the original drawings on which the patent issued, I found the Hagan invention. Of course, I had to have "fac simile" drawings on thick paper, which shows the whole things just as we want, and which show Mason's whole course to be one of most willful and positive fraud. These drawings will cost me $25 more, and will go to morrow to Hagan. I will, of course, explain everything, and particular to you on paper or by word when I see you.

The new Groom case here is certainly a big thing. I wish you could see the model, and you will at once agree with me that Winslow and any one who use the Bessemer process in the manufacturing of iron and steel will have to dance to your music. I have to-day great confidence in it and am pushing it ahead. It was filed in the early part of the year 1862, which is all right for us. I want to get it out before the New York men get here.

It is very doubtful whether Congress will adjourn or not this season, so Mr. Jencks (chairman of Com. on Patents) told me at his house last evening.

I am busy to-day on our bills and will try and send you copy to-morrow. Friday is the day set down by the vote of the committee for the consideration of the bills and to hear me and Mr. King. I have written in great haste, and of course in a bad hand, but you can read it.

Yours, most truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SHAVOR,
Troy, N. Y.:

The gov'r of Colorado has been here to see me, and had quite a long chat with him about gold and silver mines in his Territory, and the main point was in relation to the Hagan invention. He says that it is a "big thing," only manage it right and it is worth millions of dollars. He owns largely in the mining interest of that section.

He is elected United States Senator for that Territory, and will take his seat in the Senate just as soon as it is admitted as a State, which will probably be decided on Tuesday next. He knows all about the Mason patent and its use in his Territory, and when he heard of the Hagan case he would not touch it farther. He now waits to see how the suit comes out, then he and many of his friends will dip in. He is as enthusiastic about the matter as the governor of Montana was, and about which I wrote you. Both are with and for us, and hope for our success in New York in the suit, when, as they say, "Money will go to you like a flood." They say it is the only really valuable and successful invention of the kind for that purpose. They will dip, and help their friends in New York and elsewhere to dip in too, as soon as you get things settled in your favor by the court.

I succeed in getting the Earl's Smut Machine Patent extended yesterday for a term of seven years from the 27th inst., and the patent will be sent to him some time this week, but it cost him $265 to do it, else it would have been lost. This I drew on your company for, and which draft must be charged to him on his Smut Machine Patent Ex-
2323 tended, &c. The examiner who examined the case went at first dead against the extension, and so reported to the Commissioner, and after about ten days of fighting arrangements, I gave a dose which operated like an anodyne, but may have produced the gum-piles. At any rate yesterday witnessed the extension of the patent.

I will write you to morrow about the stamp matter. I wish it was passed just as we want it, for I am tired of this Washington; I much rather be at home, but hanging on will at last get what we want, and no other course will, so I content to stay it out. The P. M. G. begins to be a little ashamed of his $20,000 and $13,000 recommendation. I send you enclosed a printed scrip in relation to gold, &c., &c., taken from a paper here.

I am quite well.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: The entire committee go to the post-office to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock to witness the operation of post-marking letters and in cancelling the postage stamps thereon, and will vote on the next day.

P. Low has not yet called upon Mr. Ferry, nor have I seen him since he left here soon after you were here. Did you take him home with you? Mr. T. says that his com. will not go into his story of "Misfortunes," &c., at all. I shall keep you posted, and of course will write you to-morrow after the operation at the p. office here.

2324 I suppose you will have seen to the Earl's matter before you get this, but do not entrust him with the "confidence" or any one else. I would rather lose it and go to the poor-house first before I would be guilty of betrayal of confidence, although I never consider it any betrayal to let you into the matter, as I know it will stop with you.

Yours truly,

DEAR SIR: Peter Low called here last night, and has taken rooms at this hotel. He went to see Griswold yesterday, and he told Peter that he would not undertake anything against us, and therefore could do no more for Peter than to show him the com. room. So Peter went to see Mr. Alley, the chairman, and told his "yarn." Mr. Alley told him that he might come before the committee to-morrow, but that his committee would not act upon his pretended claim, as it had already been settled in and by the court, and could not be reviewed by him or by Congress. We are going into the case to-morrow, and I will then write you all about it. The com. went to P. O. to-day at 9 o'clock, but have seen none of them since. I will report to you to-morrow. Ferry says it is all going just right.

Yours in haste,

M. P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Your letter came at hand on Sunday evening, but I was quite ill yesterday and could not write you. Not hearing from you on the day I expected, I thought your family were quite ill, and so I thought I would not wait, but at once provided for the draft, which I send to you, enclosed. The law provides for payment as its fee on extensions of $100, no more and no less, and no one ever pretended it was any more. If you will look at your letter I wrote you on the matter you will see what I stated, and that the course pursued by me, though successful, cost him $265. Now I shall not have any talk with Mr. Earls about this case, for certain reasons, but for the course I did pursue he could never have had the extension, and when I acted it was in good faith, and hav ing done business for your house and for you since 1858 or '9, I think you will say that I have been faithful and successful, and that what I told you at any time during that time was not only reliable, but the truth. I would never have done the case for him had I not have understood that your house were to see to my wants, as very few extension cases are successful, being very difficult to manage, and failing on one of the six main points the whole fails. I have never lost an extension, however, though I might have done, but for careful and personal attention, and I have also defeated every extensioncase which I have undertaken.

This is a matter which I can't well afford to lose, and yet I shall 2326 lose it, except it be that he is to pay my fees for services, and yet I made no arrangement with him. The best way is to let it entirely alone. Live and learn.

Our stamp matter is being voted on to-day, and I will write you to-morrow about it, as I will not know about it until 5 o'clock. Mr. Ferry seemed to think that they would vote $100,000 and expenses.

The Com. would not act upon Mr. Low's proposition and set me down, refusing to hear me, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction over a matter settled by the courts. Griswold would do nothing for Low, so he (Griswold) told me personally.

The Stanley extension has passed the House Committee, and I will send you to-morrow or next day copy of the act.

I wanted $150 of the Stanley fund for that use and purpose, and having the draft to pay, and my last month's bill I drew for the $300, and will make the other $150 good, as I want to use it from another source. Part of my family here will go to Troy Friday next, as I am being kept here very much longer than I expected, but I mean to stick it out until we get our funds.

The draft states it is for Stanley, which is the amount agreed upon to be used, and which I told you I would want at $100 at the time, and so I would, but I come $140 short on all payments to be made. Draft $265; bill, $317; dead ducks, $200; but I can make the Stanley $150 good, when I need it, which I think will be satisfactory to you. Will write you to-morrow again.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Your letter came this morning. I wrote Charlie some time last week to see you and say to you that Monday of this week was the day fixed upon for the vote in the House on your bill, but Mr. Ferry has been quite ill, and was on that day unable to present the case. He has had what they call here "chills and fever," and to-day is very much better, and says that he will be well enough to attend to it on the next regular day, which will be Monday next. The Senate committee has examined the case and are only waiting the House bill, and it will go through there in less than a week, so I am credibly informed. It can't be otherwise than short work; the shorter the better it will suit me, for I am tired of being from home and business so much, but I will stick by this thing if we never get any more than enough to pay you and Corse the expenses.

I am glad your North Carolina matter looks so well. I hope it is all your returned friend says it is, and that you all will get rich as gold out of it. I would liked to have been in condition to have taken some stock in the thing, but being poor of course could not, and so I must lose the opportunity to become wealthy. We are not all born to be in luck or at peace. My lot has been to be poor, and either to surrender the sacred rights of clients to opponents at the loss of character and reputation, or for the time undergo scandal and to suffer wrong and thus be at war; so rather than betray clients or depart from the most 2328 strict line and rule of truth, or in any way to commit any act which would reflect upon my moral or religious life, I chose to receive the threatened storm of scandal, persecution, and slander, and so my lot has been what it is. I would that it were better, but I have no complaints to make, no remorse of conscience. I shall ever hope and struggle to do just right between man and man, and if in all things I err in judgment I can't help it. Men who have plenty of money can always get along. They are always ready for anything and everything. The hardest part of the fight is to get the first few thousand dollars on hand for the start, and then the rest is easy enough.

I should think that the better way for you would be to sell off the million of dollars worth or more and then keep the balance, as even then you will have more mining property than you expected, and of course you all will be very rich. It cannot be otherwise according to your letter.

It is quite warm weather here, with frequent rains. There will be nothing wanting on my part to put the stamp ahead to a complete and final result at an early time.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SHAVOR: I wrote you yesterday, enclosing a draft on Chicago, and explaining the draft on your house dated yesterday, which I hope will be satisfactory in all respects. Your note of $500, due the 15 and 18, I think, I propose to pay by your discounting Stewart's note, 2329 endorsed by Humiston and enclosed herewith; the balance you can hand to Charlie, or retain $75, to pay you enough to make up yesterday's draft, but he will want some, how much exactly, I don't know.

Stewart's note you had for $500 will have to be renewed for three or four months, so I propose to discount your note for that purpose, instead of the one enclosed. It will be due 19 and 22. I will send one for you to make in time for its payment, and Charley can take the money and go and pay it. I will write him about so that he will know what to do about it and have no mistake. Yours will be due 15 and 18 I think, and this endorsed note will make you all O. K.; and yours, when I send it in a day or so, will pay the Stewart owned by you, due 19 and 22, and give Stewart new time without damage to any one.

I will write you about stamp business in the evening, after I shall have seen Mr. Ferry and got my information.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Deft's Exhibit No. 66 (Corse).—I. B. examiner. Jan. 30, 1878.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C. July 15th, 1866.

DEAR SHAVOR: I have for the past ten days been expecting to be in condition to write you by telegraph of the passage of our bill, but it has been daily crowded out by some tariff or appropriation bill. It is now reached in the committee of the House, and no other committee can be called until after this bill is disposed of, which certainly will be this week. I showed Mr. Ferry your letter to me in relation to that matter, and he said that he would not cut down the sum unless the House
2330 compelled him to do so, which he did not think they would. One thing is certain, that by this delay we have secured the consent of Mr. Fink, the democratic economy man, and he has promised Ferry that he will not oppose the bill, but would go in and vote for it. This will certainly carry the bill through. I hope to say to you by telegraph in a day or so that it has passed. When it passes you will have to come here so as to receive and receipt the money.

I am now much encouraged about getting the Stanley case through all "O. K"; such now are the assurances. All will depend upon the temper of the House.

Congress will adjourn in about two weeks from Tuesday next, at the farthest. Congress seems to be backing down to the President.

How about the Hagan patents? I suppose the suits are all through with by this time, and if so, how did the matter go? There is a great and pressing want for the use of that invention, as all other kinds of machinery are very expensive, and do not possess much economy in the working of the mines. It seems to me that that matter ought to receive prompt attention. There is scarcely a day but that some one inquires of me about the invention. Senator Nye, who is Dr. Baldwin's special friend, would call the attention of miners in his State to this invention and its importance.

How about your North Carolina mine? Not having for the past three or more weeks heard anything from it or in relation to it, I take it for granted that you have given it up for some good and sufficient reason.

Senator Wilson, from Mass. said to a friend of mine that it was not only a shame, but a disgrace to our government to vote the $50,000 for the stamp, for, said he, it ought to have been at least four times that for so valuable an invention as that, but, said he, we will give that now, and more by and by.

2331 I have for 14 days been very ill; so much so that my doctor's bill was only $60; medicines on his order $20 more. I was very sick for five days, and hence I have not written you, but I am feeling very well indeed, now. Step by step I am getting over my great camp or hospital poisoning fever and illness of more than two years' standing. But I tell you, Shavor, it is very hard work sometimes. The Dr. here, who was the leading surgeon in our Army, says it will go entirely away, but that he did not see how I lived in and through it unless it were my iron and strong constitution. He say that it will take just about one year more to get entirely rid of it.

Your faithful friend,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq., Troy, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: In answer to your letter of the 17th inst., I have to say that I have waited until this evening in hopes that our bill would have been passed; also, in order to have conversation with Mr. Ferry about your North Carolina gold mine. Mr. Ferry will go to the P. O. D. on Monday morning, to get a letter to Congress from the Postmaster-General, asking Congress to pass at once the bill as a matter of public necessity and economy. If he gets it, as no doubt he will, the bill will go through both houses in less than no time. Every possible effort is being made to have it pass. Mr. King has given up the matter and gone North on a summer visit, which we will remember of him in the 2332 day of accounts. He wanted some sort of writing, but he got none fixing to him a certain share. He seemed to care more about this writing than he did in getting the bill through. But Ferry says that it shall go through, and I have great confidence in him both in and out of Congress. I know one thing, and it is this—if we had had Gov. Randall, who is now Postmaster-General in place of Gov. Dennison, to have referred our petition to instead of Dennison, we should have had a recommendation of at least of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and very likely fifty thousand added thereto, which would make $200,000. I have this from one who knows Gov. Randall, now Postmaster-General, and who speaks on authority. Randall was at the time First Assistant P. M. General, but had no power to act for the P. M. G. He has always said that the report of Dennison was all wrong, in fact as well as in principle. But it is now too late to reach him this session, in order to change the report now made to Congress, but he could do so at the next session of Congress, but we can't and won't wait, and so all is now being done to get it through in a few days.

Now, as to the gold mine business, I have shown your letter of the 17th inst. to Mr. Ferry, and he says that he will take the $3,000 stock, but would prefer $5,000. He would have handed me draft for the amount to send to you, but for the fact that your Mr. Eddy is coming here, and he therefore prefers to wait and see him.

As to myself I have to say that I really wish that I had at least $5,000 of the stock, but I cannot take any, as I have no money which I can command to pay for the stock you name. I have spent almost all my time here since middle of February last, and also nearly all the funds set aside by me to defray the expenses of the campaign here. The amount I dare not now name, no more than to say that whatever I have done has been in perfectly good faith, and for our mutual benefit. My two years of illness has put a very heavy load on me, which, taken 2333 with necessary expenses of a family, and also added to the expenses here this year, has put me into such condition that there is not the least use for me to talk about taking any stock in your company now formed to carry on the gold business in North Carolina; I do most earnestly wish it were so that I could go in with you, but I can't, and so I may as well make the best of it. Had it not been for the stamp you would never have had this mine, as you well know, and I am pleased that after all the expense of time and money in that case, there has something come out of it which will let you and Mr. Corse get rich in fact; and such being the case I am content. Men who have the money can always do about as they may wish; but how can a person having no money do anything in such a matter as you have been pleased to name to me? It is absolutely impossible; but I have as strong a wish or desire as any one of your company, who have gone into the matter and put in their money, which they only have to draw a check for. Nothing would please me any more than to go into the thing if I had the means to do so, for there can be no doubt of the most complete and thorough success, and no doubt will pay you all much more than you have really anticipated, making you all as rich as gold. So now I am compelled to dismiss the matter, as there is no way to come "to time," and I'll try and do the best I can to get along. I had fondly hoped that the stamp would have been disposed of a long while ago, and our money in the bank. I expected that the R. R. chair also would have gone into a fair sum of money; also, that the desulphurizing ore, &c., patent would have long since been closed up, and money paid to us, and then there are other things upon which I depended. None of all these contrivances have as yet reached any one's bank for a deposit. In them all I have spent a very large amount of time as well as what money I thought I could spare, so it is quite plain to you that I can do nothing, from the statements I have made, towards the taking of the stock you name.

2334 I do hope that the Hagan patents will be sustained by the court, and of this I have no doubt—not the least doubt. I regard it as one of the most important and valuable inventions of this or any other age, and all who know anything about it say the same thing. Of course I do not know anything about the proofs, trial, or hearing of the case, and of course cannot say about the result, but I hope for the best; and I know you must win if no tricks have been played with or upon you in the progress of the case.

Your telegram in regard to the draft of D. G. Littlefield came to me on the 20th inst., saying "I cannot accept." I therefore expected that you would return me the draft, so that I could get it to-day, but I have not received it as yet; perhaps I may get it in next mail. If you have not returned it to me please do so on receipt of this, as I shall cancel it and return it to Mr. Littlefield, as I cannot use it, and I will wait until his time comes about, in which he says he will pay it both on the face of the draft and also by letter. That money would have been used for our mutual interests, but I will now get along without it in some way, and trust to luck for what I may need to get along with. Everything will at some time come out all right, just as certain as the world; but when—can you tell? I cannot, with any degree of certainty. But it must all come out right somewhere and sometime.

When will Mr. Eddy be here? Give me the day, and I will try and have my friend "Ferry" ready with his "green ink" and paper, properly mixed, to pay for his stock.

Your ob't s'v't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: I enclose to you herewith a letter which I received from Mabbitt in relation to the chair, and accordingly I shall stop at New York a day or two, say Friday and Saturday of this week. I hear nothing from your Mr. Eddy, so of course it will be safe enough for me to leave here on Thursday for New York, as he very likely has gone home, although he promised me that he would write me in any event, and would telegraph me in case he might need me. This was one week ago yesterday morning. I am in hopes that we shall get enough out of the chair to pay current expenses, as "stamp" and "desulphurizing" have gone over for about four months. I shall accept any fair and reasonable offer made to me in New York. To-morrow or Wednesday I go to P. O. D., by appointment, on stamp, &c.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C. July 30, '66.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Congress is over, and so are we over for this session; but our case is, on motion, set down for action in the first week of next December, and, under all the circumstances, I believe it to have been providential that the result is what it has been, for these reasons: 1st. Many of the committee were for giving us $100,000, interest and expenses, which would make $25,000 more, in all $125,000.

2d. We have a friend to us now for Postmaster-General, to wit, A. W. Randall, who will certainly recommend to Congress more than $100,000 next November. He says we are entitled to it; that it is a valuable invention to the gov't and his depart.; and 3d, General Skinner was on Saturday last confirmed as 1st assistant postmaster general in place of Mr. Randall, made P. M. General. Now, General Skinner is our very especial friend, and, both holding both positions, can and will do the fair thing by us, but advised its postponement until after the fall elections and Congress comes together again.

4th. A friend of mine in the P. O. Department told me that we could get at least $150,000 recommended by the department, and he thought more, if we managed the thing right. Now, under all these facts, you and Mr. Corse will not care much about the delay, but it certainly will be a most serious thing to me. How to get along I can't say. I have been here just 148, the cost of which for board and fires for me alone has been, on the average, $6 per day, in all the nice little sum of 2337 $898.00. Then there are other little necessary expenses to add to that for me personally, and then, in addition to that, I have been obliged to have some one with me all the while, which has been on an average for board of $4.50 per day, am't to $584.00 in all, for these two items alone $1,556.00. Then the other expenses which I deemed necessary here to get the case along have not been less than $3,000, as my vouchers will show. Now, instead of this being paid, I have to wait until the case goes through. Now take this $3,000, and put with the other $4,556, for which I have vouchers, you and Corse paid on this $375, and $300 on the Stanley, making $675, which will make to me most $4,000.00, and the loss of over 5½ months' time from the office will make me really poor. There is no chance for speculations by me. Put with all this my illness, and will readily see why I have been compelled to ask of you, as a friend, some favors, and now they are cut entirely off; and yet I am not discouraged, for some time and somewhere they will all come right. I shall not leave here until Thursday evening of this week for N. Y., as I am to have an interview with Gen. Skinner and Mr. Randall on the stamp and bag matter, as requested.

I have done the best I could, and Mr. Ferry will write you a full explanation.

Your friend,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter came at hand yesterday. I am glad you sent it, as it will aid much in the Henderson cases here. His patent will issue in two divisions. Now I think I shall take the papers with me home, so as to have conference with you on the matter.

Mr. Horatio King has not been near me since we came here, nor have I seen him this time here.

I have some things moving in the stamp which will suit you and Corse, and which I will relate to you when I get home and can have an evening's interview with you and him. School will keep this much, I will say. I will get home Saturday evening next. Mr. King wrote me at Troy, and Charlie sent me the letter here, in which he remarked that he wished I would get from you and Corse the paper, implying that you had promised some paper. So I let the case stand just exactly there. You and Corse understand the matter perfectly well, and of course can manage the thing.

I have just had the pleasure of giving Keller another dressing out in the line of our profession, and he had two assistant counsel at that. He is the man who wouldn't believe me under oath, and who is trying hard to get clients from Troy. He has already stated that you, Hagan, and several others have thrown me overboard, and that I can do no more business for you.

He has taken occasion to mention about that draft which you spoke to me about once, and to Charlie about. But for you, and the fact that I 2339 never desert a friend or go back on persons who have done me favors and kindness, I would show all about that draft. So I would much rather endure the wrong than have others suffer on my account. But I am sure of one thing, that you or Chas. Eddy & Co. will not find any one who has or can serve you with the energy, faithfulness, and success that I have done. Sometimes it has been expensive, but I did what I thought was for the best. The business come all right, and now if any one is to be blamed or censured for any act, let it come on me. My trust is in a power higher and stronger than that of man. I mean to do right, but I often fail like as other men do. We are none of us too perfect in this world, and therefore I will judge no one. I shall stand by you and Corse, come what may, and I only regret that you are not, for some cause unknown to me, satisfied that I labor for what I think is for your best business interests. One thing you will find, that I, in the end, will come out right.

There were many reasons why I could not engage professionally for Potter, Paris & Co., beyond the taking out of their reissue, and when you understand them, as I and Cowen and others understand them, then you will no longer blame me, you nor Chas. Eddy either. I will go on in what I honestly believe to be my duty, and wait for events.

Your friend & servant,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have had an interview with Mr. Ferry, concerning the petition. He says that it is all in order and properly drawn; that he will take it just as soon as it gets to his committee, and go personally to the Postmaster General with it, and then make every effort for us concerning the stamp. He thinks that it will carry for a very much larger sum than the $50,000, and he will, in addition, get a letter from the P. M. G. to Congress, saying that what is done must be done now, and at this session of Congress, or the department will suffer more loss than we now ask for the stamp. This is first rate. I saw Mr. Griswold and gave him the petition, and he said that he would present it at once, and have it referred to the proper committee, and that he will do all in his power to do for our cause.

I have, to day, been to the Post-Office Department, on the business of the stamp, and have things working well there for an increase of the amount of compensation, which question will be hurried square through —no delays as last year. We are promised that the whole thing shall be in voting order immediately after the holidays are past. I shall get everything just right by that time, as to any increased amount of the compensation. The Senate Committee is now formed of good men, and who will do us justice in the matter.

I paid up the Humiston matter of costs with the clerk of the U. S. Supreme Court, amounting to $236.55, his half of the costs charged 2341 in all, against the case, $473.10, and then $473.10 paid by the government for the printing, and making the full sum or grand total amount to $946.20. I will send you your bond which you gave in the Humiston case, on Monday next. I found that the concern were quite angry about the matter not being settled, and were inclined to blame you as boudsman, and me as attorney, because of the delay, and they were trying to injure our matter here before Congress, so I paid it up, and also the settlement in your case was had upon the same ratio, and the costs were not as much, because the case was not as large in the printing part, as Humiston's, and in doing this made them our friends, and stopped talk in any direction against us. I took their footings for the settlement, all around, and will bring you the proper vouchers when I come home. To meet your case, only, I drew on you without any advisement with you, as I wanted no delay, for I was much threatened and fearful of considerable annoyance when I came to certain positions in the stamp case, as they were neighbors and acquaintances with persons in the department whom we wanted, as well as acquainted with a good many members in Congress, so I did as soon as I could what I thought was for the best in the premises, and hope you will find it just all right and satisfactory, as I will make it. Will write you Monday or Tuesday next.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have been to the Post-Office Department again today, and I find that our matters there are working most excellently. The P. M. General means to have his report in his draft on Monday next. At all events, he promised me it should be ready for the very first day after the convening of Congress, just after the holidays are over. Your petition and my letters have, from all appearances, done good work there. The only thing for us to get over is the action of that miserable Dennison, who was once P. M. G. Why, Shavor, but for that, I really believe that we could now get the $300,000 on the showing we have made this winter. One thing is certain, that department conceded the facts set out in our petition and the two letters, copies of which I sent to you, and which please return to me, as I may need them before the committee. I am going first into the Senate, now, and we will go through them in good shape and on time, and then it must of course go through the House in haste, as then all things are ready for action. All say that this is a capital plan. All I want is for the P. M. G. to go the figures, and then I can carry it without giving any one anything. So that all we will pay King on by the 5 per cent. will be the $50,000, less the $13,000 expenses, for whatever may now go beyond that will be our doings alone, and of course we shall have, as it will be right, won't it? I will keep you posted. If you could come on here by and by, it would do you good and give you rest. I am pushing—pushing the stamp right square on. I hear that you have had an awful snow storm.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JANUARY 3d, 1867.

DEAR SHAVOR: I was oblege to write you a very long letter yesterday, and yet not cover all the points in your letter. Now, the reason why I thought it best to go to Senate first on the stamp this session is only this: I thought we could get the bill passed at once there and then take it to the House, and thus it would go through quicker, even then as it would be a Senate bill. If you were here I think I could convince you that this is the best plan, and yet if you don't approve it, say the word, and I'll push it in the House first; at any rate it would be moving there, for at same time the Senate com. were at work I would have House com. at work, only to hold on for Senate bill.

I do hope you will carry the New York case and I believe you will—my only fears are about Judge Smalley, who I don't like as a judge when there is any one about to "wine up." That is all.

About the King matter, I wrote you that what you had written on that point was just my idea exactly, to wit—5 per cent. on all deducting the expenses—which we can make quite a sum which would not take his 5 per cent. and even that is too much. But between us we can manage it. If he writes you for a paper on that point as he told me yesterday he would—you can reply, and say that you have been delayed a long while, and that it ought to have gone through last session, and that you are not satisfied with Norton's course last session and that your habit and principle of business has been to do just right and that you propose to do right by him. That on my account you cannot give any paper which touches the said patent, as if you did it might give 2344 me an advantage over you, by Norton which he would certainly take under the circumstances—or something like it—that, is if you answer at all before you see me.

Yours truly,

M. P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 4th inst. came at hand this day. In reply I have to say that I did not intend to find fault with it. The construction which I put upon it, the language will warrant perhaps; but I did not believe you meant to be so understood. It is all right with me anyhow. I find no fault with you or Corse. I am putting the best face on things about the stamp that I can, and my promises made to you in relation thereto, and my hopes of complete success at the present session, are all founded upon what the P. M. G. told me in person at the time I wrote you, and he seemed to mean just what he said. I shall keep you posted in the matter. I want to get as big a sum as possible, and then add to the same the expenses. We shall have no more trouble about the division of this part of the case any more than of the other. I think I wrote you the reason why I put in separate item of expenses, and was anxious to make it as large as I could in the truth of the case, and so I made my estimate cover last year and this year. Only think, last year run down to July 29th, about six months' time, so now you will understand that part of the case.

I shall try and do right in all matters relating to this or any other case, and I know you and Corse will do the same.

2345 Everything is all right, and I am satisfied with all you have said or done.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

I hope to give you the exact figure on Monday next.

DEAR SHAVOR; I have only time before mail closes to write you today, but will do so at some length next mail. Your letter is here. In reply I have to say that I had shaken off the man you name, but on that day we met at department by accident, and it was while there that I thought he would write you a letter. He can't hurt us any or anywhere.

You are perfectly right about. It will go with or without him. I do not go near him, but I find him hanging "around as the circle swings about."

I want you to come here about the middle of coming week for certain reasons and purposes about the matter of stamp, and it will do you good, too, so come and stay as long as you can. Shall I get room for you here? Things are better than they were once here in all respects.

I want Mrs. Norton to come on with you, and she will be all ready to come, and and she will give you money for all her expenses here. Will you do me that favor to simply attend her to me, as she will be of no expenses to you? If so, will you call and see her about it? Will write to-night to you particulars. All right here.

Yours truly, friend, &c.,

DEAR SHAVOR: I write you early in the day because Dr. Frust and I am going to the Capitol at 1 o'clock to-day to see Mr. Ramsey & Fessenden, and I may not get back in time to write and get the letter in the mail.

Dr. Frust says that Mr. Randall's letter went to Ramsey last evening, so we have to go to the Capitol to-day to arrange the matter spoken to you about yesterday, after which I will, of course, write you again.

Dr. Frust read my letters (as now corrected) to P. M. G., and was so much pleased with them that he advised printing them, and handing copies to the committee, and then put one of each in the envelopes you addressed. He thinks we can cut the end, as you suggested, and put them in, and that there will be no need of resealing that end—we will try it.

Your friend King was in here last evening, and meeting Mr. Ferry here he enquired of him what was being done about stamp. Ferry told him that Senate was working on it, he understood, &c., whereupon out went your friend King, who thinks life is so uncertain unless he gets ¼ of that which in no wise belongs to him. It was an outrage to ask the ¼. I am preparing a digest of services rendered by him as fast as I remember them. We all can manage him. He told me that if I would stand by him that he should get of you the ¼—Bah! Ass!

Of course we will do just what is right, trusting for grace and wisdom to enable us to do just right, and I think $1,000 (one thousand dollars), with what he has had, a just compensation for any services he may have rendered in case our bill goes through and I am conscientious in the matter at that. Write.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: I have only time to say that I had an interview last evening with Mr. Van Winkle, of the Senate, to whom the stamp matter had been referred for a report, which he will be ready to make on Tuesday next to his committee—the finance. He said that when he got all the papers before him that he would make quick work of it. JACOB SHAVOR.

DEAR SIR: Your letter is at hand. I am really sorry that your wife still remains so very ill. Of course, it was right that you should give her attention before going to our house. I have done land-office work since you was here in the stamp case. I have collected all our papers —my letters to Randall, the Attorney-General's decision, and the $100,000 shell case passed by Congress in 1864, and written a letter to Senator P. G. Van Winkle, and enclosed all the above-named documents to him, and had two interviews with him, one with Dr. Frust, one alone. He said to me this morning that he would bring the matter before his committee this day—the finance committee. I did succeed in getting into his head the whole case, and he took liberal views of it. I will see him this evening and write you to-morrow. He is willing and anxious to have this put upon the bill of appropriation, which will carry it through, certain.

You need not come here now for say a week at least, or unless I write you by telegraph to come, which I will not do unless really necessary, and yet I would like you with me; but take care of the wife first and above this business, for we can in some way get along.

In haste, your faithful friend,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SHAVOR: The patent to prevent frauds on the revenue in the distillation of whisky, &c., issued yesterday and to-day, has gone to the Treasury Department, and will meet with immediate attention. The post-office Senate committee will to-morrow move to put the stamp matter upon the P. O. appropriation bill. I have not yet been able to see Van Winkle as to am't fixed on yesterday, as he went to Baltimore in the afternoon, and only came back this day about 11.30 a. m., and then he went into the Senate; but he will see me this evening at his room here, and to-morrow I hope to be able to write you good, better, news; that is, with amount so fixed as to make it perfectly satisfactory all about.

My arm won't let me write yet very much. I hope your wife is better.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.

DEAR SIR: You will see from the enclosed that there has been something done since you were here, and when I tell you that I drew 2350 up the report of that committee for the stamp as well as the bill which has been reported in the Senate, and also got the House committee, through Mr. Ferry, to endorse, in advance of their regular meeting, the Senate report and bill, so that it can now be taken from the speaker's table and passed at any time after it gets in there from the Senate, you say that I have had something done, and my arm and shoulder have troubled me so much, too, that you will not blame me for not writing all the details to you. So much writing as I have been compelled to do since you were here, in order to move at all, has brought my arm and shoulder into bad condition again; but I am determined to go through it, and as long as it was going right, I did not think you would care for details. I tell you I had to watch this thing early and late to get it done, and now I have just concluded that hereafter we will do all of our own work, as in the end we have to do it. The new helpers made a mistake in getting the case sent to the finance committee. It had to go back to P. O. committee, and we lost nearly a week's time, which caused me this hard work to right our case up again, and put my arm back again. I will tell you about it when you get here. It is not rheumatism that troubles my arm, but it is the strain caused by the rapid and hard labor of the steel pen. If some of these five and ten per cent. fellows had to do half the hard work I have done and have to do in the case, they would "caterpillar" at once.

If you get here, say on Friday morning of this week, I think it will be early enough, as that will be private bill day in the House, and I shall not really need you until then; and yet you can come when you please, and I find it necessary to telegraph you to come before then, which I certainly shall do just the moment I think you are needed here, and want you ready to come. Dr. Frust and I can manage the matter in the Senate, but we want you for the House. It will have no rest until it goes through both houses. We have one thing for Dr.
2351 Baldwin to do in view of the way-bill envelope matter, and it is to make Ferry chairman of H. committee next Congress. You and I will arrange the matter when you get here. Ferry and I have planned the thing (confidential); this will shove that matter square through. I am preparing the assignment to gov't, to send you for Corse to sign, and you can sign here; but my arm was so lame yesterday that I could not finish it, and as I don't like to do such things on Sunday, I have waited until to-morrow morning, so it will be mailed you in time; if not, he can sign it and return it to us by mail. This is to facilitate the transfer of title to gov't, so as to get our greenbacks, &c.

I suppose Colfax will be speaker of the next house, which commences March 4th, 1867. Alley, of Mass. the present chairman, will not be in that Congress, so we must go in for Ferry to have that place. He and I have talked it all over. If he gets that place he will hold it for two years from 4th March next.

I will write you to-morrow. I am very well except my arm, which pains and troubles me much.

The letters you mailed or directed will go into the Senate to-morrow morning early.

Yours, truly and faithfully,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

MARCH 6, '67.

J. SHAVOR, Esq.

MY DEAR SIR: I have been so much engaged all of yesterday, all of last evening, and all of to-day, up to this short time before closing the mail, that I can't write you all I want to, but can give you the 2352 line. I have the Court of Claims in good shape so far, and new bill for $120,000, which I will copy and send to you, and write you all about it this eve. Griswold says we did right; hold on and it will certainly pass for at least the $100,000. Many members were ashamed of their course. Every member opposed to us have gone home. Will write you in full on that point and committees.

I will send you copy of a letter sent to me on the next evening after you went away, which would close up my staying here another day but for the instant relief I had by draft on you for one month's board here. The failure of bill caused it, I suppose. I cried about two hours over the affair, as I did not know what to do under the circumstances, but could not move a peg or stay another day until I did just what I did. For Heaven's sake don't let the draft come back. I'll send you the letter to-night, so you can see it all. I will send you all the chair stock if you say so, and put in market for sale, but I will stand to this case to the last, and we shall get well paid. The Colorado man wants to meet you at St. Nicholas, in New York, about the Gold patent. Mail is up—will write you all to night.

Your true friend and brother,

M. P. NORTON.

DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter has just reach me as I come to my room. I wrote you some days ago that I had sent the assign nent to the parties in New York who are entitled to it. It must have reached them on Monday last. I cannot write much as it is mail time. The case is right so far.

2353 I have three letters from you, and I am only sorry at heart that I do not please you any better. I am much discouraged by reason of these letters, so much so that I hardly know what to do. Please tell me just what you want, and I'll try and do it.

I have been from home more than three months, without seeing those who are as dear to me as any of your family can be to you, trying to do as much for you and Corse as for any one else, and yet I am willing and ready to do; but tell me what to do, so that you will find no fault. When I show you, as I will, a certain letter sent to me about the draft, you will say I could have done no different. I only wish I had had it before you left here, instead of same night you left. I will write more to-morrow.

Yours truly,

DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter has just reached me, and I have to write the third time that I have long since sent the assignment to Emerson Foote. I am glad that you are not to be fooled into taking of stock for this money, now past due, $1,500. Why they should think of such a thing I can't contrive.

As to the stamp, I think I shall have good news for you very soon. There is something on foot which if it goes will put you in funds at once, but I would much rather wait until to-morrow as I can tell by that time. At any rate, we are right; it is only a question of time.

If you have any letters in relation to the stamp, please send 2354 them to me before you give an answer to any one. I am full of hope and faith yet, and only regret the need of money now; but we shall come right, God willing.

Yours truly,

MARCH 16TH, 1877.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: The Postmaster-General has written for us a "smashing" good letter, which goes to Congress to-morrow, or I should say early on Monday morning next, and if Congress remains in session through the week, Congress will pass our bill, which will, perhaps, be as good a way to dispose of it as any other way. I hope to have a copy of the letter to send you. I hope Congress will stay during the week.

Gov. Evans, of Colorado, has gone to Phila., and from there he will go to New York, and from N. Y. to Chicago, and then to Colorado. He wants to see the operation of the gold and desulphurizer and separator in New York, and if it will do half what I have told him, he says that he wants to put some money into it and put it at work in his country. Can he witness the operation in New York, on any satisfactory basis? If so, he will "go in" on the thing. I have written Hagan, but he don't answer me. Could you meet Senator Evans at New York, concerning this matter, say the last of next week, or the first of the next week?

DEAR SIR: I enclose you a letter from Mabbitt, which will give you all the information you desire about the chair and the payment, &c., &c. Emerson Foote's address is 40 Broadway, New York, care of Foote, Vibbard & Co.

Gov. Evans, of Colorado, is on his way to New York, and will be at St. Nicholas Hotel on the last of this week or forepart of next week. Mr. Sanders, whom you met here, is now at that hotel. I have written Hagan three times, but get no answer. Some one ought to show this thing up to these men; both are rich, and Evans, you well know, holds important offices, &c. They want an interest, &c., &c.

The Postmaster-General sent a big communication to Congress today about the stamp, which ought to carry our case through in three days certain. It is the biggest of all letters sent there. I will try and get a copy. I am pushing things.

DEAR SHAVOR: I send enclosed two copies of brief for the argument next Monday on the first part of the case. The other part is not 2356 ready yet, but on Monday the whole case will really be decided. There will be nothing left but the question of amount, and you will see from the enclosed what our views are on that point, and we not hope to carry them, but we expect to carry.

Hoole has put in the bid to-day for stamp.

I will write you to-morrow all about it. This contract will give us all the power we want. I had him give the patents and the date thereof, and to whom they belonged, in his papers, and on each model or sample I had two made for him, one with the punch in and one with punch and cork combined. He furnished the others. After this contract is all right, will come an offer to pay for past use, as I have wrote you, so we certainly shall get cash in a few days.

JACOB SHAVOR, ESQ.,

DEAR SIR: I have your letters and will answer you more fully on to-morrow or Tuesday, as I am adverse to writing business letters on Sunday to any considerable extent. I have three packages of seeds for you, and Mr. Ferry has promised me to go with me to the department about some wheat and other seeds, as I want you to have all that there is, and they told me that they did not have any wheat. I have waited for the wheat, &c., before I send the 10 varieties which I now have on my desk for you. I will hurry up the others and send them to you at once, as you will need them. I will send them Tuesday evening

2357 without fail, by express, paid through. I would have put them in the box as I expected to but for the waiting for the wheat, &c. We were going yesterday, but I was taken quite ill Friday afternoon and did not get out until yesterday afternoon, when I brought every effort to bear and out I went off the bed, and to-day I am well again and in "fighting order." I was all alone with one of my "sick spells" from 2 o'clock p. m. until 11 o'clock same eve., when some one came in by accident almost. Nellie came last evening, so now I shall feel at rest. I had over done that day, having stamp matter and the internal revenue matter on hand and all demanding attention; so the revenue matter had to be postponed until Tuesday next because I could not attend to the engagement made for Saturday. The whole thing is going just right. We shall get some money right away—how much, can't say, but we shall be satisfied with it for the present and we shall do much better out of the stamp than to have taken the $100,000. The Attorney-General matter was not known until I found it out just before writing you. The plan now is this: Settlement and payment for past use up to April 1st, 1867, either by Court of Claims or else under the Attorney-General's decision authorizing Gov. Randall, the P. M. G., to settle and pay us; then go to Congress for past use from April 1st, 1867, to the passage of the bill, which will be almost another year, and at same time purchase of the patent, say by the bill, a copy of which I sent you, to wit, the $100,000 for patent, &c, and the $20 odd thousand dollars expenses, interest, &c. I have not a single doubt but that it will all work, completely so, God willing, and to this end I am pressing things so far very successful indeed.

I will be able in my next to write you about the 4 years' contract. It is to be decided to-morrow or Tuesday as to who will have it; I think it will be Hoole. Why, he bids at $5, all complete. He is still here and is our firm friend. Good-by until I write.

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter is at hand. The garden seeds, in large quantities, will go to you to-day by express, paid through. The wheat could not be had just now, and if I get it in a day or so it shall go to you.

Now as to business. I have written you all the points in the premises, and I beg of you to give me time to carry out some one of the plans. Here is just what delays me: The Court of Claims may not render the decision in the court until Monday next, as that day each week is the day in which they read their opinions in open court. Coombs and I went up, and "went in" the court on Tuesday—yesterday—as there was no court on Monday of this week for some reason of which I have no information. I do not believe that there is a doubt but that we win; all say so who heard or know anything about the case, or about the law. You shall be advise' the very same day I am of the decision. Now for the other plan—I mean the Attorney-General plan. This is the cause of delay: The Senate is now in executive session on confirmation of appointments, and this is about all it has done for the past three weeks. This takes up so much of the time of the P. M. G. and the Att'y-Gen'l in arranging and making appointments for the President to send to the Senate for confirmation as to prevent me from getting our case heard there, but I am promised that as soon as the Senate gets out of the way that we shall have immediate attention. Then, again, it is and has been no small labor to get ready these cases, let me assure you. We have had to have a large number of certified copies from the Post-Office Department, such as letters, &c., for which we have to pay nothing, only wait their time. Now as to the whis-2359 key matter, the commissioner, Mr. Rollins, considers it of great value and importance, and they are now devising some way to arrange for the use of the patent. I think that the Att'y-Gen'l's decision in our stamp case will govern that case as to mode of payment, but I do not know as to a certainty just yet. When you remember that I have been most four months from home, you may remember that I shall not idle away any time nor lose a point to get you and me some money very soon out of this matter in one of the two ways I have proposed to you as to the past use. Then, again, I have been preparing for the next Congress to buy the patent by seeing that a contract is let to make the stamps under the same agreement as before, which has been done for four years from the 1st day of this month. That "critter" which Alley used as having a better invention, and which beat us through the meanness of Alley, put in a model and a bid, and his model and whole concern was, with his bid, rejected, so that thing is out of the way. It has been pronounced good for nothing, and that part which is good has been determined to be an infringement on our patent. This is good so far.

Who is it that has leaked about the Court of Claims operation? I have a letter from Troy on that subject to-day. I wish you would see if it came from my office. I know it did not come from you. I have made every effort to keep our matters out of the papers, as they can do no good. I will write you about the note to-morrow.

Truly and faithfully yours,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEAR SIR: The letter which I mentioned in my letter of yesterday I find was omitted, but I enclose it so that you can see some of my troubles in connections with yours, while I am doing my very best for you, Corse, and all in the stamp and other things.

"Ham" Gregory can tell you where the loan of $500 would make a bigger point than has ever been made as to the question of the amount of recovery in Court of Claims, as that is now the only thing to settle in that case. I have a very hard sick headache to-day and cannot write more.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

DEA' SIR: I would like to see you here this evening at 8 o'clock if such a thing be possible. There are many matters here about which I wish to talk with you. I have two letters from Merriman, one about the "spirit meter" and other matters.

2361 There ought to be some sort of an arrangement made about the stamp matter. You said the other day that you had some one in Washington who would put the thing through for us in Congress. If that be so, it will not be necessary for me to go there at all next winter. Indeed, I do not see how I can go for two reasons: 1st, I have not the ready means this year, and 2d, I have other inventions of more value and thus far presenting very flattering returns, all of which really demand my attention home. Now cannot it all be got along with without my going to Washington at all on that business?

Truly yours,

M. P. NORTON.

P. S.—Please send me word by the bearer.

J. SHAVOR, Esq.:

I have all the papers from Post-Office Department which we want.

I expect to have to be away all of next week after Tuesday or Monday perhaps, and I want to arrange the note due the 8th inst. before I go away. It is for $650 as per the slip enclosed. It will take three or four days to complete our testimony in Court of Claims case and I am anxious about it, and yet I suppose if we get it in in November next the case can be tried the same as though it were in now, as Weed will stipulate to that effect, no doubt. I have written again to-day to Mr. Merri-

2362 man, urging him to come to time as soon as possible. I hear nothing yet from Hoole, and will write him to-day. We will not need much more testimony in view of the proofs we now have from Washington under seal.

I send you one copy, but I want you to return it as soon as you are through with it, as we want one for the court, one for Congress.

Truly yours, &c.,

M. P. NORTON.

Please sign and return the enclosed note and I will arrange the other one, & I think I will have to get the money on it and pay the other one, for certain reasons which I will speak about when I see you.

J. SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have been so very busy since I came here that I have not had time to write you, and for that reason sent you telegram yesterday. We have got business well started. The case is put on the trial docket for this month, and it will be tried. Testimony here is good so far, and to-morrow we shall finish it, and then the testimony will be printed and the case got ready for trial. The whiskey matter is going on, but we have not yet had time to go fully into it. Our party here claim that we shall win; and so we shall, if we can get a practical test of meters. There is a great pressure here upon the committee I hear in many different directions. We shall do our best.

2363 The Pierce matter I have got started in good shape and shall prepare two affidavits and send on for the proper oath at Troy. I can't find Pierce yet, but am in hope of seeing him in a day or so. The committee will not act upon his case until after the impeachment business, which will give us time enough for all purposes.

I think we are doing big work and that, too, in two days, and I have great faith in our whole matters here, but we will know more in a few days. Please send to me by mail that copy of the New York testimony I let you have at your office. It is the last testimony taken. I forgot it.

Truly, your friend and ob't s'v't,

M. P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter of Saturday last came this, Monday, morning. It is the bluest letter I ever had. You have even outdone Shavor himself. Why, Shavor, if I were to get as blue as your letter is we would never do anything. The only trouble with you is expenses and want of patience, and perhaps I cannot blame you, and I would not blame you for anything, for you have always been very kind. Now, my dear sir, not one thing named in your letter about stamp will take place. Why they are scart almost to death now for fear that we will get out of patience and stop the use and manufacture of the stamp, which would cast blame upon the administration of the department and cost 2363 the government more than a hundred thousand dollars at once, too, to go back to the old plan, besides the delays, &c., &c., and I tell them to walk up and do the fair thing, and we will hold on awhile.

Postmaster-Gen. Randall is to be examined as a witness to-morrow or next day. Would have been to-day, were I well enough, but I have been very very sick since Friday morning last, and am a great deal better to-day and will be out to-morrow if kind Heaven will permit, as thus far it has. I came near a fever this time. It was the result of over work. Why, Shavor, only think what I have had on hand since I came here. And When Mr. Corse went away I saw a great deal more work to do, as he was most valuable service here. I went to work to do it and got sick, but I will "fight it out on this line," God willing.

The testimony is being printed and will come in time ready for use. Tell Corse that I contracted with Gregory's friend at $1.45 per page, with the understanding that it should come with promptness, &c. Corse will explain all this to you.

Now as to the Stanley case. It is true that we were through with the case last winter, but Ruggles seems to have been determined to get the court to reverse its decision on the question of title. In other words, to decide that he owned the patent for the 7 years instead of your company, and took up the appeal for that purpose. What should I do? Should the court reverse and decide that he actually owned the patent, where would you be? You would lose all that you have paid Stanly. You would get sued as infringers for 7 years, and have seven years' damages saddled on you. Of course I must fight, and faithful as your attorney I went at it, and to day have sent you copy of my points, made and printed since I came here. I have no doubts as to final result, but had the case gone without an appearance, and by default, you might have had more trouble than you ever have had. I shall win 2365 the case on every point, and am much grieved that you and Mr. Eddy should find fault with me for doing my duty and saving you perhaps untold trouble. Mr. Eddy will never see or recognize any use or service on my part towards your firm until something happens that will cost you a large sum of money. I have save' you many a time, and I hope you will see it by and by. I know that you and Corse recognize and understand the whole thing. Now about the meter. Had Corse been here Saturday or to-day we could carry our meter. They were all right but Gurley. Green went for us at one time. Then the commission got into a quarrel among themselves and flew off in all directions. Had Corse been here he could have managed Gurley and Green, and then we had two of the others at any rate, which would have given us four, and Prof. Henry would have come over to our side, and we would have had 5 out of the 7. This is all for the Hutchinson or Baltimore meter in which we hold ¼ of the patent, a better and larger part than we had in the Augenstein meter. All for going over with our influence to Hutchinson's meter. Our influence is considered strong and powerful, and I suppose it grows out of the fact that we have been so long familiar with Congress. The assignment was to have been made to us on Saturday last. I have not been out, and don't know whether or not it was done. The Hutchinson meter will be the one after awhile. The com. will not recommend any at this time, but will ask for another trial. At the first trial Hutchinson beat them all, and but for Hillgar would have gone through at once. At the next trial we will succeed if Hutchinson's meter will work as well as it did this time, and he says he will make it perfect. The commission have had all sorts of outside whiskey influence, &c., and have not distinguished themselves much.

I am tired now and must stop here for to-day. Let me hear from you, but don't get quite so blue again, if your honor pleases.

Yours, truly,

M. P. NORTON.

NATIONAL, March 18, 1868.

J. SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Mr. Hodges of Boston, one of Pierce's counsel in his extension case before Congress, came to me yesterday, after the hearing before the committee, and wanted to know that if Pierce would give us a license for the 7 years, if we would withdraw, and he also wanted to know how many of the remonstrants I represented? I gave him the following: Chas. Eddy & Co., Sheldon & Green, Morrison & Colwell, Burdett, Paris & Co., A. & W. H. Ingraham, Bussey, McLeord & Co., and he said that he would send Pierce to see you, and get you to withdraw. But can part withdraw and not all. Then, again, can you trust Pierce to give you license after the extension has been granted? He cannot give it before then, and have it valid and right. He has no right to give any such paper until after the extension is granted. It would be good for nothing if given before the extension by Congress. It was given you before on the 2d day, I think after the extension, and he would not have given it then but for the hold we had of him. He kicked on that agreement, and he never came up to the exact agreement as to dollars by some three hundred dollars. I think we shall kill his case if we bring out the long guns upon him.

I have one of our Colorado men here, and he wants to go into that patent matter, and says that he can make a big thing out of it, if he can only get a chance at it. I heard that you had lost the New 2367 York case; if this be so, what do you propose now to do? If not so, has the case been heard and decided?

The stamp case is all ready save the deposition of Blair, and the printing of Merriman's points and brief. Perhaps Blair may not be examined. He can't hurt us. Mr. Randall will submit his by letter, which I am preparing to-day. I ought to have been here before, as I have had to work very hard all the while.

Truly, yours in haste,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Def't's Ex. No. 69 (Corse).—I. B., ex'r, Jan. 30, 1878.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter came this morning. I send you to-day copy of some parts of our testimony in type, such as has been taken here, including my "old caveat." The remainder is not yet taken in print, but I have proofs of some of it to read and correct. Skinner's testimony we do not print, as his was taken by the gov't, and under the rule each party does its own printing. Merriman is now going over the testimony, to see if it is all that we require to make a sure thing and a "big haul." King has not been here. I have seen him three times. He is awful mad at me. He won't call here at all.

As to the Pierce matter, I have only now to say that I had quietly been to the committee and told my story, and put it in writing and on file with "Senate Patent Office" committee, and had the assurance that that would be about all required, and that I might rest 2367 secure, as no report would be made, which of course would kill the bill in committee. But if anything new turns up I was to have due and timely notice. Well, I wrote you and felt greatly rejoiced that we had done so big a thing with so little expenditure of powder and ball (cash). When I had notice that further action was demanded, I went to the committee room at once, and there I found a great long petition from Troy, under the lead of an irresponsible agent here, which had caused notice to given to Hodges, Pierce's counsel, who came on here at once and stirred up a stink of large proportions. Whereupon I was ordered to make a case in ample proofs if I wished to defend and be heard; and so I got time to do so, and you may think that I have not been mad none of the time, but if you were here you might have come to some other conclusions. I at first thought I would give it up entirely, and would have done so but for the fact of your house being in it; otherwise I would have let it gone. I have never before been interfered with, nor has there ever before been such want of confidence in me. Now, if they want me to defend, and will permit me to make a case such as is now required, I will go on and defeat the whole thing; if not, then let some one else go ahead on a cheap plan, and see how it will come out. Now some Albany people have sent in a petition in remonstrance to the extension, and they have contributed so much towards the extension. These petitions are just what Pierce wants to prove that he has a very, very big thing, that he is poor, has not been paid because he has had such a combination against him, and all of which magnify him into a martyr.

I was so careful about this, that I only disclosed one or two firms whom I represented, and thus made an effort to show that it was a small thing, not worth extending; that the public did not demand it, &c., &c. But I am now spoiled in this, and must fight it out on proofs and facts, and law, making me a hard two or more weeks' work, when, if 2369 the petition had been left alone, I would have had an easy victory. Petitions on politics will do sometimes, but on business they better be let alone.

I am awaiting instructions from the petitioners, through you, as I have written none but you.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., March 23, 1868.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

I send you cards to show that Pierce's counsel is on the alarm. He is trying to purchase me, or rather to buy my clients. I went to Library and saw him. We cannot get any hearing for final action until two weeks from to-morrow, in the meantime we shall see what we shall. I worked all the time after getting your letter, although knowing you could not consent to any extension. I had long before gone on with my preparation of the case just the same as though it were a court case, and I had succeeded in getting a good deal done by way of authenticated papers, duplicate models, &c., and was nearly ready, but really wanted more time as it was a hard tax on me to have "stamp matters," and "curve plate." Now we will have argument and all complete. Mr. Hodges wants to give you license to use "curve plate" for the next seven years, and wants me to withdraw all opposition and go in for the extension, and to that end he desired me to hold on to my further preparations to resist, &c. I told him I must write you about it; that 2370 it was none of my business; that all I had to do for now was attention and faithfulness to clients, and that I should do all that and let the consequences be as they may. If they come to see you and you conclude to settle in this way, you must take into the account the several hundred dollars expenses that we have been to here in order to get a proper and successful hearing by and before the committee. Of course you will make him pay that, &c.

The printing of stamp testimony is and will be quite a bill, and I will pay that, and other necessary bills in that case, as I have already done out of my money I have with me, and also the "curve plate" matter, as I will not want my money until the last day of this month, and then I will have to pay board bills, &c., and will have to draw for it back again. I mean the "curve plate" money expenses. The other we will let stand, and I will try and manage to get along. When I came from Troy I supposed that the gov't did all the printing, but it only prints its own testimony, and compels us to print ours, as Corse will explain to you. I have had other testimony expenses to pay in the stamp case, for we went before Hollingshead and took over again Davis and Chancey's testimony, and improved it wonderfully. Of course had to pay it over again, and I can truly say it was worth it all. I have put in some most valuable testimony since Corse went home. To-day I put in four more certified letters from P. O. Department, and will send you print of it as soon as I can get it all right. The testimony is closing up on the big side for us—the biggest and best we have ever had about the stamp case, and it will all be in time. We are sort of waiting for old Blair to get into election matters in Conn., and he goes there to-day, and then we will push our case to trial, so get rid of his testimony. If Corse could come here next Monday I think it would have good results. He need not remain over two or three days. What say you? Mr. Gregory came back, as roads to Troy were awful. You will be pleased with stamp 2371 case proofs when you get them all. The Clerk of the House will to-morrow give us certified copy of our printed matter then, and then every word of that will be legal evidence for us, but we have some of it already in.

Mr. Randall will write a letter stating all that we want, which will be the same to us, and I think much better than his deposition, for certain reasons; yet either would do. It will all be complete and in print this week, ready for the trial just as soon as the case is reached on the docket. Next month Weed can take it up out of its turn without attracting any attention, for all can say it was on trial docket last month.

I will knock Pierce's case into an old hat, if that still be your order. You better get paper up for all who signed that petition to sign, and pay some of these expenses. Of course, I do not expect anything for my services, as that was so understood with you and Mr. Eddy, &c., but do expect necessary expenses here to be paid, and I must still say that that there would not have been much expense about it but for this great flourish of trumpets by a petition. When that came in, the chairman of the committee turned to me and said, "Now get ready, as you people have made a great case out of it." He said the petition shows that there is something important about the invention. Well, this I knew; had I not, of course I would have gotten up a petition and had all Troy, Albany, and all the stove men in the country sign it; and, had I done so, he certainly would have commanded so much attention before the com. as to have carried his case; but knowing this to be the effect of such things, I only asked for enough to join to make a case, and the four was plenty, and I really only appeared for two of the four until the petition came in; then I went in for all at Troy. And now, after all this, we shall beat them, but it has worked me almost to death. Why, sir, many a night I have been up and at work until 3 o'clock morning, and never in bed before 12.30 or 1 o'clock. It had to be done, or else up would went the case. Now we have them where they are begging of us.

2372 - Have the Albany petitioners join you in expenses, and have it all done and money paid in into your office before any other move is made by Hodges for settlement, as, if they won't pay, you can say, very well, we can make ourselves all right, and let the extension go on, but not till then how. I have written to Whitman about the note, &c.

Truly yours,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Def't's Ex. No. 98, (Corse.)—I. B., Ex'r, Jan. 30, 1878.

NATIONAL HOTEL, May 3d, 1868.

J. SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I suppose that we shall know to-morrow about when the Court of Claims will decide our case there. Gen'l Skinner told me yesterday that it was the opinion in the P. O. Department that we would get from $150,000 to $200,000, as he and Gov. Randall and others there had talked it over, and they blamed Congress very much for not passing the $100,000 bill last session, but said, now let Congress take the consequences. Mr. Corse did splendid work while here. He pushed and kept pushing until he got the case on trial. I mean to have every thing so fixed and arranged while here as to enable us to meet all the Lows and Randsfords in this country, as well as to facilitate further claims on the stamp, so that we will not hereafter have such delays, &c. I made known some of my plans and some of the things I had been about here to Mr. Corse, and he approved them, and said you would also do the same thing.

I send a letter from Hodges in the Pierce matter enclosed here-

2373 with. You will see that Pierce has assigned to me the county of Rensselaer upon certain conditions, excepting those who made affidavits for him at Troy—one or two firms. This I will assign to Chas. Eddy & Co., and then you can assign to such as pay up at your own discretion, under the agreement. I must remain here and help him get it pass the Senate next Tuesday, one week ahead, and then I have other professional work to do in the premises; so you will need to sign only to those who pay up their share of expenses according to my vouchers and my oath of expenses explained to Mr. Corse when here. He will tell you all about them and the reason how they came about. Now, I have laid out of some of my cash for just a month, and of course need some of it back, and Corse said it would all be right when I completed my arrangement with Hodges; and so I have made draft for what I wanted at that time and marked it in the Pierce case, and will answer satisfactorily for them all when I get home.

Please do not let any one know of the Pierce arrangement until I get home, as it might do P. hurt here.

I must get Pierce, Stewart, and car-heater and some other matters right before I come home. Stewart will soon be in condition to pay all—every cent. Will write in a day or so, and will make the assignment soon, but keep it still for reasons.

Yours, &c.,

M. P. NORTON.

J. SHAVOR, Esq., Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I am enabled, after so long a time, to make and 2374 send to you to-day an assignment of Rensselaer County for the Pierce "curve plate" cooking-stove, and I think you will say that it is a pretty clean one, too. Now you have something which will bring back every dollar of the money paid out by you, and to pay out here in order to square up matters here and allow me to leave in a decent manner after having made the engagements I did here, in order either to defeat the bill or compel the assignment which Pierce made to me on the day named, and which I keep here in order to have the same put on record in the Patent Office, where Jones must go when you shall have collected in the money paid out. I will on Monday send you a statement of what I have had and of what is required to complete my engagements and to relieve me from much trouble and embarrassment in this case not only, but in any other case or matter when I might want favors and work done at some other time, then you can collect in your money and make a license to such as pay you. Give them shop or foundry license to make and sell—same as I convey to you. Charlie can make out such licenses as you may want to give to those who pay up. Here is a point which I want your firm to take into the account, to wit: I am bound in separate writing—a copy of which I will send to you on Monday next—to do certain professional work or services in addition to my withdrawal from the case all opposition under my control, and as you claim my services as by the year, it is no more than fair in them to allow my services to be your share of these expenses, and then let all the others pay the cash part expended here. I will send you a duly-certified copy of the very identical which gave me so much trouble here and would have defeated me before the committee, and, of course, left your house and out in the cold and at the mercy of Sam Pierce, who, smarting under his defeat in 1859, would have pushed you to a heavy expense or compelled you to have left out the extension of the oven under the fire-pit or chamber of the stove, either of which would have been expensive to you.

2375 There was, Mr. Shavor, no other course for me, either neglect your interests and business and let the whole thing go against you and others, or prepare, as I did, just such a case as would have been required in court. Having done this, and Pierce's counsel having got knowledge of it, he came to me, and made some other offer to me, which might have put more money in my pocket, as the price of what I called dishonor, and I told him I was not the person to satisfy, but that my clients were the ones, and thereupon gave him the names of the houses given to me at Troy. He went to Boston, saw Pierce, and came back here and saw me at my room, and agreed to accede to my demands and give you four the license. "All right," said I to him, and we went to committee room to get facts and date so he could make the necessary papers. and upon opening the files, lo and behold, appears that paper signed by your house, by all the remaining four houses for which I was serving here, and by almost every other house in Troy, and thereupon he at once refused to carry out the agreement with me, saying that to do so did not relieve him so long as your names were upon that paper, and more than that, if he must fight Troy, he might as well fight you all in same batch, as he would not give licenses to all Troy in order to save a fight. Now, Shavor, in Heaven's name, what were I to do under all these circumstances? I could not get what I wanted for the four houses after that paper, signed by Troy and Albany, was found on file. He would not, after knowing that fact, give you and the other three houses the license. Of course I had to make such a fight as would bring him to my terms, or else give up the case and let you all go and suffer the consequences. I could not do that, for Norton knows no defeat in anything he undertakes, no matter how long it takes to carry out his plans, or how big the fight. Well, I went into the case, worked day and night until I came down sick, and remained so for 10 to 15

2376 days, and succeeded in making just such a case as has put your house into possession of Rensselaer County by the deed enclosed herewith, which I might withhold until I was paid every dollar of these expenses, but I could not do so mean a thing as that by you, or by Corse, or by your house, and so I send it just as soon as I could have the lawful right to make. I do hope you will let Mr. Eddy of your firm read this letter, and I hope you will look upon this matter in a candid manner, and by the power of this assignment do by me justly. I will send you sworn statement by to-morrow's mail of all expenses and of all needed; you then can collect as I have proposed from others and save yourselves from any expenses under my salary, as stated herein.

I shall be home on Saturday night of this week, or by Wednesday of next week. I would have been home before but for Pierce, stamp, Stewart, and car-heater, and some other matters which come in by way of filling in. Now, who pays me for these two and one-half months' time away from office, home, and family? Well, I hope it will come in some good source, and by reason of my success here. You and Corse have acted up to the mark in all these matters, and have done right. It seems as though your Mr. Eddy can but see this matter just as I have stated it, and just as I shall prove it. I will write you to-morrow if I can get all my papers so as to send them to you from the committee.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

The last draft I made I omitted to state that it was in the Pierce case through error, but it was to that case, as I will show you when I see you, the $250.

G. G. Wolf told me that their firm would give $500 rather than fight Pierce; he now must settle with you, but I want to write you first, as I borrowed of them $130 since I came here, for my own private use, &c.

NORTON.

J. SHAVOR:

DEAR SIR: I intended have written you a letter on matters of fact here to-day, but I have had a sick headach' and been unable to do so.

I have good things to write you about stamps and other things, and will do so to-morrow (Monday), if not sick again, which I hope not.

I will have new assignment and will taken in West Troy, so hold that until I can get a new one, or else return that to me and I will make another one, &c. It is all O. K.

Truly yours,

NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have made out new assignment of patent in the Pierce matter and sent it to you in separate letters. This is full and complete.

I send you herewith a letter from Mr. Hodges, which will give you proof that I am compelled to do services for Pierce under the agreement by which I have been enabled to make for the assignment.

But for this Pierce matter I would have gone home a month ago, but I had made an agreement with his attorney. It is true that I have done other work here at same time. There is work done in stamp case which some time you may say was necessary to be done by me—I know of many many things, but it is not necessary to name them now.

2378 I have a load to carry in Pierce matter, for which I am not even to have the cash paid back to me that I pay out. I will not get credit for aiding any stove men in Troy, and saving them from taxation under this patent. Pierce complains at my course and says that I have forced out of him such concessions as amount to at least fifty thousand dollars. My clients complain because the expenses are so much—so poor Norton has to catch it on all sides. Well, I will do as I agreed to do, and have, therefore, sent you the assignment, out of which your firm can pay all the expenses and relieve me, and, at same time, save your business from taxation under the patent. Mr. Shavor, I don't know what to do. I try to do right—God knows I do—but I cannot carry on a large case without making some expenses. I don't know what to do about the draft, and about other money due and pressed on me. I am sick at heart. I have written Albany to hold the Stewart until I get home—which will be about the 13th of June. You don't want the Stewart assignment I understand from your letter very well, only let us have it understood. He has beaten all who has opposed him so far.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.

DEAR SIR: I enclose you herewith a letter from Pierce's counsel, refusing to concede to me West Troy, Green Island, and Watervleit at first, but on looking the case over, and seeing what I had to do, he consented to do as I wanted, and on Saturday last I got the whole thing. It is this and the preparing a new assign-either of which would been as expensive as you would cared for. I do not know as I can succeed in making myself understood in this matter, or that I will ever get any credit save that of making a few hundred dollars of expense in order to save many thousands in patent fees, to say nothing of the trouble and annoyance you and they would have had. I have prevented a great many suits, not only against your house, but a very large number of other houses in Troy; but I get no sort of credit for such business, and about all the credit I get is that of expenses. A very large deal of work is required and expected of me as though I could do it all without any expenses, beyond a few dollars at the farthest. This may all seem so to you all, but yet it is not so. The very moment you put in that petition and remonstrance, so heavily signed, that moment you made a case for me, the same in all its forms, bearings, and expenses, as though it were in court. I could not prevent it. I could not get Pierce to give me any assignment at all until I had made my case and collected my proofs, which cost me many days' and nights' work and quite large expenses for duplicate models, certified copies, and other necessary things to make a case, so as to either 2380 get the assignment or else defeat the patent; one or the other had to be done for you and others. Now, Shavor, which was the course to follow? The defence had to be made to get one or the other. Well, you have got the assignment, and I am in the boat on expenses, which a few dollars cash would get me out. More than all, I have been compelled to secure my professional services for seven years on that patent in order to get all I did get. Who pays me for the services that Pierce may get from me on this patent, and for which I have almost only remained here for the two past weeks as I had agreed to do so, so as to be here and aid the final passage of the bill in the Senate, and which had been delayed on account of impeachment, as well as to enable me to get my case prepared, so as to either get the assignment, or else defeat the bill in the Senate.

You wrote me once that you signed that remonstrance before I came from Troy, and that therefore that thing could not have made any sort of difference with my case here, as though I had misrepresented the matter to you. You cannot find a time or place when I have ever done such a thing by you or your house. There has been some things about notes which have not come out, as I had a most solemn right to expect, but I never told a falsehood about it; I have the remonstrance paper before me, and I will give you the date, and to-morrow, when I go to the committee room, I will give you the date of its filing.

I left Troy for Washington on the morning of the 25th day of February last, and reached here on the evening of the 26th following. I had the Pierce case continued for three weeks, and went at once at work in the stamp case in getting our testimony complete, &c. This remonstrance was signed during that three weeks; and the first time I ever saw it, it was when Hodges and I went to the committee room, on Tuesday, March 24; and before going there he had promised to give license to the four houses for which I came for, but when he saw that paper 2381 he did not; he could not do so for the reasons I have before given you. This paper has written upon these words, to wit, "March, 1868." I was here at that time, and I think it was put on file about the 20th of March, for I remember the clerk told Hodges that it had been there only a day or two when we were at the committee room on the 24 of March, where this man was clerk. Now this is the living truth. It could not have been signed before I left Troy in February, for it was written in March some time.

I should feel very thankful if the expenses of that matter could be paid; it troubles and worries me very much. You have opportunity to get it back, and a great deal more, if you are pleased to do so, or I could have kept it, and made several thousand dollars out of it but pushing stove men to the point, and not called on you for a dollar of expenses, for I could have paid those out of monies collected from the stove men, and then put the balance in pocket; but that would not have been according to my agreement with you and your house—of course it would not have been honorable. I could have made money out of it, and not be suffering, as I am now, for want of the cash and mortified with shame that my eating and sleeping bill is not paid, as well as promises outside and inside to pay cash if (you) would do so and so; by you I mean my confidentials here.

I have been here on expense for somebody for more than three months, and being thus away I have been compelled to draw from State Bank in Troy the following sums of money, to wit: $150, $73, $130, $130, $150, $50—in all about $700, just $683, and this for little expenses necessary here and home for my family. Some of this has been collected in from business, and the balance I have borrowed fram D. W. Ford until I get home, for he paid my checks as they came—and the amt. I must add, one ch'k more of $128. I have mentioned this check matter to show you that I am getting my own resources down while attending matters 2382 here in Pierce, Stewart, and stamp case—and but for them I would not have been here at all—and in which—in all of them—you and your house are interested; your house in Pierce and Stewart, for, as Stewart has now got his patents, he will make stove men howl a' certain as the world; and I have saved you in Pierce, but you do not seem to care much about Stewart.

I hope to get home soon, and then I will have Mr. Stewart pay up all his notes you are on as well as the others within a few days thereafter; and he ought to feel well enough pleased to draw from F. W. & Co. at one hawl to clear them all out at one time; and I will make that my business to have them all paid up at once. If the Albany man sues before I get home, let it go, as I will be home before he can get judgment anyhow, and will have P. P. S. pay up, and I will try and get enough in to pay up your notes. Lillie and his new company promise to pay me all up when I return to New York on my way home; if they do, that will give me about $20,000, interest and all, and they have to pay me for they want my work, which will "no go" until I am paid.

I have been to see Mr. Merriman since 2 o'clock to-day, hoping to get some news about stamp case, but have not seen him, and of course do not know about it at this time.

I will write you to-morrow how about negotiations with the P. O. Department. They have said to me that we can make some sort of an arrangement which will be satisfactory to us all. I have written this long letter in order that you might see and understand my position as well as explain some things. Mrs. Norton went home about two weeks ago. I shall not desert you or Corse or your house, although you may cast me aside and find fault with me, but I do know that you will see things as they are some day. Truly,

M. P. NORTON.

NATIONAL HOTEL,

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I mailed you this day a bill which has passed both Houses of Congress, and which is in relation to the Court of Claims, and in regard to the payment of judgments entered up by that court upon any matter growing out of any or either of the departments. I claim to have done something here in helping to amend and originate and to get passed this bill, as well as other matters relating to that court. If you will remember that about four months ago a clause passed the House in an appropriation bill, which I sent you a copy, whereby no claim in judgment of more than $5,000.00 could be paid. That still hangs in the Senate, though I have a faithful promise that it shall be stricken out in course of this week when the bill will be up for action in the Senate. But for fear that I might not get it done, I had the one sent yesterday gotten up and passed, which you will see will repeal the clause of $5,000.00 should it pass, and which new bill puts us and our claim in a better condition than ever it has been or could be in that court under any old law. But the real point was to get something, so that a judgment of that court could and would be paid at once, unless an appeal to the Supreme Court was taken. Here is another thing: Washburn, of Ill., has been all winter pitching into that court, and he got the House to pass the second $5,000 clause, which covered all judgments now unpaid, or which might be entered up by that court this term. No one saw it, as I suppose, for it was pinned on to some bill which had nothing whatever to do with the Court of Claims, 2384 and so no one opposed it, but I saw it by the merest of accident, and when that bill came up in the Senate a certain Senator moved to strike that clause out, and so it was done, and that matter of course was killed, and thus it was that the way was opened up for the new bill sent you to-day's morning mail. Now, I want to kill the $5,000 clause put in the appropriations for the next year ending June, 1869, and I think I will succeed. I shall early to-morrow, and hang on and get it stuck on by Senate for what would a judgment be worth in Court of Claims if the law would only let $5,000 of it be paid. Now, by this new law it can all be paid if it should be a $1,000,000. Have I been of any use here, do you think? I speak of it because you write me that there was nothing for me to do here in the stamp case. I only wish you knew some things which I know about that matter, and then you would never have written me those hard words which implied hard feelings towards me. Why you should think I would stay four months, long and weary months, away from home, children, &c. I send you copy of report in the Pierce case. By Sweatland telling the committee what Filley wrote him that he heard in Troy that Hodges and Pierce had bought me up; they thereupon made this report in its weak terms. Hodges is here, and many Senators have promised him that they will call up the House bill and cause it to be passed by the Senate notwithstanding this half-way report of the committee, there being a majority and a minority report. Well, sir, I am absolutely obliged to remain here so as to protect the stove men in Troy in some way, either by the license or by the defeat of bill. Should they put on a clause that no license or assignment made prior to the passage of the extension bill shall be valid, as is now suggested since the committee have had advice of the buying up and selling out of the opposition in order to punish, as they call it, such sort of work; of course I will have to go at work and try and get the bill defeated when it is put on its 2385 passage in the Senate, for my license and yours would not be worth the paper on which they are drawn, and should we trust to Pierce to make assignment after the bill is a law, and then he should forget to do so, and having his patent extended, where would you all be in Troy?

This bill has so many at work at it in Troy that I hardly know what to do with it. I know one thing, that I got several hundred dollars in cash here of a friend of mine by the name of S. P. Bell. I brought several hun. dollars with me; most of it was used up in that case in good faith. Some of my agreements here for cash have been paid, some have not, nor has my money been replaced, but payment is refused, justice is refused me, and an advantage is taken of me which is cruel and wicked. I enclose a dun letter for work done in the Pierce case, and yet no one cares for me so long as they have either an assignment or of the Pierce case, or the bill killed. Well, in this case I have one or the other; with my assignment I have parted, but my bills are not paid, nor is the case disposed of finally. If you and those with you in this matter think that the treatment I am receiving is right you have queer notions of the right. I am by no means able to lose any such sum, nor would I stay here a single moment were it not absolutely necessary to protect you and others in your manufacture and business, and were it not also absolutely necessary to so secure and arrange certain things whereby the stamp claim can be collected and raised to the very highest amount in dollars and cents, and being on the ground and knowing what was going on, I acted without letting you or Corse know all I was about, because certain matters being in my line I knew all about them, and as you and Corse had always trusted to my judgement on all questions coming in the line of my profession, I set about doing them with as little trouble and with as few words as possible, and the bill sent you ought to convince you that I am not idling away time here, and also that there is 2386 and has been something done and to be done in the stamp. I do say that had not this bill passed, and the matter of $5,000 made to apply to all judgments unpaid and to be entered up of record prior to December 1st, 1868, we would never have gotten a dollar until Congress had made a special and extra appropriation to pay the same when entered up, as it will be in the month of August or October next. Now, there is nothing to prevent payment of this year's judgment, and so it is the case with any judgment for next year, only it is done without any petition next year, for Gov. Randall will refer the claims for the two years which will be due February 1st next, or 1869, right square to that court, under the new act of Congress sent you, and will request judgment entered upon the proofs we shall produce. Then we shall not want any attorney more than ourselves, nor will you have to go 10 per cent. here, 5 per cent. there, &c., but go square through on the facts. Mr. Meriman and I are going to take Gen'l Skinner's and Gov. Randall's deposition' anew in the course of this week, ready for the completion of this case, and to use in the other case. Randall will now swear, and will swear strong on all points, and will fix prices high up, and so will Skinner now. Now, Shavor, I do hope you will see things different, and have me paid up on the Pierce case. Will you write or not?

NORTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23*d*, 1868.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I sent you some days ago new bill in relation to Court of Claims, and one this mail which contains the $5,000 clause. Merriman and I are hard at work to-day trying to get this clause struck 2387 out of the bill, as the Senate is now acting upon this bill. I have just had my dinner and am going back to Senate in five minutes, and of course must write short letter now. I hope we will get this out. It effects us in this wise: The fiscal government year commences July 1st of each year, and ends of course on the 30th day of every June. The judgment in our Court of Claims case not having been entered up before June 30 of this year will have to go over into the appropriations of next year, because it cannot now be entered up until in August or October next, and in the fiscal year which this bill covers of course it could not be paid; I mean the judgment could not be paid until an appropriation was made by act of Congress. Of course it is of the very greatest importance that we fix this bill either by having that clause removed or else so modi ed as to let us in under the old appropriation of some $500,000 not yet paid out of the Treasury. This is the conclusion that Merriman and I both have come to, and he did not know of it or understand it until I went to him last eve' to see the Indiana Senator, Hendricks.

A new suit will come under the new bill, and of course any sum would be paid at once after the entering of the judgment.

Judge Casey told Merriman last evening that we had lost nothing by the delay, and wanted him to influence you and Corse so that no injunction would issue, intimating that he would agree with the other judges when they again got together.

The judgment will be a larger sum than you have ever anticipated. I have this from good authority.

Please look over this ground and case, and then tell me if you so think it, that there is and has been nothing for me to do here in P. O. stamp case.

I am much pressed here on account of having been led to think I would find protection in what I might do here in Pierce, stamp and such matters. I do not know what to do.

Truly yours,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., July 6, 1868.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

I have to learned one thing which perhaps would do you and Corse no hurt to know. It is this: Since Congress refused in the Senate and House to limit the payment of judgments of the Court of Claims to $5,000, which was in fact limiting the jurisdiction of that court to that sum, but left the jurisdiction unimpaired, and gave that court the right to do as it pleased, Judge Casey, the chief justice of that court, has expressed himself highly pleased at that result, and he says that his court can now go on and do its work without any fear from Congress, as it was a great vindication of that court, as the argument in Congress, particularly in the House, were in support of that court, and at least a great triumph for that court. Instead of fear from Congress in the entering up of judgments for large sums in just and equitable causes, they would now have its support, for that action settled that fact for many years to come. I think he was right about it.

That court has this year dreaded to enter up large claims in judgments for fear of Congress. This bill has been pending all winter, and I am told has been a source of dread to those judges, but they were not so they could even mention their wishes in regard to that becoming a law. That proposition was a direct stab at that court, and it going through the House when first proposed with such a tremendous heavy vote, they did not think it could be removed from the bill, but the Senate did the work, and then I had my men ready in the House to make speeches in support of the Senate, and so out it had to come, 2389 and I am glad that the court feel relieved. I now believe but for that bill that court would have agreed upon the amount in our case. The chief justice will now go with us, and that will give the whole court, but it will not be done until in October next, as the whole court will not get together in August. This Chief Justice Casey told to warm lady friend of Mrs. Norton, who lives next door to the chief justice; and this is in confidence to us, and of course you will so receive it. They are going to put in many good words to the chief justice, Casey, and his family, as they are very intimate, and visit back and forward almost every day. Had we known this before the court adjourned we could have reached Casey, and he would have felt different as to a large judgment, but we only knew of it within the last week. But we will now make use of it, only you and Corse must know these things from me. Now that that court has gotten such relief and endorsement from Congress, I do think that they will go in on our case and give us a big sum. The removing by Congress of that bill will make more than $50,000.00 difference with us and in our favor—that much certain, judging from what I hear.

Truly yours, &c.,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Def't's Ex. No. 106 A & B (Corse).—I. B., ex'r.—Jan. 30, 1878.

NATIONAL HOTEL, July 18, 1868.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Sometime ago I sent to you a part of the Congressional Globe, showing that the $5,000 had been striken out from the bill. That bill is now a law, it having been signed by the President. I stated then that Mr. Trumbull had made an effort to increase the sum 2390 appropriated to pay judgments of Court of Claims, but because he had not given the one day's previous notice as required by Senate rule it could not be done on that bill. Since then another appropriation has come along, and he put on the sum of three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000) for that purpose, and the Senate passed the bill with that amendment attached. Now if I can get it through the House I shall be glad. I send you slip enclosed in this letter. I wish Congress would adjourn, for I want to go home, but it is not at all safe to do so, for several reasons which you may know if you desire. There is to be an effort made to put on this bill another clause limiting the payment of judgments in that court to $10,000, which would be just as big an outrage as the $5,000. But we have friends in the Senate who will never vote any such a thing if some one will call their attention to the matter so that it will not be passed in the absence from the Senate. I do not think the House will vote such an amendment, but it is to be tried on in a day or two. But I think it will fail. This is another appropriation bill and different from the other. We can keep it down. If this passes, there will be the sum of $400,000.00 appropriated this year by Congress for paym't of judgments of that court, and there is now in Treasury the sum of between $400,000 and $500,000—in all about one million dollars—for that purpose, which ought to pay any judgment we may get in October next, which, from all appearances, will be a large one, at least so say the P. O. Department, in a confidential way.

If some one would take Bill Merriman in Troy and break his head or neck it would be a good thing for citizens and for the community in general. He went and published a mess of stuff in one of the Troy papers by pure guess work, without any one knowing it. I would not had it done for anything in this wide world, but it will now do no sort of hurt.

2391 I had it contradicted here in the press, and its source shown up. It was a mean thing in him. Your telegram to Gregory was an amusing thing. I would have supposed that a man of your sense and judgment would have known better the moment you read the lie. Why did you not ask me or Merriman? He as well as I think very strange of your telegram on that point. Mr. Weed will in all probability be 1st assistant solicitor, or I should say attorney-general under the new law. This is one thing I am helping in so as to secure his confirmation by the Senate, there being some 8 or 9 Senators boarding at this hotel.

Merriman wants to be postmaster in the post-office here, and I am helping him. He or Judge Embry, of Kentucky, will have, and either of them will do big things for us on stamp. Embry and family have sat at our table all the past winter, and are good friends of ours, without any sort of doubt. It lies between him and Merriman. Embry is brother-in-law to Senator Fowler, &c. When all these things are done, Weed sure to all right, and postmaster here all right. The $300,000 appropriation all right and the way clear for payment of any and all judgments—no matter how small or how large—rendered by the Court of Claims, then I shall start for home, and not till then, although you have said I am of no use here, and that not another dollar of my expenses here of any kind whatever will be paid by you or any of your people. All right. But I know just what I am about, and I know just what I can do here, and of what use or service it is for me to stay here.

Do you think I would stay from home and from my family all alone as I now am unless it was of the very greatest use and imperative necessity?

The Pierce case has been put over this session until the 2d Monday in December next, and I have sounded enough so that I do know it will pass by a large vote, and his 7 years will commence on the 6th day of December next.

2392 P. P. Stewart has got all his cases through, and the patents have gone home to him. He has beaten only 18 different and cracked lawyers in the case, and he has every claim allowed him. Your cooking stoves, having reservoir and warming closet and many other things, now infringe both of his patents, and there is no use in talking, for he will always maintain his case and these patents. Not a cooking stove made with such contrivances but that infringe his patents. When I get home, some of the infringers will be put into court, after the passing of a proper length of time. And at all times and in all places I will support and maintain in the law those patents.

Mr. Hooper; formerly Commissioner of Patents; Hon. R. Conklin, U. S. Senator; and Gifford, of New York, and Harding, of Philadelphia, & Hodges, of Boston, are secured as counsel with me for him.

Truly yours,

M. P. NORTON.

2393 POULTNEY, VT., TROY, N. Y.,
August 23*d*, 1873.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have your letter under date of the 22d inst., and am sorry that you should have misunderstood my last two letters to you. I did not write them in a fault-finding spirit, but only that you and those with you in your efforts to destroy me in 1871, should now do not only justice to me but also to yourselves. Those persons who were engaged in that business, entirely unbeknown to me, when I was over four hundred miles from Troy, and when, too, I had lost large sums of money by the treachery and villany of others on J. D. Green and F. G. Ransford, I have been indeed very proud that in all of Troy no man could be found who would go into such business. I am glad that you have forgotten it; would that I, too, might forget it—in that I have long since forgiven it from the very bottom of my heart at the command and in the imitation of the Heavenly Master. I was by no means complaining, Mr. Shavor, but merely asked that now you and they who had so deeply injured me without cause, should correct the wrong. That is all I asked of you.

Inasmuch as you have forgotten what you did on that occasion, let me write it all out so you can see it once more, then if you say you and they did me no wrong, I will say no more about it, and leave it for that great day when "on the other shore" we shall meet to answer for all of our doings in life's great battle. You cannot have forgotten that our troubles first began by your two or three letters you wrote and sent me, while at Washington, in 1869, which I now have, as well as the original one you 2394 sent to the Postmaster General, in which you informed him and myself that I did not own a single thing in or about the right and title to my inventions in postmarking and cancelling hand stamps, and that I was a swindler, and that he must make no settlement with me about my own patent invention, and that, too, when I had not offered to have any settlement there. Now, I write this in the very spirit of friendship for and with you, and shall not copy those letters for you at all unless you wish it done, for I have the same with me here. Right on the top of all that, only about two years later, you made the following deposition and put it on file in the Patent Office; it was on the the 25th day of August, 1871, just two years ago next Monday, to wit:

JACOB SHAVOR, being duly sworn, says:

"Question 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupation.

"Answer. My name is Jacob Shavor; my age is 55 years; I am now living at Troy, N. Y.; am a retired manufacturer.

"Question 2. Do you know Marcus P. Norton's general character for truth and veracity in this community; if so, what is it, and how have you become acquainted with it?

"Answer. I do know his character in that respect; it is bad. I have known him since 1859, and I know his character from personal experience, and from a large circle of business men with whom he had dealing, and there is but one opinion, which I have stated.

"Question. Would you believe him under oath?

"Answer. I would not."

I have a certified copy of this deposition of yours made by you on the 25th day of August, 1871, at Troy, and which I never knew was made, or anything about it, until we came to the hearing of the suit of Robinson v. Secombe Man'ing Company," last winter in the U. S. circuit court, New York; I have also a copy of one made by Ransford, also one by Green. Now, do you say you never made this deposition? If 2395 you did make it, do you suppose you could make any one believe it who knew all the facts—also, that for so many years in Troy I maintained a proud position at the bar in all the courts, second to no one, and at same time for many of those years, earned cash from $20,000 to $26,000 each year and on that paid gov't tax. Of course you would claim no such thing. Now, it is because you knew I was not present at that time either in person or by counsel, not having any previous notice, and because you put this deposition, manufactured under those circumstances, upon a public record, that I want you to correct the same, and do me what you well know is justice, as well as the right, and to do it now.

About the indictment of which you wrote, I am told that you knew all about it, that it was planned at the house of Ransford by Green, Ransford and by you, that you and Green had correspondence about it as well as with Mr. Low. But this matter must now be set right, and it can be done by those who planned it and carried it on; if not by them very soon, then I know of a way by which I can have it done. It was a most wicked and infamous thing, and everybody well knew why it was done. It was a great wrong. Now, let it corrected, and it will all be as it should be—right. So far as I am concerned, as to the stamp business, I shall at all times do right, or at least will make that my effort, and by me there will be no troubles as to that; it will all depend on others; if each one desires that each shall have his right and his property, there will be no trouble, but should any one fail in doing right, and become so avaricious as to want everything and go in for that, why I have no doubt there will be trouble. We all must united on the right and we can each secure a fortune and that right soon. The best way to do this is to commence to set matters right in those places where I have been injured. That is the first business, and if any one has ever been wronged by me, let it be pointed out and I will hasten to make ample rights.

2396 As to signing the name of Ransford and Low beyond the mere copy of it, or writing the same as I have written yours to-day, and thousands of times in your business, it is a wilfull, malicious lie, and I trust you or Ransford, and any one else will not again charge me any such thing. It is too "thin," and too foolish a thing to charge on with, and I trust you will look at it in the light of the law as well as on all other grounds. There are some on the grand jury at the time you name, who have said in Washington, that had they not been deceived, or had all the facts been known, not only would I gone out square, but some other persons would have been indicted. But we will let this all pass. All I want done is that these things now be set right as I have so often been promised they should be, and then there is nothing in the way of our march to an ample fortune. You cannot blame me at all in this thing for wanting done what I have written.

Your letter would show your great wish and desire to be friendship and peace. You are right in this, and this is just what I, too, want, and it is just what I am after, and the way to have it permanent is to do just what I have suggested and requested in my letters to you. To save writing to Mr. Green and Ransford, you can read, show or send them this letter as well as my other letters; I also think you ought to show them to Mr. Corse and Eddy.

I am so anxious that I want it done at once, then I want the reissue put right through, and everything gotten ready for the very first Monday in the next Congress at Washington, so that we can have early, very early by Congress on our bills, thereby to get cash. I have named to you the persons whom I recognize in this business, and did so that there should again be no misunderstanding.

This is a long letter, but you can get through it. Remember that I am for peace, friendship, for exact justice for all of time, and for cash, for the most cash, too.

Your friend of years, &c.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1864.

DEAR SHAVOR: I enclose herewith the two assignments which you handed me to prepare the petition to Congress. I send you also an assignment of the patent of 1863, which through mistake had not been assigned according to agreement. I have dated it at the time when it should have been assigned. What do you think about seeing the British consul at New York about our English matters? I wrote to Griswold that I thought I would be at Washington some time during next ——. If I go I shall want to see you and Corse here alone some evening this week, and then we will call on B.

The amount of funds required as proposed last evening, is: appeal, $25; new application, $15; on your loom patent, $20; in all $60, which send me and I will forward to-day and get that matter into shape for next week.

Yours, &c.,

M. P. NORTON.

Defendant's Exhibit No. 109 (Corse).—I. B., Ex'r.—Jan. 31, 1878.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., Feb'y 24, 1866.

DEAR SHAVOR: I have been here two full days and business is well going. Mr. Ferry is stopping here; he, Nellie and I occupy one table of four seats, one of which we have reserved for Dr. Baldwin 2398 when he comes. The member of Senate committee to whom was referred our P. O. stamp matter, also boards here, so you see we have the thing just right. Mr. Ferry will make his report just as soon as Mr. King and I can get our bill drawn up in draft form for him to submit to his committee. We have good promises and great encouragement. There are to be no delays which can be avoided under the rules. I shall have more to write you on this subject about the middle of the week.

I found on file the very papers which we want in the Groom's case. It seems that I returned them to the files soon after your settlement with Hagan. The whole thing is assigned to "Groom, Shavor & Potter," as I examined the record yesterday; now I suppose Hagan bought out all of Groom's right in this case as well as in all others. I wish you would see to this and make some inquiries of Hagan about it. Hagan sent me a lot of papers yesterday, which relate to the proposed reissue of the Groom patent of 1862; the first or second one, I forgot which; but it is immaterial. Now, I find the very thing we want for the purpose mentioned to you personally. I think we better take two patents for certain reasons. I also saw the New York steel men, and they satisfied me that they would buy such invention at some respectable sum and pay the cash, so I shall put the things in the very best possible shape.

I enclose you a little instrument which I found on file in the case, and which had no sort of business there, which, if known, would prevent my further acting in the case as attorney; this was done by the office of Beach & Smith, as you will see on the second page; now, don't let any person, without it is Corse, see this paper, and at my request put it into the fire at once. This was filed July 9, 1863, and with friendly aid in a certain quarter, I have blocked their game, and now the case is free for me to act in. If this paper don't go to the fire I can't act in this case, and I have only sent it to you to show you the course pur-
2399 sued towards you, but I have take care of it, and now you are all right again. I shall write you more about the progress of this case in course of a week. I have the model, drawings, specification, &c., of the matter, now in my room, and shall make the necessary amendments to divide up the case and then report to you.

If you inquiries to make, of course you write them, and then I will answer. I may not, in the hurry, give you as full information as may wish, when your letter would call my attention to the particular matter, &c.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I wrote you that we were trying to get a communication from the P. M. General asking Congress to put through the Well bill. Mr. Ferry went to the department yesterday morning and got from the new Postmaster-General a most beautiful document, just exactly what he wanted on that point; also, an endorsement of the $50,000. So last evening, upon that letter from the P. M. G., he obtained the floor and introduced the bill for the $50,000, and the report of committee was being read when Morrill—the great "Tariff jackass" of the House—made a motion to lay the bill on the table; so Mr. Ferry did not at that time wish to risk the bill, as he was not in the regular time of committee, and he therefore withdrew the bill for that time, but will now try it again to-morrow, and so on until it passes. It would certainly 2400 have passed last evening but for this man Morrill, whom we had not the least notion that he was to do such a thing. I have my forces at work to-day and we will fix him all right by to-morrow, and then Ferry will move again. He can now keep at work on the thing until he gets it through. It won't take long to put it through the Senate if we can get it by the House. P. M. G. Randall will do all we may ask of him in the matter. I wish he had been in there in place of Dennison, and we would have had reported at least $150,000. I have this from an authenticated source. If I were in condition to wait until next session I would advise you and Corse to wait, because I know you could do so without injury to you; but I can't wait at all. I must have something from this or it will injure me, and for this reason I am sticking to this thing and doing green ink here and there; we certainly will get our pay. All say that it cannot be prevented. When Mr. Ferry can have the floor for an hour or so he will certainly carry the $50,000.

I hope you will return to me the Littlefield draft, as you cannot exchange for your acceptance.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter containing the Littlefield draft has just reached me. In reply I have to say that when you think that I found fault with you for not taking this draft, you are entirely mistaken. I only thought that it might be convenient for you to do it, and as it was as much for your benefit as mine, I thought you would as soon do it as not, as I could not use it here, and so I sent it to you, well knowing that you had had three drafts on him, and which were paid at presentation, and I did not think you would be offended because I did so. Those drafts you have on hand would have been paid by me before now, had it not been for illness upon illness, and that too of the most severe kind, and for this stamp which had kept me here for five months, and expending money of which you would not care to know. More than that, every party have in good faith promised to pay the drafts made on them by their authority, and one of them accepted at that. If driven to sell out at Troy, in order to pay you and some few small demands besides, on my return, of course I will do so, and then start anew in some new town at the West. There is no doubt but that I shall have to do so in case this stamp fails at this session, and then the whole thing being in your hands of course you can get it through without loss. I have done my very best here. I have sacrificed the comforts and pleasures of home in order to benefit you, Corse, and myself, and yet I hope for the best; and now that you find fault with me, I shall be 2402 driven from Troy. I have always meant to do well, and to do right in all things. I have stood up to my friends through evil report and through good report; but if they now think that I have been of no use to them and desert me because I can't make everybody do as I want because time enough has not yet been granted, why of course I can do but one thing, and that is as I have before stated.

I enclose you copy of the proceedings, taken from the Congressional Globe, in the matter of the stamp. The report was only withdrawn for the time, and is now printed, a copy of which I will send to you by next mail. It will be moved again to-morrow, probably, and those who opposed it will now go for it, if promises are good for anything, and I do hope it will go through. Mr. Ferry and I saw Mr. Eddy this morning, and had an hour and a half with him. We went to the boat with him from the cars. Mr. Ferry is entirely satisfied with the matter, and will take all the stock you will let him have. As to me, it is wholly impossible. Mr. Shavor, I can't begin to take any, and I am very sorry it is so, as I would like something which would bring an income each year; but you have my reasons for it, and which are beyond my power to change. King has gone away in the very time when I most needed him here, but I shall stick to it until this session closes, and beyond this session I cannot go, because my funds will have been exhausted, and certain it is I cannot spend any more time, as I must be attending to my profession and not let the business run away from me. I shall therefore do all that can be done, and, trusting to that Providence which doeth all things wisely and for the best, go forward and do the best I can.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. MORTON.

NORTON'S CANCELING STAMP.

Mr. FERRY. I ask unanimous consent to make a report from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads which is recommended by the Post-Office Department. I ask the Clerk to read the letter of the acting Postmaster-General.

Mr. ANCONA. I demand the regular order of business.

NORTON'S CANCELING STAMP—AGAIN.

Mr. FERRY. I ask leave to report from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post Roads a joint resolution to provide for the payment of the use and title to Norton's postmarking and postage-canceling stamp. I ask that the letter of the Post-Office Department be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, APPOINTMENT OFFICE,
Washington, July 23, 1866.

SIR: Information has been received at this department that the application of Mr. Norton for remuneration for the use of his patent marking and canceling stamp has not been reported upon by your committee.

This matter is considered one of great public importance and especially to this department, and a report to the House and the prompt action of Congress on this subject would relieve the department from much embarrassment in the future essential use of this stamp.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ALEXANDER W. RANDALL,
Acting Postmaster-General.

Hon. JOHN B. ALLEY,
Chairman Committee on Post Offices.

2404 Mr. SHELLABARGER. I make the point of order that the joint resolution makes an appropriation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order. An appropriation bill must itself take money out of the Treasury. This will require another bill.

Mr. KASSON. Is not this the same stamp which has been used in the Post-Office?

Mr. FERRY. Yes, sir; for three years.

Mr. MORRILL. I move that the joint resolution be laid upon the table.

Mr. FERRY. That motion is not debatable, but I trust it will not be agreed to.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 57, noes 17; no quorum voting.

The SPEAKER, under the rules, ordered tellers, and appointed Mr. Ferry and Mr. Spalding.

Mr. MORRILL. I withdraw the motion to lay upon the table.

Mr. FERRY. I withdraw the report.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., December 26th, 1866.

Hon. A. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Some days ago the Hon. John A. Griswold, member of the House of Representatives from the congressional district where I reside, presented to Congress a petition made by Sacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of Troy, N. Y., to whom I had assigned a certain patent granted to me upon improvements in "post-marking of letters and canceling postage stamps thereon," and which device has been in constant use by your department, to its great gain, profit, and advantage, for several years without ever having paid a single dollar or other sum for the use of the same, although for more than four years it has saved the employment of 254 clerks yearly in the various post-offices where it has so been used, thereby making in "dollars and cents" an annual and positive saving in and to your department of more than two hundred thousand dollars in clerk hire alone, and in the four years of more than eight hundred thousand dollars actual "bona fide" saving in cash. Upon inquiry as to what had been done with said petition, I learned that it had been sent to you by copy thereof, for a reply from you to the matters therein set forth. I beg of you a careful examination and consideration of the facts and merits of this case and petition in order that justice may be as near done as the state of the country will permit done to those concerned.

2406 A former Postmaster General denied the validity of my patent, but at same time put the invention into extensive use throughout the country not interrupted by the late civil war. This was four years ago next February or March when he let a contract for four years to make, vend, and put into use my said patented invention without my consent and without other compensation than denying the validity of my said patent which, under the law as it then was, compelled me to assign said patent in order that it might be tested in court so that my rights could be enforced, for then the inventor and patentee could not be a witness in any suit upon his patent brought by him. Now he can be a witness in his own suit as by law, &c. I suffered a great loss and hardship by such denial of the validity of said patent. It went into court, and after a very expensive suit resulted in favor of the patent. Having thus established the validity of said patent, my assignees most respectfully asked Congress for compensation after having, with me, spent at that time nearly thirteen thousand dollars about the invention patent and maintaining the same in court. In addition to that sum they and I have up to to-day expended something more than six thousand dollars in efforts to get compensation for that which so justly belongs to us, and by means of which your department have actually saved in cash more than $800,000 already, and now is receiving and saving more than $200,000 annually, while the patent aforesaid was granted for 17 years from the date thereof. We only ask, for the past and future use of this patented invention, some reasonable sum or amount as compensation, and while on this point I beg to call your attention to the fact that it is now in the power of the petitioners to stop by injunction the making and using of this invention, and yet at same time they hope and desire that justice may be had without resort to anything of the kind, and they will only use that as their last remedy to protect themselves from wrong, from injustice.

2407 They have therefore directed me, as their attorney, to communicate with you on this matter, and authorized and instructed me to say to you that they will accept of one hundred thousand dollars, together with said expenses added thereto, or they will accept of the actual savings of one year out of the 17 years, say 1865 or 1866, by the use and means of said invention, as computed by your Department, for the past, and for the seventeen years' use of said invention, that being the time for which the patent was granted, and for which the law protects the invention, and on these conditions they will duly assign and transfer the said patent and invention to the department or U. S. Government, upon the express condition that all needful legislation to enable you to close up the matter with them at once shall be had and granted at this present session of Congress. They are wholly and entirely unsatisfied with the sum of fifty thousand dollars, the amount recommended by the House committee at the last session of the present Congress, they having been nearly four years asking some pay for the benefits conferred by the invention.

They do fully believe that the whole people, especially the voting and tax-paying people of this country, will justify and uphold them in insisting upon compliance with these terms and amount which they have here stated in the most respectful and friendly manner towards you and your department of this government, as well as towards Congress and its committee, who recommended the said sum of fifty thousand dollars; and the petitioners fully and firmly believe that that committee would have recommended a much larger sum than the $50,000 but for the most illiberal views and grounds taken and sent to Congress by your immediate predecessor; and yet they do not wish, but they disclaim to reflect or to cast any censure upon him. They have only to regret that one Postmaster-General should assail the patent, while a second 2408 should attempt to gain possession of the invention and patent through the argument advanced by him, so that they could not, under the circumstances, obtain what to them and to almost everybody else seemed just, right, and equitable toward the petitioners. The course pursued by your predecessors concerning this very simple, and yet most valuable and important invention to the Government, and especially to the successful and economical management of the affairs of your department, will not, I think, invite, stimulate, or encourage inventors in the invention and improvements having in view the rapid transaction of business on the score just above named, and for the convenience, safety, and security of the country and the inhabitants or people thereof, not only in your department, but also in the War, Navy, and other departments of the government, if, after such immense expenditure of money and loss of time to make and maintain a valuable and meritorious invention, the reward to to be but a few dollars more than the actual or necessary expenses.

They now have great hope and confidence that you will be pleased to take more liberal views, and recommend Congress to pass an act which will now enable you to comply to this proposition, which is their lowest and only one now to be made, in view of the fact that originally they asked and expected and had fixed upon the sum of three hundred thousand dollars as their compensation.

I hope and trust that you will transmit this letter, or a copy of the same, to Congress, together with your reply to the letter and petition which I learn has been transmitted to you by the proper House committee, as I would very much that Congress should its attention called to these truths and facts herein stated, and from thence to lay the whole case before the country at large, in order that all may know and judge of this just and most equitable claim for compensation for an invention which not only facilitates the rapid and successful 2409 transmission and delivery of letters, &c., to the people, but actually lessens their taxes and renders more easy the burdens of the Government.

I have the honor, sir, to be, and to remain, your ob't serv't,

MARCUS P. NORTON,
Attorney for Shavor & Corse.

Hon. A. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Since I wrote you a day or two ago concerning the petition of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, presented to the Congress of the United States, by which compensation is respectfully asked for the past and future use of an invention made by me and patented to me, and for the postmarking of letters, and the rapid and permanent cancelation of the postage stamps thereon, I have obtained a book bearing the title of the United States Official Register for the year 1865, and known as the "Blue Book," by and from which I learn that the head stamp-2410 ing clerk in the New York City post-office receives an annual salary of one thousand and two hundred dollars ($1,200), and his first assistant a salary of $1,080, and that the other clerks, known as the "stamping and cancelling clerks," receive $960 and $900. There were in all such clerks fourteen under the old plan or system for postmarking letters, and for the cancellation of postage stamps, while by the invention made and patented, as I have hereinbefore stated, only seven such clerks are required or employed.

It will be seen that such invention actually saves the time and payment of seven clerks in that office alone. The average salary of these clerks is not far from one thousand dollars each, in all the sum of about $7,000—seven thousand dollars for one year. That post-office has had this invention in exclusive use for the past five years, making thereby this annual saving to the department and government, so that in that office alone there has been an actual saving of nearly if not quite $35,000 up to this date in clerk hire alone.

Then the patent has about 13 years yet to run by the terms of the law, so that the saving for the next 13 years being in same proportion as above stated, there must be a saving of ($91,000) ninety-one thousand dollars, to which add the saving already made, and the sum will amount to ($126,000) one hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars for the lifetime of said patent; and it will be observed that this is but one of the 29,000 post-offices in the United States. It is true that this is the larger one, but all the larger offices must of necessity be in the same proportion. I desire also at this point to call your attention to the fact that there are other and, I think, more important advantages gained by the use of this simple invention, two or three of which I beg leave to name: 1st, the permanent cancellation of the postage-stamps, thereby preventing frauds by cleansing and reusing such stamps; 2d, the great rapidity by which the mails are dispatched in all the larger offices; and 3d, the intelligible postmark upon the envelope.

2411 This saving in labor and the advantages last above named are fully proven by the depositions on oath of such persons who are or have been in the employ of the department, in some of the post-offices, and who have the means of knowing whereof they speak, as well as a large number of postmasters, all of which are printed in the proceedings of Congress on this subject, a copy of which I hand to you herewith. I beg to call your attention to these matters of fact. After you shall have examined them, I do not believe you will hesitate for a moment to recommend Congress to pass an act authorizing the payment of the sum named in my former letter to you as a just and equitable compensation for the invention and patent as therein proposed. Be pleased to transmit this letter, together with my former one to you, to Congress, with your answer to said petition, if you shall deem such advisable, because they will show the exact grounds on which you base your opinion or recommendations. The matter stated in these letters are the living truth, and cannot be contradicted or disproven.

I have the honor, sir, to be and remain, your ob't ser't,

MARCUS P. NORTON,
Attorney for Shavor & Corse, Petitioners and Assignees.

Please preserve this and the one I sent you the other day. Better return them to me after you and Corse have seen them.

NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

2412 DEAR SIR: I have just come from the Post-Office Department, where all alone I saw Mr. Randall, the Postmaster-General, about our matters, and I find that he will write the communication to Congress to-morrow, certain, and then he will recommend more than yet has been done, and will take occasion to say to Congress that the matter must be definitely disposed of and settled up before the first of March next, certain, as they will have to advertise to let the stamp manufacturing contract between Feb'y 1st and the 10th of same month, and must let it to some one about the middle of March next, as the old contract will expire April 1, 1867. The only thing not yet fixed on is the sum in dollars and cents to be recommended, and on that point he requested me to ask Mr. Ferry to call on him to-morrow morning, and after that interview he would fix the sum to be recommended to Congress. He wanted learn from Ferry how large a sum the committee would pass upon, and he will either go that sum or else the one year's saving, &c. So it will be settled to-morrow, and by next day I will be able to report to you definitely as to the amount; and then, Shavor, I have our guns—no King's, but ours—ready to move on the works in Congress and it shall go square through. You can see that you and Corse have the advantage of them, and that there cannot be any longer delay; and I know you and Corse, and I even will feel joyous and as fine as new born, &c., &c.

Now, as to King. He told me had written you, and expected "a paper" in reply, which would give him the ¼ part, deducting all expenses. Well, said to him, if you get that you will get what I could not for my rightful interest. Why, said I, I asked them for an absolute assignment, but I did not get it because they promised me, when I made the assignment to them, that the title should remain in them unincumbered, and of course I had no right to press it. "And now," said I "if they give it to you they will violate that contract and very likely lose all their rights, and of course they won't be trapped like that;" and then, said I, you prejudiced Shavor against me, and that made 2413 him not only careful but extremely cautious. This little plan took him all down, and I don't believe you will hear anything more from him on that point, nor do I think he will be very much in our way. You will understand me in this plan, and as you have written him nothing, of course there will be nothing to clash, and it must take; so, when you come here next week we will have a good time and first-rate understanding on the matter, and push, push it ahead. If you want a good room here I can get you one, and as cheap as elsewhere; but you may stay with your friends, and so I'll not engage one unless you write me to do so.

I send you a letter from New York which explains why the stock has not been sent to you before now. Please return me the letter, as I wish to put it on my files at home. You see that all things are right. I have to-day, or rather day before yesterday, written him that all the money must be paid to you, and you would receipt the same. $830 odd dollars was your due yesterday, and I hope was promptly paid, as they are able to do so.

I enclose you another letter, which will show you my pressing immediate want, or onto my personal property they will go after this week certainly as the world. By some accident I had omitted these taxes until called on a few days ago to pay them, and I sent for the am't, and it only came on the 5 or 6 inst.; and I had hoped that certain money which I brought here to use in our business, and for my own other expenses, but which had been used in another case because of certain circumstances, would be repaid me in time; but it has not, but is promised within five days from yesterday. I hold business paper as collateral for part of it, because requested by them to do so, and it will be all right soon. Now, I have to ask you to pay this amount, $360.80, and when you come here I will give you the same back, either in cash or collaterals, as the case may be. When I see you I will tell you all of the matter, but I don't like to write it, and only do so in confidence to you, but it is all right, as * * * * * *

JACOB SHAVOR,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I send enclosed an envelope which shows that the gov't of Canada are now using our stamp invention. Did your friend get it patented there?

The argument which we are to have in the Court of Claims this week will virtually decide our case, and after that there will be only the amount to settle upon. I have no doubt at all about our success there.

At any rate the P. M. G. can settle for the use of the invention under decision of the Attorney-General, but of course cannot buy the patent. There is no doubt about this either, so in any event we shall get a good haul. I have had a hard month's work to get ready so far, and I have a hard week's work before me, but I can stand it. Hoole will be here on Wednesday of this week.

I wrote you a long letter last evening.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

MARCH 26, '67.

DEAR SHAVOR: Our case will be heard in Court of Claims next Monday certain, as the court have set that day down for the argument. That day will decide the whole thing so far as that court is concerned.

Hoole comes here to-night, so you see that I shall get his testimony in time.

The brief and points made by Mr. Combs is now in the hands of the printer, and they are all O. K. Mine will go there to-morrow, or rather after we get through with Hoole, and thus all things are going on right. The Attorney-General will take up the matter which I wrote you about early next week, and we will use the one that suits us the best when both decisions shall have been made. I mean to have some money out of this stamp before I leave this town if there be any way in the world it can be done, and there is two ways certain in my best judgment, already endorsed by able lawyers here, so I feel better about it than I would perhaps were it my own opinion unsupported. I shall at any rate hang to the thing.

I shall also see that the contract to be made to make this stamp by P. M. G. and some manufacturer is so made for the four years as 2416 to cut off forever and entirely this mean and devilish spirit of "improvements" by others (all in your eye). Then we can sell the patent next winter for as much as we will get now, and perhaps more, depending on decision rendered in Court of Claims next week for the past use; and the new bill now in the House will go for patent and past use from April 1st next up to the time Congress act upon that bill. So we will take all that Court of Claims or Attorney-General will give us now for past use up to the 1st of April, 1867. Do you see the point and understand my position for you and Corse and for myself? It is a good one, and so more especially in case we make it work, and why can't we? We can.

King don't know the 1st thing about the plan or what is going on. Is this all O. K.? This printing will have to be paid for soon. I will write you fully on that point to-morrow.

I am full of hope about this matter of stamp, and it may seem long and expensive to you, but you will see the day when you, Corse, and all will be glad you have had to do with it. Hagan ought to have gone to N. Y. before. Has Foot paid up? I must close (Def't's Ex. No. 116, B (Corse) I. B.) up here. How is your wife? I hope you will find her greatly improved by the coming spring.

How is everything at Troy? I have been gone almost 3½ months. I am homesick indeed, but I feel as though this business must be gone through with. So it must, and stay I must while there is hope for some money for us all out of it.

How is the gold mine in Carolina? I wish I had some stock there, but can't get it.

Shavor, that chair stock is and will be worth more than you think now.

Yours, truly,

NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I have received within a day or two past from you two letters, which are not very encouraging to me. They worry me much to tell you as it is.

Now, in the first place, I have been away from home—as dear to me as is your family to you at least—now for four months and ten days, engaged in what I had supposed was a common cause, until convinced otherwise by your letters. I have been hard at work all the time when well, and have devoted a very great deal of time to your stamp, as I am no longer permitted to call the production of my own brains "my stamp." I would not have been here for three of these four months and 10 days but for this stamp. I have children that I have not been permitted to see for all this time; shut up in a dirty hotel, with unwholesome food to eat, deprived of the joys and comforts of one of the very best and lovely homes on the earth for all this while, and for nothing, only to 2418 be chided and upbraided by you because I have not performed to suit your notion of things, and brought into you and Corse a large sum of money before now. Mr. Shavor, I have done my very best, not only in this, but in all other matters. I have always endeavored to act honorably and uprightly with you and every other man. I may have failed to do so, and failed to meet my engagements, but it has been an error of the head and not of the heart. Your charging my wife—and no man ever had a better one in all respects than she is to me—truthful, noble, and worthy of the acquaintance of any respectable and high-toned person on this earth—with "reporting about Troy that I was to do big things in the court of appeals" has well nigh broken my heart in pieces, and it was this feeling which led me to send you the dispatch denying the whole thing. I sent her your letter, and she says that a bigger falsehood was never uttered, by some one she does not know, and has no means of knowing who it is that first uttered so base a slander. It has mortified her feelings much; and how do you think I feel about such things? How would you feel were you in my place, and it were your wife instead of mine? The idea of dragging my wife into such an undertaking is what I cannot understand, unless it is the design to ruin me and my family in order to get me out of somebody's way. When it comes to that, it will be a matter which I will attend to as I have other things, and who could be mean enough for that I cannot tell. Well, sir, we will let it go. I have done my best to hasten your interest to grand results, and you are not satisfied with it. Why you should require of me to write you a letter every day about stamp I can't say. I have always told you and written you that when you did not hear from me you might know that things were going on all right, and that I would give you results just as soon as I had any to give. This case here was in first-rate condition.

An objection to the case was taken by the gov't solicitors, and 2419 they backed down. I sent you the points in the case. When this took place the case was really ours, and there was nothing left for us to do but to take the proofs on the point of the amount to recover as * * *

Def't's Ex. No. 117 (Corse), I. B., and telegraphed to you at the time. I then went busy at work to get proofs taken, and worked myself beyond my strength to get them in, so as to get a judgment at this term of that court, but the Post-Office Department was behind, in consequence of so many office seekers and appointments to make, that the case was delayed on that point, and they are not yet completed. A report and certified copies of P. M. G. letters and other papers I wanted. You say come home. Well, I shall have to come, as it is quite evident from your letter that you will not be at another dollar's expense concerning matters here; and as I have a large bill for printing and commissioner's fees for services in testimony and other necessary things, as well as a large board bill to settle and pay, that I cannot remain here but a few days longer, just long enough to make some sort of a settlement of this indebtedness, so that I can get home. Had you co-operated with me in these matters here, we could have had money now. A P. O. D. mail-bag lock case just been decided by Court of Claims for some two or three years' use of it, and the man gets only $50,000. But I have no money to go on further, and of course am compelled to quit. I will not ask for any more, for if I do it is of no use. By being here this long I have let go by two life policies of $5,000, because I had no money to pay them at present; but I will go home and try and get money to pay you all I owe you. I have began the effort, and am promised success. I will write to-morrow again to you.

Your friend,

NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

I had made arrangements to go to Troy to-night when I received your letter, which I answered at once. Mr. Shavor, I do not understand why it is that you pursue me as you do. You seem to think that there is no wrong anywhere but on my part; that I am only capable of doing wrong things at all times. I have done my best for you at all times and in all places. If you, Corse and I could agree on stamp matters, there is not a question of doubt but that we all could get rich out of it. The gov't solicitor told a person here in this city last evening that it was a very big case, and one entirely just, and that you ought to have a judgment for more than $200,000, and would get one for that at least. This has been told me by the person since I wrote in the forenoon. Your friend Gregory can tell you some things about it, as you may not believe what I say as to the case being a very large and just one. Gregory told me as much as this, part of it to-day, too, and friend of mine told me the rest in addition. The case in the Court of Claims is in the right direction for a large sum of money at some time. I know this, but 2421 may not be able to convince you of it. This court has adjourned until the 7th day of May next. I shall get home on Saturday. I have been very much grieved at your feelings towards me, but I can't help it. I will get along and do the best I can, and will do as well as in my power to do, and if then I must "go to the wall," of course I can't help it. I have recently thought that this line towards me was for the purpose of getting me out of the case entirely, and so rather than have any unkind feelings about the matter, I will go out of it, and trust to something else to get me out of debt, debts incurred by means of this very business, and all I want is some fair time from you to enable me to pay you what I owe you, together with the money you have paid on my drafts here this winter. I think that I can after a while raise the money to do it with, as I do not wish it said by you that I have wronged you.

Yours, truly,

M. P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 23d inst. is at hand. As to retracting what I have written, will never be done until you have recalled some half dozen letters written by you to me. Your explanation in relation to Mrs. Norton is wholly and entirely satisfactory, and will perfectly satisfy her idea of the matter. You talk about letters being unworthy of your notice; would it be well for you to look at some of your letters to me on that point? I think so. Your "whisky meter" is sold; well, if it is, I have no knowledge on that point; you can investigate it, and I would be very glad to have you find that it is sold to gov't or any one else.

Now, as to your insinuations about the stamp, as though I was playing or to play some trick about it, I have only to say that I will submit to an examination to and by any committee you may appoint. You have an assignment of the whole patent, and I have simply nothing. You take advantage of me because I am in your debt, and now, when I propose a way of paying you up, interest and all, you laugh at me and say that I am playing you a trick, and that I have a great many enemies in Troy. Now, Mr. Shavor, I have as many as you may represent; I have many, many friends there and elsewhere. But have you considered how it was that I came to have so many enemies? Let me tell you frankly that it was your business connected with others—my faithfulness and fidelity to you and to your cause, and now you desert me. I could have sold you out bag and baggage, and these enemies of 2423 whom you speak would now and long since have been my friends.

Mr. Shavor, I am neither ashamed nor am I unwilling that the conduct of my whole life should be examined closely and carefully. I will return to Troy and try and make friends with all, but will never surrender a right of mine or of any client or of personal honor, and now as you suspect me of tricking you and inform me that others have advised you of my intentions to be tricky with you and to cheat you, after 11 years of confidence, trust, and hard services, I propose never again to have to do with the stamp, inasmuch as you are confident that you can carry it out without my aid. I would like that you should give me the opportunity of raising money to pay you up without distressing me, as you might do were you so inclined. I am firmly resolved not to meddle farther in the stamp matter, and then you cannot again charge me with broken contracts—with dishonest intentions and purposes—with broken promises. I have done my best for you and for the cause, and if you discover my drift you will find me firm. I will hereafter try and do right as I have in the past. I have struggled with the business of the world and aimed to do well, to be honest, and to be just with all and to all. If you will show me one dishonorable thing since I have done business for you and for your house, I would be very much obliged to you. My success in the law with you and with others is the only crime that I stand charged with. Now, Mr. Shavor, when you say you see the drift of things and throw out such charges against , I have only to ask you to wait, you will find a greater mistake than you ever made in your life. I am perfectly willing to submit my whole transactions with you and Corse about the stamp to a committee of your own selection from the good people of Troy. I am your friend, faithful and true; it is now evident that you are not mine. You have been here one winter in stamp matters and got the way somewhat learnt, and 2424 you can next winter go ahead with it, and you will need no one to help you. The P. M. G. can pay you something now if you will press the matter with him, and if you want any advice from me I will give it, but as I have no recognized rights in the (Def't's Ex. No. 119 B (Corse), I. B.) matter it is not worth while for me to spend 4 and 6 months' time each year from my office and business to be called a "spendthrift" and dishonest; and then you can get along just as well without me and perhaps very much better. There is plenty of money in the matter and can be had. Inasmuch as I made the invention and labored to get the government to adopt it before ever had to do with it, and as I have stood by the thing through "good report and evil report" and got it where you can manage it yourself, and inasmuch as you and Corse have obtained ⅔ of the invention and patent by an agreement, and 3-3 by assignment, it would seem but fair that you should now release me from debt and take the whole thing as you now have it.

I made enemies in the Stowe family by my conduct in the Stanley case; I made enemies with Hagan and his friends by my conduct in the Groom's case assigned to you; I made enemies with J. R. Hyde and his friends by my conduct in getting him to settle and assign all patents to Chas. Eddy & Co. I made an enemy of Horatio King by my fidelity to you; I made enemies with P. Low, G. Wallace, his son-in-law and their friends, with Ransford and his friends, by my conduct in this very stamp case, and by my fidelity to you and Corse; I made enemies because of my fidelity to Chas. Eddy & Co. in the Curve Plate Stove case. I wish you and Corse would think on these things, and if in either or any of these cases or matters I acted dishonorably or unworthy a man, that you would point it out. God is my judge; and in my house, as ever there has been, there will be daily worship, though all the world become enemies. I had offered me once ½, half of the stamp if I would leave you and Corse and put the invention under the protection of the 2425 patent of August 9, 1859, but my God nor my conscience would allow that to be done, and I was threatened (Deft's Ex. No. 119, C (Corse), I. B.) at that time with such things as you say have overtaken me, and with which you seem somewhat pleased as you refer to them, with the view of compelling me to continue as you direct. I think, Mr. Shavor, that it would be quite well to look over these matters before you throw them before me as you do, and see how it is. As to a private boarding house, I have to say that I never heard of the thing until you mentioned it last fall, and I took occasion then to so inform you. As to my beginning the same game this year as I did last, I will leave that part of your letter to yourself, as I do not understand you, nor do I know to what you refer.

I leave here for N. Y. to-night, and shall get to Troy on Saturday. I shall have chair stock put in shape for you and Corse, and then when I get home I will divide up with you and see how dishonest I am about it. You paid out in that case $35 only, and refused to pay Sherwood, but I made the thing pay all cash expenses and some little more, doing all the work myself. I have never done a dishonorable thing to you, Corse, or to your firm, and never will, though I may not been able to meet money engagements, and I shall certainly hope that you and he will get a large sum out of it. I shall do nothing to prevent it, nor shall I do any more for it under the circumstances of matters as presented in your recent letters, and I will be as friendly to you as you will permit me to be. I go from here to-day in debt for board; such a thing never before happened to me, but I cannot help it.

Your friend and ob't s't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I learn to-day that you are much improved in health, and almost restored to your former good health. I was glad to hear that, for now you can attend business without being troubled much in the consideration of the same. I have been trying to get Corse to come here and see what could be done in relation to the post-office stamp matter, but he has had so much on hand that he has not yet been here, but I hope he will come some time next week. There is but one course to pursue, and I think it will work to a success. We must not have any more to do with Washington "tinkers" or other "tinkers," for we get beaten every time. I think you and Corse will agree with me in this. It has been a long while, and it has cost considerable money. Still I am by no means discouraged, and if I can now be consulted and have my way about it, I can carry it through and make a good thing out of it for all concerned.

I was told that you were tired of the matter, and that you would 2427 do no more about it in any way, so I sent to see how or on what terms you would sell out your interest to me. You fixed on $11,000 cash, as expenses that you had paid out. This I thought rather hard upon me under the circumstances, as there had been no such sum paid out, as the case will fully show, and so thinking that you had made a mistake about it by getting expenses for other things, such as "whiskey meter," "way-bill envelopes," "railroad chair," and many other things which he went into together under our agreement, i. e., between you, Corse, and myself. I think you will concede this when you come to reflect upon the matter, and, being about to leave for here, and your being so unwell, I could not see you before I came here. Our way-bill envelope or bag is now in use by the department, and they want to use it still more. I think we can make a contract for the use of it. We have new officers, entirely so, in the Post-Office Department. Zevely, who was the 3d Assistant Postmaster-General, has been put out of the office. He it was who caused us so much trouble in the Post-Office Department. Now we can have fair and full sailing, and if you are well enough I would like to have you come here some time next week, so that we can confer upon these matters here, and make some sort of an arrangement for an advance of money to us. I think it can be done. We must cut away from outside and meddling persons. Let them all alone, and let us then attend to our own business. I am anxious to carry out our agreement as to all our matters, and I propose to do so so far as I am concerned and am permitted to do by you and Corse. Mr. Corse feels in the same way, and is anxious to do just as was agreed between us. I was very sorry to hear of differences between you and Corse. You never had a more faithful or better friend on earth than Albert C. Corse, notwithstanding what meddling persons may say or may have said to you.

2428 I hear that the Hagan suit has succeeded fully and fairly on all points. I saw Mr. Treadwell, who was an expert in the case, and he told me about it. I was recently informed that you had said that I had no sort of interest in that matter, invention, or patent, and that I would never get a cent out of it in any way or form, no matter how much or how little was had out of it. Knowing what I do about the whole matter, that but for me you would never have had anything out of it, and suffering what I did and have because of faithfulness to you and to my profession, I did not believe you had said so. Write me whether you or Corse will come here, for I think it necessary one should come before I come home.

Yours, in haste,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

A. C. CORSE, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 11th inst. is at hand, and I thank you for it. It has on its face the evidence of a desire to do right, and to treat me in fairness as to general matters.

Your patent on reservoirs has been granted upon three good claims. It will issue under date of Tuesday next, the 18th, 1869, and it will go to my office, and Charlie will see that you have it. Going from here on Tuesday, it will reach Troy on the next day. Call for it if he does not send it to you, and I hope you will be satisfied with it. There is no sort of use for me longer to do professional or other business 2429 where you or Mr. Eddy has a lawful interest, and hereafter I shall decline such if any should be offered me, which I hope may never be the case. There are many good and sufficient reasons for this decision.

Mr. Shavor has sent me a notice of which the following is a copy, to wit:

TROY, N. Y., May 3, '69.

MARCUS P. NORTON:

DEAR SIR: This will notify you that all powers of attorney given you by Shavor & Corse to transact business for them has been revoked, and you will do no more business for them or for Jacob Shavor.

Yours, &c.,

JACOB SHAVOR.

This has its meaning, and I am sorry that I cannot agree with you that he means to do right by me in the stamp matter, without process to compel him to remember his contract and his good faith with me in that matter.

Mr. Eddy not only told Merriman what I wrote you, but he told me the same, and I declined to say anything to him about the stamp, but did ask him to have you come here, and with an oath he said you could not and should not come here on that business; that he had as much and more to do with it than you had. I think when I get home we better have settlement on all sides and upon all matters. I have been trying to have this done since last fall. I only want the agreement with me lived up to, and good faith kept towards me, and I suppose that this is no more than right. I have (Def't's Ex. No. 121 B (Corse) I. B.) all papers necessary to show my full rights in the case and premises. Mr. Shavor has sent to my office in my absence and obtained papers belonging to me and in the stamp case, and now refuses to return them. You do not think such conduct looks like as though he intended to do right by me, do you? Do you think a person means to do right, 2430 or intends to do right by me, who goes about the streets in Troy, and at every point and opportunity slanders me? One who leaves nothing unsaid or unmoved whereby to injure me while absent, without cause—void of truth in statements on such points—would such a one look for, or wish to do right by me? No, Mr. Corse, I wish it were otherwise. I have done your house good and valuable service, and others have blamed me for it. Ask J. R. Hyde what he thinks since I got him to sign all those papers he did some few years ago. I will not go into the matter of services, for it would take much time and labor, and now what am I getting from Eddy—from Shavor? There must come a day of settlement, and let it be soon after I get home to Troy, and in a fair, honorable, and frendly way.

The Stewart reservoir and warming closet matter has been squelched and permanently defeated, and no one will have trouble from that patent. They undertook to reissue and to get a bigger hold, and had to give up under an order from Commissioner of Patents. I found it out, and with others "sailed in," and I hope the stove men will at least say one good word, and yet it may all be considered as of no account. When I left them last winter, I did so after having conversation with you and Mr. Swett about certain matters. Well, Corse, I have kept my word, and I don't think there will be much more fuss about licenses from them. All have now one general license.

Yours, truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Hon. ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster-General:

SIR: The Government of the United States of America having failed to comply with the agreement and understanding made between a former Postmaster-General and the undersigned, through their attorney and agent, Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., for compensation for the use of an invention and improvement for the postmarking of letters, packets, &c., and for the permanent cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, and patented to Marcus P. Norton, April 14th, 1863; reissued under date August 23d, 1864, and duly assigned and transferred to us by him, April 20th, 1863; and as said invention and improvements so patented and assigned have been extensively used for several years under the said agreement and understanding, we are, therefore, compelled, in justice to ourselves, to notify, and we do hereby notify, you as Postmaster-General, that, unless some definite arrangements shall be made prior thereto for the same, the said agreement and understanding will be terminated on the first day of July next, 1868, from and after which date you are forbidden and prohibited to use said invention and improvements so patented and assigned. You are also notified that after said first day of July, 1868, the present contractor, B. Chambers, jr., will be prohibited and forbidden to manufacture for your department, or for other purposes, the said invention and improvements, and should he thereafter make, or undertake to make or manufacture, the said invention and improvements, he will be restrained and enjoined by the injunction order of the court having jurisdiction thereof. Also, 2432 that postmasters, where said invention is now in use, will not be permitted to use the same on and after that date, to wit, July 1, 1868, and should they thereafter undertake any further use or use after that date, all such will be prohibited and enjoined by the injunction order of the court, the validity of said patent having been fully maintained and established by the decree of the circuit court of the United States, Judges Hall and Nelson presiding.

We are compelled to take this step for the reason that no rate of compensation has been fixed by the Post-Office Department, although the said invention has been in extensive use by said department for several years, under said agreement to pay a fair, just, and reasonable compensation therefor.

Very respectfully, your ob't serv'ts,

SHAVOR & CORSE.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., October 23*d*, 1869.

A. C. CORSE, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: The stamp matter is now arranged to our mutual interest and satisfaction. The dispute between us has been of great use, because it has added to the real and substantial value of the stamp. It is proven of a very much larger value than you or I have been ever put upon it. Mr. Eddy now concedes this great value, and he is greatly encouraged. It is now in shape and condition, or will be on Monday next, when Mr. Eddy and I will get our papers complete, for valuable contracts, or for a large sum of money, either in Court of Claims or Congress, as the case may be. The plan now is to close a contract 2433 for cash for four years' use from March 5th last, then have suits brought in Court of Claims for the past use, commencing where the pending esse leaves off, which will give five years' time up to March 1, 1869; then ask Congress to purchase the several patents or not, as we may conclude. This is our plan of operation, and I do certainly believe we will close this four years' contract and get our money within the next ten days; of this we have the very strongest assurances and reliable propositions. On this we agree. I send you printed pamphlet for answer to the J. D. Green put in by you, which of course is now of no use, save on the two first questions, to wit, of utility and the right and duty to purchase on the part of the P. M. G., to which I especially ask your attention. Now, I do not think there is any doubt about our cash contract with the P. M. G'l. Mr. Eddy will explain it all to you when he sees you, as he will leave here on Monday or Tuesday night next for Troy. My main object in writing you is to see if Shavor cannot be bought out. I want him out of the case, claims, patents, &c., &c. It is now fixed so that he cannot give you or Mr. Eddy any trouble, still I do not wish to be associated with him in any way, manner, or form hereafter, and, if possible, I do not mean to be. I think he should be bought out in some way, and I am willing to join you and Eddy in that undertaking. We propose for four years to take the one-fourth saving (one year) in the item of clerk hire, at a uniform salary of $1,000 each, and that number you will find on page 16 of the book I send you, to be 676 clerks, which at $1,000 per year is $676,000, one year, or one-fourth of Mr. Creswell's time in the administration. This will establish a rule for us to go by as to the past and the future. You will see the extensive use being made of this stamp on postal card in addition. This is a brief statement, still there is no humbug about it. We may not get this one-fourth saving, but we will try hard for it, and I candidly think we will come near it. We will on 2434 Tuesday such things at work as will carry a big price through, and that right soon, too. It would have gone through on that very day when Weed filed his last paper which brought us together, and which I was certainly happy to have brought about, for we will all feel better about it, and it is the carrying out of original verbal promises on both parts. I will ever labor hereafter for our peace and mutual good interests. I mean you and Eddy.

There are good and sufficient reasons why I will have no more to do with Shavor. This stamp will bring money enough for us all. Now is a good time to get it in. The past nine years' use will have made it of permanent cash value to us. The new patent gives us seven additional years of the time the government will pay us, in all 24 years from April, 1863. Please do not see Green, Ransford, or Shavor until you will have seen Mr. Eddy. We can (Def't's Ex. No. 123 B (Corse), I. B.) work and live together for all time. I have my faults, Mr. Corse, like all men. I have learned some terrible lessons in the past two years, so hereafter you will see that my operations will be entirely different. All I now want is to get straightened up and into position again with all my cannon and field artillery, and then I can go ahead again. I shall now soon be at Troy again, and go to work in good order and press on and on with more care and caution. I am glad our differences happened, and that they have been so readily and happily settled. You or Eddy and I could at any time have settled, but Shavor never. We shall all of us make more money because of this estrangement. Now let us ever be good friends. When I have done wrong I am ready at all times to do all I can to repair those wrongs. It would be indeed strange were I to live and have no faults. I would to God that I were without them, and will struggle to do right at all times.

Truly, &c.,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

2435 Def't's Ex. No. 125 (Eddy). I. B., Ex. Jan. 31, 1878.

Whereas differences and disagreements have arisen between the undersigned in regard to the ownership of, and the right to receive the compensation proposed to be made for the use of, a certain invention now in use in the Post-Office Department of the United States, known as Norton's "improvement in postmarking and cancelling hand stamps"; and whereas the parties involved in said differences and disagreements are desirous of making an amicable settlement and adjustment of the same, and for the purpose of accomplishing that end it is agreed between the parties hereto respect*fully* as follows, to wit:

1st. That in consideration of certain large sums of money heretofore paid out for and advanced to Marcus P. Norton by the firm of Charles Eddy & Co., and by Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, in procuring patents for said inventions, in litigation in regard to said patents, and for its introduction into general use by the Post-Office Department, there shall be paid to and received by the said Charles Eddy, in trust for himself and Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, the sum of twenty thousand dollars out of the first money or moneys paid by and received from the United States from any source or in any form for the past or future use of said inventions; and upon the execution of this agreement by the parties hereto, the said Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor shall, and will, execute and deliver to the said Norton such good and sufficient receipts, acquittances, or other papers as may be necessary to release and discharge the said Norton from any and all indebtedness of every character and description, due from the said Norton to either the said Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse, or Jacob Shavor, whether 2436 such indebtedness is due to them individually or as members of the firm of Charles Eddy & Co.; and the said Norton, upon the receipt by him of such receipts, acquittances, or other papers, shall and [Stamp.] will execute and deliver to the said Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor, such good and sufficient receipts, acquittances, or other papers, as may be necessary to release and discharge the said Charles Eddy, Albert C. Corse, and Jacob Shavor, or either of them, or the firm of Charles Eddy & Co., from all indebtedness of any kind and description, existing against them, or either of them, in favor of the said Norton.

2d. That after the payment of the said sum of twenty thousand dollars to the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, any sum or sums of money received from the United States from any source, either for the use of said inventions by the United States, or for their purchase by the United States, shall be divided between the parties hereto as follows: The said Marcus P. Norton shall be entitled to receive, and shall receive, two-thirds of any and all moneys received from any source on account of the use or sale of said patents, or either of them; and the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, shall be entitled to receive, and shall receive, one-third part of any and all moneys received as aforesaid; but the division of said moneys shall not be made until the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, shall have received said sum of twenty thousand dollars.

3d. That there is hereby conveyed to the said Charles Eddy, in trust, for himself and the said Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, the undivided one-third part of the following-described patents, issued to said Norton as the original and first inventor, to wit, patents for "Improved post-marking and cancelling hand stamps," dated January 14th, 1862, December 16th, 1862, April 14th, 1863; the last of which was re-

2437 issued as follows, to wit: August 23d, 1864, and August 3d, 1869; also patent for revenue cancelling stamps issued August 15th, 1865; also improvement in post-marking and cancelling stamps issued July 13th, 1869, antedated June 10th, 1869; also patent for post-office way-bill envelope issued June 10th, 1862; and if there shall have been issued or granted any patent to said Norton relating to either of the above-named subjects, or if there shall hereafter be granted to said Norton any such patents, then they, and each of them, shall be deemed to be included in this agreement and conveyed by it; also, this agreement or conveyance shall include and embrace all reissues of said patents or either of them, and also any and all patents which may hereafter be granted for the purpose of perfecting or improving said inventions or either of them; and the said Norton will on the execution of this agreement, and bearing even date herewith, make, execute, and deliver to the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, good and sufficient deeds of conveyance or assignments of the undivided one-third of said patents respectively; and if there shall hereafter be needed any instrument in writing necessary to more effectually convey said patents or either of them, or any part thereof to the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, the said Norton agrees to make, execute, and deliver such instrument in writing, upon the demand of said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid.

4th. That it shall be provided in any contract hereafter made with the United States, or with any other person or persons, for the use or sale of said patents or either of them, or of any other patents for improvement of said inventions, that any money or moneys to be paid or received therefor from any source under such contract, shall be paid to and received by the said Charles Eddy, in trust for the said Norton, and for himself; and the said Albert C. Corse and Jacob Shavor, and the said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, after the receipt by him of 2438 said sum of twenty thousand dollars, shall immediately distribute all moneys so received by him in trust to the parties entitled to receive the same as herein provided.

[Stamp.] 5th. And it is further herein agreed that if the parties hereto shall elect or determine to prosecute their claim for compensation for the past or future use of said inventions or either of them by the United States, before Congress or in the Court of Claims or before the proper executive department, that such claim shall be prosecuted in the names of said Norton and said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid; and all acts passed by Congress providing for compensation for the use by the United States of said inventions or either of them, or for the purchase thereof, shall provide for the payment of the amount appropriated by Congress for either of said purposes to the said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, for the purposes provided in the fourth clause of this agreement; and if the act of Congress passed for the purposes aforesaid shall fail to provide for the payment of the sum appropriated to the said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, then the said Norton shall and will execute and deliver to said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, such papers or authority as will enable the said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, to receive and receipt for the money or moneys so appropriated by Congress.

6th. That neither of the parties hereto shall, without the consent of the other, grant any license or permit to any person or persons to manufacture, use, or sell said inventions or either of them; nor shall either of said parties without the consent of the other make any contract by which compensation shall be provided for the use by the United States of said inventions or either of them.

7th. That all contracts hereafter made by which provision shall be made for compensation for services, professional or otherwise,
2439 hereafter to be rendered, in prosecuting any claim for the use by the United States of said inventions or either of them, shall be made with the said Norton and the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid; and neither party hereto shall make any contract for the purpose aforesaid, without the consent of the other. It being the intent and meaning of this provision of this agreement that neither the said Norton nor the said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, shall make any contract for services hereafter to be rendered in prosecuting any claim for the use of said invention by which the other shall be bound, unless the same shall be assented to by both the said Norton and said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid.

8th. It is hereby agreed that the third clause of this agreement shall only convey to the said Charles Eddey, trustee as aforesaid, the undivided one-third of the patents therein specified, and that when the conveyances and assignments therein required to be made shall have been made and executed by the said Norton, the said third clause of this agreement shall become inoperative and void.

9th. And it is hereby further agreed that neither of the parties hereto shall charge the other party or either of said patents for services hereafter personally rendered, professionally or otherwise, in and about the business appertaining to said patents, inventions, or either of them, whether in the courts or in the Patent Office, Post Office Department, or other Executive Departments of the government, but any and all sums of money expended in and about said inventions, patents, or either of them, as the personal and necessary expenses attending the same, after the receipt by said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, of said sum of twenty thousand dollars, shall first be paid out of any money received on account of said patents, or either of them, when vouchers shall be produced for any such expenditures of money by either
2440 party hereto, or when the same shall be duly authorized in writing and said Eddy, trustee as aforesaid.

10th. That the said Charles Eddy, trustee as aforesaid, will make, execute, and deliver to the said Marcus P. Norton, Albert C. Corse, or Jacob Shavor, upon the demand of either of them, his bond in the sum of twenty thousand dollars for the faithful fulfillment of the trusts herein assumed by the said Eddy.

In testimony whereof the parties hereto have set their hands and seals this 23d day of October, A. D. 1869.

Affidavit and assignments.—Transfer of patents.

CITY OF TROY,
County of Rensselaer, and State of New York, ss:

Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of the city of Troy, being duly and severally sworn, each for himself, doeth depose and say: That 2441 they reside at the said city of Troy, in said county and State; that they have so resided there for about twenty years. We know Marcus P. Norton, who also resides at same place. He is a practicing lawyer by profession in the several courts of the State of New York, in the United States, as well as before the U. S. Patent Office. We have so known him for five or six years past. In the summer of the year 1860 he exhibited to us, at his office in said city of Troy, a double or combined stamp or instrument for postmarking of letters, and for the cancellation of the postage-stamps thereon in ink, at one blow or operation of the same. This device consisted of the device for giving the name of the post-office where used, together with the date of the same, and with a device of either cork, wood used endwise, rubber, or metal having any suitable configuration upon the lower surface of the same, for the cancellation of the postage-stamp, and used and arranged in combination with such postmarking device. At about that time the said Marcus P. Norton called upon us, we being then considered clients of his, and at that time he there made known unto us that he had a very valuable invention and improvements for use in the postal service, of the kind, character, and for the purposes hereinbefore stated, and that, because of having endorsed so large an amount of paper as to cause him very great embarrassment in the year 1856 and 1857, and from all of which he at that time was a great financial sufferer, and thus being much distressed, he desired each of us to aid him in money for the purpose of obtaining letters patent upon his said invention and improvements in this country and perhaps in Europe. Whereupon and after due consideration we agreed with him, the said Marcus P. Norton, to furnish him with such sums of money as he might require in order to get his said inventions into general use by the post-office or other departments of the government requiring such inventions or instruments. The money so furnished by us, or either of us, as in the 2442 judgment of the said Marcus P. Norton he might need or require from time to time in order to obtain such patents as he might deem best, in order to get his said improvements into general use by the government or Post-Office Department, at as early a date or time as possible, or within his power to do, he having the entire management of the same. We agreed with and promised to the said Marcus P. Norton to receive one-half interest or moiety part of the said inventions, improvements, and letters patent when obtained for the uses and purposes aforesaid, while the other and remaining half interest or moiety part of such inventions, improvements, and letters patent were to be, and the same were in any event or under any circumstances to remain, the property and rights of the said Marcus P. Norton, and of his lawful representatives. We were to make no charges whatever against him for any money thus furnished by us to him. His one-half interest and moiety part of the said inventions and patents were to be wholly and entirely free from any and every claim or charge for money, or other matter or thing on our part or by us. The said Norton was not to charge our said one-half part with any professional services rendered by him in the premises. The said Norton was by the arrangement to assign all his said patents to us soon after or before the same were issued to him, in order that all his patents, inventions, and improvements, and every of them, might be in safe hands while said Norton was so embarrassed, because of his losses aforesaid, or for other cause, as well as to permit of his being a witness of and concerning his said inventions, improvements, and patents in court or elsewhere, concerning such matters as were within his personal knowledge, and could not be proven by any other person, such, for example, as matters appertaining to his caveat filed in the U. S. Patent Office in the year 1853, and containing, among other things, the several inventions herein named. It was also agreed that whenever the said Norton 2443 should be able in his own judgment to manage the affairs concerning and connected with his said inventions, improvements, and letters patent, and to us assigned and transferred in the manner as aforesaid, and upon being requested so to do, we were to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer unto him, the said Norton, his heirs and legal representatives, the invention, improvements, and letters patent, dated December 16, 1862, also dated April 14, 1863, including each and every reissue of either of said patents, if at the time of such request and demand of and by said Norton upon us, there were any reissue or reissues of the said letters patent, or of either of them. We were, also, to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer unto him, the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs and legal representatives, each and every other letters patent than those hereinbefore named, which, at the time of his request and demand aforesaid, might be in our possession through and by means of any assignments and transfer thereof, from the said Norton to us, including the "post-office way-bill envelope," patented on or about the 10th day of June, 1862, including, also, all other patents upon post-marking of letters or packets, and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, and including each and every reissue of any of the said patents; that whenever he, the said Norton, should for any cause desire, request, or demand of us the reassignment, retransfer, or reconveyance of any or of all of his said patents by him assigned to us under our said agreement with him, and for the purposes aforesaid, then the same should be so done without any trouble to him or unnecessary delay; and in consideration of such reassignments, retransfer, and reconveyances of the said inventions, improvements, and patents, by us to the said Marcus P. Norton, he was only to pay to us all sums of money and lawful interest thereon paid out by us at the request of the

2444 the same; and that if at the time when said Norton should desire or demand of us the reassignment, re-transfer, or reconveyance of any or of each and every of the said patents, by us as aforesaid, he might not be able to cash at once such money and the lawful interest upon the same, then he, the said Norton, his heirs or lawful representatives, may, at his or their own election, pay such money out of the first money had or received by him or them out of any sale or sales made with the government of the United States by him or them, and which should, under such circumstances, be so paid as soon as possible after any such sale and payment of money in accordance therewith, we producing vouchers for all moneys so expended by us as aforesaid stated. It was also agreed that the said Norton was to have full and uninterrupted charge and control of, as well as the management and direction of all matters appertaining to each and every of said patents, both in the obtaining of the same, all legal matters thereon, or in the sale of either of them, or in the introducing of any or all of them into public use by the "Post-Office Department" or other department of the government. The letters patent thus far obtained under our said understanding and agreement with him, the said Marcus P. Norton, are dated as follows, to wit: December 16, 1862, assigned to us December 20th, 1862; also, April 14th, 1863, assigned to us April 20th, 1863, and each for improvements in postmarking letters, packets, &c., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps, and each recorded in the U. S. Patent Office; also, June 10, 1862, assigned to us December 20, 1862, and recorded in the U. S. Patent Office December 31st, 1862, and for and upon an invention entitled "post-office way-bill envelope," made by said Norton.

And deponents further say for answer to the position taken by the committee of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America, as well as in full statement and 2445 vindication of the facts, and that such committee may know the whole truth, to wit: The position aforesaid being that deponents are mere speculators upon the invention and ingenuity of another, and that the purchase of said inventions and patents by Congress would not be a reward to or compensation to the said Norton or his family, nor would it be a reward by the government, through Congress, to the inventor for invention and valuable improvements made by him; that the real and true inventor should himself be the recipient of the attention of Congress, as well as of the compensation, whereby to encourage, to reward, and to stimulate invention for the benefit of the government and not persons who claim as mere assignees, for Congress cannot know how or in what manner they came by or into the possession of the same; that the payment of a very large sum of money by Congress to such assignees would not have the tendency to stimulate and encourage invention; that Congress should reward the inventor and patentee directly, and thereby encourage other inventors as well as to discourage speculation by assignees. The deponents say that they were only to be temporary assignees in order to aid said Norton in the manner hereinbefore stated, for deponents were by the arrangement to reassign, reconvey, and retransfer each and every of the said patents to them assigned by said inventor and patentee Norton, previous the time when he might or should request or require of and from us such assignments and transfers, no matter what may have been the name, or nature, or style of the same. Deponents further say that it was their purpose and intention to render unto the said Norton all the aid in their power whereby to enable him to complete his models, drawings, and specifications, in order to obtain the patents contemplated by him, and to enable him to get the Post-Office Department or government to consider, adopt, and put into use the several inventions made by 2446 him for the purposes and uses aforesaid, for the said Norton was at that time engaged for deponents in and about business and certain matters appertaining to said Norton's profession, to wit, that of a practicing lawyer.

And deponents further say that upon the said Norton's request so to do, deponents were to, and would duly, and faithfully, and freely, reconvey, reassign, and retransfer each and every of the aforesaid inventions and patents unto the said Marcus P. Norton, in legal form and condition the same as we had and received such inventions and patents and each of them in trust, as aforesaid, from him, whereby the title thereto should be full, free, and perfect, and clear from any, all, and every encumbrance whatsoever.

And deponents, in further answer to said position of the said committee of Congress, do hereby make, execute, and deliver the following absolute assignment and transfer of the aforesaid patents, inventions and improvements to the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs, assigns, or legal representatives, to be by him or them used and put upon the record at the U. S. Patent Office, whenever he or they may desire so to do—that is to say: Whereas letters patent of the United States of America were duly granted, issued and delivered unto the said Marcus P. Norton, under and bearing date as follows, to wit, December 16th, 1862, also April 14th, 1863, for and upon improvements in instruments for postmarking of letters, and for the cancellation of the postage stamps thereon as and in the manner, form, and for the purposes substantially as hereinbefore stated and set forth; also, a certain letters patent dated June 10, 1862, for and upon an invention known and denominated a "post-office way bill envelope," as hereinbefore stated and set forth: Now, therefore, and by virtue, force, and power of our said agreement and contract with the said Marcus P. Norton, in the manner aforesaid, and in consideration of the premises hereinbefore set forth, and in the further consideration of the 2447 sum of three hundred dollars, the receipt of which is hereby duly acknowledged, we have sold, assigned, and transferred, and we do hereby sell, assign, and transfer, unto the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs, assigns, and lawful representatives, the full, clear, entire, and the exclusive right and title to each, every, and all of the aforesaid named and described letters patent, inventions, and improvements, also each and every reissue of any or either of the same, including, together with those hereinbefore named and described, each and every invention and letters patents acquired by us of and from him, the said Norton, under our aforesaid agreement and contract with him, as aforesaid stated, to have and to hold the same forever, for his own use, benefit, and behoof, and for the use, benefit, and behoof of his heirs, assigns, and legal representatives, for and during the full length of the term for which the same were and are granted, as fully, freely, and entirely as the same would have been held and enjoyed by us had this grant and sale not been made by us. In testimony whereof we do hereby set our hands and seals, and make our solemn oaths, on this 23 day of February, A. D. 1864.

2448 CITY OF TROY,
County of Rensselaer, and State of New York, ss:

On this 18th day of April, A. D. 1870, personally came before the undersigned, a notary public, John T. Lamport, to me personally known, and the person above named as a United States commissioner for the northern district of New York, and residing at the said city of Troy, N. Y., and who duly acknowledged on this day, before me and to me, that the foregoing affidavit, assignments, and paper signed Jacob Shavor, Albert C. Corse, was duly sworn to and executed or acknowledged by the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, in the presence of and by the said John T. Lamport as such United States commissioner, on the day, in the month and year above named, to wit, February 23d, 1864; that at the time when the said foregoing instrument was subscribed or acknowledged by the said Jacob Shavor & Albert C. Corse, to wit, the 23d day of February, A. D. 1864, they, and each of them, were duly and severally sworn as by law required, after having written each his name to such instrument, as appears by reference to the same, whereupon he, the said John T. Lamport, did in his own hand subscribe his name thereto as a United States commissioner, which he was at that time; that his aforesaid signature thereto is genuine, and that said Shavor & Corse each appeared at said time and place, in their proper person, and each for himself subscribed or acknowledged and swore to said instrument, or made oath thereto, as above stated, and as stated in the above jurat; that so far as he knows or believes the subscribing or acknowledging and making oath to the foregoing instrument were actual and bona fide transactions on the part of the said Shavor & Corse, as well as by the subscribing officer, to wit, U. S. commissioner.

JOHN T. LAMPORT.

2449 Subscribed to and acknowledged before me, on the above declared, &c., to wit, April 18th, 1870.

Ex'd. E. A.

CITY OF TROY,
County of Rensselaer, and State of New York, ss:

John T. Lamport, of said city, county, and State, being duly sworn, doeth depose and say: My name is John T. Lamport. I reside at said city of Troy, and have so resided there for about 45 years. I personally know Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of same place. In the year 1864 I was a duly and lawfully appointed United States commissioner residing at said city of Troy, and was so appointed in the fall of the year 1863. The foregoing certificate subscribed and acknowledged by me before a notary public, as will above appear, is correct and truthful as to all matters therein stated and set forth. That the above-named affidavit and assignments and papers was duly subscribed, 2450 or acknowledged and sworn to before me by the said Jacob Shavor & Albert C. Corse, on the day, month, and year set forth in the jurat thereof thereto.

JOHN T. LAMPORT.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, on this 18th day of April, A. D. 1870.

C. B. INGALLS,
Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have to-day had a first-rate interview with House committee on stamp matter. I will bet my life that we get pay, and that too very near the same we have talked. The com. are unanimous in the opinion that your and Corse's title and right to the improvement in P. O. S. is clear, and beyond a doubt. They will report in your favor, but have suggested to me a certain matter which I cannot act upon until I have had an interview with you and Corse, and you have given your decision. Mr. Norton says that it is impossible to get the bill through both Houses this term, but that it will be among that business which will be acted on immediately on the reassembling of Congress, in December next; no doubt of it. I shall leave here for N. Y. to-morrow, and hurry up to see you and Corse. Ransford & Low can't fool you or me very much in this matter. We are right; Charles has been here since Saturday morning or Friday eve., and has roomed with 2451 me, my room being large, with two beds in; he feels first rate about the Atwood case; as to the stamp, he says that he never did believe that Ransford or Low had any interest in it, and by G—d they never shall have if he could prevent it. He knows just what he did when he went from Troy; I have told him nothing as to the title being in you and Corse.

I had to use more money to-day and drew another draft, which I will give you the items for on my return.

I have never felt better about the stamp than I do to-day. Hoole's affidavit, which caused my delay in New York, was a great point with us here.

Yours truly,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: In reply to you last letter, I do not wish you to get the idea that I am in anywise discouraged about any matter or thing, for such is not the case. If we can get this matter through so that I can put $5,000, or more, into the gold mine of N. Carolina in case it is all right, and if I don't get this matter of stamp in time why of course I must go without. But what I meant was that such opportunities should be presented and then pass for want of money. Now there will not be a single moment allowed to pass without pushing the stamp. The 2452 bill is drawn so as to pay to you & Corse the amount Congress may agree upon. So Peter is played out. Ferry and I did this; we drew up the bill, and he submitted it to the committee, and all agreed to it with the exception of Fink, a Democrat, who opposed it on political grounds, he being an old line Sesesh Democrat, but he can't hurt us, so Mr. Ferry and Mr. Alley both say. Ferry, Alley, and one other of their committee are to speak on the bill for you and Corse in the House, where Mr. Ferry will take it to-morrow, so he says. He is much better now, but has been quite ill. He wanted to use this morning $300, and not being known here, he came to me to borrow the money, as it would take about six or eight days to collect his draft on Chicago. So I took his draft and went to the bank where I usually get money here, and it being so far away and he a perfect stranger that they did not like to do it, and I was bound to get him the money in some way and so I drew on your house and now enclose to you his draft. I had spent my $200 which I brought with me and must have to-day and to-morrow some grinding money, and I put $75 more it to and I have sent you note for the $500.00 for you to sign and hand over to Charlie and he will get you the money for it and hand it to you. For the $75, I will pay Dr. Baldwin's bills here and account to you for it. This draft of Ferry's is good as old gold, and it is the first time he has had to use money here beyond his Congressional salary, drawn only on the 1st day of each month. It is made in the name of the firm and endorsed by him. It will cost you about $1.00 to collect, which I enclose with the draft. You ought to get another letter about the time you do this. Ferry is pushing the stamp to a vote in the House, and the Senate having examined the case will report at once on the same. Dr. B. would hurry up the matter and cut short the time. I am so anxious about the matter. I want "some gold," and I think I can keep it too, although you may think otherwise. I make a good use of what money I have to spare. No gambling-room, drinking-room, or hoar house, or any 2453 other wicked contrivance, get any of it. I have sometimes to spend a pile of money for my clients, or some of them at least, and generally all of them who have any important business, in order to get all things right, and I sometimes blame myself for it, but then I can't help it; this is corrupt Washington, and the business comes all right. Had I supposed that I was to have had such a run of illness as that of two years ago and not get through with, of course I would have got along some way with a lesser office, although it is my capital in business. And as to my house, you ought to recollect that my wife had some money, and manages the house matters in the city and in the country, horse, &c., and all, and we live not extravagantly by any means when you consider our family. Sickness and endorsement made bad work for me, and but for you and your house years ago, I would have gone clear under and amounted to nothing in profession or anything else, and particularly you (Def't's Ex. No. 128, B (Green), I. B.) have been very kind to me, and in the end it will all come just as straight as a string, and you will get your reward in every way and shape.

Were I engaged in some manufacturing business or merchantile matter, then I would have an income more than sufficient for all my wants. Now, I have not the "blues;" I am encouraged in all good things, and will not give up any undertakings which is good and lawful.

I got Potters & Paris reissue, and so Bussey and all such will have to dance to their music. This is confidential, but I really got a big thing for them.

I shall expect the Dr. here soon. I am quite well; but my children are quite ill with the "hooping cough," and are in the country with Mrs. Norton and the rest of the family. I am for the gold, if I can get it, and I hope I may, as I have about 10 days' spare time before in must go the "soap." Mr. F. will take $5,000, cash up, if you can spare it to him.

Yours truly,

M. P. NORTON.

REV. DR. BALDWIN,
Troy, N. Y.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 21st inst. is at hand. In reply I have to say I have always been and am now opposed to the taking of the $50,000, or any other sum less than what the department promised last year, together with expenses and interest. The sum so promised was $100,000 expenses and interest $25,000, in all $125,000. I have been and now am in favor of going to the Court of Claims on the question of the amount which the government should pay for this patent, which the P. M. G. says to Congress saves to the gov't in labor alone more than $200,000 annually.

I am overruled and can do no more than submit to the directions of Shavor & Corse, which of course I shall do as you have requested, and as they through you have directed. I can do no more, no less, if I would. Those gentlemen have been more than kind to me, and Mr. Shavor has always done by me as no other live man would do, and I am therefore the very last man on this earth who would oppose their wishes, or refuse to counsel them or take their advice. They are missing it in this course, as in the end it would certainly prove, for I know whereof I speak; but they are the masters and have the full right and liberty to say what shall be done, and I am willing to trust it all to them. I know that they will not do a dishonorable thing by me. Why, my dear sir, we have never for these long years had a scrap of writing between us in our contracts and various agreements. I have never asked 2455 any from them either. They are honorable and Christian gentlemen in the fullest sense of the term. That house of C. Eddy & Co., and more especially Shavor & Corse, made me in my profession, and you know that that is second to none in Troy and vicinity as to success and amount of business.

Had I not been ill as I was for those terrible long eight months in house, and thirteen months from my office, my business would have been now full as much as all the other law offices and business in Troy. But kind Heaven, for some good purpose, afflicted me thus, and it is all right. I am struggling to get over it, to regain my business, and, above all, my former health; and under our divine heavenly Father I hope to succeed, for it really seems to me as though my Lord and Master had a work for me here yet to do, and I fully recognize that great, holy, and divine power of God, Saviour of the world; and so morning and evening at my house we do gather around our family altar, and there seek the way, the truth, and mercy, and grace. Nothing but sickness will prevent our worship and prayers around that sacred family altar, where we delight to go, are made happy, and kept in the way which leads to life beyond this we now live. Governed by this principle and by the kindness of my friends Shavor & Corse, as also by your own counsel, the plan you propose shall have my aid and endorsement, as you propose and desire.

You may read them this letter, as I have no time to write them to-day and in God we will trust everything, our all, and it will in the end all come right.

Your obedient servant and faithful friend,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

NATIONAL HOTEL,
Washington, D. C., January 2, '67.

DEAR SHAVOR: Your letter of the 29th ultimo, and mailed the 31st following, came to me this morning. In answer—in the first place, let me say that I wrote to the New York men about the money just exactly as I told you I had done at the time, but to save loss of time I enclose you a paper which will answer all purposes. I have just had an interview with the P. M. G., as well as a long conversation on our—your matters, and one thing is certain, the stamp not only looks well, but is well. It is in the very best condition it ever was, in view of Dennison's course. The necessary papers will be ready for committee on Friday, this week. On Thursday I shall know the sum recommended. Confidentially, he may recommend the saving of one year, which would be a little over the $300,000, and then take a hand in, but if he comes to dollars and cents he will certainly go much better than has heretofore been done. He is considering which plan will best carry in Congress. Having had up the case, of course, Congress must be looked to in some respect. He asked me particularly what the committee would do, and I told him this day. I shall go again to-morrow and I shall hammer and hammer on until we get the cash. It shall not pass by this session, so I say. So says the P. M. G. to me this morning, and he will write to that end. Now for answer to your letter in full. Had I gone to Troy for holidays, we should have lost a month's time. I have been at work in the P. O. Department on this matter every day, and by so doing brought it to a focus. This is why I did not go to Troy as I expected, and now 2457 I shall be ready for committee on its first meeting. Was not this right? There would have been more pleasure in going home. Your objections to that part of my letter where I say my patent is all wrong and entirely immaterial to you or Corse, but very material in statement of the case, because the patent was issued to me on the invention made by me, but assigned to you. It would have injured our case to have stated it otherwise. It was my patent, but assigned to you. Whenever the title is mentioned, that is another thing. The patent had not at that time been assigned. I was speaking of then, now now.

Now, I may as well tell you one thing which has has been a source of trouble as to amount of compensation, especially in committee. It is this: Dennison, and so did the committee look on the case and say that the government were not rewarding the inventor and patentee, but were paying assignees who were a set of speculators who had taken the matter to speculate upon out of government, and I have had to meet this proposition more than once, and to say that it was untrue; and hence, I undertook to explain it in my letter to which you take these objections. If you had confidence enough in me to know and believe that whatever I have done or may do is done purely for our mutual and joint interest you would not find these faults. I hope you will believe me when I say frankly that I am not trying to cheat or to defraud either you or Mr. Corse in this or any other matter, as I am aware of. I am as firm and valuable friend as you or he ever had or ever will have. I am a lawyer, you are a manufacturer. hence I may do or say things which you may not see and understand as I do, but face to face would convince you of the point gained. About the assignment, I gave my reasons for it. Now, let me ask, wa'n't I compelled to assign my patent to you and Corse in order to save it from Low & Ransford in the very beginning?
2458 Don't you remember the fact, and in consideration of the assignment and of the risk you would run, and of the expenses attending it, were not you to have a third and Corse a third? And was not the assignment and my testimony which saved the case or rather the patent? Please remember this, my good friend, before you say, as you do, that I have stated that which is untrue, and it is just this hardship which I am trying to make out to the P. M. G. which is to increase your bank account, as well as that (Def't's Ex. No. 130, B. (Green), I. B.) of Mr. Corse, and I fondly hope my own. Under the old law a patentee could not bring suit on his patent and then be examined as a witness. Now, under the new law he can. Now, as to the $6,000, enormous as you think it is, you will see just how it came about if you will but look before you reflect upon me. Now, let us see: In 1865 you made an affidavit that you had up to then expended some over $7,000. Well, right where you left off, I begin with the $6,000, and you will see that I stated in my letter to P. M. G. that from that time, and through last year, and for this year, it had and would require from you and from me that sum, as near as I could figure it, and I was willing to make an affidavit to that effect, and you will see that it was put on this ground, that but for this stamp and the delay in trying to get pay none of that money would have been expended. This is the ground on which I put this $6,000, and now, since I have your statement to-day, I ought to have put it at a larger sum on the same ground, to wit, as money spent which would not have been spent but for this stamp, and the delay in promptly paying for it, and before my God I say it is right. I allow you the statement as expenses paid by you with one exception. The $300 Stanly, about one-half of that was used about the stamp, I think, but I am now under the impression that I wrote you to credit to stamp $200 out of that $300, but am not certain. Now, Shavor, I am struggling to get in and save to you and Corse, and for myself, too, these expenses in 2459 addition to any fixed sum, or if not added to operate as a reason why the sum should be fixed larger, and my sufferings and your troubles and all combined I put in to show why the sum should be made larger, and why it should go right through at once, and not to cheat you or Corse. Am I wrong in this? I think not, with the great respect I have for you. You will find that all this is not treason or treachery towards you and Corse, but for your mutual benefit and our best interest, and it is not false either; it is true, and you will say so when you see me and talk with me. I wrote you about the $300,000, and I have to-day written again. You will see that we will try and get it in shape which will take, if possible; if not, then fall back on the plan in the letters, i. e., $100,000 and expenses. If the $300,000 plan takes, it must be under, say, the idea of a year's saving. This must be so fixed as to catch no one, if we go into that. I think you will agree with me in this matter of caution, for but for Dennison's course last year, then we could go into it with freedom. We must not miscarry this time.

About the 15th of this month will be the time for you to come here, and I want you to come without fail; and these expenses I shall take into the account with the P. M. G., even if you bring your wife, which, by the way, I would do if she can ride this far. It would do her much good. At any rate it is the best thing you can do. Now the department acknowledge that these expenses are entirely just, and that the grounds on which I put them are just; then why on earth do you find fault?

King has again, for the first time—this time here—asked me about his being secured to him. Bah! Your position in your letter of to-day is exactly right, but you must not expose me to King, as we can take care of him when you get the money. Five per cent. exclusive of expenses was just what in the beginning he told me he would be satisfied with; but you know where you'll find me on that question, as I 2460 have so often talked it over with you. He may write you; if so, look out; let me know it or see the letter. He can't hurt us any—not the least. We have only to understand ourselves and each other and all will be just right. I thought I explained to you the Senate matter, but this letter is now so long that I will write on that point this evening.

Your firm, lasting, and, I hope, trusted friend,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.,
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I wrote you yesterday in part as to your business here and as to my business at home. While, as therein stated, I have been four months and ten days away from children, from home, and deprived of its comforts and of its joys, and some of the time quite sick in the midst of strangers—it will also be remembered that I have been away from my regular business, and not only prevented from earning anything so as to pay notes, debts, and the current expenses of living, and thus enable me to keep my promises to pay, I have subjected myself to considerable censure from my clients, and, to some extent, injured my business because of this absence and devotion to business here in order to get some money from the stamp. Had I obtained a large sum for you, you would have thought well of me, but as I have not yet done so, you censure me in the most severe way, and complain very much be-2461 cause you are on some of my paper, and that, too, in every letter you write me. This does not encourage me much to work on here until I gain the end successfully, as I had set out to do. The very $1,200 which I obtained on my notes endorsed by you, as well as several hundred dollars more, was obtained by me to use in this very stamp matter, for when I set out for here in December last—the 9th day of that month—you had not provided a dollar, nor had you offered to do so, in order that the stamp matter could go ahead. That money—every dollar of it—was used for some other business for a firm which I supposed good as "old gold," and who would pay it on my sight drafts as I might want it; none of which, however, has yet been paid, and thus you wish to push me to the wall—compel me to pay all the expenses, save $700, paid by you under your protest at that; deprive me of my home for four months, ten days, cut me off from the society of my own young children, while my business in my law office is neglected by me, and then find fault with me, censure me, complain to me because I do not meet my notes and send you and Corse home a large sum of money. Mr. Shavor, have you forgotten that I have feelings as well as you? Do you think that I am so mean that I dare not to defend my most excellent and devoted wife at the time somebody accuses her of "reporting things which are not true?" No, my old friend, I will defend my wife, my children, and my home if I go to the poor-house on the following day. Please read the letter I enclose herewith on the subject of board, which, had not I been stopping at this house for the past ten years, would throw me out in disgrace. This I shall try and arrange in some way before I leave for Troy. If, however, I had the money raised on my notes for this purpose I could pay cash, but that is gone for a time, at least, not through any willful fault of mine, but because a misfortune overtook a fellow-man, a friend, and a neighbor. I will not trouble you for any more funds and then you will have no cause 2462 to find new and fresh fault with me, and I will return to Troy as soon as I can and make arrangements to raise money to pay you what I have had of you in your hours of kindness, and I will try and get it all in so that you will not lose anything by it. It is quite evident that I shall never be able to fully satisfy you about the stamp case, although I did arrange with Mr. Van Winkle the case in such a way as to get the Senate committee to report and pass a bill for $100,000, backed by Senator friends of mine and of my family. Now, what I propose is this, that you produce an account of all moneys paid out by you up to now in and about your stamp, and then add to that the amount I owe you, and then fix a price or sum (Def'ts Ex. No. 131, B (Green), I. B.) which you will take for your and Corse interests cash down, and then let my own invention come back into my hands again so that I can manage it as I am advised is the better way. This will relieve you of a great deal of trouble and anxiety, as well as care, on account of this stamp matter, and then you will get your expenses paid out and the interest thereon paid back to you and to Mr. Corse as well as what I personally owe you, and I will make efforts to get the money at once for you; you then can assign the patent back to me. This will let you out from much unpleasantness and put you upon sailing ground, while I will have to wait until some one who has the right and the power to pay for the use of the invention. I hope you will now evince that same hope and confidence in me as I did in you and Corse when I assigned to you the whole things without the payment of a dollar for the purchase of the patent, save a certain agreement that you and Corse would be at the expense of putting the matter in that condition when the gov't would recognize the right and pay up, but which agreement you repudiated last year by reason of the heavy expenses, and which you refuse and repudiate this year for the same reason, and find much fault with me, that I do not make the P. M. G. do to suit me at once, or compel Congress to pay on a moment's notice.

2463 Now I propose to go at this whole matter in an entirely friendly manner and settle it up, so that I can have my invention and my patent back again, and you get your money and interest thereon and thus lose nothing, because it is now apparent that we do not, and will not hereafter, agree in the management of this case, and in the expenses attending it. We can do so, and have no unkindness towards either, but be just as friendly as ever we have been. We must do something, as I can never endure these feelings which your letters have brought over and upon me. I am now full of suffering to think that I have been the cause of so much trouble to you. I know that you have always been very kind to me, but you seem to think that I have forgotten it, as you take care to call my attention to it in every letter; I shall never forget your many acts of kindness to me. I understand that Foote has paid you the last $500. I am so glad, as now you cannot longer find fault with me because you did me an act of kindness in buying that demand, and you have now lost nothing by doing so. I wish you would tell me who it was that told you that my wife had "reported" in Troy that I would astonish the Trojans in the amount of recovery in the "court of appeals." I want to see that man, and I hope you will give me the opportunity. A more careful and prudent woman never lived than my wife, in all things of business or otherwise. I would never doubt her or her word about anything. Shavor, this thing grieves me very much, and it seems as though my heart would break at the thought that such false accusations as to my wife's "reporting" even anything, a thing which she never did. She never has and never will meddle with your business or that of any one's else. She never has and never will "report" anything about any one or any one's business in Troy or elsewhere. This charge grieves her very much, and has so worried her that I must defend the thing to the fullest extent, as I will, too, if it costs me my life; I'll not submit to any 2464 such thing; you wouldn't in regard your own wife, and you would not advise me to sit by and see and hear such a mean thing said. There is no doubt but that there can be had some money out of the stamp. I have no doubt as to results in the Court of Claims or before the attorney, but I cannot now longer remain here in view of the position you take in your letters, of course I cannot; I shall return to Troy and protect my wife and family (Deft's Ex. No. 131, C. (Green), l. B.), and make efforts to honorably discharge myself from debt, and raise means to help you and Corse out of the troubles as regards money, which have been brought upon you through my acts, as you allege. I am sorry. I had supposed that we would get a good slice out of the stamp, and that no one of the three would ever be sorry that we made the arrangement and went into the matter; so now I think I can get some persons to buy you and Corse out, and then you will have no more trouble about the matter. We will be good friends about it and ever after it.

Had I spent time every day to have written you details as to the Court of Claims, I would have had little time to get the case ready, and I suposed you were satisfied to know of a point gained, as you know very well that I remained here since March 4th, last, for nothing else but this stamp, almost two months at $325+$25 per month expenses. I am sorry that I have been unable to better please you, but I have done the very best I knew how to do. I have been trying for some days to get the government's attorney, the solicitor of Court of Claims, to fix a day for the trial on the question of damages to be recovered by you, but your letters come to me and take all my energy from me, and what he will do I cannot say. I shall leave here for Troy as soon as I can arrange matters here to go home in a decent and honorable way, as I have always heretofore done.

Your friend and ob't ser't,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

JACOB SHAVOR, Esq.
Troy, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 23d inst. came duly at hand. I never believed you capable of writing me such a letter. I do not now propose to answer it in detail, but I shall on my return to Troy take this letter to all the stove men in Troy, and if they say or undertake to say w' at you charge about the Pierce matter, I shall be heard through the Troy Times, for no man living shall charge me of having violated instructions. You say, "it is generally believed here that you did not act in accordance with instructions in the Pierce case, and confidence is lost in you." This is what you have written. Now, sir, please name the first thing wherein I did not obey instructions; just one thing. I have my instructions in writing, and certain interferences after the case was given to me caused me much trouble and great expense of money—money not paid me, and which I must lose. Well, Shavor, this we will let go. I understand the whole case and all its surroundings, and I shall be heard, too, if that is the charge.

Here is another thing. You charge me with bleeding you. Here is your language. Read it, to wit: "I have never had such a bleeding from any person before, and by whom I thought would be the last person in this world." Now, to cut this matter short. I have this to say. Most all of those notes were in an arrangement with you to go on with certain inventions and to share alike in them; and now, without waiting to get through with that part of the business, you turn around, back out, and charge me "with bleeding you." Now, let me ask you one or 2466 two questions, and then lay down the rule, and then I will close up this letter. Well, here is the first one. You and Mr. Corse claim to own my patent upon my invention in "post-office postmarking and postage canceling device" now in the Court of Claims. Now, how came you by it, and what did you pay for it? Not one cent; and yet you go about calling it your patent, and treating me as though I were an entire stranger in the matter and not one thing to do with it. You tell me there is nothing for me to do here in the stamp case, when I know that there is. Now in this matter I have only to say that it is my purpose to go to the Postmaster-General and then spread out the whole case just as it is, as to how you came by the title to the patent. Then I propose to go to the Court of Claims and there tell the same story. Then I shall, by petition to Congress, set out all these facts and ask compensation as an inventor, and then we can see where the bleeding is. But before doing this, or taking this course, I propose to have a settlement with you—with you and Mr. Corse, and with Charles Eddy & Co.; and for this purpose I shall return to Troy early next week, and then we will go about a settlement on all sides; although were we to continue as heretofore it would absolutely necessary for me to remain here so as to get the Court of Claims bill through the House. On Friday evening last the Senate voted to strike the $5,000 (Def't's Ex. No. 132, B (Green), I. B.) clause, limiting the payment of judgments in that court to that sum, and in that condition the bill passed the Senate. But I am told that Washburn, from Ill., is so mad about it that he threatens to move it as an amendment in the House and have it put back into the bill again. This I might prevent by seeing members in time to have it voted down; but where is the use when I am snubbed and called a sucker, going about cheating and defrauding people, as you have, without any cause whatever, seen fit to charge me in the language I have quoted from your 2467 letter? No charges of that sort will pass me unnoticed, for I am not ashamed or afraid to have the conduct of my whole life looked into and closely investigated at any time—no, sir, not in the least.

You try to convince me that I have no friends in Troy or elsewhere. Let us look at a part of it—here it is. "People begin to look at me, and as they say let such a man as Norton have my paper I ought to be creditless." "In fact one man said that Norton on the back of a paper was a curse to." Now, Shavor, I have been doing business at State Bank for three years, and that bank never required of me an endorse' upon any one's paper, even Stewart's. What if I should repeat things which I have heard against you, many a time, too? and at every time I walked up & defended you like a man, and never was bad enough to throw it into your face either, and don't now; but I can assure you that you have enemies as well as I or any one else. It is hardly becoming in you to come up and throw such things into my face when all my enemies come from my fidelity and faithfulness to you and to Chas. Eddy & Co. Now, Mr. Shavor, you will find that I have warm personal friends in Troy, men of means and of standing, too. Had you reassigned my patent, as I proposed when you were finding so much fault with me, I could before now have paid you every dollar back. I now ask you to do so at once, and I will bring you men who will give you all the expenses you have been at, and pay you back all the money you put in other inventions to share with me, and will pay you interest at 14 per cent. at that, and who will also pay up any balance found due Chas. Eddy & Co. on settlement with same rate of interest. This business must be settled up. The stamp must come back into my hands, and if not done on my return I will commence a suit in equity compelling you to return to me the title which you took from me without paying me a single dollar or anything else. I am forced to this because you call me a leech, a sucker, 2468 a thief, and many other like names. If you have come to the conclusion that you can thus deal with me because I have been examined in the Court of Claims, you have made a mistake, for it is in my power to explain that deposition and to withdraw it from the case. You will learn that I, even I (Def't's Ex. No. 132 C (Green), I. B.), have a warm personal friend in the person of A. W. Randall, Postmaster-General; in Gen'l Skinner, 1st Assistant P. M. G.; in Mr. Chambers, gov't contractor on the stamps; in Mr. Davis, stamp agent in the P. O. Department; in the whole stamping force in the post-office here. So you will find that I have friends by the score in Congress, both in the Senate and in the House. So I have friends everywhere where I am known. Being engaged in patent suits, and standing up to my clients like a man, never betraying any client, has made some enemies, but I am enough for them. I am sorry that you have forced me to such a line of operations, but your letter has compelled me to pursue it, and I shall do so without any fear. People who have long wondered how it was that you got hold of the stamp will now find out how it was and how much has been paid. Had I been alone when Congress offered the $68,000, I could have taken it and been well off; but I saw the great value of the thing and advised hanging on, and now the result shows the correctness of my judgment and the wisdom of my course and advice in that matter. But we will let this go for now until I get home.

Now, let me ask you how it is that you came by the Groom's invention, out of which you have already had several thousand dollars, and of so much value that you could well afford to put more than $5,000 in a suit in New York and let that go on three and four years without a word of fault; but because you have undertaken to aid me some, and to run risks with me, turn about upon me and denominate me a leech and a sucker, and tell me that you never were bled so by any living thing as by me. Mr. Shavor, have you forgotten the days and the nights 2469 when I stood up for you, and fought your battle even to an assault upon my character of the most foul and wicked kind, when it cost me $3,450 to defend myself? Did you ever pay me a single dollar for all this? No, sir; not a dollar. Now, after having this valuable Groom and Hagan invention, and my post-office invention put in your hands, turn about and call me a sucker and all such names without any cause, only because I am here doing work absolutely necessary in order to move an inch with the case in the Court of Claims, and other matter in which you are interested, because compelled to be here to look after and take care of these matters, and thus not being able to pay any notes, but having endorsed blanks to renew them, I had supposed they were going without any trouble. This is all the cause you have, and it is a shame to treat me as you are doing. Now, as to Mr. Stewart, it will be only a short time before he will ask no favors of you or any one else. He will pay every cent.

Respectfully, yours,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 15*th*, 1869.

A. C. CORSE, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I have been anxiously awaiting a letter from you. Merriman and Gregory have both had conversation with me about the Weed notes, and say that he must have known at the time he made them that he could not pay them. He owes between eight and nine thousand dollars here for borrowed money, so I have been informed. The $250
2470 note I can save to you as endorser—you being the first—Shavor would get rid of paying it. The $200 is under protest, and I send you your notice of it. I was advised all about it, but not until the second check had been mailed to Weed. It now appears that the reason why he did not acknowledge the receipt of the $250 check the same as he did the $200 one—it was this: He had transferred it to a man by the name of Mitchell here, so as to have him an innocent and also third party holder, and by getting both checks he would have you and I in for twice the whole sum, to wit, $450, in all $900, by not paying the notes and getting the cash on better checks. So he did not give 2d check to Mitchell to pay one returned because not receipted, but went to Gregory's bank without Gregory's knowledge, and there got the money on the 2d $250 check, and then had Mitchell sue me on the first $250 check; so you see, Corse, that Weed was making a big thing out of both of us. Now I will fight the checks and pay the $250 note at State Bank, as it afterwards was found credited on my bank-book. We looked one evening and not finding it I thought it not discounted. You will have to lose the $200, and I will have to lose my $250 check and pay you the $250 note, but the note will not be any loss to me. So I have managed to save you the $250. Gregory says he would have told us better than to have touched the notes. So much for the notes.

What do you propose to do about the stamp matter here? I can't act, as I have no authority from you or Shavor, that having long ago been taken from me. I think that you and Shavor ought to assign to me my full one-third part—it would be only justice towards me at least. Now I have nothing to show, and you know how Shavor is. You remember our rights in the Hagan patent, where neither of us can get what was solemnly promised to me and to you. I hear that a decision has been made in favor of the Hagan patent. If so where are you and I under Shavor's feelings? I carried the cases through and put Shavor 2471 & Potter where they are, and they have paid me simply nothing as yet. Yes; they have, too; they have given me many promises. What shall be done about all these patent matters? If you and Swett will see that the Ford matter is fixed up, I will send you and Swett the box of documents which will fix out all the Stewart reservoirs, warming closets, &c., &c., as well as that handsome liar—Keep. Now say the word and it will go to you, but at any rate don't pay him any patent fees or make any royalty contracts with him, for I shall never change the line lately taken in that matter. There have been too many lies told

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the records of this office of the letters patent granted Frederick G. Ransford and Peter Low, dated August 9, 1859, No. 25036, for improvement in postmarking stamps.

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this eleventh day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

[SEAL.]

W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

The United States of America to all to whom these letters patent shall come:

Whereas Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, New York, has alleged that he has invented a new and useful improvement in postmarking stamps (he having assigned his right, title and interest in said improvement to Frederick G. Ransford & Peter Low, of Troy, aforesaid), which he states has not been known or used before his application; has made oath that he is a citizen of the United States; that he does verily believe that he is the original and first inventor or discoverer of the said improve-2477 ment, and that the same hath not, to the best of his knowledge and belief, been previously known or used; has paid into the Treasury of the United States the sum of thirty dollars, and presented a petition to the Commissioner of Patents signifying a desire of obtaining an exclusive property in the said improvement, and praying that a patent may be granted for that purpose:

These are therefore to grant, according to law, to the said Frederick G. Ransford & Peter Low, their heirs, administrators, or assigns, for the term of fourteen years from the ninth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using, and vending to others to be used, the said improvement, a description whereof is given in the words of the said Marcus P. Norton in the schedule hereunto annexed, and is made part of these presents.

In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the Patent Office has been hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, this ninth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, and of the Independence of the United States of America the eighty-fourth.

[L. S.] JACOB THOMPSON,
Secretary of the Interior.

Countersigned and sealed with the seal of the Patent Office.
S. T. SHUGERT,
Acting Commissioner of Patents.

2478 The schedule referred to in these letters patent, and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, have invented new and useful improvements in "post office postmarking stamp," and I do hereby declare that the following is a full and exact description of the nature, construction, and operation thereof, reference being had to the accompanying drawings, and to the letters of reference marked thereon, and making a part of this specification.

Fig. 1 is a perspective view. Fig. 2 shows a division of the entire stamp vertically through the centre. Fig. 3 shows the face of the stationary form of type (c c) and each of the cylinder type as in a condition ready to give an impression in print upon an envelope, letter, or anything else desired. Fig. 4 shows a gauge for the purpose of adjusting each and every of the aforesaid type cylinders. This gauge is made as shown at (L), same figure. This is placed upon the said stationary form of type (c c) and over the said cylinders as shown at said Fig. 4. Then by means of ribs or projections upon the under side of said gauge (L), which fit between the rows of type upon aforesaid cylinders, and then by sliding it from the cylinder of months over and towards each of the other of said cylinders until each are gathered up therein, and are then and there held upon a level and even surface to and with the aforesaid stationary form of (c c) until made for use by the nut (E), or by the use of the blotter J, as aforesaid. Fig. 5 shows the channel or grooved form of the cast type as shown at Fig. 7. Fig. 6 is a section of Fig. 5, divided vertically through the centre thereof, and showing the said channel or groove. Like figures represent and refer to like parts.

2479 The nature of my invention consists in constructing, combining, and arranging a hand stamp hereinafter described, so as to contain a cylinder with the initials of each and every month in a year, and two other cylinders with figures for the respective days of each and every month, also a cylinder with figures to represent ten years, more or less as the case may be, which cylinders shall revolve upon the same shaft with each, and within a stationary form of type, and thereby print the month, the day of the month, and the year in connection with each, and each in connection with and at the same time of the printing of the subject matter upon the aforesaid stationary form of type. It also consists in attaching a blotter, hereinafter described, to the hand stamp aforesaid, upon one or two sides thereof, for the purpose of cutting, blotting, canceling, or effacing "the frank" or postage stamp, so as to prevent a second use of the same, while at the same time the name of the "post-office," the year, the month, and the day of the month is printed upon the envelope and one side of the said frank or postage-stamp, thereby giving a good impression of the same, and prevent undue wear of the said postmarking-stamp in consequence of being used upon the uneven surface made by the said frank or postage-stamp. It is now almost impossible to get a good impression upon envelopes containing letters, &c., of the name of post-office and the date, &c., by reason of using the hand stamp upon the said frank or postage-stamp in order to cancel or efface the same. It further consists in constructing a ring or stationary type-holder with a dovetail channel or groove, so that the name of any town required may be set therein, together with the initials of any State required, and when thus arranged are then and there firmly secured ready for use. It also further consists in firmly securing and fastening each and every of the aforesaid cylinders in their respective places, as and when adjusted by the means hereinafter described. The respective parts are so arranged as to render them easily cleaned and readily

2480 adjusted to their proper and required places, also easily repaired or replaced when worn out. By arranging and combining each and every part required to postmark any letter or envelope, and to cancel the frank or postage stamp thereupon as aforesaid, in the manner and form hereinafter described and set forth, there will be no liability or possibility of any part thereof being lost while being transmitted in the mails, or being lost at the post-office, or elsewhere, when the same may be required, unless the entire stamp is lost. This stamp is more convenient for postmasters and others using it, on account of being easily and readily adjusted to the year, the month, and the day of the month, and requiring not as much care to look after the various parts as now required. It occupies much less room in the mail bags while being transmitted to its place of destination. It takes less time, trouble, and expense to prepare it for such transmission. It cuts the frank or postage-stamp in as many places as there are sharp-edged projections upon the face of the said blotter, while, at the same operation, the places thus cut through the said frank or postage-stamp and inked by the same means whereby the cutting was done, thus preventing a second use of such frank or postage-stamp, for although the ink thus put on be washed therefrom, by any process, the places thus cut will show the first use, and detect and expose the second or fraudulent use of such frank or postage-stamp. All the difficulties attending the efficient and successful postmarking of letters, and the blotting and cancelling of franks or postage-stamps by the use of any kind of stamps now used by the government are fully and completely overcome by the use of this stamp.

Each and every part containing letters or figures are cast in a mould made expressly for such purpose, which parts, when in their respective places, are ready for use without any engraving thereon. The letters and figures are cast, chilled, or case hardened, thereby making 2481 them cheaper and better than if made of wrought iron or steel, altho' they may be made of such if desired. This stamp may be used by railroad companies for the purpose of dating tickets, &c., &c., and may be used by banks for any purpose there required. It may also be used, whenever desired, when and where it can be.

To enable others skilled in the art to make and to use my invention, I will now proceed to describe its construction and operation. I construct my "post office post-marking stamp" as follows, to wit: (A) fig. 1 and 2 is the handle, and is made of wood; (B) is the frame to receive and hold the type-wheels or cylinders (f g h i); also the stationary form c—c); also the blotter (J). This frame is made of malleable cast-iron, and is cast in a mould to give the desired form or shape; (f) is the type-cylinder containing initials for each and every month in the year, and is cast in a mould made expressly for the purpose, making such cylinder and letters thereon ready for use. This mould is made in six or twelve parts, so that it may be drawn from the said cylinder when cast; (g) is a cylinder of the same diameter as (f), and contains the numerals 1, 2, 3, which are the only ones required upon the cylinder to give in connection with the cylinder (h) the respective days of each month as may be required. This cylinder is made in the same way and manner as the cylinder (f); (h) is another type-cylinder of the same diameter as (f) and (g), and contains the numerals 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and a cipher (0). This cylinder in connection with (g) will give any day in any month desired and is made in the same way and manner as the cylinders (f and g), and is placed in close proximity with the cylinder (g); (i) is another type cylinder of the same diameter as (f, g, h), and contains figures and abridgement for ten successive years, and is made in the same way and manner as each of the aforesaid cylinders. These cylinders are each and all arranged upon the shaft (D) and are made fast in the required place of each by the nut (E) upon one end 2482 of the shaft (D), or it may thus be secured by making the blotter (J) to serve as a nut in the place of (E), in which case the shaft (D) would receive the blotter (J) as the nut and be moved therein for the aforesaid purpose by means of a thumb piece at the opposite end of the said shaft. The said shaft (D) has a shoulder or stop upon the opposite end from the nut or screw end, which shoulder bears directly against the cylinder (f) and the said cylinder against the cylinder (g), and the cylinder (g) against the cylinder (h), and the cylinder (h) against the cylinder (i), and the cylinder (i) against one part of the frame (B), between the said last-named cylinder and the said blotter (J) or nut (E). By moving the said nut (E) or by turning the said shaft (D), when the blotter (J) is used as a nut as aforesaid, each cylinder is drawn against each other as aforesaid, thereby holding each cylinder by the friction of the cylinder or cylinders next thereto. The shaft (D) has a bearing of greater diameter at one end thereof than at the other end. This is for the purpose as hereinbefore described. The blotter (J) is fastened to the frame (B) upon one side thereof by the use of the shaft (D), one end of which passes through the upper part of the said blotter, and which is firmly secured to the said frame by means of the nut (E), or by using it for the nut in place of the said nut (E) as aforesaid. This blotter is then and thereby retained in a fixed and strong position by means of the screw (S) in connection with the said shaft (D), the blotter (J) or nut E, and is for the purpose of cutting, inking, blotting, effacing and effectually cancelling the frank or postage-stamp, while, at the same time and operation, the name of the post-office, the year, the month, and the day thereof are given upon the envelope or letter at one side of the said frank or postage stamp, and not upon it, as now practiced, in order to efface and to cancel it under the operation of stamping, which unduly wears out the marking-stamp, gives a bad and unintelligible impression, and is in direct violation of the rules 2483 or statute of the Post-Office Department. This stamp may have another blotter like (J), which shall be upon the opposite side thereof, by the use of which the frank or postage-stamp would be cut, inked, blotted, effaced, and canceled upon any part of the letter or envelope where it may be placed. One blotter like (J), however, is believed to answer the required purpose This blotter (J) may be made of any size or shape, and of any material to answer the end or purpose sought to be obtained. The face, which receives the ink, and which comes directly upon the frank or postage-stamp, is grooved or cut, thereby leaving various projections, which have a sharp or knife edge sufficient for each to cut entirely through the frank or postage-stamp, but not through the envelope immediately under the same, while at the same time the places thus cut are inked by the same sharp-edged projections or cutters on the face of the said blotter as aforesaid. The said blotter (J) should be made of the best kind of cast-steel, and in such shape as not to break any part thereof. The projections upon the face of the said blotter may be kept sharp and in cutting order by filing and sharpening them when dull.

The said stationary form (c—c) may be made in a circle or any other shape desired, which shall contain the name of the post-office where used, and the initials of the State where such post-office may be located, or any other matter may be therein contained as the case may require. It is made of any required thickness, and has an inside and an outside ring or circle around the said type, representing the name of the town or post-office where used, &c., &c. It may be cast, chilled, or case-hardened in the same manner as the aforesaid type-cylinders, but the cheapest, best, and most convenient way or manner to construct it is as shown at fig. 5, where (c') represents or shows a channel or groove down and in the said ring (c—c). This channel or groove is cut from one fourth to three-eighths of an inch in depth, or more or less as may be found necessary. It is cut square down with the inner ring, while the side groove is filled up with blocks or spaces of the same or other material than the said type, which prevent any type from coming out of the said channel or groove. When the said form, as shown at fig. 5, is placed within the frame (B), fig. 2 (q), is closed up by means thereof. When the type, as shown at fig. 7, are placed in the channel or groove (c'), fig. 5, the face, the said form, and the face of the said type are upon a line with each, and thereby give an impression in print even and at the same time and operation. The said type are cast in moulds as required to fit the said channel or groove. By this arrangement there will be no engraving required, nor any setting up of form for the purpose of casting from for the respective post offices, towns, States, &c., for such can be set from a font of type made on purpose and kept at the "Post Office Department," and set up in the said groove or channel as aforesaid.
2484 to the outer ring is cut "dove-tailing," thus making the said channel or groove wider at the bottom than at the top thereof. This is to hold any type set therein in the proper place of each, and in condition for printing, &c., as aforesaid. At (q) is an opening so as to receive the type as shown at fig. 7. When the type as required for any name of any town or post office are placed in the said channel or groove through the said opening (q), then the remaining channel or

The form (c—c), fig's 1, 2, and 5, is fitted into the lower part of the frame (B), and there firmly fastened by means of the screws (s and t), fig. 2. There is a mortice in and through the aforesaid form (c—c) for the purpose of receiving the aforesaid cylinders (f, g, h, i,), whereby the printing surface of the same are upon a direct and even line of, and with the aforesaid stationary form of type (c—c) and that of the aforesaid blotter (J), so as to give an equal impression in print each with each. The aforesaid type cylinders (f, g, h, i,) re-revolve within 2485 the said stationary form of type (c—c), and the printing surface of each are then and always upon a line with each other, also with the face of the blotter (J), whereby the desired impression in print and ink is given, and the frank or postage-stamp cut as aforesaid at the same time and operation. The frame (B) may be secured to the handle (A) in any manner deemed best. (k), Figs. 1 and 2, is a ferrule upon the handle (A), and rests directly down and upon the upper part of the frame (B). This ferrule may be of any required size or thickness. A stem extends upward into the handle (A). This arrangement makes a strong joining of the said handle (A) and the said frame (B), or there may be a socket cast upon and with the said frame (B), and the handle (A) driven downward therein.

This stamp can be made at much less expense than any other kind of stamp or stamps for the same use and purpose, and is much more convenient, and not as liable to get out of repair. No part of it can well be lost, unless the entire stamp is lost, which is to be considered in the transmission of postmarking, rating, blotting, or cancelling stamps through the mails, for now there are so many separate and disconnected members or pieces that they are liable to, and in very many instances are lost in such transmission, and at post-offices when used. It is more easily adjusted for use, and can be kept in repair at much less expense than any other stamp for the same use and purpose. Any other matter required to be printed upon envelopes, letters, &c., at any post office may be done in the same way and manner by preparing type expressly therefor upon one cylinder to revolve in said stationary form (c—c).

Having thus set out the nature and the construction of my stamp aforesaid, I will now proceed to describe its operation, which is simple and easy to be understood. The cylinder (f) for the months revolves upon the shaft (D), and is brought into any required position on a line with the printing surface of the stationary type or form (c—c), and 2486 there remains for and during the month for which it is set or fixed, which, when the month is ended, is then moved forward for the next month in succession, and so the operation continues until the year is completed, when the same operation is again repeated. The cylinder (g) is moved forward one figure every ten days during any month or year. The cylinder (h) is moved forward one figure every day of the week, month, and year. The cylinder (i) is moved forward one figure every year during the term of ten years, when a new cylinder is put in its place to answer to the next ten successive years, and so on the operation continues without limitation. By the use of these cylinders, as herein described, any year, month, and day of the month of any year may be given and printed, while at the same time and operation the frank or postage-stamp is cut and inked, thereby cancelling the same as aforesaid. When each cylinder is adjusted to its proper and desired place, it is there firmly held by turning the nut (E), or by use of the blotter (J), as aforesaid, which will then bring each cylinder against each, and the side of one cylinder against the frame (B), in the manner and form as hereinbefore described. The impression is then made upon the envelope, letter, &c., &c., by giving a downward and striking motion thereon. And so the operation continues for the post-marking letters, or for anything else desired by use of this stamp. This stamp may be made of any size and strength desired. Any part thereof can easily be replaced whenever for any cause it may be required.

Having thus set forth and described my invention, what I claim and desire to secure by letters patent of the United States, is—

The blotter (J), connected or attached to the main part of any "post-office postmarking stamp" for the purpose of cutting and inking, blotting, and effacing so as to successfully cancel the frank or postage-
2487 stamp of any letter or any package at the same time and operation of marking or printing upon such letter or package the name of any post office, the year, the month, and the day of the month, substantially as and for the purpose herein set forth.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name on the 3d day of May, 1859.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent-Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the records of this office of the letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated December 16, 1862, No. 37175, for "Post-mark and Cancelling Stamp."

In testimony whereof I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent-Office to be hereunto affixed this eleventh day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

[SEAL.] W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

The United States of America to all to whom these letters patent shall come:

Whereas Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, New York, has alleged that he has invented a new and useful post-mark and cancelling stamp, which he states has not been known or used before his application; has made oath that he is a citizen of the United States; that he does verily believe that he is the original and first inventor or discoverer of the said invention, and that the same hath not, to the best of his knowledge and belief, been previously known or used; has paid into the Treasury of the United States the sum of thirty-five dollars, and presented a 2490 petition to the Commissioner of Patents, signifying a desire of obtaining an exclusive property in the said invention, and praying that a patent may be granted for that purpose:

These are therefore to grant, according to law, to the said Marcus P. Norton, his heirs, administrators, or assigns for the term of seventeen years from the sixteenth day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using, and vending to others to be used, the said invention, a description whereof is given in the words of the said Marcus P. Norton in the schedule hereunto annexed, and is made part of these presents.

In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the Patent Office has been hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand at the city of Washington, this sixteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, and of the Independence of the United States of America the eighty-seventh.

[L. S.] CALEB B. SMITH,
Secretary of the Interior.

Countersigned and sealed with the seal of the Patent Office.

D. P. HOLLOWAY,
Commissioner of Patents.

The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, have invented a new and "improved post-marking and cancelling stamp," and I do hereby declare the 2491 following to be a full and exact description of the construction and operation thereof, reference being hereby had to the accompanying drawings and to the letters of reference marked thereon, which make a part of this specification.

Like letters represent and refer to like or corresponding parts.

Fig. 1 is a side elevation of the stamp and letter frank canceling device.

Fig. 2 is a vertical section lengthwise through the center of the various parts of the post-marking and canceling stamp.

Fig. 3 is a face view, showing the post-marking stamp ready for use, and the construction of the canceling stamp or device more fully described hereinafter.

The nature of my improvements consists in so constructing canceling stamps that the same shall cut the postage stamp or any stamp similar thereto without injury to the contents of the envelope or packet inclosed therein, and at the same time cause a heavy circular mark upon the inside, and one upon the outside of that part of the stamp or letter frank canceled by the cutting device, so that said postage stamp or letter frank shall r·adily show cancellation in ink, and when removed from the letter or packet on which the same may have been canceled it shall be reduced to parts or pieces whereby a second use of the said stamp or frank is thus prevented although it may have been previously cleaned by a chemical or other process.

It also consists in the employment and combination of a canceling stamp with a cutting and inking device thereon, with a post-marking or rating stamp, so that the canceling of the letter frank and the post-marking on the envelope or packet shall be effectually done by the means fully described hereinafter.

To enable others skilled in the art to which my invention relates to make and use the same, I will here proceed to describe the construc-
2492 tion and operation thereof, which is as follows, to wit: I construct the post-marking stamp (D) of steel or any material which will answer the purpose. (G) is the mortice or opening to receive the type for the month, the day of the month, and the year, around which is the name of the place where used. (E) is a screw for the purpose of holding the type in the said openings (G). This stamp is secured or firmly fastened to the block or cross-piece (B), Figs. 1, 2, and 3, by means of the screw (K), which is held in its place by means of the small screw (a), Figs. 1 and 2, which is placed near one side of the said screw (K) so as to prevent the same from becoming loose by reason of turning backwards.

I construct the canceling stamp of steel of any size required in diameter and in length to correspond to and with the post-marking or rating stamp (D). On the face of this canceling stamp I construct circular knives or cutters (i. i, i), Figs. 2 and 3, which project somewhat below the face of the marking or rating stamp (D), Fig. 2, so as to give a somewhat harder impression and in advance of that given by the said stamp (D) whereby the postage stamp or frank upon which the same is used is cut through, and at the same time make the broad dark lines (o, o) on the inside, and the broad dark circular lines (e, e) on the outside thereof, and which said circular lines are seen at Fig. 3. That part of this canceling stamp which makes the said circular lines (o and e), Figs. 2 and 3, is made somewhat below the surface or the immediate edge of the said knives or cutters (i), and serve as guides to prevent the said knives or cutters from cutting through the postage stamp or frank and the envelope containing the same whereby injury to the letter or contents within the envelope or packet is prevented, and at the same time make the aforesaid heavy or dark lines (o and e), Fig. 3, so as to show cancellation more readily. (b, b), Fig. 3, are grooves or channels cut across the face of the said canceling stamp (c) so as to leave a 2493 corresponding part of the letter stamp or frank in condition without being cut or inked.

The said knives or cutters may be made on a straight line across the face of the cancelling stamp (c) instead of a circular form, in which event heavy guards or guides will be constructed upon each side thereof so as to prevent the said knives or cutters from cutting too deep and thereby injure the letter or contents thereof enclosed within the envelope containing the postage-stamp, while at the same time a heavy line or mark in ink may be given upon the said postage-stamp, thereby showing the cancellation readily. Any number required of the said knives or cutters may be used for cutting the said postage-stamp. The cancelling stamp (c) may be of any size or diameter desired. The guards thereon to prevent the said knives or cutters from cutting too much and from injuring any letter or any contents therein, may be of any form or shape deemed best so long as the object and result desired by this cancelling stamp is attained. The inner guard or guides may be omitted if desirable so to do, and the entire face or lower surface of the said cancelling stamp may be level instead of convex or oval, which will in no wise change the character of the invention or device, to wit, the knives or cutters and a guard or guards in combination with each other for the purposes aforesaid.

The cross-piece (B) is made of iron or steel and in width the same as the diameter of the said rating and canceling stamp, and of any thickness required. The said canceling-stamp (c) is securely fastened to the said cross-piece (B) and at any desired distance from the said rating stamp (D) as seen at Figs. 1, 2, and 3, and in the same manner as that of the said stamp (D). (H) is a screw bolt or stem, the lower end of which is screwed into the centre of the said cross piece (B). The handle (A) is then screwed upon the said bolt or stem (H) and firmly upon the said cross-piece (B), thereby making a strong and reliable joining 2494 of the handle to the whole stamp. This stamp thus constructed or combined is designed to cancel permanently and successfully postage-stamps on letters or packets in post-offices without injury to the letter or contents thereof, and thereby prevent the possibility of a second or re-use of such postage-stamp. It may also be used by banks for the purpose of canceling revenue stamps upon checks, notes, &c., and it may be used for canceling stamps of any kind, whether postage, revenue, or otherwise. It saves a great amount of labor in the making up of mails at any post-office, and is a cheap and durable postmarking or rating and canceling-stamp.

Having thus described my invention and improvements in postmarking and canceling stamps, what I claim therein and desire to secure by letters patent of the United States, is—

The canceling device (c) having on the face or lower surface thereof knives or cutters, and a guard or guards in combination with each other, by means of which the postage stamp is canceled by the said cutters, and at the same time prevent any injury to the letter or any contents therein from the said knives or cutters by means of the said guard or guards, substantially as herein described and set forth.

I also claim the combination of the canceling-stamp (c), and the postmarking or rating stamp (D) with the cross-piece (B), substantially as and for the purposes herein described and set forth.

In testimony whereof, I have, on this 7th day of October, 1862, hereunto set my hand.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the records of this office of the letters patent granted Emery N. Moore, dated January 16, 1849, No. 6036, for "improvement in machinery for postmarking letters, &c."

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this eighteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

[SEAL.] W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

United States of America to all to whom these letters patent shall come:

Whereas Emery N. Moore, of Boston, Massachusetts, has alleged that he has invented a new and useful improvement in machinery for postmarking letters, &c., which he states has not been known or used before his application; has made oath that he is a citizen of the United States; that he does verily believe that he is the original and first inventor or discoverer of the said improvement, and that the same hath not, to the best of his knowledge and belief, been previously 2498 known or used; has paid into the Treasury of the United States the sum of thirty dollars, and presented a petition to the Commissioner of Patents, signifying a desire of obtaining an exclusive property in the said improvement, and praying that a patent may be granted for that purpose:

These are therefore to grant, according to law, to the said Emery N. Moore, his heirs, administrators, or assigns, for the term of fourteen years from the sixteenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using, and vending to others to be used, the said improvement, a description whereof is given in the words of the said Emery N. Moore, in the schedule hereunto annexed, and is made a part of these presents.

In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the Patent Office has been hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, in the city of Washington, this sixteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine, and of the Independence of the United States of America the seventy-third.

[SEAL.] JAMES BUCHANAN,
Secretary of State.

Countersigned, and sealed with the seal of the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Commissioner of Patents.

The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all persons to whom these presents shall come:

Be it known that I, Emery N. Moore, of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, and State of Massachusetts, have invented a new and 2499 useful machine for stamping letters or packages with post-office marks; and I do hereby declare that the same is fully described and represented in the following specification and accompanying drawings, letters, figures, and references thereof.

Of the said drawings, Figure 1 denotes a top view or plan of my said machine. Figure 2 is a side elevation thereof. Figure 3 is a vertical and longitudinal section of the same, taken through the middle of one of the endless aprons. Figure 4 is a side view of the upper or bed cylinder, and shows the beds, depressing cams, and upper set of fingers or grips applied to the external surface of the said cylinder. Figure 5 is a side view of the lower or type-holding cylinder, and shows not only the recesses for receiving and holding the types, but the lower sets of grips or fingers, which act in concert with the upper sets of grips or fingers, as will be hereinafter described.

The peculiar object of my machine is to imprint on letters or parcels, or mailable matter usually deposited in post-offices, for the purpose of being transported or sent in the mails, the usual post-marks, such as the name of the place, date of reception of the letter, and price to be paid for transmitting it, together with the word "paid," or any other word, letter or letters, figure or figures, device or devices, that it may be deemed advisable to stamp thereon. All this has been heretofore been effected by stamps used in the hand of some officer of the post-office; and where much business is done in an office, this duty consumes much valuable time, and in consequence thereof creates a consequent expense. By the use of my machine, many thousand letters may be stamped in a very short period of time, in comparison to what would be consumed were the usual process of accomplishing the same resorted to.

In the said drawings, A denotes the frame work of the machine, which should be constructed in a manner suitable to sustain the operative parts directly applied to it. B and C are two cylinders, the 2500 former or the larger or lower of which is what may be termed the type-holding cylinder, because its main purpose is to hold and revolve the types or printing block or blocks used to produce the required impressions or post-marks upon the letters. The said blocks or types are shown at D D. The cylinder B is mounted on a shaft, E, which is properly sustained in bearings which admit of its being revolved so as to revolve the cylinder; on one end of the said shaft there is a fly-wheel, F.

The shaft also has a geer-wheel, G, fixed upon it, which engages with another geer-wheel, H, fixed upon another shaft, I, which is supported by and turns in boxes, K K. The upper or bed cylinder C is placed on the shaft I, and is revolved with it. The said cylinder supports two or any other suitable number of beds, L L′, which are portions of the curved surface of a cylinder, and serve to sustain the letter when it is made to pass between them and the inking or printing surfaces of the types or printing blocks. The lower or type cylinder may be made of a diameter equal to or any number of times greater than that of the other cylinder, according to the number of printing blocks it may be desirable to place in one range around its periphery. In the drawings it is exhibited having a diameter double, or about double, that of the upper cylinder, and as having two ranges of printing blocks, D D and D′ D′.

Each printing block of each range on the lower cylinder has a spring grip, M or M′, applied to the cylinder, and with respect to the block as seen in the drawings. There is another and somewhat similar spring grip, N or N′, applied to the upper cylinder adjacent to each bed, L L′, as seen in the drawings. The spring-grip N or N′ operates in connection with one of the two spring grips immediately below it on the lower cylinder, and in such manner as to seize each letter when it is sufficiently advanced or presented to be printed, and hold it firmly in place in order to be printed and receive an impression from one of the printing blocks or forms of type.

Having thus described that part of the apparatus which produces impressions of types on a letter, or on several letters in succession, it next becomes my province to explain that by which the letters are successively presented to the spring-grips of the cylinders in order to be printed.

For this reason I make use of an endless apron for each range of printing blocks around the lower cylinder. In the drawings two of said aprons, O O′, are seen, each being supported upon two rollers, P Q, and arranged as seen in the figures. The roller P of each apron is fixed upon a horizontal shaft, R (see Figure 6, which represents a rear end elevation of the machine), which revolves in bearings S S screwed to the under side of the table T, within which the endless aprons are arranged. On the outer end of the shaft R is a pulley, U, about which and a large grooved wheel or pulley, V, fixed on the shaft of the lower cylinder, a band, W, passes so as to communicate motion to both the endless aprons when the lower cylinder is put in revolution. Each endless apron has an inclined spout, X or X′, disposed at right angles to it and over the table T, as represented in the drawings. The letters to be printed are laid in the spouts, and by the attendant are successively pressed down upon the endless aprons as fast as it may be necessary to supply them to the printing machinery.

By the revolutions of the endless apron on which the letters may be placed, they are successively moved forward against spring-stops Y Y′, which are seen at Y in Figure 3, and also at Y Y Y′ Y′, in Figure 7, which denotes a top view of the inner end of the table T, or that part of it which projects under the upper cylinder, and is not seen in Figure 1.

Each one of the said spring-stops is nothing more than a 2502 small bent spring so applied to the front end of the table as to project above the same and arrest the forward movement of a letter when it is moved in contact with them by one of the endless belts. At a proper time, and just before two of the spring-grips of the cylinders are brought around and together, so as to size the letter, the said spring-stops Y Y of each endless apron are depressed by cams Z Z Z suitably placed upon the surface of the upper cylinder; as soon as the depression of the stops is effected the endless apron upon which the letter should still rest a short distance will immediately cause the letter to advance, and far enough so as to be seized between and by the two spring-grips which may be in the act of approaching towards one another for the purpose of receiving or seizing the letter.

The next portion of the machine is that by which the types or printing surfaces are inked. It does not differ materially from such as is in common use on cylinder printing machines.

In such of the drawings as the same are shown, a denotes an ink fountain, and b a large distributing cylinder; c is a small conveyor or roller for conveying ink from the surface of the fountain roller d to that of the distributing drum or cylinder. It is applied to arms f f extending from a rocker shaft, e, which has a long bent arm, g, projecting forwards from it, and over a cam or wiper, h, fixed on the shaft E, the said cam being so made and arranged as to cause, by its action on the said arm, the conveyors to move towards and against either the fountain roller or the distributing cylinder, as occasion may require. The distributing cylinder is revolved by an endless band, i, which operates around two grooved pullies, k l, one of which is placed on the shaft E and the other on the shaft n of the distributing cylinder. A reciprocating lateral motion is given to the distributing cylinder by means of a vibratory fork, m, made to operate in crossed helical grooves formed in a cylinder, n', fixed on the shaft n. Or, instead of such a contrivance to obtain a lateral 2503 movement of the said cylinder, any other well known and proper contrivance may be substituted.

From the distributing cylinder the ink is transferred to the types or imprinting surfaces by a roller, o, which is suspended by arms from a rocker shaft, p, the said shaft having an arm, q, extending from it and resting upon a cam or wiper, r, fixed on the shaft E, and made to revolve with said shaft and to so operate the transferring roller o by means of the arm q as to cause said transferring roller, at the proper time or times, to move away from contact with the distributing cylinder and come into, or rest in contact with the inking types, blocks, or surfaces, which produce the postmarks.

On one end of the shaft of the ink fountain roller is a ratchet wheel, s, which has an impelling pawl, t, resting upon its teeth, the said pawl being jointed to an arm, u, projecting from the shaft e. The movements of the said shaft cause the pawl to so act on the teeth of the ratchet wheel as to produce a gradual rotation of it and the fountain roller, in order to always present to the conveyer c a fresh surface of ink.

The machine above described, in many respects, resembles various machines in use for cylinder prinitng. I have, however, produced a combination of elements different from any such, and adapted to a peculiar purpose, viz, that of postmarking letters and packages. As such letters and packages vary in thickness, either the beds will support the said letters during the operation of postmarking them, or the types or printing blocks should be sustained upon springs which will admit of their recession a little so as to allow of the passage of a letter of any ordinary thickness between either of the said beds and its printing block or types. In Figure 3 the printing block is shown as resting upon a spring, v, which is so disposed as to allow of the proper recession of the block, as occasion may require.

What I claim in my invention for postmarking letters is the 2504 spring-grips as applied in combination with the cylinders B and C and letter conveyer, and to each printing block and bed, substantially as described.

Second. I claim spring-stops Y and apparatus for working them, as applied in connection with each endless belt or apron, and the spring-grips, and made to operate substantially as specified.

And, lastly, I claim to make the beds, or printing surfaces or blocks, so as to be capable of receding and adapting themselves to letters or parcels of various thicknesses, as specified.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my signature this the eleventh day of February, A. D. 1848.

pulleys, k l, one of which is placed on the shaft l and the other on the shaft n of the distributing cylinder. A reciprocating lateral motion is given to the distributing cylinder by means of a vibratory fork, m, made to operate in crossed helical grooves formed in a cylinder, n', fixed on the shaft n. Or, instead of such a contrivance to obtain a lateral 2503 movement of the said cylinder, any other well known and proper contrivance may be substituted.

From the distributing cylinder the ink is transferred to the types or imprinting surfaces by a roller, o, which is suspended by arms from a rocker shaft, p, the said shaft having an arm, q, extending from it and resting upon a cam or wiper, r, fixed on the shaft E, and made to revolve with said shaft and to so operate the transferring roller o by means of the arm q as to cause said transferring roller, at the proper time or times, to move away from contact with the distributing cylinder and come into, or rest in contact with the inking types, blocks, or surfaces, which produce the postmarks.

On one end of the shaft of the ink fountain roller is a ratchet wheel, s, which has an impelling pawl, t, resting upon its teeth, the said pawl being jointed to an arm, u, projecting from the shaft c. The movements of the said shaft cause the pawl to so act on the teeth of the ratchet wheel as to produce a gradual rotation of it and the fountain roller, in order to always present to the conveyer c a fresh surface of ink.

The machine above described, in many respects, resembles various machines in use for cylinder prinitng. I have, however, produced a combination of elements different from any such, and adapted to a peculiar purpose, viz, that of postmarking letters and packages. As such letters and packages vary in thickness, either the beds will support the said letters during the operation of postmarking them, or the types or printing blocks should be sustained upon springs which will admit of their recession a little so as to allow of the passage of a letter of any ordinary thickness between either of the said beds and its printing block or types. In Figure 3 the printing block is shown as resting upon a spring, v, which is so disposed as to allow of the proper recession of the block, as occasion may require.

What I claim in my invention for postmarking letters is the 2504 spring-grips as applied in combination with the cylinders B and C and letter conveyer, and to each printing block and bed, substantially as described.

Second. I claim spring-stops Y and apparatus for working them, as applied in connection with each endless belt or apron, and the spring-grips, and made to operate substantially as specified.

And, lastly, I claim to make the beds, or printing surfaces or blocks, so as to be capable of receding and adapting themselves to letters or parcels of various thicknesses, as specified.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my signature this the eleventh day of February, A. D. 1848.

United States Patent Office to all persons to whom these present shall come, greeting:

This to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the records of this office of the letters patent granted Benjamin Chambers, dated September 23, 1851, No. 8384, for "Improvement in letter stamps."

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this eighteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

Acting Commissioner.

No. 8384.

United States of America to all to whom these letters patent shall come:

Whereas Benjamin Chambers of Washington, D. C., has alleged that he has invented a new and useful improvement in letter-stamps, which he states has not been known or used before his application; has made oath that he is a citizen of the United States; that he does verily believe that he is the original and first inventor or discoverer of the said improvement, and that the same hath not, to the best of his knowledge and belief, been previously known or used; has paid into the 2507 Treasury of the United States the sum of thirty dollars, and presented a petition to the Commissioner of Patents, signifying a desire of obtaining an exclusive property in the said improvement, and praying that a patent may be granted for that purpose:

These are, therefore, to grant, according to law, to said Benjamin Chambers, his heirs, administrators, or assigns, for the term of fourteen years from the twenty-third day of September, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the full and exclusive right and liberty of making, constructing, using, and vending to others to be used, the said improvement, a description whereof is given in the words of the said Chambers, in the schedule hereunto annexed, and is made part of these presents.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the Patent Office has been hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, this twenty-third day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the seventy-sixth.

Acting Secretary of the Interior.

2508 The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Benjamin Chambers, of the city and county of Washington and District of Columbia, have invented a new and improved letter stamp, and that the following is a full, clear, and exact description thereof, reference being had to the accompanying drawings which make part of this specification.

The purpose of my invention is to furnish a stamp having a simple and ready mode of discharging the movable letters and figures containing the date of the stamp, while preserving the integrity of the cylindrical metallic or other block containing the fixed letters, and avoiding the cutting away and weakening of the handle.

I form my stamp of a block of metal, generally of a cylindrical form but it may be oval, elliptical, or prismatic in the cross-section. From the upper end of this block projects a shank to enter the bore of the handle. This shank may be either of a piece with the block itself, or may be inserted or firmly fixed into it by screwing or other well-known means.

The block has, as usual, at its lower end, a square opening to receive the name of the month and the figure representing the day of the month on separate types, which types, when inserted, are held in place by a set screw or other equivalent fastening. These two types rest, when used, against the solid top of the square cavity; but when it becomes necessary to push either of the types out for the purpose of replacing it by another, a separate punching rod or follower comes down through a small hole and urges out one type without disturbing the other. The necessity of some means of pushing out the types is caused by the stickiness of the ink, which, getting between the types and the sides of the cavity in which they are set, creates an adhesion and causes delay.

2509 Besides this, any other mode of getting out the types of the stamp is more or less liable to injure the letters.

In the drawings, Fig. 1 is a longitudinal section, Fig. 2 is a cross-section through the part of the stamp represented by the dotted line x x, Fig. 1. Fig. 3 is a face view of the stamp, and Fig. 4 is a separate view, showing the detached follower or punching-rod R, with its cross-wing N, and sliding thumb-piece O. Corresponding letters represent the same parts in all the figures

A is the body of the stamp, on the end of which is seen in Fig. 3 the permanent device or name of the place where the stamp is to be used (which in the present figure is Baltimore, Md.). In the lower end of the block is represented in the same figure, and also in Fig. 1, the square hole H to receive the movable types T and T′, on the latter of which are the letters Feb., and on the former the figure 5. The types being inserted in the proper position, the thumb-screw S retains them in place. As the type T (Figs. 1 and 3) are required to be changed about thirty times as often as T′, the removal is made by the rod R′, pushed down by the thumb-slide O′, which is connected by the wing N′ moving up and down in the slot M′, which slot is formed in the body of the stamp and does not extend into the handle. The punching rod, wing, and thumb-slide are made in a single piece, and act one on each side of the centre or shaft of the block.

When at the end of the month it becomes necessary to displace the movable type T, it is effected by means of the second follower R. Fig. 2 shows in section the rods R and R′, the slots M and M′, and the two

2508 The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Benjamin Chambers, of the city and county of Washington and District of Columbia, have invented a new and improved letter stamp, and that the following is a full, clear, and exact description thereof, reference being had to the accompanying drawings which make part of this specification.

The purpose of my invention is to furnish a stamp having a simple and ready mode of discharging the movable letters and figures containing the date of the stamp, while preserving the integrity of the cylindrical metallic or other block containing the fixed letters, and avoiding the cutting away and weakening of the handle.

I form my stamp of a block of metal, generally of a cylindrical form but it may be oval, elliptical, or prismatic in the cross-section. From the upper end of this block projects a shank to enter the bore of the handle. This shank may be either of a piece with the block itself, or may be inserted or firmly fixed into it by screwing or other well-known means.

The block has, as usual, at its lower end, a square opening to receive the name of the month and the figure representing the day of the month on separate types, which types, when inserted, are held in place by a set screw or other equivalent fastening. These two types rest, when used, against the solid top of the square cavity; but when it becomes necessary to push either of the types out for the purpose of replacing it by another, a separate punching rod or follower comes down through a small hole and urges out one type without disturbing the other. The necessity of some means of pushing out the types is caused by the stickiness of the ink, which, getting between the types and the sides of the cavity in which they are set, creates an adhesion and causes delay.

2509 Besides this, any other mode of getting out the types of the stamp is more or less liable to injure the letters.

In the drawings, Fig. 1 is a longitudinal section, Fig. 2 is a cross-section through the part of the stamp represented by the dotted line x x, Fig. 1. Fig. 3 is a face view of the stamp, and Fig. 4 is a separate view, showing the detached follower or punching-rod R, with its cross-wing N, and sliding thumb-piece O. Corresponding letters represent the same parts in all the figures

A is the body of the stamp, on the end of which is seen in Fig. 3 the permanent device or name of the place where the stamp is to be used (which in the present figure is Baltimore, Md.). In the lower end of the block is represented in the same figure, and also in Fig. 1, the square hole H to receive the movable types T and T′, on the latter of which are the letters Feb., and on the former the figure 5. The types being inserted in the proper position, the thumb-screw S retains them in place. As the type T (Figs. 1 and 3) are required to be changed about thirty times as often as T′, the removal is made by the rod R′, pushed down by the thumb-slide O′, which is connected by the wing N′ moving up and down in the slot M′, which slot is formed in the body of the stamp and does not extend into the handle. The punching rod, wing, and thumb-slide are made in a single piece, and act one on each side of the centre or shaft of the block.

When at the end of the month it becomes necessary to displace the movable type T, it is effected by means of the second follower R. Fig. 2 shows in section the rods R and R′, the slots M and M′, and the two thumb-slides O and O′. A shank, L, Fig. 1, projects from the upper end of the block A, and upon this the handle K.

I do not claim punching out types from a cavity by a follower; but what I do claim as my invention and desire to secure by letters patent is, so making and operating the detruding rods or followers of a 2510 letter stamp as to act wholly within the body of the stamp block, whereby I avoid cutting away the handle and the weakening which would be caused thereby.

I also claim making the detruding-rod R, wing N, and thumb-slide O in a single piece, whereby I greatly economize the labor of making this part of the stamp, as herein set forth.

2514 The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known, that I, Stephen P. Ruggles, of Boston, in the county of Suffolk, and State of Massachusetts, have invented certain new and useful improvements in hand stamps for post-office and other purposes, and I do hereby declare the following to be a full, clear and exact description of the same, reference being had to the accompanying drawings making a part thereof, in which

Fig. 1 represents a perspective view, and

Fig. 2 represents a vertical central section through the same.

Similar letters where they occur in the two figures denote like parts.

The nature of my invention relates, first, to the manner of connecting a plate to the handle by means of a screw cap to facilitate a change of plates; also, in holding the ball to the socket by a pin and its accompanying parts to prevent the spring from coming out.

A represents the handle of the hand stamp, which may be made of wood or any other suitable material, and into this handle is inserted a shank piece, B, having a collar, C, thereon, to keep the shank from being driven into the wood by the blows in using the stamp.

The shank piece extends down below the wood, and terminates in a semi-spherical end, D, which fits into a similar concavity in the upper part of the bed plate E; a is a flange rising around the concavity in the bed plate, and through a hole in this flange, and a large hole, c, in the shank piece passes a pin, e, which holds the bed plate to the shank, though by a kind of ball and socket joint, on which it may turn. f, are other flanges on the upper side of the bed plate, outside of that, a, 2515 through which holes 1 1 are made, capable of allowing the pin e to pass through and be inserted in its place as seen in Fig. 2.

A coiled spring, 2, has its upper end encased by the ring i, which bands the lower end of the handle, and its lower end rests between the flanges a f, on the top of the bed plate, so that said spring is prevented from jumping out of its place, whilst it holds the bed plate always at right angles with the shank, until a blow is struck to give an impression, when the spring yields and allows the plate to conform to the surface upon which it is brought down, whether that surface be parallel to the line of motion of the descending stamp or not. The distance that the shank is let into the handle is optional with the maker, as its object is only to give the whole thing stability enough to withstand the service to which the stamp is to be applied.

JACOB THOMPSON,

Countersigned and sealed with the seal of the Patent Office.

[SEAL.] S. T. SHUGERT,
Act'g Commissioner of Patents.

The schedule referred to in these letters patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Ezra Miller, of Zanesville, in the county of 2520 Rock and State of Wisconsin, have invented a new and useful post-office "hammer stamp," and I do hereby declare that the following is a full, clear, and exact description of the same, reference being had to the accompanying drawings forming a part of this specification, in which

Fig. 1 is a side view of my invention.

Fig. 2 is a longitudinal vertical section, and

Fig. 3 is an inverted view of the marking face of the stamp.

Similar letters of reference in each of the several figs. indicate corresponding parts.

The object of my invention is to provide a "hand stamp" which performs all the functions of a power-press, and will enable the post-office to mark letters, etc., with an impression so deep that the postage-stamp will be placed beyond a second or surreptitious use, and the post-office locality clearly and distinctly seen, two objects which it has heretofore been found very difficult to accomplish with stamps which have their handles running at right angles to their marking faces.

By the use of the hammer stamp any desired force of blow may be obtained with very little effort on the part of the operators and a most distinct and positive impression made. The marking can be accomplished with great facility and neatness and without the hands of the operators being blistered, as in the case with ordinary stamps with which the force is derived by direct concussion of the hand with the handle of the stamp, instead of through a lever which has the joint of the hand its fulcrum.

The nature of my invention consists in a post office marking stamp which has its handle running parallel, or nearly so, with its marking face or faces as hereinafter specified, whereby a long handle is provided and the stamp can be operated in the same manner as an ordinary hammer, and, if desirable, two marking faces may be employed, one above and the other below the handle, but both to be used below the handle alternately by inverting the same.

2521 To enable others skilled in the art to make and use my invention, I will proceed to describe its construction and operation.

A is a cross-head secured to a handle B; the upper end of cross-head is provided with a socket C to receive the types D to mark the words "paid," "free," &c., &c. The type is secured by the thumb-screw a for convenience of changing the type. E is a screw tenon at the lower end of the cross-head to which is secured the marker F, now in use in the P. O. Department.

G G G are movable types and figures in the center of marker F for marking dates, &c., as practiced commonly in post-offices. These types and figures are secured to their place in the marker F by the thumb-screw b.

In attaching the marking-stamp and type to the cross-head the face of the marking-stamps and type are at right angles or nearly so to the line of the cross-head A and parallel with the handle B, the handle being of sufficient length to enable the operator to give a sufficient blow to make the necessary impression. By the same blow that the printed impression is made the postage-stamp is effectually cancelled by the indentation or breaking of the stamp, rendering the surreptitious or second use of the postage-stamp impossible. The printing is very clear, and the gumming of the type prevented by the concussion caused by the blow in using the instrument, and the ease and rapidity of affixing postmarks greatly augmented. In practice I may find it advantageous to cast or make the stamp and cross-head in one piece, and in some cases the handle, cross-head, and stamp may be cast together.

To make more evident the utility of my invention I will state in general the disadvantages of the old stamp and the advantages of my hammer stamp:

1st. The old markers do not stamp or mark with sufficient power.

2nd. They do not cancel the postage-stamp. The printer's ink
2522 laid on by the old markers is so faintly pressed on the stamp that it can be readily washed off and the stamps used again.

3rd. The print is imperfect, because the marker is liable to fill up with ink.

4th. It blisters the hand of the operator.

5th. It daubs the hand with ink.

The advantages of my stamp are:

1st. It does its work with great power.

2nd. It works much more easily and rapidly; and

3rd. Perfectly and permanently cancels all the stamps by the power of the blows given with this handle; the marker is driven into the stamp, making a perfect impression of the letters of the marker without, as well as with ink.

4th. The marking or printing is more beautifully and perfectly done.

5th. The marker does not fill up with ink. The concussion keeps it clean.

6th. It will not blister the most delicate hand or fatigue the weakest arm.

7th. The hands of the operator are not so liable to be daubed with the ink, consequently the letters and papers are kept clean.

What I claim as my invention and desire to secure by letters patent, is—

A post-office marking stamp which has its handle running parallel, or nearly so, with its marking face or faces, substantially as and for the purposes set forth.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the bound volumes of the library of this office, of the specification and drawing in the matter of English letters patent granted Pearson Hill, dated March 25, 1857, No. 832, for, "Imp'ts in machinery for stamping, marking or printing and arranging papers, &c."

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Specification in pursuance of the conditions of the letters patent filed by the said Pearson Hill, in the great seal Patent Office, on the 25th September, 1857.

To all to whom these presents shall come, I, Pearson Hill, of Hampstead, in the county of Middlesex, send greeting:

Whereas, Her most Excellent Majesty, Queen Victoria, by her letters patent, bearing date the twenty-fifth day of March, in the year of 2524 our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and fifty-seven, in the twentieth year of her reign, did, for herself, her heirs and successors, give and grant unto me, the said Pearson Hill, her special license that

I, the said Pearson Hill, my executors, administrators and assigns, or such others as I, the said Pearson Hill, my executors, administrators and assigns, should at any time agree with, and no others, from time to time and at all times thereafter during the term therein expressed, should, and lawfully might make, use, exercise and vend, within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Channel Islands, and Isle of Man, an invention for "improvements in machinery for stamping, marking or printing and arranging papers, letters and other articles," upon the condition (amongst others) that I, the said Pearson Hill, my executors or administrators, by an instrument in writing, under my, or their, or one of their hands and seals, should particularly describe and ascertain the nature of the said invention, and in what manner the same was to be performed, and cause the same to be filed in the great seal Patent Office within six calendar months next and immediately after the date of the said letters patent.

Now, know ye, that I, the said Pearson Hill, do hereby declare the nature of the said invention, and in what manner the same is to be performed, to be particularly described and ascertained in and by the following statement thereof, reference being had to the accompanying drawings, and to the figures and letters marked thereon, that is to say:

The machinery is particularly adapted for applying the date stamps and obliterating stamps to letters and other articles sent through the Post Office, but it may also be employed for other purposes. The letter is introduced into the machine by hand, or by tapes, or other means, its position being regulated by a fixed or movable stop or gauge. The stamp or marker supplied with ink or colour by an inking appa-2525 ratus, or similar means, is pressed or driven against or upon the letter, so as to produce the required stamp or mark. The letter is carried by fingers or nippers, or other means, to a trough or case, into which it is forced by a presser or plunger, or by fingers, which propel forward the column of letters, as they accumulate either upwards or downwards, or in any other required direction, when the column of letters is propelled in an inclined or curved open trough; a movable plate or board serves to press them into the trough and prevent any danger of their shuffling out; a ratchet may be also employed to prevent any accidental recoil or receding of the letters as they advance to the trough. The letters are counted by a self-acting counting apparatus, which is so arranged that it only acts when a letter is placed in the machine, and ceases to act when no letter is introduced, notwithstanding that the motion of the machine may be continued. The stamp, or the surface which supports the letter when it is being stamped, or both, are made to accommodate themselves to the varying thickness or irregularities of the letters. Envelopes and cards and tickets and others articles may be stamped, printed, or marked and arranged in the same manner as above described in reference to letters. The various motions are produced by cams and eccentrics, or cranks, or other well known mechanical means, and the machine may be driven by hand or by the foot, or by power, as may be most convenient.

Figure 1, sheet I, of the accompanying drawings, is an elevation or front view of a machine constructed according to my invention. Figure 2, sheet II, is a side view of the same. Figure 3, sheet III, is a plan of the same. The same letters refer to similar parts in each figure. These drawings represent the machine of half the full size; A is the framing, and A^1, the table or flat top of the machine; B is the main shaft which may be driven by a treadle, a, with a connecting rod, b, connected 2526 to a crank on the shaft B; c is a crank on the shaft B, which is connected by a rod, C, with the lever D, which turns on the bearings dd and carries the stamp or die E. A pad or cushion is fixed in the table A^1 to support the letter while it is being stamped by the die E. The die is supplied with ink by means of a sliding frame which carries inking rollers, and which slides backwards and forwards under the lever D.

Figure 4, sheet IV, is a full size plan of the under part of the lever D, with the inking rollers; figure 5 is a longitudinal section of the same. Two rails or guides, ff, are fixed to the lever, and serve to support and guide a rectangular roller frame, F, whose edges are dovetailed to fit the guides. The roller frame F, carries three rollers, g, g^1, g^2, covered with the ordinary composition of glue and treacle employed for inking rollers, or with other suitable material. The spindle of the roller g^1 is capable of sliding through its bearings, and it is pushed or caused to traverse from side to side by the undulating cams or templates h h fixed on the lever D as the roller frame F moves backwards and forwards in the guides f f G is a flat plate or inking table, fixed to the lever D and adjusted so that the rollers g, g^1, g^2 run in contact with it. H, in figures 1, 2 and 3, is the doctor roller with its ink trough, H^1. The spindle of the doctor roller H carries a ratchet wheel, h^1, which is advanced by a pawl, h^2, jointed to the lever h^1, which is driven by a rod, h^4, from a pin on the lever D. Another pawl is employed to prevent the wheel h^1 from moving in the wrong direction. The rod h^4 can be adjusted to different positions on the lever h^3 so as to vary the motion of the doctor roller. The trough H^1 can also be set nearer to or farther from the doctor roller in the ordinary manner. The doctor roller and trough are mounted on a plate, H^2, which can be raised and lowered by screws, so as to cause the doctor roller to press with more or less force on the roller g when it runs under the doctor roller. The lever D carries an arm or lever, d^1, which gives motion by a connecting rod, d^2, 2527 to a lever, d^3, turning on a pin or fulcrum, d^4, on the frame A. f^1 is a connecting rod, which connects the top of the lever d^3 to the roller frame F. Thus, when the die E rises, the roller frame F slides forwards and carries the rollers g^2 g^1 under it, and thus inks the die. As the die descends, the roller frame runs back and carries the roller g in contact with the doctor roller H which supplies it with a small quantity of ink. As the frame repeats its backward and forward motion, the ink is transferred from the roller g to the inking table G where it is spread about or distributed by the rollers g g^2 and the traversing roller g^1; at the same time the rollers g^1 g^2 become uniformly charged with ink, which they apply to the die E. The die then descends upon the corner of the letter, which is introduced by hand and placed against a stop or stops. These stops may be fixed, or they may be made to descend through or into the table as the lever D descends with the die. A letter is thus stamped or printed at each stroke of the machine. As each letter is stamped it is removed to make way for the next letter in the following manner: I is a lever, turning on a fulcrum or pin, i, on the frame A. The top i^1 of this lever is bent into horizontal position. The lever I carries a roller, which enters a groove in the face of the cam I^1 fixed on the shaft B.

Figure 6, sheet IV is a diagram shewing the form of the groove in the cam I^1. J is a lever turning on a fulcrum, j, and carrying a roller which enters a groove in the cam J^1 fixed on the shaft B. The form of the groove in this cam is shown in figure 7. Sheet V, j^1 is a rod, jointed to the lever J and to a rod, j^2, sliding through guides i^2 fixed to the lever I; j^3 is a fork or prongs, mounted on the rod j^1 but capable of yielding a little, being pressed up by a spiral spring, j^4. As the die E rises after stamping the letter, the fork j^3 is raised by the cam J^1 and the letter is thus nipped between the fork j^3 and the horizontal part i^1; the lever I is then driven forward by the cam I^1 and it carries with it the rod j^2 and (Here follow 7 diagrams marked pp. 2528, 2529, 2530, 2531, 2532, 2533 & 2534.)

2535 the fork j^3 and the letter held between j^3 and i^1. The letter is thus carried forward until it arrives over the fingers K K on which it is deposited by the descent of the fork j^3 which then turns with the lever I to its first position. These motions are affected by the cams I^1 J^1. The fingers K K are fixed to a bar or spindle, K^1, carrying a lever, K^2, having a pin which enters a fork or slot in the end of a lever, K^3, which turns on the fulcrum k and carries a roller which enters the groove of the cam K^4. The form of the groove of this cam is shewn in figure 8, sheet V. The motion of this cam causes the fingers K K to turn up into an angular position and to carry the letter up to the bottom of the inclined trough L. M M are a series of sliding fingers, moving at right angles to the trough L and worked by a lever, M^1, turning on a fulcrum, m, and carrying a roller which enters the groove of the cam M^2. The form of the groove of this cam is shown in figure 9, sheet V. As the letter is raised by the fingers K the fingers M slide out, and as the letter passes them they slide in again under the letter. The fingers K then descend to their first horizontal position and receive another letter, while the first letter remains supported by the fingers M. As the second letter reaches the bottom of the trough L the fingers M retire, leaving the first letter or the whole of the letters in the trough resting upon the letter which is just being pushed in by the fingers K. As these fingers reach the top of their stroke, the fingers M again slide in under the last letter, and they support the letters in the trough while the fingers K again descend to fetch another letter, and so on. The fingers K carry curved or segmental pieces at their extremities, which prevent any letter from being accidentally pushed under them.

When a number of letters with thick seals enter the trough, there is sometimes a tendency for some of the letters to rise and work out of the column and fall down. This is prevented by a plate or 2536 presser board, N, mounted on a lever, N^1, which turns on the fulcrum n. n^1 is a forked lever which is driven by a pin on another lever, n^2, on the bar K^1 so that as the fingers K descend, the board N is pressed against or towards the column of letters, and thus any projecting letters are pushed back into their places. To prevent any accidental recoil of the letters as they arrive on the fingers K a series of horizontal ratchet bars, or bars with teeth like a saw, may be fixed between the fingers K and projecting a little above them when they are in their horizontal position. These teeth prevent the return of the articles which are being stamped.

I have not, however, found these rachet bars to be required when operating upon letters. The number of letters stamped is registered by a counter, P, of any ordinary construction. p is the lever which works the counter, and which is connected by a rod, p^1, to a lever, p^2, on a spindle, p^3, mounted on the lever D; p^4 is another lever on the same spindle, p^3, and which is connected to a small pin or rod, q, which passes through the lever D near the die. The pin or rod q enters a small hole in the table, so that as long as no letter is placed in the machine the lever D may work up and down without the pin q coming into action.

which may be driven by a treadle, a, with a connecting rod, b, connected to a crank on the shaft B. c is a crank on the shaft B, which is connected by a rod C to the lever D, which turns on bearings d and carries the stamp or die E; H is a band of cloth, prepared with ink or colouring material, which is wound upon a roller, h, mounted on the lever D. On the axis of the roller is a ratchet wheel, h^1, which is advanced a little as the lever D rises, by coming in contact with the pawl h^2. The other end of the band is attached to a roller h^3 carrying a ratchet wheel h^4, which is advanced by a pawl h^5. The spindle of the roller h turns rather stiffly in its bearings, so that the band may not run off of itself. The roller h^3 or the ratchet wheel h^4 turns rather stiffly on its spindle, so that it may yield a little and not endanger the breaking of the band. The letters being placed under the die by hand receive the mark or impression from the band, which is pressed upon them by the die, and at each impression the band is advanced a little by the ratchets, so as to 2539 bring forward a fresh supply of colouring material. Each letter as it is stamped is removed by a set of fingers j^3, of which only the end one is seen in the drawing. These fingers work through slots in the table A^1, like the fingers or fork j^3 in the machine first hereinbefore described, but instead of moving to and fro, the' revolve in a circle, being fixed on the main shaft B. As the die rises these fingers pass up through the table and push the letter T along the table until it arrives on the incline plane U, where it assumes the position T^1 with the last edge inclined upwards a little, so as to admit of the next letter passing under it. The fingers descend through the table and again come round to remove the next letter, which is pushed under T^1, and at the same time pushes it forward a little. The letters thus pass down the inclined plane U and along the inclined trough L. This trough is capable of moving to and fro a short distance, and it carries an arm L^1 which is pushed forward by a cam B^1 on a fly-wheel B^2, which is mounted on the main shaft B. As the cam B^1 leaves the arm L^1 the trough is suddenly drawn back by a spring. A jogging or vibratory motion is thus communicated to the trough L, which facilitates the passage of the letters down it; or a vibratory motion may be communicated to the trough by other means or in a different direction. N is a board or plate, which turns on a pivot at n, and rests upon the letters, so as to cause them to pack rather closer together than would otherwise be the case on first starting the machine. A small arm n^1 with an adjustable weight may be connected to the board N to increase or decrease the pressure on the letters at pleasure. The connecting rod b, from the treadle a, may be connected to a crank on the shaft B, or it may be connected to an eye on the connecting rod C, as shewn in the drawing, so as to drive the shaft B by the crank c.

2540 bles that of the fingers or fork j^3 in the machine first hereinbefore described. The rod j^1, which carries the fork or fingers j^3, is jointed to a lever J, turning on a fulcrum at j. The rod j^1 is also jointed to the crank c, or to another crank on the main shaft B. The points of the fingers or fork j^3 are thus made to move in a sort of oval path, as shewn by the red line. The other parts of the machine are similar to those of the machine shewn in Figure 10.

Another arrangement of the fingers j^3 consists of a star-wheel, having two, or three, or more sets of fingers, arranged at equal distances apart. This star-wheel or finger-wheel is mounted on a separate shaft, or it may turn loosely on the shaft B, and it is driven at a less velocity, so that one set of fingers may act at each stroke of the lever D. Thus, if the wheel has four sets of fingers, it will be driven by toothed wheels, or otherwise, at one-quarter of the speed of the shaft B; or, instead of driving this wheel at a uniform velocity, it may be driven by a pawl or catch connected with the lever D, acting upon a ratchet wheel or a series of catches on the finger-wheel. By this last arrangement, the fingers strike the letter with a small velocity, which is gradually accelerated, instead of striking it with a uniform velocity. All the machines may be constructed either with the inking rollers or with the aforesaid band. A counter may be attached to any or all of the machines, and the hereinbefore mentioned contrivances for renewing the surface of the pad or cushion may also be applied to all the machines. In lieu of a printing stamp an embossing stamp may be employed, or if desired, an embossing stamp may be employed in conjunction with an inking apparatus, so as to produce a coloured embossed impression on the paper or other material placed under it. The machines are applicable for stamping and arranging note-paper, envelopes, cards, and other articles, as well as letters passing through the post.

Having now described the nature of the said invention, and in 2541 what manner the same is to be performed, I wish it to be understood that what I claim is, constructing machinery for stamping, marking, or printing and arranging papers, letters and other articles by the combination of stamping, marking, or printing apparatus, with fingers or instruments for removing and arranging in order, the said articles, in manner hereinbefore described.

In witness whereof, I, the said Pearson Hill, have hereunto set my hand and seal this twenty-fifth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office, to all persons to whom these present shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy, from the bound volumes of the library of this office, of the specification and drawing in the matter of the English Letters Patent granted George Thomas Robinson, dated October 6, 1857, No. 2563, for "a machine for obliterating postage stamps on letters," &c.

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this eighteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

(Here follows diagram marked page 2543.)

Specification in pursuance of the conditions of the letters patent, filed by the said George Thomas Robinson in the Great Seal Patent Office on the 6th April, 1868.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, George Thomas Robinson, of the Leamington Priors, in the county of Warwick, architect, send greeting:

Whereas, Her most Excellent Majesty, Queen Victoria, by her letters patent, bearing date the sixth day of October, in the year of our 2544 Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, in the twenty-first year of her reign, did, for herself, her heirs, and successors, give and grant unto me, the said George Thomas Robinson, her special license that I, the said George Thomas Robinson, my executors, administrators, and assigns, or such others as I, the said George Thomas Robinson, my executors, administrators, and assigns, should at any time agree with, and no others, from time and at all times thereafter during the term therein expressed, should, and lawfully might make, use, exercise, and vend, within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Channel Islands, and Isle of Man, an invention for "A machine for obliterating postage stamps on letters, at the same time stamping the postmarks and registering the number of letters so stamped," upon the condition (amongst others) that I, the said George Thomas Robinson, my executors or administrators, by an instrument in writing, under my, or their, or one of their hands and seals, should particularly describe and ascertain the nature of the said invention, and in what manner the same was to be performed, and cause the same to be filed in the Great Seal Patent Office within six calendar months next and immediately after the date of the said letters patent:

Now, know ye, that I, the said George Thomas Robinson, do hereby declare the nature of the said invention, and in what manner the same is to be performed, to be particularly described and ascertained in and by the following statement thereof, that is to say, my invention is intended to afford a more perfect and expeditious mode of obliterating stamps on letters, and also stamping the postmarks, and at the same time registering the number of letters that have been stamped; or for obliterating and stamping or printing checks, cards, envelopes, and such other like articles.

The machine which I propose to use for the above purpose is constructed as follows, that is to say, enclosed in a suitable frame 2545 or casing, I arrange a compartment, in which the letters or other articles to be operated upon are stacked by the "facer" or "sorter," and held down by a weight. From the aforesaid compartment the letters are carried forward (when motion is imparted to the machine through the shaft on which the stamping cylinder is placed) by means of india rubber or other elastic fingers, under a flexible fringe of whalebone, or other suitable flexible material, to prevent more than one letter passing at a time. The letters next pass between a stamping cylinder (having the name and number of the post-office or mark to be printed engraved on its circumference, and also the date supplied by movable type) and a plain pressure roller, by which the obliterating of the postage-stamp and the stamping of the postmark is performed, and the letter discharged from the machine. The inking of the stamping cylinder is effected by a distributing wheel revolving in contact with an inking roller, said roller being supplied from a reservoir of ink placed above it. The pressure rollers are mounted upon and also depressed by a spring, and revolve either by means of toothed wheels or by means of a band passing round the said rollers, at the same speed as the type cylinder.

For the purpose of registering the number of letters or other articles operated upon, I employ a jointed lever, attached to which is a pawl acting upon a ratchet wheel in connection with a train of four wheels placed above it, record by units, tens, hundreds, thousand, and tens of thousands on a series of dials, outside of the machine, the number of letters that have been stamped. The mode of operation is as follows: At each swing of the lever (caused by the passing of a letter) the pawl pushes the ratchet wheel one-tenth of a revolution, and one entire revolution of the ratchet wheel causes the toothed wheel placed immediately above it to revolve one tenth of its circumference, and so on through the entire train of wheels, and thence to the dials on the outside of the machine.

2546 In order to explain my said invention as completely as possible, I now proceed to describe the best means I am acquainted with for carrying the same into practical effect, reference being had to the illustrative drawing hereunto annexed, and to the numeral figures and letters of reference marked thereon respectively as follows:

Description of the drawing.

A is the compartment in which the letters A* or other articles to be operated upon are placed; B is an opening in the same to admit the elastic fingers C C C C; D is the flexible fringe of whalebone to prevent the passage of more than one letter at a time; E is the stamping and obliterating cylinder; F F are the pressure rollers driven by the belt G and depressed by the spring H; J is the ink distributor; K the inking roller; and L the reservoir for ink; M is the jointed lever, attached to which is the pawl N; O is the ratchet wheel which communicates the motion imparted by the pendulum to the toothed wheel P Q R and S placed above it; and T U V W X are the dials placed on the outside of the machine.

Having now fully described and set forth the nature and object of my said invention, together with the best means I am acquainted with for carrying the same into practical effect, I hereby declare that what I claim as my invention is the combined apparatus, hereinbefore described, for the purpose of obliterating postage-stamps on letters, stamping the postmark, and registering the number of letters so stamped, and also for the purpose of obliterating, stamping, printing, and registering checks, cards, and other articles.

2547 In witness whereof, I, the said George Thomas Robinson, have hereunto set my hand and seal this third day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight.

The U. S. Patent Office to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the files of this office of the file wrapper and contents in the matter of the letters Patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated April 14th, 1863, No. 38175, for "Improvement in post-office stamps."

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this thirteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundredth.

Acting Commissioner.

TROY, N. Y., December 30th, 1862.

Hon. Commissioner of Patents.

SIR: Herewith enclosed for will please find $15 fee on my application for letters patent herewith presented, for "improvements in post-marking & canceling stamps for revenue & postage stamps." The petition, oath, specification, model & drawings are herewith enclosed. I ask for an early examination of this application.

Your ob't s'v't

MARCUS P. NORTON,
Att'y per se.

2549 To the Hon. Commissioner of Patents:

The petition of Marcus P. Norton of the city of Troy, in the county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, respectfully represents: That your petitioner has invented "new and useful improvements in postmarking and canceling revenue and postage stamps, &c., &c.," which he verily believes has not been known or used prior to the invention thereof by your petitioner. He therefore prays that letters patent of the United States may be granted him therefor, vesting in him and his legal representatives the exclusive right to the same, upon the terms and conditions expressed in the act of Congress, and all amendments thereof, in that case made and provided; he having paid ($15) fifteen dollars into the Treasury of the United States, and complied with the other provisions of the said act and the several amendments thereof.

And your petitioner does hereby constitute and appoint Marcus P. Norton of Troy, county of Rensselaer, State of New York, attorney, and fully authorize and empower him to alter or modify the within specification and claim as he may deem proper, expedient, and in conformity to law, and the decision or decisions of the Hon. Commissioner of Patents, hereby recognizing and confirming all that said attorney may lawfully do or perform in relation thereto; and also to receive letters patent, when granted.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

CITY OF TROY,
County of Rensselaer, State of New York, ss:

On this thirtieth day of December, A. D. 1862, before me, the subscriber, a commissioner of deeds, personally appeared the within named Marcus P. Norton, and, being sworn according to law, says 2550 that he verily believes himself to be the original and first inventor of the within described "new and useful improvements in postmarking & canceling revenue & postage stamps, &c., &c."; that he does not know or believe the same was ever before known or used; that he is a citizen of the United States & loyal thereto.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on the day, month, and year first above written.

D. LAW,
Commissioner of Deed, Troy, N. Y.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer and State of New York, have invented "new and useful improvements in postmarking and canceling revenue and postage-stamps, &c., &c.," and I do hereby declare the following to be a full, clear, and exact description of the construction and operation thereof, reference being hereby had to the accompanying drawings and to the letters of reference marked thereon, which drawings make a part of this specification.

Like letters refer to and represent like or corresponding parts.

Fig. 1 is a side elevation of the stamp and letter frank canceling device hereinafter described for canceling stamps issued by the post-office, revenue, or other departments, with indelible or other ink by the means hereinafter set forth.

Fig. 2 is a face view showing the postmarking stamp ready for use, and the canceling stamp or device made of wood, cork, rubber, or other and similar material, and therein inserted and more fully described hereinafter.

2551 Fig 3 is a vertical section taken through the center of the various parts of the post-marking and canceling stamp.

Fig. 4 shows a marking, rating or dating and canceling device more fully described hereinafter, and is more especially designed for rating, dating, and canceling revenue stamps.

Fig. 5 shows a device to cancel stamps or franks with indelible ink by means of wood, cork, rubber or similar material for type or blotter in combination with the postmarking device and more fully hereinafter described. The nature of my improvements herein described consists in the employment and combination of a device for canceling postage or other stamps by means of wood, cork or similar material inserted in a tube or recess therein, for the purpose of effacing or blotting such stamps with indelible ink, [at the same time and operation of postmarking of letters, packet, &c., &c.

It also consists in the employment of cutters or knives between the type for the month, day of the month, and the year, and outside of the same, in combination with the same and with the printing surface of the stamp or marking device.]

Am'd A.
Erase & Insert A.

To make other' skilled in the art to which my invention relates to make and use the same, I will here proceed to describe the construction and operation thereof, which as follows, to wit: I construct the postmarking stamp (D) of any suitable material (E). Fig. 3 is the mortice or recess of suitable dimensions to receive the type for the month, the day of the month, and the year, around which is the name of the place where used and is the same as the postmarking device described in my letters patent bearing date the 16th day of December, 1862, and which is secured to the cross-piece (B) in the same manner and by the same means as described and set forth in the said patent, which is also the case with the canceling device (b).

I construct the canceling stamps or device (c) of any suitable material, of any size required in diameter and in length to correspond to 2552 the postmarking device (D). (F) Fig. 3 is the tube or recess in the device (c) for the purpose of receiving the blotting or canceling device (G) Figs. 2 & 5, which device is made of wood, cork, rubber or similar material so as to closely fit the said tube or recess (F) Fig. 3. The face of this device may contain a plan or form for canceling with indelible ink like that shown at Fig. 2, or it may have any plan or form for that purpose thought best to devise or use. This device (G) may project somewhat below the lower end of the said tube (F) as seen at Fig. 5, and may also project below the face of the postmarking or rating device (D) Figs. 2 and 3, and it may be driven out of the said tube or recess by means of a pin or bolt operating through the hole (a) Figs. 3 and 5 for the purpose of repairs or to replace it by a new one. The said tube or recess (G) may be of any size in diameter required or any depth desired.

B. Erase & Insert B.

[(H) Fig. 4 shows a "revenue stamp" for marking the name of any bank, corporation, company or person, and the month, the day of the month, and the year upon any note, check, draft, or other paper or packet requiring revenue stamps in payment of government tax, and at the same time and operation cancel such stamp and the check, note, draft or other packet on which said stamp may be required or used by cutting through both such stamp and the paper or packet on which the same may be used, by means of one or more of the knives or cutters (b, b, b, b,) Fig. 4. These knives or cutters are made of steel of any length, width or thickness required, and are placed between the type for the month, the day of the month, and the year, and on the outside of the same substantially as shown at said Fig. 4, and are properly adjusted to the face or printing surface of the marking stamp in which they are placed, and are firmly held therein by means of the screw bolt (c) same fig., (d) same fig. is the type for the month, (e) is the type for the day of the month, and (f) the type for the year. This marking and canceling stamp may also be used for 2553 post-offices—in which case the name of the post-office when used would be upon the postage-stamp or letter frank in part or in whole, while thus at the same time the said stamp or frank would be canceled by the said cutters or knives in a permanent and successful manner, whereby there could be no second or reuse of the same, which would also be the case with revenue stamps used in payment of government tax or other purpose.]

C used twice see canceling device.

B. Erase

In no case could any fraud be committed by a second or reuse of the government stamp or frank.

Having thus described my invention and improvements in making and canceling stamps, what I claim and desire to secure by letters patent of the United States of America therein, is,

1. The canceling device (C) with wood, cork, or rubber type or blotter (G) therein or any device substantially the same, so as to cancel the postage-stamp with indelible ink substantially as herein described and set forth.

C. Erase.

[2. I also claim the knives or cutters (b, b,) in combination with the type for the month, day of month and year, and with the face or printing surface of the stamp D or any equivalent therefor, substantially as and for the purposes herein described and set forth.]

3. I also claim the canceling device (c) with wood, cork, or similar material forming the type or blotter (G) therein, in combination with the cross-piece (B), and with the postmarking device (D), substantially as herein described and set forth.

In testimony whereof I have on this 29th day of December, 1862, hereunto set my hand.

Troy, N. Y.

Your application for postmarking & canceling stamp appears to consist of two devices; the one being substantially a common ink cancelling stamp, such as has been used for years in our post offices for blotting and thus cancelling post-office stamps, and the other being an ordinary lettered post-office stamp, with the addition of cutters b, b.

Long public use defeats the novelty of the first device, and for the second see rej'd app'n of I. C. Bryant, withdrawn Jan'y 2, '61, & patents to James Spear, Feb. 14, '60; W. W. Harding (for perforating rule) May 1, '60, and J. F. Tapley (for printing & cutting device) March 4, '62.

As your devices (both being for cancelling purposes) appear to be alternative in their nature and not adapted for nor capable of a proper joint use, no patentable combination is perceived to exist between them, if, indeed, they may not be regarded as two entirely distinct inventions or contrivances.

The application is therefore rejected.

Hon. Commissioner of Patents:

SIR: In the matter of my application for a patent upon "improvements in postmarking and cancelling stamps," filed in the Patent Office Jan. 5th, 1863, and rejected Feb. 21st, 1863, I have to request a second or re examination of the same.

I do not understand that the device referred to in your letter of the 21st of February last is "a common ink cancelling stamp, such as has been used for years in our post offices for blotting, and thus can-2555 celling post-office stamps." The devices to which you undoubtedly refer have always been made of metal entirely or of wood entirely. Wood was found to answer no purpose, because not at all durable, so metal ones were used. Now this device consists of a barrel or tube into which wood, cork, rubber, or some such material is inserted for the purpose of holding an indelible ink in quantities sufficient to blot the postage stamp so thoroughly as to prevent the same being washed or cleansed by a chemical mixture and again being used in payment of postage. This tube or barrel holds firmly the elastic substance therein and prevents the same from undue wear and exposure. The elastic substance therein being worn out, can again be replaced at the office where used, thus saving the trouble and expense of returning the same to the gov't contractors for such repairs. This, therefore, constitutes a new device, composed of two distinct parts in combination, producing new results, besides blotting the postage stamp.

This device being new, its combination with the postmarking device for the purposes set forth in the specification is of course new. Upon these two claims I therefore most respectfully ask a patent.

As to the claim for the cutters in combination with the postmarking device, I am inclined to the opinion—after reflection upon the same—that the office is right in the intimation that this device should be embraced in a new and separate application, and will therefore amend the same.

AMENDMENT A.

Hon. Commissioner of Patents:

SIR: In the matter of my application for a patent upon improvements in "postmarking & canceling stamps," filed in the U. S. Patent Office Jan. 5, 1863, and rejected on the 21st day of February, 1863, I hereby amend by striking therefrom each and every word of the 10th line of page 2 after the words "indelible ink" and commencing with the word "at" in said line, retaining in said line only the first three words thereof. And I hereby further amend the said specification by striking therefrom the 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th lines of the said 2d page thereof, and insert in place and stead thereof the following, to wit:

A. Insert.

"[It also consists in the combination of a canceling device having wood, cork, rubber, or any similar material for the type or blotter therein, with any postmarking device so as to blot, cancel, or efface postage stamps with indelible ink at the same time and operation of postmarking of letters, packets, &c., &c."]

I hereby further amend the said specification by striking therefrom and reserving the same for a new and separate application for a patent, the 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, and 28th lines of page 3, also each and every line of page 4 down to and including the 25th line of the same page, and insert in place and stead thereof the following, to wit:

B. Erase.

"The said canceling stamp or device (c) being thus constructed with cork, rubber, or other elastic substance for type or blotter, will receive and hold on the face thereof ink in quantities sufficient to blot or cancel the postage-stamp in such a manner as to prevent the possibility of the said postage-stamp being cleansed of the canceling ink by any chemical or other process; for the said ink would be so effectually put thereon that any attempts to remove it therefrom would entirely destroy the said postage-stamp, and thereby render the same incapable of a second or reuse. 2557

The said cork, rubber, or other elastic substance as aforesaid, will render the said stamp capable of an easy and rapid use, for there being a yielding of the same when the blow is given, the operator will not tire as soon by a constant or continuous use of the same as though it were solid metal. And the same will greatly aid in raising the entire stamp from the paper and postage-stamp when the impression shall have been given by the operator. The said blotter or type can be more easily repaired or replaced by a new one at less expense than if made of solid metal. B. Insert.

"The said cork, rubber, or other elastic material may extend upward to the said cross-bar (B), and there be connected to the same by a screw or pin bolt if desired, which will be the same in effect and in operation."

I also hereby further amend the said specification by striking therefrom the entire second claim thereof. C. Erase.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

United States Patent Office, to all persons to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

This is to certify that the annexed is a true copy from the files of this office of the file wrapper and contents in the matter of the reissue letters patent granted Marcus P. Norton, dated August 3, 1869, No. 3586, for "imp't in post-office hand stamps and post-marking and cancelling."

In testimony whereof, I, W. H. Doolittle, Acting Commissioner of Patents, have caused the seal of the Patent Office to be hereunto affixed this nineteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and second.

[L. S.] W. H. DOOLITTLE,
Acting Commissioner.

To the Hon. Commissioner of Patents:

The petition of Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, respectfully represents:

That he did obtain letters patent of the United States of America for and upon improvements in post-office post-marking and postage cancelling stamp or instrument, which said letters patent were dated on or about the 14th day of April, A. D. 1863, and which letters patent were by your petitioner assigned and transfered to Jacob Shavor and 2561 Albert C. Corse, of the said city of Troy, county and State, on or about the 20th day of April, 1863, and such deed of an assignment was recorded in the U. S. Patent Office on the 8th day of March, 1864, in Liber C, 7, page 458 of transfers of patents. And your petitioner would further show that the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, some time in and during the year 1864, surrendered the said letters patent bearing date April 14, 1863, and thereupon and thereafter the said letters patent were reissued, bearing date the 23d day of August, 1864, upon a corrected and amended specification and description.

And your petitioner hereby further shows unto said Commissioner of Patents that he, your said petitioner, and original and first inventor of said invention and improvements, has, by reason, force, power, and virtue of a certain instrument in writing, among other things containing a deed of an assignment and transfer from said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse to the said Marcus P. Norton, become fully repossessed of the said invention, improvements, and letters patent so granted and reissued. And your petitioner further shows herein and hereby that he, your petitioner, is now the true and lawful owner of the said letters patent, invention and improvements therein contained; that the legal and also the equitable title in, to, or for the said invention, improvements, and letters patent so granted bearing date April 14, 1863, and reissued bearing date the 23d day of August, 1864, is now fully vested in your petitioner, Marcus P. Norton, as by the law made and provided, which said deed of an assignment and transfer from Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse to said Marcus P. Norton, bears date on or about the 23d day of February, 1864, and which was duly recorded in the said U. S. Patent Office on the 24th day of July, 1869, in Liber U 11, page 319 of transfers of patents, and to which reference is now and hereby had for a more full understanding or knowledge of or concerning the 2562 title and ownership of the said invention, improvements and letters patent.

And your said petitioner further shows that he now believes that the said letters patent reissued so as aforesaid are inoperative and not fully available to him, your petitioner, by reason of a defective specification and description, as well as defective title, which defects have arisen from inadvertence, accident and mistake; he therefore and hereby prays that he may now be allowed to surrender the said letters patent so granted and reissued, and he requests that new letters patent may issue to him, as by the law made and provided for, and upon the same invention and improvements, for the residue of the period for which the original letters patent were granted and issued, under amended, corrected and reformed specifications herewith presented, he having paid ($30) thirty dollars into the Treasury of the United States, agreeably to the requirements of the act of Congress, and all amendments thereof in that case made and provided.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

In testimony whereof I have on this 12th day of July, A. D. 1869, hereunto set my hand in presence of—

J. C. LATHROP.
F. W. DOW.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
City and County of Washington, ss :

On this 15th day of July, 1869, before the subscriber, a notary public, personally appeared the above-named Marcus P. Norton, and made solemn oath, as by law provided, that he verily believes that, by reason of insufficient or defective specifications, as well as of the title of or to the same, his aforesaid invention, improvements and letters pat-2563 ent so granted and reissued are not fully available to him, and that said errors have arisen from inadvertence, accident, or mistake, and without any fraudulent or deceptive intention, to the best of his knowledge or belief.

And deponent further says that he is, according to his own judgment, information, and belief, the original and first inventor of each and every of the improvements described and set forth in the within specification, and also contained in the several claims to the invention named, described and set forth in the said original letters patent; also, in the said reissued letters patent of August 23d, 1864; also, in the within specifications, description and claims; that he is the true and lawful owner of the same, as well as of the said letters patent; that the legal and equitable title is vested in and belongs to this deponent, as will more fully appear by reference to each and every of the said several deeds of assignment and transfer of the said invention, improvements and letters patent, dated, executed and recorded as therein stated and will appear.

MARCUS P. NORTON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this 15th day of July, A. D. 1869.

[L. S.] J. McKENNEY,
Notary Public, City of Washington, D. C.

To all whom it may concern :

Be it known that I, Marcus P. Norton, of the city of Troy, in the county of Rensselaer, and State of New York, have invented new and useful improvements in "postmarking letters," "packets," etc., and "in the 'cancelling' of the 'postage-stamps' thereon" in the manner and by the means substantially as hereinafter described and set forth;
2564 that letters patent of the United States were duly issued thereon, under and bearing date April 14th, 1863, which were assigned and transferred under a certain agreement, and by virtue of a certain instrument in writing bearing date the 20th day of April, 1863, and recorded in the U. S. Patent Office on the 8th day of March, 1864, in Liber C, 7, page 458, of transfers of patents, to Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, of said city of Troy, county and State, and who, on or about the 23d day of February, A. D. 1864, duly reassigned and retransferred the said invention, improvements and letters patent to the said Marcus P. Norton, inventor and assignee aforesaid, by a certain instrument in writing, duly executed, and bearing date on the said 23d day of February, 1864, and which assignment and transfer from said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse was duly recorded in the said U. S. Patent Office on the 24th day of July, 1869, in Liber U, 11, page 319 of transfers of patents. Now, therefore, I, the said Marcus P. Norton, do hereby declare the following to be a full, clear and exact description of the construction and operation thereof, reference being had hereinafter to the accompanying drawings and to the letters of reference marked thereon, which drawings so marked and lettered hereby make a part of these my specifications of and concerning my said invention and improvements herein contained and set forth.

Like letters refer to [and represent] like [and corresponding] parts of my [said] invention.

The letters do not both represent and refer to—the drgs. does the, representing.

Fig. 1 represents a side elevation of the postage stamp cancelling and postmarking device [hereinafter described and set forth, for cancelling postage stamps, with any suitable ink contained upon such instrument, at the same time, blow and operation of the making of the postmark on the letter, envelope, or packet, one side of and from such postage stamp or frank so cancelled].

Fig. 2 represents a vertical section taken on a line through the centre of the [various parts of the postmarking and postage-cancelling device or instrument herein contained, described and set forth]. 2565

Fig. 3 represents a face view of the device, showing the postmarking stamp ready for use [and the postage-cancelling die or device, made of wood, used endwise, or of cork, rubber, or other suitable material therein, inserted in the manner substantially as shown and more at large described hereinafter.]

"Franks" are never cancelled.

Fig. 4 shows a device for the purpose of cancelling postage-stamps [or letter franks used to represent value], by the use [and power] of any suitable ink, by the means of wood, cork, or any elastic material for the type or die which may be used for that purpose, separate and alone, or in combination with any suitably-constructed postmarking stamp or device, substantially as shown at fig. 3 of the said drawings.

[Fig. 5 represents a vertical section of a postmarking and postage-stamp cancelling device or die combined, and constructed entirely of iron, steel, or other metal, and more fully described hereinafter.

Fig. 6 is a plan or face view of fig. 5, showing the postage-stamp cancelling device or die made of iron, steel, or other suitable metal or material.

Fig. 7 represents the wrench used for securing the dating type in a proper place within the postmarking device, having the name of the town or post-office used engraved thereon in relief letters.

New matter not in original application.

Fig. 8 represents the tool or instrument used for removing the cork, wood or rubber die or type used for cancelling postage-stamps, from the tube or surrounding case where held or contained, so as to repair or replace the same with a new one when worn out or unfit for use.]

The nature of my said invention [and improvements herein contained and described] consists in the employment and combination of a device or die used for [the more complete and perfect] cancellation of postage-stamps [or letter franks], by means of soft wood used endwise, or of cork, rubber, or other suitable material, whereby such stamp 2566 [or frank] is effaced and cancelled, in and by indelible or other ink, in the manner substantially as herein described and set forth.

It also consists in the combination of such a postage-stamp cancelling device or die [constructed of wood, cork, rubber, or any suitable material], with [any suitably arranged and constructed] postmarking stamp [or device], so as to cancel [efface or destroy] the postage stamp [or letter frank with indelible or any suitable ink], at the same time, blow or operation of the stamp [or instrument] by which the post-mark is given or made upon the letter, envelope, or packet [substantially as herein described and set forth.

It also consists of the postmarking of letters, envelopes, or packets, and in the cancellation of the postage stamp or stamps thereon with, in, or by any suitable ink or similar
New matter. material, by means of some soft wood used endwise against the postage stamp, or by the means of cork, rubber, iron, or steel, or by means of any other suitable material so combined with the postmarking stamp or instrument as to cancel, efface, or destroy the postage stamp or stamps at one and the same blow or operation of the entire instrument thus constructed for that purpose, whereby to prevent a second or reuse of such postage stamps.]

To enable others skilled in the art to which my said invention [and improvements] relate, to make and use the same, I will here proceed to describe the construction and operation thereof, which are substantially as follows: [That is to say], I construct the postmarking device or stamp, D, of any suitable material, and of any size in diameter required, while in length it must correspond to the cancelling
No. E, in Fig. 3. device and die or type. E, Fig. [3], is the mortice or recess of suitable dimensions to receive the type for the month, day of the month, and for the year [and called or known as the dating type], around which is the name of the town or post-office where used in [relief letters, and upon 2567 the lower face of such postmarking stamp or device]

I construct the postage-cancelling stamp [or device, G (for the purpose of cancelling in a more perfect and thorough manner the postage stamps on letters, envelopes, or packets),] of wood used endwise upon the postage stamps, or of cork, rubber, or of any suitable or elastic material, and insert the same in the tube or recess, F, which is that part of the cancelling device marked C, of the accompanying [drawings, and which is connected to [and combined with] the said cross piece, B, as herein described. I prefer to have the diameter of the cancelling device and die or type, F, Figs. 2, 3, and 4, about the same as the width of the postage stamp to be cancelled [or destroyed by means of the same. The said cancelling die or type, G, may be of any length required, and so made as to correspond with the tube or recess, E, and closely to fit the same, and it may be made of wood, cork, rubber, or of any elastic material, as aforesaid. The face of this device may contain a plan or form for cancelling the postage stamp in, with, or by ink, like unto that shown at Fig. 3, or it may have any configuration deemed proper to use for the purpose aforesaid.] The said [device, die, or] type, G, will project somewhat below the face of the postmarking device D, if deemed best so to do,* and it may be removed out of the said tube or recess, E, by means of a pin or bolt [substantially like that shown at Fig. 8], the lower end of which operates in and through the aperture (a) Figs. 2 and 4, for the purpose of repairs, or to replace it by a new one when desired. A is the operating handle, firmly secured to the cross bar, B, by any suitable mechanical means, and it will be made of wood, &c. [The said postage-stamp cancelling device, die, or type G, being thus constructed of cork, wood, or rubber, or other elastic material, and combined with the said device, C, with recess or tube, F, therein as aforesaid, will receive and contain on the face or configuration thereof the ink aforesaid named in quantities sufficient to permanently cancel, efface, or destroy the postage-stamp whereon the same is used while post-marking letters, packets, &c., in such manner as to prevent the said postage-stamp being cleansed of the said cancelling ink by any chemical or other process; for the said cancelling ink so put upon the postage-stamp by means of said cork, die, or type would be so effectual, that any attempt or effort to remove it therefrom would entirely destroy, or nearly so, the aforesaid postage-stamp, and thus and thereby render the same incapable for or of a second or other use without immediate detection.] The said [cork, rubber, or other suitable] elastic material used as aforesaid will render the said [postmarking and postage] stamp cancelling die or type of a more easy, and consequently rapid use, because of there being a yelding of the said [cancelling die or] type, G, when the blow is given [upon the letter, envelope, or packet and postage-stamp] as aforesaid, the operator will not tire as much by [means of a constant, continuous, and rapid] use of the same; and it will also somewhat aid the operator in raising the entire instrument [or apparatus] from the paper [or packet and postage-stamp] when the impression [thereon and the cancellation of such postage-stamp] shall have been given [by the operator in the manner substantially as aforesaid.] The said cancelling type or die can be easily repaired or replaced by a new one whenever desired, and also at very little expense; and such cancelling die or type, G, may extend upward to the said cross-bar B, and there be connected to the same by means of a screw, pin, or small bolt. In such case there would not be any tube or pipe surrounding said cancelling die or type G. The operation and effect produced would, in such case of construction, be the same. [The said postage-stamp cancelling device, die, or type G may be of any

Mere assertion or conjecture not admissible in the specification.

desired distance from the aforesaid postmarking or rating device or stamp D, or it may be securely fastened to the immediate side of the said postmarking and dating part
M. P. N. or stamp or device D, by any convenient and suitable mechanical means.] The said cancelling die, type, or device G I prefer to use made of cork, as it will hold a 2569 much greater quantity of cancelling ink upon and in the lower face thereof; and when it comes into contact with the printed surface of the postage-stamp, such surface will become somewhat and sufficiently broken by means thereof, and thus and thereby inject into or impregnate such broken surface with the said cancelling ink, whereby such postage-stamp so operated upon and filled with such ink, cannot be sufficiently cleansed by any means as to enable it to be re-used [or used a second time in fraud upon the postal revenue, without immediate detection of the same. Soft wood used endwise will answer nearly the same purpose; still, long and continued use after the granting of my said patent, April 14, 1863, has fully proven the superiority of the cork for the cancelling die or type used upon postage-stamps as aforesaid. The said tube or cylinder C, Figs. 2, 3, and 4, may be constructed in any suitable manner or by any convenient means, and thereafter fastened to the under side of the said cross bar B, in or by any mechanical means which will answer the required purpose. It may also be of any form or shape deemed best. I construct my said postage stamp cancelling device, die, or type, also, of cast iron, steel, or suitable metal, substantially as shown at G^1, Figs. 5 and 6, and which may then be secured to the said cross-bar or piece B in like manner as the said tube or cylinder C, Figs. 2 and 4, and which is done either by screw and nut where the same unites with the said cross-bar, or it may there be firmly fastened by means of suitably-constructed and arranged pins or rivets, or the same may be soldered to the under side of said cross-bar or piece B. The said postmarking and dating device, D, is also secured to the under side of said cross-bar or piece B, and at or near the end thereof, opposite that where said tube or cylinder C, or cancelling die, type, or device G is securely fastened, as aforesaid, in like manner, and by substantially 2570 the same means as used for such fastening of said cancelling device to said cross bar upon the under side of the same as aforesaid. The aforesaid metal cancelling device, die or type G^1, Figs. 5 and 6, may also be fastened or secured to the immediate side of the said postmarking device by any good and sufficient means, substantially as hereinbefore described and set forth in reference to the said device C, or tube, or cylinder constructed to receive and to contain the said type or die G, Figs. 2, 3, and 4. Such metallic device, die, or type may also have upon its lower face or lower surface any suitable configuration deemed best to use for the purpose of cancelling the postage-stamp in, with, or by any suitable ink at the same time, blow, and operation of the instrument or apparatus as hereinbefore stated and set forth. In any and every case the postmarking of the letter, envelope, or packet, and the effacing or cancellation of the postage-stamp or letter frank thereon representing value, are done at the same time, blow, or operation of the said several devices and parts constructed and combined in the manner and by the means substantially as herein described and set forth. Both the postmarking and the cancellation of the said postage-stamp are done with indelible, or other and suitable, ink used for such cancellation or effacing of the postage-stamp, and that, too, without any injury to the said letter, envelope, or packet, or to the contents thereof, as would be the case were the said postage-stamp cancelled by being cut in several parts and places by means of cutters or knives constructed for that express use and purpose, as is the case by the cutters or knives contained and set forth in letters patent granted to me on the 9th day of August, A. D. 1859, also on the 16th day of December, A. D. 1862, the first of which contains no guard or guards to said knives or cutters, while the second contains such guard or guards for the purpose of preventing such cutters or knives from cutting too much or too deep in and upon said postage-stamps. The said instrument and devices herein set forth and described will not, under any circumstances, cut either the letter, envelope, or postage-stamp thereon in any way or manner, but perform the cancellation required to be done in, with, and by ink only, as aforesaid, no cutting device whatever being used. But the said cork device, die, or type will, when it comes in contact with the printed or enamelled like surface of the postage-stamp, somewhat mar, bruise, or break the same by means of the blow given by the instrument whereby to prepare the same to be filled by, or impregnated with, any suitable ink used for such cancellation, substantially as aforesaid.

Reiteration.

In no case could a fraud be committed by a second or reuse of the government postage-stamp or letter-frank, representing value, without being discovered. This arrangement and combination of devices will greatly hasten or facilitate the making up of the mails for transportation. It will also economize in labor, and reduce the labor in postmarking letters and in the cancelling of the postage stamps thereon to about, if not entirely, one-half of the number of workmen, or laborers, or clerks necessary when and where this combined instrument is not used in the manner aforesaid. It therefore saves at least one-half of the labor required in the postmarking of letters, envelopes, or packets, and in the cancellation of the postage-stamps thereon. It also makes the cancellation of the postage-stamps more effectual or permanent, so as to prevent a second or reuse of such postage-stamps by any means whatever, which is very important in the successful management of the post-offices in this country, whereby and by means of which large sums of money are annually saved this government, and frauds upon the postal revenue by the second and reuse of postage stamps are also prevented by the use of my invention and improvements herein contained, described, and set forth. By the use of said invention the letters to be mailed and prepared for transportation by means of postmarking the same, and in cancelling the postage-stamps thereon 2572 as aforesaid, need not be handled over but once, thus and thereby economizing in time and in labor.

The cross-bar or piece B, Figs. 1, 2, and 3, may be of any suitable width or thickness, or of any metal which will answer the required purpose. It may also be of any length deemed best to use in order to get the said postmarking device and the said postage-cancelling device, die, or type suitably arranged upon the lower surface of the same, and thereto firmly and securely fastened in the manner substantially as aforesaid. The type whereby to give the date are arranged in the said mortice, E, as shown at Figs. 3 and 6, and are then held in their proper place by means of a set-screw, substantially as shown at Figs. 2, 3, and 6. The cork or other material used for the cancelling device, die, or type will be pressed into the said tube or pipe at recess F, cylinder C, Fig. 2, and the same is then firmly held, substantially as shown at G, Fig. 4. The device or configuration for the cancellation of the postage-stamp, in the manner substantially as aforesaid, may be seen at C and G, Fig. 3, when cork is used. But when iron, steel, or other suitable metal is used, the device or configuration may be as seen at G[1], Fig. 6. The invention and improvements contained in and covered by the several claims hereto annexed or below given is and are not contained in the letters patent granted [on my application, in due form, on "the 9th day of August, 1859," nor is or are the same to be found in my said letters patent granted] to me "December 16th, 1862," but the said invention and improvements are contained in my caveat duly filed in the U. S. Patent Office in the year 1853, containing also other improvements.]

Old way.

Questions for the office.

Having thus described my original invention and improvements in "postmarking" and "postage-cancelling" devices, combined and arranged for the purposes aforesaid, what I claim and desire to secure by letters patent of the United States of America is:

2573 First. The postage-stamp cancelling device, cylinder, or tube, C, containing a die or type, G, made of cork, wood, or other suitable material, or any equivalent for said cylinder or tube, C, or for the said cancelling die or type, G, whereby to efface, cancel, or destroy the postage-stamp with indelible or other ink, in the manner and for the purposes substantially as herein described and set forth.

No cylinder antecedent in the claim.

Second. I claim the cancelling device, cylinder, or tube, C, with cork, or wood, or any substantial equivalent thereof, forming the die or type, G, therein, in combination with the cross-bar or piece, B, and with the postmarking device, D, substantially as and for the purposes herein described and set forth.

Third. I claim the postmarking of letters, envelopes, and packets, and the cancellation of the postage-stamps thereon with ink, at one and the same blow or operation of the instrument, in the manner and by the means substantially as herein described and set forth.

Fourth. I claim the employment and combination of a postmarking device, with a postage-stamp cancelling device, both being operated by one and the same handle, for the postmarking of letters, envelopes, or packets, and for the cancellation of the postage-stamps thereon, with indelible or other ink, in the manner substantially as herein described and set forth.

In testimony whereof I have on this 12th day of July, 1869, hereunto set my hand in the presence of two witnesses, to wit:

EXAMINER'S ROOM, No. 37.

The application above referred to has been submitted to a preliminary examination, and about nine of the fourteen pages of the specification found to consist of superfluous verbiage, all of which is particularly and carefully pointed out in pencil thereon. New matter is also introduced into this application and illustrated by new figures added to the drawings which was not in the original patent, and not therefore admissible in a reissue application.

Further action upon the case is postponed until it is amended in these particulars.

EXAMINER'S ROOM, No. 37.

In the matter above referred to the applicant having refused to erase the matter not found in the original application (although by an oversight admitted into a previous reissue), and also to erase the "unnecessary prolixity," all of which is definitely and carefully pointed out in pencil on the specification, the examiner is compelled to reject the application not only in compliance with the request of the applicant of this date, but also in accordance with the requirements of sections 6 and 13 of the law of 1836, the former of which requires the invention to be described in "* * exact terms, avoiding unnecessary prolixity," and the latter requires the reissue to be "for the same invention" as the original patent, and also section 53 of office rules and the new rules issued by the Comm'r June 10, 1869, which more specifically define the latitude allowable for modifications on reissues.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22d, 1869.

Hon. COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS:

SIR: In answer to your communication in relation to my application for reissue of my letters patent dated April 14, 1863, and reissued bearing date the 23d day of August, 1864, I have to say that I most 2576 respectfully decline to make such amendments as your letter would seem to require. I would therefore respectfully ask that you reject the said application the first and second times, so that I may take the entire case to the board of examiners-in-chief for their decision upon the whole case at an early time.

Respectfully yours, &c.,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

P. S.—The above application is for improvements in postma'king of letters, and for the cancellation of stamps thereon.

SIR: Please find below the decision of the examiner in charge in the matter of your application for a second reissue of patent No. 38175, dated the 14th day of April, 1863, for a post-office stamp, and issued to M. P. Norton.

Filed July 19th, 1869.

Very respectfully,

Commissioner.

EXAMINER'S ROOM, No. 37.

The rejections of the 22d inst. upon preliminary matters having been reversed by the board of examiners-in-chief, and the case having again come before the primary examiner upon the merits of the claims, further examination has been made with the following results:

The first clause of the present reissue claim is in substance for "cancelling device C containing die or type G, made of "cork, wood,
2577 or other suitable material (not equivalent as in the 1st reissue), or any equivalent for the said cylinder C, or for said die G, whereby to efface stamps with ink, in the manner, &c., &c."

This claim concerns the blotter alone without reference to the other portions of the stamp. In the original application, and in the present one, the advantage of using cork, wood or rubber (called a blotter) is especially emphasized as being incident to their quality of elasticity and ink containing or receiving capacity over that of metal. No allusion to the substitution of iron or steel occurs in either the specification, drawings or model of the original case, but the specific nature of this elastic blotter is clearly set forth in line 20, page 1, and lines 5 to 10, p. 2, of the main body of the specification, and in lines 2 to 4, p. 1, of Amendment A, and lines 4 to 9 and 17 to 30 of p. 2, Amendment B, and also in both clauses of the original issued claim. The erased portions of this original specification constituting a part of p. 2, and lines 17 to 20 of p. 4; also the erased clause of claim, referred to steel knives or cutters, located in the postmarking or "dating" portion forming the other branch or half of the stamp, and entirely distinct from this blotting device which was never changed by amendment of any kind in the original application. In no line or wood of either this original specification, or the three amendments of it, nor in the drawing or model, does any allusion to or representation of a metallic substitute for this elastic blotter occur, but on the contrary, in lines 29 and 30 of Amd't B "solid metal" is unequivocally discarded for stated objections.

The present first claim makes this blotter consist of "cork wood" (rubber is now omitted) "or other suitable material," and an iron or steel blotter has been added to the drawing and inserted (obviously as an afterthought) in the first reissue specification. The applicant filed an affidavit of a model maker, going to show that such a model has been made, in order to prove that such a model had also been filed; no 2578 such model can be found in the office, and none such was before the examiner at the time of the original examination. But section 55 of Office Rules expressly excludes all such affidavits as this of Sherwood as utterly inadmissible even if significant, which this one is not.

Taking the claim, however, as it stands, an analysis shows it to be first for cancelling device C (considered now apart from the dating portion of the entire double stamp) containing die G, of cork, wood, or other suitable material.

The specification includes iron and steel (lines 7 to 11, p. 3, and line 25, p. 4) as such suitable material. We have, therefore, thus far, cancelling device C, containing die G, of metal as well as of cork, &c. The claim then goes on to embrace "any equivalent for said cylinder or tube C," and as lines 26 to 32, p. 7, specifies that this tube C may be entirely dispensed with, and the die or blotter be fastened to the bar B (i. e., to a handle, the combination of the blotter with the specific cross bar B to form a double stamp, is the subject of the next claim, No. 2, which is not objected to) "by means of a screw, pin, or bolt," we have presented as the substance of the claim, taken in connection with the specification, a metallic cancelling device or blotter attached to a handle by a pin, screw, or bolt, which is virtually attaching it by any common means to any common handle.

As early as 1850, there were used in all the important post-offices in this country, especially in the one at Wheeling, Va., cancelling stamps composed of metallic heads bearing the well known grid-iron device, and attached to wooden handles, as illustrated in the margin, and constructed substantially as shown in the section, as an inquiry at the Post-Office Department will no doubt corroborate. That such stamps were also constructed of wood alone, at that time, is a well-known fact. The de-2579 partment having extensive contracts with A. N. Zeverly, of Cumberland, Md., who furnished large numbers of such wooden stamps for use in the smaller offices, when light work admitted, of wood as a cheaper material than metal in the construction of such stamps. Such wooden stamps were also freely used at that time in the Cumberland post office for rating, franking, and cancelling letters. This clause of claim is therefore rejected as having been at the date of the original patent deficient in novelty.

The second clause of claim, which is for the double instrument substantially as constructed, is not objected to, no such compound hand-stamp, prior to this original application, having been found; but the third and fourth clauses, taken in connection with the second clause, if meaning anything beyond mere tautology, must be considered as broadly claiming the process of double stamping. The handle mentioned in the latter is a common and indispensable part of every hand-stamp, and therefore has no special significance in the claim. Such broad claims for double stamping by one and the same act or operation are unpatentable. See English Patents, by G. T. Robinson, No. 2563, and P. Hill, No. 832, both of 1857, as well as applicant's own patents of Dec. 16, 1862, and Aug. 9, 1859.

The first clause of claim as now constructed and related to the specification, and also the third and fourth broad and equivalent clauses, are therefore rejected.

The whole subject of the invention is thought to be fully covered by the second clause. The first, however, if restored to its original form, and the broad, and, indeed, incompatible portions of the specification before alluded to as qualifying it were erased, would not be objected to. All others must, from the nature of the invention, be merely substantial repetitions of these, or mere "changes" upon devices already fully covered in former patents of applicant. In fact, to establish a patent-2580 able difference between the present application and the patent of December 16, 1862, tasks to the utmost all the possible elasticity of the patent law, assisted by the widest liberality in its construction.

HON. COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS:

SIR: In the matter of my application for reissue of my letters patent dated April 14th, 1863, reissued August 23, 1864, for and upon improvements in "postmarking of letters, packets, &c., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon," now pending before the examiner in charge, twice rejected, and then appealed to the "board of examinersin-chief," and then returned to the said examiner in charge, and by him again rejected, I have to request that the same be again rejected pro forma, as I at present decline to make any changes in the specifications or claims, and thus I propose to again appeal the said case to the said "board of examiners-in-chief" for their decision thereon.

Respectfully,

MARCUS P. NORTON.

United States Court of Claims.

Petition—No. 2571.—Filed Feb. 21, 1867.

JACOB SHAVOR & ALBERT C. CORSE
vs.
THE UNITED STATES.

Amount claimed, four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000). For the past use of the invention in post-office, postmarking and postage-cancelling stamp patented April 14, 1863, and reissued August 23, 1864, to Marcus P. Norton.

Marcus P. Norton, of Troy, N. Y., att'y for plaintiffs and petitioners.

2584 United States Court of Claims.

JACOB SHAVOR AND ALBERT C. CORSE
vs.
THE UNITED STATES.

To the honorable the judges of the Court of Claims of the United States of America:

Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, each of the city of Troy, county of Rensselaer, State of New York, who are citizens of the United States of America aforesaid, and loyal thereto, and to the government thereof, bring this their joint petition, and file the same with the clerk of this honorable court, in accordance with the laws of said United States, and in conformity to and with the rules of said court, and they aver, charge, and declare the fact and the truth to be, that on the 14th day of April, 1863, letters patent of the said United States were duly granted, issued, and delivered unto Marcus P. Norton, a loyal citizen of the United States aforesaid, also a citizen of the State of New York, and residing at the said city of Troy, for and upon an invention in the postmarking of letters, packets, &c., and for the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, of which said invention the said Norton was the original and first inventor as by law required; that said invention is useful and of great value, as hereinafter set forth; that the said letters patent were, on the 20th day of April, 1863, duly and legally assigned and transferred, for a good and sufficient consideration, as by law made and provided, unto said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, by the said Marcus P. Nor-2585 ton, the inventor and patentee, which said deed of an assignment was duly recorded in the U. S. Patent Office on the 8th day of March, 1864, in libre C, 7, page 458, of transfer of patents; that on after the making of said assignment and transfer as aforesaid, the said Shavor and Corse, in conformity with the provisions of the law in such cases made and provided, did surrender the said letters patent to the Hon. Commissioner of Patents, and thereupon and thereafter, upon the petition of said Shavor and Corse, in due form of law, the said letters patent were duly reissued on corrected and amended specifications, drawings, and claims, bearing date the 23d day of August, 1864; that said patents were granted in due form of law, and in the manner and upon the terms and conditions required and provided by the several acts of Congress and all amendments thereto. Duly certified copies of said deed of assignment, and of said reissued patent, are hereto annexed, and make a part hereof if so required, and to each and every of which the said Shavor and Corse beg leave now and hereafter to refer.

And the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, plaintiffs in the manner and form aforesaid, aver and charge the truth to be, that the said invention so patented, assigned, and reissued as aforesaid, is of great and important value, to wit, of the value of four millions of dollars ($4,000,000), and also of great and important value to the public, and especially so to the Post Office Department or Government of the United States of America in the postmarking of letter-packets, &c., and in the cancellation of postage-stamps thereon, so that great labor is saved in the postmarking of letters, &c., and in the cancellation of the postage-stamps thereon, and in facilitating the making up of mails for transportation, and in canceling postage-stamps in such thorough and effectual manner as to prevent frauds on the revenue by a second or re-use of any postage stamps, substantially as described and set forth in 2586 the specification attached to and forming a part of the letters patent assigned, reissued, and bearing date August 23d, 1864, as hereinbefore set forth.

That the utility and validity of said letters patent, and the invention therein contained, as well as the legal and equitable title thereto, were tested and tried in a suit at law of said Shavor and Corse against Edmund Hoole, government sub-contractor, in the circuit court of the U. S., northern district of New York; that in that suit the validity of said letters patent was fully sustained, and said patent was then and there declared to be good, sufficient, and valid for each and every of the purposes therein described and set forth, and that said Shavor and Corse were the lawful owners thereof and thereto; that said suit, and all proceedings therein, were commenced, conducted, and terminated as by law provided and required, and as by the rules of said court made and provided; a correct and printed report of said suit and all proceedings therein, under the seal of said court, is now ready to be produced and will be produced, by said plaintiffs, if this honorable court shall so direct.

And the said plaintiffs, Jacob Savor and Albert C. Corse, aver and charge the fact and the truth to be, that on or about the 1st day of April, 1863, the then Postmaster-General made a contract with Fairbanks & Co., of the city of New York, to manufacture, for the term of four years from that date, and deliver to, and for the use, benefit, and advantages of the Post-Office Department of said United States, said post-office postmarking and cancelling stamp, according to the said invention so made, patented, assigned, and reissued as aforesaid, and with the understanding and the agreement between claimant and the Postmaster-General that the government would pay a just, fair, and equitable compensation for such use of said invention, as the said department had come to the conclusion that it must, as a matter of necessity in the economy of time, and as security in correctly making up the mails, and preventing frauds by reuse of postage stamps, 2587 put said invention into general use in the post-offices in said United States, and said department, acknowledging the full validity of said invention and patent, desired the full and free use of the same, without hindrance by said patentee or his assignees aforesaid, and that if said department were permitted such use of said invention that the government would pay said inventor or his assignees a full, fair, and just compensation for the use thereof during all the time it continued to use the same, to which said claimant consented and agreed.

And said claimants, Shavor and Corse, aver and charge the fact and the truth that, relying wholly upon this contract, agreement, and understanding aforesaid, they have permitted said department to cause to be manufactured for its use, and to put into, and continue in use the said patented invention from that time until now, and in all respects, and at all times, have conformed to said agreement and understanding made as aforesaid and assented to by every subsequent Postmaster-General; that said contract to so manufacture has been in full force and operation from that time until now, and now is in full effect and operation, by reason and by means of which the Post-Office Department aforesaid has put the said invention into very extensive and continued use in a very large number of the post-offices throughout said United States, and said department now is engaged in putting the said invention, so patented as aforesaid, into extensive and increased use and operation in the different post-offices in said United States, to the great gain, benefit, and advantage to said Post-Office Department, whereby a large annual saving is had to and for the said department as herein set forth; that the said department, prior to the letting or making of the said contract, to manufacture the said invention, for the use of said department, for said term of four years, and under and by the directions of the Postmaster-General, the said invention was put upon a most thorough test 2588 and trial in the post-office of the city of New York, as well as in several other of the large post-offices of the said United States; that the postmaster at said New York City post-office made a report in writing to said Postmaster-General, which is now on file in said department, and bears date on or about the 3d day of January, 1863, a copy of which is here submitted:

POST-OFFICE, NEW YORK,
January 3, 1863.

SIR: Some time since you requested that I should test the utility of Norton's double postmarking and cancelling and stamping iron, and report my opinion thereon. It was in use in this office when I first entered upon my duties. Since then the cancelling part has been changed in various forms. We have tried the cutter thoroughly. This is the most complete method of cancellation; but it is liable, even if used with the greatest care, to injure the contents of the envelope, especially if the enclosures are cards, photographs, and the like. We have, also, used cork by inserting it in the cylinder of the cancellor. This has proved successful, and our cancellation is now performed in this way.

I am confident no office in the country performs cancellation more thoroughly.

The design of Mr. Norton is indispensable to us. Indeed, unless I should nearly double the stamping force, we could not dispense with its use. I am satisfied the interests of the department would be subserved by securing its general use.

We are now testing a stamp and cancellor on Norton's plan, made of boxwood. It promises well, and can be made at a very trifling expense. I am fearful, however, its liability to yield to the wear to which it will be subject may prevent its general adoption. Time will determine this.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ABRAM WAKEMAN, Postmaster,
Per Secretary.

A. N. ZEVELY, Esq.,
Third Ass't P. M. G., Washington, D. C.

2589 Wherein and whereby was recommended the adoption and general use of said invention, and thereupon and immediately thereafter, the said Postmaster General adopted the said invention, and put the same in general, extensive and continuous use in the different post-offices in this country, and has ever since continued such use, and now and still continues such use, to the great gains, profits, and advantages of the said department, and in accordance with the consent, or license, or agreement, by and with said Shavor and Corse, as herein stated and set forth.

And said plaintiffs aver and charge the fact and the truth to be, that said Post Office Department has, by the use and means of said invention, so patented and assigned, saved in clerk hire alone in said several post offices more than ($250,000) annually, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and during the four years' use of said invention, in the manner aforesaid, the said department has saved, in cash, through and by the said invention, over nine hundred thousand dollars ($900,000) in clerk hire alone; that there has also been many other advantages and benefits derived from the use of said invention from the fact that it greatly facilitates the dispatch of letters for transportation in the mails; that it also greatly economizes in the time in the making up of the mails for transportation; that it cancels in a more perfect and permanent manner the postage stamps on letters, packets, &c., and at the same time gives on the envelope an intelligent postmark; and that it also contributes to prevent frauds on the revenue by chemical cleansing or washing of postage stamps for reuse or reissue after once used, so that the said Post Office Department and Government of the United States annually saves more than the said sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and has and have actually saved more than one million of dollars in and during the last four years of the use of said invention, so 2590 made for said Post-Office Department under said contract, and so put into use in the several large post offices of the United States.

And the said Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse would most respect fully show unto this honorable court, that they, by their petition, applied to the Thirty-eighth Congress of the United States aforesaid, for compensation for the use of said invention, and for the purchase of said letters patent; that said petition was, by the House of Representatives, referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of said House of Representatives; the said committee required the validity of said patent, and the title to said invention to first be established in and by the proper courts. Whereupon said Shavor and Corse commenced the suit hereinbefore mentioned, and at the trial thereof, by and before the Hon. Samuel Nelson and Hon. Nathan K. Hall, each judges of the said United States court, the validity of said letters patent was, in each and all respects, fully maintained and sustained, and the legal title to said invention and patent was declared to be in, and owned by said Shavor and Corse, a duly certified copy of which proceedings was duly filed in the Post-Office Department, and also presented to said House of Representatives, and duly referred to said committee; that at the next session of said Congress, the said petition was partially acted on by said committee, and Congress finally adjourned without having completed action thereon; that, at the next Congress a new petition, relating to the said invention, and said use and purchase thereof was presented in the House of Representatives, and duly referred to the committee thereof on the Post Offices and Post Roads; that said committee examined the whole subject upon proofs produced, and on the 24th day of July, 1866, reported to the said House a joint resolution to pay said Shavor and Corse the sum of fifty thousand dollars in payment for the said use of said invention and patent thereon, to which report said plaintiffs 2591 and petitioners, Shavor and Corse, most respectfully ask leave to refer, a printed copy of which is hereto annexed; that said Shavor and Corse, in view of the great value and importance of said invention, as aforesaid stated, most respectfully declined to accept of said sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000), and no bill was therefore passed by Congress; that upon the convening of the present session of Congress, the said Shavor and Corse made a new petition concerning said invention and patent, and the use of the same, and caused the same to be presented in the Senate of the United States, which was duly referred to the Senate Committee on the Post Offices and Post Roads, which committee, after due examination of said petition and accompanying papers, and after mature deliberation thereupon made and agreed upon, unanimously, and reported to the Senate a report in the following words and figures, to wit:

[Senate. Rep. Com. No. 164. 39th Congress, 2d session.]

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

FEBRUARY 9, 1867.—Ordered to be printed.

Mr. Van Winkle made the following report. (To accompany Bill S. No. 582.)

The Committee on the Post Offices and Post Roads, to whom was referred the petition of Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, asking compensation for past and future use of "Norton's Marking and Canceling Stamp," report:

That they have duly considered the same, and they find that letters patent, dated April 14, 1863, were granted and issued to Marcus
2592 P. Norton, of the city of Troy, New York, and by him assigned to Jacob Shavor and Albert C. Corse, on the 20th day of April, 1863, and duly recorded as by law provided, and afterwards a reissue granted to said Shavor and Corse, on the 23d day of August, 1864, as by law provided, which said invention, so patented, assigned, and reissued, was for and upon improvements in "postmarking and postage-canceling device," and which invention has been in practical and continuously exclusive use, by and under the order and direction of the Postmaster-General since the 1st day of April, 1863, the said invention having previously been tested in the most thorough manner in the New York City post office for more than one year, and approved and recommended to the Postmaster General by that office, without any compensation whatever to the said inventor or said assignees, nor upon any other stipulation than his or their consent that the same might thus be used until its utility and advantages to the government should be effectually tested, when a fair and equitable compensation for either its use or the patent should be made to them by the government.
